The first module, entitled "Budget Procedures" was presented last Friday and was attended by 44 students, according to Julie Keehner of Student Services. The balance of the series includes modules dealing with "How to Run a Meeting," presented by Director of Programming Wayne Justham; "College Governance," by Dr. Arnold Tilden, Dean of Student Services; "Group Dynamics and Conflict Resolution," by Dr. Jay Buchanan, Campus Counselor; and "Motivation," by Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life. All of the modules will be presented Fridays at 3:30 in the South Lounge, except "Group Dynamics," which will be held Thursday, Nov. 4.

This series is part of a program developed as a result of the self-study which the college prepared for the Middle States Association's accreditation process. According to Dr. Tilden, the self-study included a list of 15 goals which the college set for the improvement of educational quality. Of these 15 goals, ten are concerned with improving the leadership skills of the students. "We saw good things happening, but not systematically," Dr. Tilden said.

The resulting program includes a fall retreat which was held before the beginning of the fall term, the leadership modules and an "Emerging Leaders" series which is designed to suit the needs of freshmen and is to be presented next term. Also included are awards banquets, one for Student Leaders, such as Centerboard and Student Government members, and one for students involved in communications, such as WKVR and The Juniatian. The awards are chosen and presented by students.

The fifth part of the overall leadership program is a series of monthly meetings between administration representatives and the leaders of student organizations. "We wanted to get the student leaders together to exchange ideas among themselves and between the students and the administration," Dr. Tilden said. He added that there had been luncheon meetings with President Binder, himself, and Student Government leaders, but they were unsuccessful because of time limitations.

Of the leadership modules, Ms. Keehner said, "I'm pleased with the turn-out so far. In comparison, I was involved in a similar program at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Their student body is about nine times as big as Juniata's and only 25 people showed interest."

The series is open to all Juniata students and additional information is available at the Student Services office in Founder's Hall.

V103 Number One

by David A. Heisterkamp

During the month of October, Juniata College's radio station, V103-FM, conducted their first musical preference listenership survey for the 1982-83 academic year.

This survey process was broken up into two phases. In the first phase, over two hundred students throughout Juniata's on- and off-campus housing were randomly selected to participate. The students were asked to list up to 11 artists and/or groups which they felt deserved heavy airplay from noon to midnight on V103. Also, the questionnaire asked students to pick one radio station that they listen to the most often.

The results were incredible! The Voice, V103, stayed on top from last May as Juniata's number one radio station. Just over 72% of the student body picked V103 as their most listened-to radio station. "These results were so incredible," said Brian Check, V103 Station Manager, "that we felt is was necessary to conduct another survey using different marketing techniques and hope that the statistics correlate with the first survey."

The second phase of the survey used the computer to randomize 100 student names to be specifically chosen to participate in the process.

Exciting for the entire staff of V103, the statistics of both surveys correlated amazingly close, verifying that the Voice is the number one station on campus! 72% of Juniata students listen to V103 compared to WRLR who has a 8.6 % share of the students. Q-94 is trailing closely with a 7.3% share, followed by WQWK (Quick Rock), with a 6.7%, WTPA (FM104), with a 3.0% share, and all other stations with a 2.4%.

Under the direction of Heather Roche, V103's Music Director, the survey also came up with Juniata's 35 top favorite artists and groups. The top fifteen groups are the Rolling Stones, Genesis, Springsteen, Journey, The Who, Pink Floyd, Styx, Asia, Loverboy, Pat Benatar, Led Zeppelin, The Doors, Grateful Dead, The Police, and the Go-Go's. A list of the top 35 groups and artists will soon be available from V103.

Film Review Modern Problems

by Robert Riefler

Light, entertaining fare is needed for students on weekends; those who saw "Modern Problems" last Friday night at Oller Hall got just that.

The 1981 film concerns down-on-his-luck bachelor Max. Fast approaching middle age, his girlfriend has just moved out and his ex-wife is falling in love with one of his best friends.

Max soon finds himself with telekinesis, the power to move objects with the mind, thanks to contact with nuclear radio-active material. At first he is amused by this newly acquired power: it enables him to get revenge on irritating acquaintances. However, what begins as relatively harmless fun (such as causing his girlfriend's date to have a severe nosebleed in a posh restaurant) turns into alarming chaos (terrorizing the house guests at his friend's beach house).

The movie succeeds on one level: it's humorous and fast-paced (the film runs only 93 minutes). However, if the writers had in mind any serious social statement, about the nature of people, which I doubt, the film can be viewed as a failure. "Modern Problems" is bogged down with modern sociological stereotypes, like the elderly black maid who is overprotective and practices black magic, but particularly singles. Max is the typical "lonesome loser" who finds difficulty in "communicating" with his girlfriend and discusses his problems with his ex-wife, as they are still "good friends." Worst of all is the conceited author who believes the world would be a better place if everyone managed his life as well as he does.

"Modern Problems" is notably well casted. Chevy Chase plays Max in his typical Chevy Chase style, and Patty D'Arbanville is adequate in the role of Max's girlfriend. Mary Kay Place (remember Loretta on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman"?) as Max's understanding ex-wife, Brian Doyle-Murray ("Saturday Night Live") as Max's handicapped friend, and Dabney Coleman (the villainous boss in "Nine To Five") as the overbearing author, all play their roles to the hilt.

"Modern Problems" is worthwhile to a lighthearted, frivolous audience. The audience last Friday night, though smaller than usual, seemed to find great enjoyment in the film.

Mansion Restoration

A few Juniata students are involved with restoring and delving into the history of an old limestone iron master's house in a nearby area. Built in 1815, the Royer House, located six miles outside of Williamsburg, PA on Route 866, is shamefully dilapidated and in need of restoration. It was the home of ironmaster Samuel Royer, his wife, and their 10 children. Students are helping the Blair County Historical Society fix up the mansion, preparing it for local tours and turning a country eyesore into the beautiful building it once was. In addition to this, some students are working with an archeologist, digging in the property to discover some of the house's secrets.

If anyone is interested in archeology, or the history of architecture write to Box 299 and help restore the Royer Mansion

Also on Halloween, October 31, there will be a special tour conducted at the mansion — some say the Royers may even be present telling us how life used to be back in the old days on the old homestead.

Keehner used the example of an elevator. If you're the only person in an elevator, properly positioned in your corner, and a stranger gets on, he had better take the adjacent corner. If he stands beside you instead, most people feel very uncomfortable and will move away, or get off as soon as possible.

Not only is space maintenance important to communicate effectively, but also your posture, walk, eyes, touches and gestures send messages all the time. Touch is the swiftest form of communication; but, like territoriality, touch can be offensive to non-touchers. Timing and the person involved are crucial factors to consider.

The best part of non-verbal communication is that the next time you smile invitingly across the dance floor at someone you'd like to meet, remember: you're safe. There's relatively little to risk. No one heard you ask for a dance or heard the smile-receiver decline. The smile-receiver can ignore your smile/message and you can pretend it was just a communication misinterpretation. "What?? MEEE interested in you?? Ha. Ha. Ha. . . . I was just being friendly. . . ." That's a tip from the Dean, herself. And if your invitation is favorably received, you can pat yourself on the back: you've communicated effectively.

Autumn Fest

by Wayne M. Bevan

On Saturday, Oct. 30, Centerboard/S.N.A.P. will be sponsoring "Autumn Fest" at Camp Blue Diamond. This fling of the fall will feature such activities as the Allegheny String Band, hayrides, square dancing, bobbing for apples, cider and various and sundry types of food. All this for a mere $1.50!

Transportation to Camp Blue Diamond, nestled deep in the Pennsylvania State Forest, will be provided. Transportation will be departing from the front of Ellis at 7:15 PM.

Dave's Dribble

by Dave Lehmann

Do you remember when we were small children (I know: some of us still are) and used to play Capture the Flag? Of course, we frolicked with all sorts of games — Stickball, Hide and Seek, Blind Man's Bluff — but, with the possible exception of "playing doctor," nothing excited our juvenile spirits to the level that Capture the Flag did. This game involved both finesse and physical coordination, so that even a poor athlete, if he was wily enough, could excel at it. We'd often play long after our bodies had screamed to halt the abuse of the game and then nonchalantly throw up. What fun we had!

Recently, Charles Gaines, author of Pumping Iron, metamorphosed this game into an endeavor that appeals more to the adult intellect. He calls his version "The Survival Game." The Survival Game has pretty much the same goal as Capture the Flag did: the players try to get a flag out of enemy territory and back to a safe zone. The difference between Gaines' and the children's version is that in Gaines', the players try to "kill" each other. A "kill" is accomplished by shooting another player with a paint capsule that has been projected from an air-pistol. Of course, once a player is killed, he may no longer contend for the flag.

I'm not going to suggest that any of us here at J.C. would chase all over campus to capture a piece of cloth, but with a few minor changes, Gaines' game could prove popular here. Suppose that our grades were what we fought to salvage instead. Then the game may grip our attention better. Here's my modified version of Survival:

Rule 1: The game is played on the day after the last day of finals.

Rule 2: Both professors' offices and the registrar's office are to be considered safe territories; no killing can be done there.

Rule 3: The professors' goal is to get their final grades to the registrar without getting killed.

Rule 4: The students' goal is to kill their professors before the profs can accomplish their grade-sending goal.

Rule 5: Weapons to be used by the students include guns, knives, clubs, and plastic explosives. Nuclear arms are strictly prohibited.

Rule 6: Professors are not allowed to be armed in anyway since students' well-being is a major concern of administration.

Rule 7: A kill is worth four college credits. Credits may be added or subtracted depending upon the neatness of the kill: a player could get a bonus credit for killing by strangulation, but would lose a credit for blowing up a professor entering his car (too messy).

Rule 8: Since this is my game, I will act as a non-partisan referee.

Rule 9: After each kill, the assassin student must sing this song: (to the tune of "Pop Goes the Weasel")

The professor runs round the parking lot,
The student chases his teacher,
All of a sudden the prof is in range,
Pop goes the M-1!

If we, the student body, plan to adapt this game, we must let administration know now; they have to prepare for replacing assassinated professors.

Centerboard Report

by Kathy Novak

Various committee reports highlighted the October 18 meeting of Centerboard.

The Concert Committee has scheduled Kix and warm-up band Daddy Licks to perform at Juniata on Saturday, October 30 at 8:15 p.m. in the gym. Ticket sales will be limited to 800, with the price set at $6.50 each. Tickets will be made available to the college community only.

Fran Mooney, who has appeared at several J.C. coffeehouses, will perform on Friday, October 22 from 1-5 p.m. on the steps of Oller Hall. The Campus Ministry Board is arranging transportation to the Keith Green Memorial Concert on Tuesday, October 26 in Hershey, Pa. Sign-ups were held this past Tuesday and Wednesday. The concert is free, but a $4 transportation cost will be charged.

The band Centaur will be playing at the Homecoming dance this coming Saturday from 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the gym. As of this date, a total of nine floats and four bands are scheduled to appear in Saturday's parade.

Northwest dorm is compiling a calendar as part of a dorm project. The calendar will depict 12 J.C. men or women, who were selected by votes cast last week.

The Madrigal Committee has had its organizational meeting, and events are being planned for this year's Madrigal Dinner, to be held on Friday, December 10. Anyone still interested in participating on the committee may contact Chairperson Sharon Twaddell.

Russ Rupiper, representing the Student Alumni Association, spoke at the Centerboard meeting on the role of the college union. He talked about beginning a group here on campus to make students aware, before they graduate, of what the Alumni Association is all about.

The next Centerboard meeting will be held Monday, October 25 at 3:45 p.m. in the Blue Room of Ellis College Center.

In the News

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has given allies, France, West Germany, Italy and Britain, a draft proposal that could serve as the basis for lifting U.S. sanctions on the Siberian pipeline. President Reagan also announced Friday that he was opening the door for the U.S.S.R. to buy 23 million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn and, in a promise to suffering U.S. farmers, said that any purchases by the Russians of U.S. grain made in November and shipped within 180 days would not be affected by any future grain embargo.

PEKING (UPI) — China successfully fired its first submarine launched missile. This makes China only the fifth country to have developed marine launched missiles. The U.S., Russia, Britain and France are the other four.

will be "well worth the price of the ticket." If this event goes over well, there is a good possibility for scheduling another concert sometime later in the school year.

Tickets for the concert will be on sale at lunch and dinner, as well as at the Information Desk in Ellis, until showtime, or until all of the tickets are sold. The price is set at only $6.50 for both groups. Because of the current status of the gym, ticket sales will be limited to 800, and these will be made available to the college community only.

The show is scheduled to start at approximately 8:15 p.m., with the doors opening somewhere between 7-7:30 p.m.

Choir will be serenading you with the tune "Tradition" from the Broadway hit, 'Fiddler on the Roof,' the entire weekend!" Again this activity would be based on the relief principle, the idea being that escaping out of ear shot of "Tradition" would simulate the quest of the student that has to deal with the omnipresent factor of TRADITION throughout student life.

— "The Paper Chase: Each participating alum will attempt to check out materials for a paper on the life and times of Elihu Root; then, whoever has to stay in town the longest waiting for the books to arrive from the gym is the winner!"

These few ideas might make the formal side of the Homecoming weekend a more valid representation of what students really do here at J.C. Thus, having put to rest any chance that fun will be had by all, this reporter will head back to the books. Live it up, Juniottah!

Tribe Defense Keys a 34-7 Thrashing of Wilkes

by Andy Berdy

Wind, Cold and the Wilkes Colonels were the three obstacles Juniata had to overcome as they traveled to Wilkes-Barre in search of their fourth straight win, and third in a row in the MAC Northern Division.

Despite the absence of starting quarterback Dave Pfieffer, out for a week with an injured thumb, the Tribe turned to the ground, defense, and the foot of Mike Schaffner to shut down the Colonels, 34-7.

The defense gave JC an opportunity early as Ben Reichley picked off a Wayne Lonstein pass on the Colonel's first possession. The Tribe offense moved right down to the WC 12 on the running of Rick Eberly and a roughing the kicker call against Wilkes. The drive, however, stalled and Schaffner missed his first field goal attempt from 30 yards out.

Following a Wilkes punt the Indians stormed right back, again on the ground behind Eberly and Dave Hornberger. The Tribe again failed to hit paydirt, stalling on the WC eight. However Schaffner's second try was good, this time from 26 yards out, giving JC the lead, 3-0.

After picking up two first downs Wilkes was again forced to punt into a stiff 30mph wind, giving the Indians good field position on their own 45. With the wind at his back, quarterback Kevin Welch went to the air, this time hitting Jerry Crowley at the WC 26. Welch went right back up top, finding Dave Murphy for his sixth touchdown of the year, making it 10-0 as the first quarter ended.

The defense continued to stop Wilkes as Reichley picked off his third pass of the year. However, the Indian offense also sputtered against the wind as Welch was intercepted once, and the half ended 10-0.

Juniata opened up the second half, moving the ball from their own 40 to the Wilkes 11, on the running of Eberly and Pat Davis, and a 27 yard Welch to Eberly completion. On third down Welch was sacked on the WC 20 forcing a third field goal try. With the help of the wind, Schaffner split the uprights from 37 yards out, giving JC a 13-0 edge.

Down by 13 the Colonels came out throwing, but the JC defense was there. Bill Stamp picked off a Randy Rice aerial on the left sideline and raced 32 yards for another JC score.

As the fourth period began Wilkes started to move on their only scoring drive of the day. Rice, in replacement of Lonstein who was hurt in the first half when tackled by Tim Clapper, found Higgins in the JC end-zone from 15 yards out. The Indian offense failed to move, giving the ball back to Wilkes, and with it a chance to close the gap.

Once again the defense was there as Grady Paul picked off a Colonel pass at the JC 30 and scampered 60 yards before running out of gas at the Wilkes 14. Three plays later Welch found Murphy for his seventh TD reception of the season, padding the Tribe lead to 27-7.

The Indians got the ball right back as Rice fumbled and Bob Wazalis recovered on the Wilkes 16. Eberly drove to the Colonel five and carried again to the three. With 13 seconds left in the game Welch scored on a keeper making it 34-7, Juniata.

Eberly was the workhorse for the Tribe, picking up 123 yards on 22 carries. Hornberger also added 58 yards on 10 tries. Welch had a 7 for 17 day for 145 yards, two touchdowns and one interception.

Murphy grabbed three passes for 56 yards and two TD's and Eberly followed with two catches for 49 yards.

The defense was a big factor picking off four passes and recovering a fumble which led to three of the four Tribe touchdowns. Rick Schuck led the Indians in tackles with 11 as Tom McVay and Bob Wazalis followed with eight and six respectively.

Allowing only an average of six points per game, the Tribe defense stopped the Colonel ground game, forcing them to go to ineffective short passes and screens. Fred Santorelli got to the Wilkes quarterback twice along with Gino Perry and Jeff Lynn.

The Indians moved their record to 5-1, and remain atop the MAC Northern Division at 3-0. After two weeks of rather easy winning, the Tribe comes home to face the Albright Lions in a Homecoming Day match-up.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

The trials and tribulations of defending an intramural championship. At the end of the 1981 I-M softball season, Herbie's Heroes stood atop the league, winning the championship in a dramatic 25-18 win, played in wet, sloppy conditions.

The team was honored with the coveted Juniata I-M Champion tee-shirts, and a banquet at Pizza Hut. At the time, no one cared about the future, preferring only to savor the fruits of victory.

Manager Don Stubbs was moving on to the grad school league, leaving only a handfull of returning veterans with which to mold a team. Gone to retirement, along with the third baseman Stubbs, was the shortstop Dave "the Band" Gilles, Larry "Doc" Saraka the second baseman who also went on to grad school ball. The other loss came in centerfield where Donny "Kong" Pote went on to the pro ranks.

So, under a new name and new management, Pat's Snatchers took the field in 1982. A rebuilt infield consisting of rookie Glen "Heineken" Hineman at third, John "Hippy" Fountain at second and the move of Jim "The Turtle" Hiltz from the outfield to short, solidified the diamond, along with the team namesake, Pat "The Snatcher" Clark at first.

The outfield also had to be renovated. Mike "The Mess" Appleby was picked up on waivers to play right. Andy Berdy moved from the mound to center and Lee Hudzicki and Bob McDonald were platooned in left. Another rookie, Dave Lesser, was brought up to play shortfield.

The pitching staff, which relied on the arc of Berdy last year, had to be completely rebuilt. Two right-handers were brought up, Jeff Kaden and Roger Spatz, who are currently 3-0 and 2-0 respectively. Relief help has come from the Hippy, with one complete game win.

So, the Snatchers, with virtually an entirely revamped look have managed to overcome nine straight opponents in as many outings. They successfully overcame games in the dark, benches and chairs in the outfield, chilly temperatures, umpireless games, and some tough competition.

The Snatchers have the talent and are confident. Only the playoffs stand between them and another title tee-shirt. For them, the biggest obstacle could be deciding what color to get.

Men's C.C. Splits, Women Win

by Paul Bomberger

Saturday, October 16, the JC Women's Cross Country team competed in the Allentown Invitational. The field included eleven strong teams. The ladies ran by all opposition and captured first place and the championship trophy. Freshman, Kathy Duffy, deserves special recognition for her record-setting, first place finish, with a time of 19:36 over 5,000 meters. Her teammates: Carol Tendall, Carolyn Andre, Chris Schleiden and Robin Bordman all finished in the top 15 out of 74 competitors. With this spectacular running, the Lady Harriers were not to be denied.

Saturday, October 9, the Indian Harriers traveled to Carlisle for the Dickinson Invitational. The field of teams included: Washington College, Elizabethtown, Juniata, and the host team, Dickinson. Coach Mitchell felt his runners were thoroughly conditioned for the meet and hoped to bring home the championship trophy to Juniata College.

As it turned out, Tom Hoffman won the race with a fine 28:42 clocking, over a rolling, grassy 5 mile course. The Indians' Bill Ciesla, Andy Pearson, and Mark Royer also finished in the top ten to earn medals. When the points were tallied, JC defeated Washington and Elizabethtown, but came up one point short to Dickinson, 35-36.

On Wednesday, October 13, York College traveled to Huntingdon to challenge the Indians. Once again, Juniata was up to the challenge of the opposition. The consistency of Ciesla, Pearson, and Royer, along with a strong team effort, notched victory number six for the Harriers. York's Ron Sciefers made his presence known, however, by breaking the course record with an outstanding time of 28:45.

During Homecoming Weekend, the runners host Western Maryland here at home, which is the last duel meet of the season.

Indian Volleyballers Ranked No. 1 in the Nation

by Tracey Catanese

The JC Volleyball team continued its dominance of the courts this weekend as their record was upped to 23 wins and 2 losses. They also moved from second to first place in the NCAA Division III rankings as they edged out last week's first place contender, the University of California at San Diego.

On Saturday and Sunday, October 16 and 17, the team was at Chestertown, Maryland for the Washington Invitational. While there, they participated in a "Round Robin" tournament in which the standings are determined by the teams' records at the end of pool play. The JC Volleyballers were fortunate enough to end up in a three-way tie for first place. This enabled them to play in the final match of the tournament where they outplayed Thiel, 15-7 and 15-9.

Juniata started out the tourney on Saturday by defeating Albright 15-4 and 15-10, and Thiel 15-9 and 15-9. On Sunday, they were victorious over Washington, 15-9 and 15-8, but fell to Essex, 10-15 and 15-17. They then snapped back to beat Gallaudet 15-5 and 15-4.

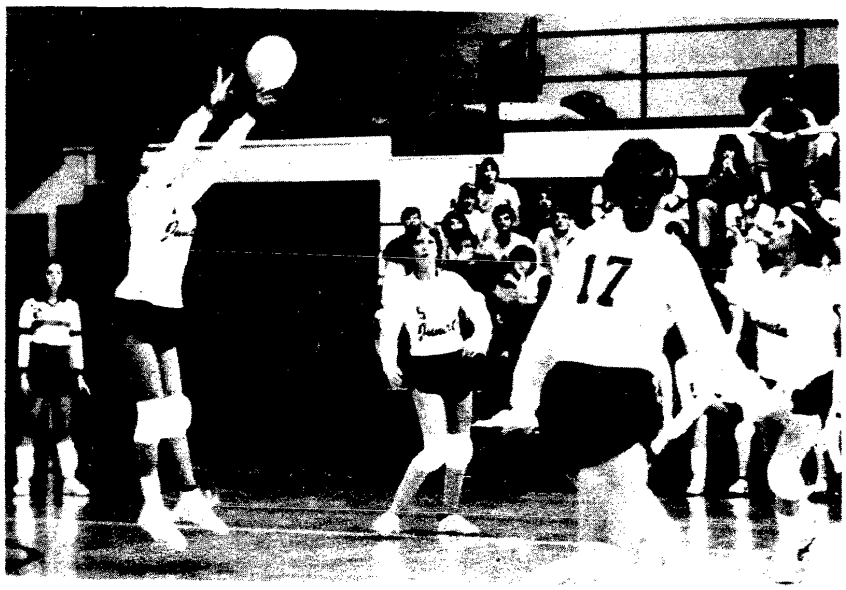
After their loss to Essex, the team was not planning on winning the tournament and was ready to head back to JC. Fate then came to their aid and left the pool play in a three-way tie between JC, Essex and Thiel. In the first round of the playoff, Thiel played and defeated Essex. In the second and final match of the day, Juniata beat Thiel for the championship.

JC suffered a few problems throughout the tourney. First off, setter Peggy Evans and outside hitter Colleen Irelan did not make the trip. Evans is suffering from a sprained neck which she injured last weekend at the Naval Academy Invitational. She is expected to return in time for the MAC Tournament in a few weeks. Irelan was out with the flu. Secondly, the coaches installed a completely new offense on Wednesday. They feel that the team did not have sufficient practice on the 5-1 offense, thus they were not mentally prepared for the tourney.

One of the most surprising upsets of the tourney came when Essex beat JC. At the time it was a rather frightening experience that the community college had such a great match and defeated the Lady Indians, but Coach Bock feels that it will be a valuable experience in the long run.

Indian statistics for the weekend include 21 serving aces for Eing Opanayikul, and 30 kills and an overall good hitting tourney for Sue MacLachlan. Kathy Dempsey also had a good tourney considering that she was playing with a broken finger.

Earlier in the week, our spikers hosted a tri-match between visiting York and St. Francis. In JC play, the lady Indians easily defeated York, 15-0 and 15-6. During the St. Francis match, which was played with mostly second-string players, JC won 15-8 and 15-9.



Eing Opanayikul controls the ball for a JC spike in a home match against St. Francis and York.

When speaking with Coach Bock, he commented on the competition, "St. Francis is much improved over past years and they do have potential." The coaches were proud of the team's performance as they did their best in spite of the competition.

The most important statistic for the evening was undoubtedly the team's even emotional level. Against an easier caliber ball club than the ladies played at the Naval Academy Invitational, they managed to keep their minds clear and concentrate on playing as a team.

Leading individual performances for the tri-match included freshman Jan Trissler with 6 serving aces; Tonya Snyder, with a 53% kill ratio consisting of 5 kills and no errors, and Dempsey, who with a broken finger, managed a 40% perfect passing record for the evening.

Tonight, October 21, JC hosts Elizabethtown. The Volleyballers will then travel to Mansfield, PA to participate in the Mansfield Invitational on October 22 and October 23. The tourney field includes Rochester Ins., Stoneybrook, Mansfield, Alfred University, St. Bonaventure and Juniata.

Tribe Soccer Drops Three

by Mike Appleby

Juniata's soccer team suffered three disappointing losses in the past two weeks. On Wednesday, October 6, they dropped a 2-1 verdict to Wilkes at home, and on Saturday they traveled to Messiah and were shut out 8-0. On October 12, the team traveled to York and lost a 3-1 decision. The three losses dropped the team's record to 1-8.

Against Wilkes, Juniata had field dominance for most of the game, but still came up on the short end on the scoreboard. The team had numerous scoring opportunities, but failed to take advantage of them. At half-time, the score was 1-0 in favor of Wilkes. The score was 2-0 until Mike D'Olio scored for Juniata with 16 minutes left in the game. Juniata pressed the rest of the game, but failed to get the tying goal.

Two weeks ago, Messiah was ranked fourth in the Tri-State and against the Indians they showed why they deserve that high ranking. Coach Jaegar felt Messiah was the best team that Juniata had played all year. Although Juniata was both outclassed and outplayed, Coach Jaegar offers no apologies. He said that sheer Juniata pride and spirit prevented Messiah from scoring in double digits. The score was 4-0 at half-time, and Messiah added four more goals in the second half to complete the scoring.

At York, the Indians took a 1-0 lead 30 minutes into the contest when Joe Kobsar scored. However, the lead was short-lived. Five minutes later York knotted the score and then scored another goal with just one minute left in the half to take a 2-1 lead. Ten minutes into the second half, York scored again to take a 3-1 lead. More importantly, the goal took the wind out of Juniata's sails, and the team couldn't rebound. The Indians were hampered by a lack of team continuity caused by three starters missing from the line-up due to injuries.

Although Coach Jaegar was disappointed in the outcomes of the last three games, he feels the team's performance is continuing to improve. He is hoping for the best team performance of the year this Homecoming weekend, when the Indians host Albright on Saturday.

On Saturday, October 16, the women's varsity field hockey team traveled to Lycoming and tied the Warriors 0-0.

Much of the action took place on the Lycoming end of the field; however, the Indians failed to capitalize on their opportunities. Having a good game in the goal for the Indians was Terese Libert, who was filling in for the regular goaltender, Linda Hann. She had six saves, while the opposing goalie had 11 saves. The Indians also outshot their opponents for the first time this year, 11-6. Juniata had 13 penalty corners, while Lycoming had eight. Coach Hall said that there was a good team effort by all.

On Sunday, October 17, the Indians scrimmaged against the Statewood Club and the Central Club, both from Penn State. In the first game, against Statewood, Juniata played to a 0-0 tie. The second game against Central did not go as well as the first, with the Indians losing 5-1. Patty Kirksey scored the only Indian goal, on an assist from Laura Babiash.

The next field hockey game is at home against Wilkes on Saturday, October 23 at 11 am.

Science Fair Exposed

by John Summers

Juniata's Ninth Annual Science Fair took place Wednesday, October 20, in the Brumbaugh Science Center.

The one day affair is sponsored jointly by the Science Departments and the Admissions Office and has a two-fold purpose. First of all, it is the hope of the college to expose high school students to science on the college level. Dr. Laurence J. Mutti, Associate Professor of geology, points out, "We'd like to give the students the flavor of doing science, rather than just hearing about it." This idea centers on interesting the college-bound students in the natural sciences. Secondly, the college hopes to interest the students in Juniata itself.

The Admissions Office's responsibility in the program is to make initial contact with the high schools. Invitations are sent out to all area high schools and the only limitation is how far a school wants to travel. In the past, schools from as far away as Lancaster have made the trip. This year's conference was attended by approximately 225 students from 16 schools.

Organizational responsibilities rotate from year to year between the science departments. Dr. Mutti was in charge this year, while Dr. Robert L. Fisher, Professor of Biology, will take command for the 1983 edition.

Each department is expected to provide a lecture or two along with a demonstration relating to their field of concern. Students aid in some lectures by presenting research papers, while the faculty provide the bulk of the information from their general background and any current research.

The lectures basically relate to the students, the recent advances in science, and what to look for in the future. The departments try to offer enough diversity through the numerous lectures and demonstrations to provide something of interest for all students.

Career counseling is also provided. The main goal here is to inform the students of employment prospectives and opportunities in years to come, as well as to answer any questions about a par-

Bible Study Prepares For Artist Series

(In preparation for John Stuart Anderson's Artist Series presentation on the Gospel According To St. John, Andy Murray will be leading a series of three Bible studies on John's gospel. The first study was held Monday, October 25. The second two will be held Monday evening, November 8, at 7:00 p.m. in South Lounge. The sessions are one hour in length and open to everyone. Following are some excerpts from those studies.)

Veritas Liberat, the Juniata seal proudly proclaims. Truth sets free. That sounds reasonable. Surely ignorance and lies have enslaved humankind to some sort of deprived existence for as long as we have had an intellectual history. It is encouraging to have institutional recognition of the need for truth and we may go rolling swiftly on our way to freedom until some impertinent sophomore asks: But, what is truth and how much do we need to be liberated? Will 4x $7,000+ be enough to get an adequate dose or does that make a down payment on grad school where the "real" truth makes us "really" free? Will we know the truth when we see it and will we, by the way, like being free after all?

These are actually old questions, of course. Most of the very good ones are. They are questions for which a growing religious group, that existed around the turn of time from B.C. to A.D., had some specific answers. They believed that one could, through certain involved and complex rituals, get beyond the ugly world of material and flesh and be at one with the perfect reality of knowledge, truth, and idea. A growing number of these people believed that Jesus

Homecoming '82 Provides Festivities

Bonnie Benner Crowned as Queen

Homecoming activities began on Friday, October 22 with food and games on Oller lawn. Included in the weekend's activities were a bonfire, Homecoming parade, football game with traditional festivities, and masquerade dance.

The Lesher women had a kissing booth and a flea market, while Juniata's Executive Club sold caramel apples on Oller lawn Friday afternoon. The main attraction, however, was the live musical entertainment. Fran Mooney performed for the Oller festivities, making his fourth appearance at Juniata.

Later in the evening, a bonfire in South Hall parking lot kept a pep rally warm. Speaking that night were Coach Ash, and Tom Devine and Rick Eberly, co-captains of the football team. The football players, cheerleaders and the band helped enthuse the crowd.

Beginning the festivities on Saturday were the traditional Homecoming parade. Consisting of eight floats and three bands, the parade began in downtown Huntingdon at 10 a.m. The junior class float, portraying Disney, finished first in the competition among the classes, followed by the sophomores' Peanut's gang and the freshmen's Carter family. In other competition, the Seven Dwarfs' float made by J.E.C. finished first and off-campus housing's "Have A Coke and A Smile" came in second.

Juniata's football team defeated Albright 21-14 on Saturday afternoon. Bonnie Benner, escorted by Roger Spatz, was selected as Homecoming Queen at halftime. Her court and their escorts were Edie Marsters and Jeff Kaden, Margie Guerrini and Jeff Ostrowski, Tina Tweardy and Mark Murdock, and Jill Drexler and Carl Pavolic.

The first 50 people wearing costumes to the masquerade dance Saturday night received half-price coupons for this week's movie, "Friday the Thirteenth." Centaur, the musical entertainment, performed excellently.

Shirley Parsons, Priscilla Coppolo, Lori Chuba and Lori Mengel helped plan the events of the weekend. As committee chairpersons, these girls, along with Beth Weader, deserve special thanks for making Homecoming 1982 a memorable weekend.

Autumn Fest

What can $1.50 get you? Three cans of soda and a bag of corn chips. What a thrill. Well, what else? Seven stamps and a phone call (local; of course). One third of the Orestian Trilogy by Aeschylus — on the best seller list for Greek Mind students for 2000 years.

Guess again! It's the opportunity to get off campus for an evening into the wilds of the Pennsylvania State Forest to Camp Blue Diamond on Oct. 30. This is Autumn Fest — your chance to listen to the Allegheny String Band while square dancing, bobbing for apples, going on hayrides, drinking cider and having a better time than three cans of soda and a bag of corn chips can give you!

Sign up at the info desk with your $1.50 in hand. Transportation will be leaving from the front of Ellis at 7:15 p.m. Come in your finest hick apparel.

J C Concerts — A Reality

For the past two years, Juniata has been operating under a social handicap: the lack of a major concert. This year, however, the Concert Committee has managed a comeback, with the music of Kix and Daddy Licks on October 30.

The biggest obstacle encountered last year was the construction of the Sports and Recreation Complex. The facility was not available for student use for any large-scale activities, so Oller Hall was used as a substitute "concert hall." Whether it was the atmosphere, timing, or choice of bands, the concerts never had a chance. Student attendance was poor to pathetic.

There seems to be an improvement in this year's choice of entertainment. The bands, Kix and Daddy Licks, are definitely geared to student tastes. Each group also has a different type of music, to appeal to two different audiences. The committee itself has become more actively involved in the actual band selection, as well as in the preparation for the event. In short, the committee is working as a unit, in order to bring the best possible entertainment within their means to Juniata.

Obstacles still attempt to place restrictions on the work of the committee. The status of the gym is limiting the concert to 800 members of the college community only. Other difficulties, such as budgets and finding an open date in the Pathfinder, became topics for serious consideration. Despite these hassles, the committee is committed to doing their job — students arranging concerts for students.

No longer will people have the opportunity to complain about lack of effort on the committee's part. The only thing that is left to be tested is student interest. It is not an Artist Series on Medieval music. It does not require a road trip to another college or city just to get a glimpse of a "real live band." It is here, right on campus. It is within walking distance, and it's where you can have a good time with all your friends, and still be around to celebrate the rest of the weekend.

You asked for it, Juniata! The opportunity has presented itself, now The Juniatian feels that it's up to you.

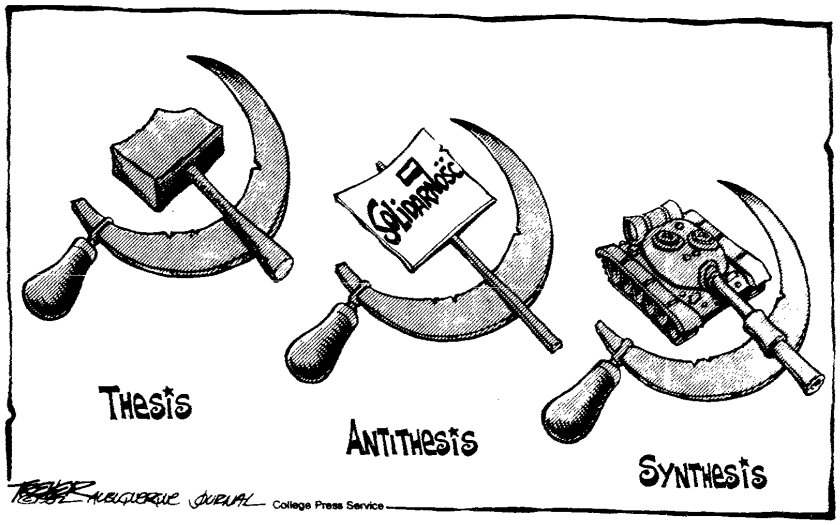
A Brief Introduction to Marxist Dialectics:



Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

To the Editor:

I am very concerned about the large number of students who live at home with their families while attending college. I am a 1981 graduate of Mount Saint Mary's College in Emmitsburg, MD and by talking to faculty and students, I found that students who live away from home do much better both academically and socially than students who live at home. One cause forcing many students to live at home is the cut in student aid loans. I hope something is done to restore student aid and the following suggestions will be considered and implemented by colleges:

First, I think all freshmen should be required to live on campus in dormitories and not be allowed to register motor vehicles during their freshman year. Motor vehicles make it easy for some freshmen to 'run away' from a stressful situation (such as being away from home) instead of coping directly with the situation. College freshmen need to be away from home yet they need guidance and support from peer advisors, faculty members, deans, and other college personnel so adjustment to the demands of college can be hastened.

Second, I think all upperclassmen (sophomores-up) should NOT live with their families but can live on or off campus and register a motor vehicle. Again, being away from home is essential so responsibility and independence on the part of the college student are fostered. The results of the fostering of responsibility and independence are usually higher grades and a much more satisfying social life for the college student.

Very Sincerely,
Glenn O. Rickard III

To the Editor:

Today between classes I customarily stopped into the library to catch up on the day's events in the New York Times. Once through the door, I noticed that something had changed; convenience and accessibility were gone. The most frequently used part of the library had been neatly tucked into the basement.

What was the motive for this action, I asked myself. I could not come up with anything that even resembled a logical explanation for such a poor choice of relocation.

Neither the basement, nor the second floor should be stomping ground for the transient patron; it should be a refuge from the din created by the in and out periodical fiend, who is here one minute and gone the next, not even there long enough to decently warm a seat for the next guy. Day to day this invaluable service of Beeghley should be easier to get to than Dan Rather. When a member of the student body or faculty has a few minutes between the days' starts and stops, many of them can be found perusing their favorite daily/weekly/monthly periodical. Now it will not be quite so easy. This may seem like a trivial gripe, but on a daily basis, I believe we will find this more unpopular and a nuisance.

Thank you,
Alan Carney

Along Muddy Run

by Lisa Ellek

There was a creaking of floorboards above her as she softly thumped to the carpeted floor from her top bunk and padded into the kitchen. From the kitchen window she could gaze at the shingled and sidinged "real houses" in Residential, U.S.A., just two blocks down from Admissions. She shivered securely and thought how comforting it felt to have four other roommates, a bathroom without an institutional toilet paper holder, and a sink full of dirty dishes.

Overcome by a Saturday-morning-I'm-ready-for-the-world craving, she cast a longing glance around the room. As she opened the cupboard door to reach for a Wheat Thin, a fog pervaded her face. She gingerly reached into the darkness for the box and found . . . half a Wheat Thin and some crumbs in the bottom of the 10 oz. box. She turned to the faces of her four wide-eyed roommates.

"Did . . . " They all shook their heads no.

"Oh no, don't tell me, it can't be, not the . . . Mystery Eaters!!! When will it all end?!!" she cried.

I think it began one morning when I reached for a piece of left-over birthday cake. There had been an entire row left when I had gone to bed the night before, although the roses were going fast. When I peeled back the foil from the pan, however, all that remained was a knife coated with a blob of stale crumbs and icing. Roommate No. 1 came in, saw me licking my lips over the knife, and commented on how she had gone for a piece of cake a few minutes earlier, but found none and how there was a whole row when she went to bed.

One by one, Roommates No. 2, No. 3, and No. 4 remarked at some point in the day, "I can't believe the cake is gone. I only had a little piece." This led me to hypothesize

by David Lehmann

What would senior year be like without apathy? Senior apathy — that glorious feeling of not caring to do anything academic or supportive to the college with disregard to the consequences — elevates soon to be graduates into the real world. We Seniors, by being apathetic, demonstrate that we are no longer babies that need pampering to by the college. Some say (especially the damned faculty) that by refusing to do any sort of work and still complaining because we like to receive the rewards, that we would have had we done the work, we behave more like small children than adults. These ignorant folk insist that we Seniors want to be pampered. That claim remains untrue; Seniors have worked in the collegiate system for three years and demand that during the final year they have a right to the privileges of their seniority.

A fine show of Senior apathy occurred this past Saturday. For the first time in many years (maybe ever), the Senior Class failed to enter a float for Homecoming. At half-time during the football game, floats made by the Freshman Class, Sophomore Class, Junior Class, JEC, and Off-Campus RHA all circled the track, but the only evidence of the Senior Class float were two signs set against the fence around the bleachers, the second one reading, "Sorry, maybe next year." This deed was truly heroic; no Senior Class had ever possessed the courage to disregard such a popular traditional activity. No, the Senior Class didn't just disregard this activity, with that second sign, they made a mockery out of Homecoming, Bravo!

If this brilliant apathetic display possessed any black marks, it was because the Senior Class Prez and a small group of co-conspirators who refused apathy. They worked on the float every night for the five nights preceeding Homecoming Saturday and disgracefully toiled hour after hour in vain hope of destroying the grand Senior showing. An on-looker would have sworn that the Prez and his helpers were still enthusiastic Freshmen, naive of the Apathetic Creed. Because of his poor deeds, Mr. Prez must be impeached and replaced with a Senior that truly doesn't care.

Any of the other three class officers are well suited to replace him. Although each of the other officers did show up at float building for one night, I believe this was just to make sure that not much progress was occuring with the float building. Because of their and others' efforts, apathy reached new bounds.

It occurs to me that some seniors, although they didn't want to help, desired a float in the parade. These tikes, having seniority over underclassmen, have the right to be humored. If seniors want a float, they should have one. The Junior Class bubbled with enough enthusiasm for two classes, so they should have built the Senior float. This could become a solution for Senior apathy: have the Junior Class carry the Seniors. For Class events, such as Homecoming floats and All-Class Night plays, the Juniors could represent the Seniors. The Juniors could have two teams, an A team and a B team. Being good sports, the Seniors wouldn't gripe about being represented by the B team.

I could say much more about Senior apathy, but right now I really don't want to. The Juniatian may want a longer column from me this week , but I don't care.

Laughing Bush Funded

by Cinny Cooper

This year Laughing Bush, the college outing service, has been reorganized. Because the club is now funded by student government, there has been a reduction in rental prices and more activities have been planned.

Six hundred dollars worth of new equipment has been purchased so far this year. Two Laughing Bush members went to Delaware Water Gap for a weekend to make these purchases. Two canoes with accessories, one tent, camping equipment, and some literature were among the purchases.

Many activities are in the planning stages for later this year. Cross-country skiing and backpacking are planned for this winter, and possibly white water rafting in April. A retreat to the field station, a canoe weekend, and a bicycle touring trip are also being planned. A Coffee House is being scheduled for early in the winter term with possible off-campus entertainment.

Package deals are also being integrated into Laughing Bush's rental policy. Instead of renting separately skis, backpack, and other necessities for a cross-country skiing weekend, they can be rented collectively at a discount rate. Other package deals besides cross-country skiing will also be available.

The Laughing Bush office, with its informal and relaxed atmosphere, is open to anyone who wishes to just drop by and see what is available to them. The Laughing Bush organization would also like to thank Center Board for their financial help in making the raft trip a success.

Meet the Prof

by Robert Riefler

One of the new professors at Juniata this year is Dr. Parmeley. He is assisting Dr. Mitchell with Principles of Chemistry and Dr. Ochiai in Organic Chemistry.

Dr. Parmeley earned his undergraduate degree from the military academy at West Point in 1972. He earned his master's degree at the University of Iowa in 1979, after which he taught chemistry at the military academy. He spent ten years in the service, and got out of the army last March.

Hunting and fishing, as well as taxidermy, are among Dr. Parmeley's hobbies — he enjoys the outdoors. Parmeley lives with his wife and three children, and believes in devoting a great deal of time to his family.

Dr. Parmeley's initial reaction to Juniata is a positive one. "I like Juniata real well because it's very similar to the type of education I had." He likes the low student-to-teacher ratio because it allows professors to spend a good deal of time with their students. He has no future plans other than Juniata at the moment.

Off-Off Broadway

The second of eight Artist Series performances was held on October 19 in Oller Hall. Peter Orth, a graduate of Juilliard School of Music and winner of the 1979 Maumburg International Piano Competition, performed pieces by Schumann, Debussy, Liszt, and Shostakovich to an appreciative audience.

By opening with Schumann's Waldscenen op. 82, Orth showed the college audience what can be done by the performer to bring the atmosphere of the music to life. Each movement elicited a specific mood and mental picture and the subtlety with which each was played makes the critical acclaim Orth has received understandable.

Following the intermission, Orth played two etudes by Debussy. The second of these, No. 1 in C-major, is a parody of the scales all beginning pianists must play. This humorous piece was well received.

By far, the highlight of the evening was the performance of Shostakovich's Preludes and Fugues Op. 87 No.'s 7 in A major, 17 in A-flat major, and 19 in D-flat major. Although Orth was uneasy as to how the contemporary pieces would be received, the concluding No. 19 in D-flat major brought the audience to its feet in hopes of an encore.

Despite the standing ovation, Orth declined to give an encore, explaining afterwards that he exhausted himself during the performance. Apparently the piano in Oller Hall is in need of some repair. Orth said it was a beautiful grand piano, but that the hammers had gotten hardened from use. He thought it was a shame that such a good piano should play badly because it needed a fifty dollar hammer restoration job.

Following the performance, a reception was held in South carpeted lounge, where many of the audience had a chance to meet the self-proclaimed piano player. Surprisingly, Orth doesn't see Huntingdon as such an out-of-the-way place to perform. Aside from an audience that understands the subtleties of his playing style, he feels that a college audience is one that he enjoys playing for as much as any other.

Congratulations to the Cultural Events Committee and the Fine Arts Committee for bringing such a fine performer to Juniata. Peter Orth's performance was one of the finest we'll see in Oller Hall this year.

Film Review

"Taps"

by Steve Drukker

"Taps" is a good film, but the sound at Friday night's showing gave the title a special significance.

George C. Scott portrays General Beesch, head of the Bunker Hill Military Academy. At the school's commencement ceremony, he announces that in one year the academy is to be closed and the buildings torn down to make room for a condominium project. That night at the Commencement dance, a fight breaks out between some "townies" and Bunker Hill cadets. During the brawl, the General accidentally shoots one of the townies, and he is taken away by the police. Meanwhile, Brian, a just-promoted major (played by Timothy Hutton), learns that as a result of this incident the school will be shut down — effective immediately. In a desperate attempt to head off the closing of the academy, Brian and the cadets take over Bunker Hill.

Brian starts out believing that he is doing the honorable thing by defending the school he believes in. But as pressure to give up mounts from both inside and outside the academy's walls, Brian realizes that he is losing sight of his priorities. How can he defend his actions with an abstraction like "honor" when his cause has killed an innocent seven year old (accidentally shot when he tried to leave the school's grounds)?

George C. Scott, always very good at playing authoritative figures, does an excellent job as the head of the academy. Although his on-screen role ends at a relatively early point in the film, his presence is felt throughout. Timothy Hutton does a very good job of making it easy to identify with a character whose initial values (honor is the most important thing in life) and willingness to defend those values (by committing a federal crime) are quite removed from most people's ways of thinking.

It's lucky that the plot of "Taps" is relatively easy to follow. If it wasn't, most of the audience at Oller would have been in big trouble. The dialogue throughout had a muffled sound, making parts extremely difficult to follow. During the film's climax the most audible feature was a disturbing buzz which overpowered nearly everything but the gunfire.

So, what does "Taps" have going for it? George C. Scott and Timothy Hutton, an engrossing plot filled with tension-packed scenes, and something of value to say. What makes "Taps" a good film and not a very good one? Some rather slow scenes, a far-fetched plot (at times), and in the case of Friday night's showing, some very bad sound.

News Briefs

Washington (UPI) — Reagan signed an Amerasian Bill, Friday, which will make it easier for children of American military men who served in Asia to enter the U.S. and will give them the same rights as other children of American citizens. The bill is the first official acknowledgement of children fathered by American servicemen and abandoned in Korea, Vietnam, Laos, Thailand and Cambodia since 1950. Over 4,000 Amerasian children have been stranded as outcasts in Vietnam following the American withdrawal from Indo-China in 1957.

Warsaw — Solidarity leaders are calling for a new phase of protests and walkouts which will lead to a general strike in Poland this spring. Messages signed by five fugative Union leaders of an underground committee urge work-stoppage November 10 with the idea that the repression will therefore become unsuccessful. A mass walkout in the spring could paralyze the already crippled economy. The underground leaders consider the spring walkout "the ultimate weapon" putting Solidarity on a showdown course with the martial law authorities.

Los Angeles — The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration estimates that over $30 billion is spent annually by cocaine users in the U.S. More and more middle class citizens are becoming involved, due to the profits found in cocaine trafficking and the low risks of being caught. The trafficking is being controlled by Latin Americans and the Organized Crime in this country. Greed is driving Americans from all levels of society into the multi-billion dollar industry.

Washington — King Hussain II of Morocco said Sunday at a News Conference in Washington that the Arab nations would recognize Israel only after Israel withdraws its forces from territory occupied since the 1967 war. He also said the Middle East dispute had entered a "new phase, not the conflict of war but of law and of rights."

Washington — Military spending has increased, while the number of weapons, vehicles and machinery has declined. The U.S. spent $2,300 billion in the last 30 years.

Although the main purposes of the conference center on the student, the day serves as an aid for teachers as well. The conference provides the high school teachers with a chance to interact with other scientists. It also enables those with joint concerns to meet and discuss various teaching methods and experiences.

Dr. Mutti was satisfied with the events of the day and said things went pretty much as planned.

Rush — Signals

Since the fall of Led Zepplin, hoards of America's young people have been anxiously awaiting the release of the new Rush album, probably the closest thing left in their minds to the former "supergroup." Rush does, after all, feature a lead singer who sounds like a prepubescent Robert Plant. Fortunately, the comparison ends right there.

After the release of Moving Pictures, every song on which made radio playlists nationwide, I tried to picture what this band would do next to insult, not only my intelligence, but the entire music industry. Their new record, Signals, comes pretty close.

Signals sounds like virtually everything else that the band has done. The sound is monotonous, repetitive and dull, and for a group that boasts its musical talent, the instrumentals are not nearly hot enough to boil water. Guitarist Alex Lifeson is about as close to being as good as Jimmy Page as Slim Whitman. His riffs seem to go on for days without ever getting anywhere, and the really horrible part is that he composes them like that. Yet, it is with the other two members of this power (?) trio that I find the most fault.

The man who writes the lyrics to these monstrosities is their drummer, Neil Peart. Not only is his drumming ability questionable, but his lyric composing talents are yet worse. The song "New World Man" was this country's second favorite song last week according to Radio and Records, but why? Granted it caters to the simple, adolescent minds that comprise the results of those surveys; but why is it that every time a group like Rush tosses out a few catchy hooks the American public hits like trout during mating season? Surely there must be an intelligent common denominator for the radio listeners of this country to swear by.

I don't know about anyone else, but I resent being classified by an inferior band like Rush for the simple sake of impressing small-minded listeners with the worldly knowledge of three boring Canadians. The song "Subdivisions," which opens the album, is easily the most disgraceful excuse for music that I have heard for some time. How dare they say "drawn like moths we drift into the city the timeless old attraction, cruising for action, lit up like a firefly just to feel the living night." Speak for yourselves guys, but I am slightly more complex than a moth.

To make matters worse, all of these pseudo-intellectual lyrics are backed by bad music and a lead singer who sounds like someone is wrenching his testicles. Geddy Lee also plays the bass and synthesizers, both of which sound like his voice — a droning plastic blur. Yet people still like the stuff.

A record costs a lot of money these days, close to eight dollars. There is a vast amount of quality material that is being put onto vinyl, maybe the start of a musical renaissance, but not if groups like Rush keep going platinum inside of six months. If one must indeed swear by some supergroup as replacement for a character of one's own, please don't make it Rush. Some things are blatantly good or bad. Rush is bad, and so is their new album Signals. Get the plague first.

of Nazareth was a spiritual manifestation of this perfect reality. This powerful and popular sect, influenced by Greek philosophy, Hellenistic Judahism, Persian dualism and early Christianity were a great concern to the author of the gospel of John.

He saw in their "other worldliness" and their clear division of reality into good and evil, a system that would at the same time be very attractive to and very dangerous to the growing Christian faith. And so he took some of their concepts and some of their language and began to redefine them so that men and women might believe in Jesus the Christ, and believing, might have full and complete life.

Light is not the eternal force of good battling the eternal force of evil. Light is the revelation of God that gives consistent and inextinguishable illumination to the darkness. The "word" is not perfect idea lording over miserable material. The word is the creative act of God which not only gives reality to the stuff of creation but actually becomes flesh in the world. John never uses the nouns for knowledge and faith. Knowing and believing are activities to be engaged in, not essences to be grasped and owned. God is not the spirit to be joined through rigorous ritual, but the loving parent who so cared for all creation that He gives His only Son to make it whole again. And truth? Truth is not creed or doctrine or formula or equation or philosophy or. . . . Truth can not be captured in any verbal, mathmatical or artistic expression. Truth has been captured once and for all in human flesh and blood. Truth is flesh and blood. Truth is Jesus of Nazareth. "And you shall know the truth and the truth will make you free." As for freedom, John wants us to take his word that we will like it.

Making the Grade

by Janet Walenta

"The Middle States Evaluation team will reaccredit Juniata," Keith Fox, Student Government president says, judging from the presentation the team made here Wednesday, October 6.

Dr. Richard Green of Augsburgh College, Minnesota, commented in this presentation, that the Program of Emphasis policy and adviser system are two of Juniata's strong points and that the school has no outstanding weaknesses. He warned, however, that the school needs to plan for expansion of its computer facilities. Dr. Green also suggested that Juniata make continuing education for faculty members a department goal.

The evaluation team is comprised of administrative and faculty members from private colleges outside Pennsylvania. The team views Juniata in relation to the report that a Juniata self-evaluation team of administrative and faculty members and students prepared last spring. The revised version of the self-evaluation report will soon be available at the Student Government office. The Middle States report will be published next month.

The freshmen class elected Walter Ball, Tim McCarthy, and Forrest Myers to the Student Government senate. Babbie Aigeltinger, Cindy Bosi, Tom Cancermo, Kim Detwiler, and Kelly Mehigan to the Freshmen Steering Committee. Upper classmen elected Jack Sturgean off-campus housing senators. Only two-hundred and seventy one of 1318 upperclassmen and 145 of 375 Freshmen voted, said Chris Collins, student government vice president, who was disappointed in the turn-out.

President, Keith Fox says he is already working with the senators and has recently met with the steering committee, and that he is pleased with the results of the election.

Grier Provides Culture

by Cindy Duick

The Grier School's 5th Annual International Night was held Friday, October 22, from 7-10 p.m. Juniata foreign language students, exchange students, and Dr. Cees Frijters attended the evening celebration of foreign cultures.

The students of Grier School, an all-girl private preparatory school, ranging from grades 7-12 and coming from all the countries of the world, put together the program.

The evening commenced as the girls, assisted by their teachers, performed skits from various countries involving authentic costumes and music. For example, some girls told a Swedish fairy tale; two demonstrated the art of the Thailand Dance; and another stomped her heels to the Spanish Flamingo Dance; others sang Latin American songs, dramatized a French poem and sang French songs, including solos; and a Japanese girl modeled a typical costume.

The second part of the evening was a food tasting gala. Stands were set up displaying items of interest from the various countries as well as at least one sample of an authentic recipe from each location. There were such delicacies as Scandinavian traditional waffles and jam, the French Yule Log Cake, Italian macaroni shells and sauce, Chinese sweet and sour pork, African Peanut Butter paste, British scones (tea biscuit), butter, jam, hot tea and shortbread, and from Thailand, a spicy rice dish.

Nuclear War Issues

Area residents are invited to attend the October 27 program on nuclear war issues to be held at 8 p.m. in Juniata College's Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center.

Members of Juniata's Peace and Conflict Studies Committee hope to drive home the point that people living in rural areas will not escape the effects of nuclear war.

Wednesday's program will feature the film "The Last Epidemic," which discusses how nuclear war would affect people personally. The film will be followed by a panel discussion and question/answer period.

Out & About

by Amy Smith

If you're in the mood for an elegant Italian style dinner without the typical price you pay for elegance, Delgrosso's Restaurant along Route 220 in Tipton, Pa., is just the place to go. This past weekend, my partner and I had the opportunity to experience this type of dining.

Upon our arrival at Delgrosso's, we had about a twenty minute wait, which however could have been avoided had we made previous reservations. We spent this time talking in the dimly lit bar area until the hostess directed us to one of the dining rooms.

This particular room was unimpressive as far as the decor was concerned. Its formal essence was attributed to the white linen covered tables, wine lists, and five-piece silverware settings. As a romantic atmosphere it lacked a few key elements: candles, music, and a beautiful view. Fortunately, we were seated at a table far from the windows which exposed the surrounding scenery: an industrial plant, a car dealership, and a gas station.

Although the atmosphere wasn't as extravagant as we had expected, we were not at all disappointed with the main reason we chose this restaurant — the Italian delicacies. My partner's full course meal consisted of Antipasta, fruit cocktail, soup, meatballs and garlic bread (compliments of the chef), salad, and the main course, Veal Parmisan. I chose the homemade spaghetti with meatballs, which also included salad and Italian bread. Of course we saved room for dessert, American style — cheesecake and chocolate ice cream!

I am not certain whether or not the hostess being informed of the purpose in our visit had any influence on the excellent service we received. The waitress made no delay in serving each course promptly after we had finished the previous one. When our entire meal was completed, she returned with the check and collected the money at the table, sparing us the trip to the cash register.

Overall, the disadvantages that inevitably accompany any restaurant, were outweighed by the advantages: the food, the service, and the reasonable prices (the bill was less than $25).

about the Mystery Eaters. They are, no doubt, almost mythical little creatures, like fairies, who will sneak in at night and pull the pepperoni off of cold pizza, save the potato chip bag and three crumbs as a momento, and eat your very last favorite marshmallow pumpkin.

This invasion seems minor to you, probably, because you don't have real kitchen cabinets that once were stocked, a real stove, toaster, and blender, but to those of us still on the meal plan but playing Better Homes and Gardens by "making the most of" our cupboard space, this is a personal affront.

Amazingly enough, the Mystery Eaters will only attack opened food. The five of us will often sit around on long nights of homework and have communal cravings for the pretzels hidden between the Kool-Aid and the tea bags. No one wishes to break the seal, however, because once opened one might as well swallow the first and last bite and wave goodbye to the bag. The "Once-It's-Open-Free-For-All" notion goes well with the Mystery Eaters' "The-Last-One-Must-Go" philosophy. No one can stand to see the last gingersnap, Oreo, or Fudge Graham Cracker sit all alone in the package, so it must be put out of its misery.

Many people will say Lesher girls are the worst (I should know, I was a Lesher girl for three years), because they have a phenomenon of what a friend described as "closet eating." At meals they sit with their pinkies poised in the air, having before them a half of orange, a cup of tea, and four napkins.

After three sips of tea and two comments directed at them about anorexia, they pat their midsections and declare demurely, "I can't eat a thing," so the orange becomes just a decoration on the plate. After dinner, however, Charlie Rich could be singing, "But when she gets behind closed doors and she lets her tongue hang out," in the background due to the rush back to dorm rooms where all food promptly gets gummed to death. Many feel Lesher was geographically located across the street from the cafeteria for this reason . . . the sadists and "masticists" simply can't run too far for nourishment!

Mission House was supposed to be one step away from primal foraging. As of now, however, combatting the Mystery Eaters is probably the worst crisis we face. As an epilogue, keep your eyes open for any creature carrying Nabisco Doo Dads, Frito-Lay Tostitos, or Pepperidge Farm Gold Fish from Apartment No. 1 Mission House . . . a reward is being offered. Beware of fog penetrating your cupboards and the gravitational pull of food from the top shelf downwards, for the Mystery Eaters are coming to your neighborhood . . . soon.

Hillman Foundation

The Hillman Foundation of Pittsburgh has awarded Juniata College a $40,000 grant to be applied to the college's new $4.5 million Sports + Recreation Center to be completed the end of this year.

In announcing the Hillman grant, Juniata President Frederick M. Binder said that the gift moves the college closer to achieving the fund raising goal for the complex. "In order to meet The Kresge Foundation challenge of $250,000, we must meet our goal by December 15. The generous support of The Hillman Foundation is deeply appreciated by everyone at Juniata."

"The new Sports + Recreation Center will play a major role in the future of Juniata College," Dr. Binder said. "By investing in this complex, The Hillman Foundation has made a substantial contribution to the future of Juniata and all its students."

As a service to the readers, next week's issue of the Juniatian will feature the time schedules for fall finals.

Further services for the college community will be provided by the Juniatian throughout the remainder of the academic year.!

Tribe Volleyball Second at Mansfield

by Tracey Catanese

The Juniata Women's Volleyball Team has returned from the Mansfield Invitational with a second place finish. The team is still ranked first in NCAA Division III with an overall season record of 33 wins and 3 losses. Second, third and fourth placed nationally ranked Division III teams include the University of California at San Diego, Sonoma and LaVerne, respectively. Also, Ithaca College and Western Maryland College are dominant volleyball competitors in the eastern United States.

On Friday, October 22, the Lady Indians were beaten by hosting Mansfield in their first match of the tourney by scores of 11-15, 15-9 and 13-15. They bounced back to take their second match 15-4 and 15-0 over Alfred University. On Saturday, the ladies finished out the "Round Robin" tournament with hopes of a second place finish. They defeated Stoneybrook 16-14, 15-5, the Rochester Institute of Technology 17-15, 15-10, and St. Bonaventure 15-6, 15-11 to secure second place. Mansfield took first place honors in the tourney.

When speaking with Coach Larry Bock, he commented that, "It (Mansfield Invitational) was a very good tournament for the team to learn a lot, especially with the loss to Mansfield." He believes that JC was beaten by a fine team and that the loss will be beneficial. He feels that the team has taken the loss very positively and constructively and that this will aid them in post-season play.

JC played very good volleyball throughout the entire tournament, except for a few crucial moments in the third game of the Mansfield match. The team suffered a loss of concentration by missing three crucial serves, including one when the score was tied 13-13.

Individual statistical leaders for the tourney include Sue MacLachlan who led with 36 kills and Sue Barker with an excellent passing ratio in excess of 30%. Colleen Irelan, who is back to 100% ability following her bout with the flu, averaged more than seven defensive digs per match and Peggy Evans, in spite of not having practiced for ten days because of her neck sprain, played very good volleyball by recording 22 serving acres from the tourney.

According to Coach Bock, the individual statistics were excellent, but the most significant part of the tourney was the first game of the Stoneybrook match. JC was down 10-14 and the coaches substituted Tonya Snyder, who has been serving very well lately, into the critical situation. Snyder delivered five very tough serves, including one ace, and put Juniata in the lead 15-14.

Against a much improved Elizabethtown team on October 21, JC suffered a few minor problems or what Bock considers a big coaching mistake. The team experienced problems with the 5-1 offense, an offense which was used two years ago, and fell behind 0-10 in the first game. The team then changed back to the 6-2 offense with Claudia Tweardy and Jan Trissler as setters and won the game 15-11. They went on to win the other games 15-10 and 15-7.

The coaches changed to the 5-1 offense when they believed that Evans would sit out the remainder of the season because of the neck injury she suffered at the Naval Academy Invitational. The change in offenses was too difficult for the underclassmen who had never played it before, and this made the coaches decide to stay with the 6-2 offense for the remainder of the season. Evans condition is improving every day and she should be in good shape for the MAC's which begin on November 5.

Individual statistics for the game include Barker with 10 kills and MacLachlan with 16 kills, Eing Opanayikul with 5 serving aces, and Tweardy with 8 defensive digs. Irelan performed head and shoulders above everyone else in the passing department with a 37% passing ratio and also managed 6 defensive digs.

The immediate concerns of the team are the Messiah College match scheduled at home on October 27 and to prepare for the MAC Tournament, which should be very exciting this year. With regard to national rankings, the loss to Mansfield shouldn't influence JC's standings very much. The coaches would like to remain high enough in the rankings to earn a buy out of first round play and also would like the opportunity for a home site during regionals; for the present time they are playing each match as it comes.

The team is very tired and is looking forward to a weekend with no tournaments in which they can regroup before post-season. The team has participated in scrimages and tourneys for the past seven weekends and has the admiration of their coaches for doing so well.

Indian Soccer Team Splits

by App

The soccer team snapped an eight game losing streak last Wednesday at home by shutting out Lebanon Valley 3-0. Unfortunately, the winning streak ended at one when the Indians were edged 4-3 by Albright on Homecoming weekend. The team's record now stands at 2-9.

The Indians controlled almost the entire game against Lebanon Valley. They scored all three of their goals in the first half, substituted freely in the second half, and cruised in with an easy victory. Mike D'Olio scored the first goal with an assist from Brian Bullock. He also scored the team's final goal unassisted, and Shen Ruth scored the second goal unassisted. Coach Jaegar was very pleased with the team's effort, and was doubly pleased with the opportunity to substitute freely in the second half.

The Homecoming crowd was disappointed by the outcome of Saturday's game, but they were quite entertained by an exciting, intense soccer match. Albright scored first, but Juniata countered with two goals by Shen Ruth to take the lead 2-1. Albright knotted the score, but Brian Bullock scored to put the Indians back on top 3-2. However, Albright tied it at three, and then with only one minute left in the game scored the winning goal. Coach Jaegar felt the game was evenly fought, and despite the loss was pleased with his team's performance.

The Indians have four games remaining on the schedule including two this week. Yesterday, they hosted a tough Bloomsburg team, and then on Saturday they travel to Susquehanna.

Men and Women Double CC Win

by Paul Bomberger

Homecoming '82 spelled double victory for the Women's Cross Country team. The ladies shut out both Western Maryland 15-47, and Lycoming 15-44.

Freshman sensation, Cathy Duffy, once again led the Indian charge. Duffy set a new course record with a speedy 19:40 clocking. Carol Tendall, Carolyn Andre, Chris Schleiden and Robin Bardman finished behind the record-setting Duffy, for the shut out.

The two victories raised the Lady Harriers dual meet record to 7-2, with only one meet remaining against Dickinson on Wednesday, October 27.

Following the Dickinson meet, the Ladies will run in the all important MAC Championships, on Saturday, November 6, with aspirations of attaining the MAC crown.

Homecoming day was Tom Hoffman day this year. In his final cross country dual meet, Tom capped a brilliant four-year tenure with a school record 29:16, over the Indians' home course.

Indian teammates: Bill Ciesla, Mark Royer, Mike Murray and Andy Pearson also added superb efforts to crush Western Maryland 23-40, and Lycoming 15-50. Besides the front runners, Coach Mitchell was proud of the strong effort from the entire team. The double victory gave the Indians an 8-3 dual meet season.

In two weeks, the Harriers will travel to Lebanon Valley College for the MAC Championships.

JC Stickers Fall

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Women's Varsity Field Hockey team lost a tough 2-0 game against Wilkes on Sat., Oct. 23. The ladies from Wilkes scored in the second half at the 8:50 and 11:00 minute marks respectively; both scores came off penalty corners.

Outstanding play for the Indians came from Leslie Pinto, Jill Loomis, and Laura Babiash. The stickers had only one shot on goal compared to Wilkes' 11 shots on goal. The Juniata offense was also hampered by the lack of penalty corners; Wilkes, however, had 13 penalty corners in the game. Goaltender Linda Hahn played most of the game with Terry Libert replacing her late in the second half. There were 9 saves by Juniata, one coming off an outstanding play by winger Pinto.

The offense seemed to play smoothly, but the absence of penalty corners made it difficult to set up in front of the Wilkes' goal. The defense remained strong under Wilkes' heavy attack, only permitting two goals to pass their goal line.

Yesterday, the stickers battled Shippensburg, and on Saturday they travel to Susquehanna.

Tribe Tames Lions

by Andy Berdy

Juniata alumni got what they came for on Saturday, as the Albright Lions came to town attempting to spoil the Indian Homecoming festivities.

After running up 21 first half points, via the pass, run and interception, the Indians held off a 14 point fourth quarter Lion roar to come out on top, 21-14.

Tribe fans were delighted early, when on the Lion's second play from scrimage, quarterback Jim Kirkpatrick's first pass was picked off by Tom Devine on the Albright 26 and returned for a score. And before anyone had a chance to shiver from the cold October air, the Indians led 7-0.

The Tribe got the ball right back, following a Lion punt, on the Albright 45. After a Dave Pfeiffer to Dave Murphy completion to the AC 33 the drive stalled and JC was in punt formation. But Dave Hornberger, a former high school quarterback, faked the kick and passed to Dave Heck on the AC 19.

The Tribe was stopped on the next series when Pfeiffer was sacked. Mike Schaffner missed his only field goal attempt of the day, wide to the right from 36 yards out.

The Indians got the ball again near mid-field but failed to move. Before the game, Coach Rob Ash stressed that field position was a key to the Albright offense. Hornberger minimized that, dropping his punt on the AC one yard line.

However, the Lions moved out of the deficit, driving down to the Indian 18. The Lion drive was halted when Kirkpatrick was hit and fumbled in the Albright backfield. Tim Clapper dove on the ball at the JC 30, and the Tribe had survived the first Lion threat.

Pfeiffer, recovered from last week's injury, went right to the air, first screening to Rick Eberly to the JC 42. Pfeiffer then hit Murphy on the Albright 48. Three plays later the JC connection struck again as Pfeiffer lofted a pass down the sideline to Murphy who beat the defense and hauled it in for the score.

Late in the first half, after the teams exchanged a pair of possessions, the Tribe began a drive on the JC 36. After an Indian illegal procedure penalty, Pfeiffer again found Murphy over the middle on a screen pass. The sophomore sensation broke to the outside and eluded tacklers on his way to a 69 yard score . . . but the ball was brought back to the JC 47 on a personal foul call.

Pfeiffer went back to the air finding Carl Fekula on the AC 43 on an Albright interferance call. Eberly rambled for nine yards on each of three carries before Pfeiffer again found Murphy on the AC nine. Eberly took it the rest of the way on two more tries, and the crowning of the Homecoming Queen began with the Indians on top 21-0.

Bonnie Benner, the 1982 Queen, looked on as the second half began, but the Indians stumbled. Pfeiffer was intercepted twice in the Tribe's first two possessions, the first on a deflection at the line, and the second coming on the JC seven. But the Juniata defense brought a smile to her face, as Clapper stopped halfback Rich Searles on fourth and goal from the one.

The Tribe defense faced another test when a Lion punt was mishandled by JC returnmen, giving Albright another try at the JC 17. The running of Kirkpatrick and Searles moved the Lions to the JC three. But on fourth and goal the Tribe secondary read Kirkpatrick's bootleg run correctly, stopping him short.

The Indian offense moved out to the JC 10 before Pfeiffer was picked off for the fifth time in the game on the JC 12. Kirkpatrick found Sam Hardinger over the middle on the next play putting Albright on the board.

The Indian defense played a key part in the JC win, here stoppng a Lion fourth and goal try.

Miscues continued to plague the Indians as Tom Trent fumbled the kick-off giving the ball right back to the Lions. Nine plays and 30 yards later Kirkpatrick took it in from one yard out and with 8:04 left, it was a ballgame at 21-14.

The Juniata offense again failed to move and Albright had another chance to score. But the Indian defense, which played tough all day, bailed them out, stopping Searles on first down and pressuring Kirkpatrick into two incomplete passes, giving the offense another try.

This time they responded. Despite the interceptions, Pfeiffer went to the air finding Murphy once and Fekula three times, along with the ground game of Hornberger and Pat Davis. Moving from the JC 34 to the Lion 20, the offense ran out the clock and the Indians hung on to a 21-14 win.

For the Tribe, Pfeiffer completed 14 of 30 passes for 219 yards, 186 coming in the first half. Murphy and Fekula each grabbed six of those, Murphy for 139 yards and Fekula for 58.

Eberly had another strong performance, picking up 60 yards on 15 carries before leaving in the third period with a sprained ankle. Hornberger took up the slack with 31 yards on 11 tries and Davis added 17 on four attempts.

The defense was excellent, holding the Lions to just 70 yards on the ground and 80 in the air. It was also the key to the score, stopping two goal line charges and scoring on the Devine interception.

Bob Waszak turned in 20 tackles on the day, and his line-backing mate Tom McVay added 13. Clapper had 11 stops and a fumble recovery that led to a JC score. All that was done in the absence of tackle Fred Santarelli, the fourth leading tackler and leading sacker, who is out with a broken ankle.

Juniata moves to 4-0 atop the MAC Northern Division, and 6-1 overall. A big test comes Saturday as the Tribe welcomes the second place MAC power, Lycoming to College Field.

Indian Update

How 'bout them Indians! The Tribe now 6-1 overall and 4-0 in the Mid-Atlantic Conference, Northern Division, ahead of Lycoming and Delaware Valley, has some pretty impressive season statistics, along with some outstanding players.

The defense has allowed only an average of seven points per game while the Tribe offense has put an average of 22. Juniata leads the MAC, in team passing yardage, averaging about 200 yards per game.

The Indians also have some individual standouts. On offense Dave Pfeiffer stands as the fourth leading quarterback, completing 59 of 130 attempts for 948 yards, seven touchdowns and 11 interceptions.

Rick Eberly is the leading ground gainer, averaging 72 yards per game and chalking up two 100 yard performances.

Dave Murphy is by far the leading Indian receiver, grabbing 33 passes for 616 yards and eight touchdowns and has an ECAC Player of the Week nomination to his credit.

Dave Hornberger leads the MAC in punting with a 38 yard average.

The defense is anchored by linebackers Bob Waszak and Tom McVay each with 65 tackles on the year. Bob Wazalis is next with 42 and Tim Clapper with 41. The defense will miss the service of tackle Fred Santarelli out for the remainder of the season with a broken ankle.

The secondary has 18 interceptions to its credit, eight coming from Tom Devine who has 22 lifetime for the tribe, looking to break his brother's record of 27. Devine is again among the nation leaders and has a few ECAC nominations this year also. The rest of the group can catch the ball too. Ben Reichley has three and Bill Stamp has two, one for a TD. McVay has also picked off a pair.

With three games remaining, the Indians face three tough opponents, Lycoming, Susquehanna and Upsala before a crown is in sight.

Sports Rec Center Nears Completion

Complex due to open before Christmas

Although parts of the new Sports and Recreation Center were opened to students on Monday, Nov. 1, the center is still about six weeks away from completion. It is expected to be ready for occupation by the Athletic Department before Christmas, according to Dr. Arnold Tilden, Dean of Student Services.

Tilden said the target date hinges on the arrival of materials needed for the completion of the projects. Students are now permitted to use the weight training area, the mezzanine, and the gym floor. Still not completed are the floors in the handball courts, the main floor in the new gymnasium, and the tile around the pool. The areas in use are open weekdays from 1-3 p.m. and 10:15-11:15 evenings. It is also open 1-5 p.m. on weekends.

Other features of the new center include, the pool, four handball courts, four station basketball and volleyball facilities, a dance studio, wrestling room (also used for judo and gymnastics), four sets of locker rooms, first aid training room, team meeting rooms, laundry rooms, equipment room, office space for all 11 full-time and five part-time coaches, and the multi-purpose room. The multi-purpose room will be used for dances, coffee houses, lectures, indoor varsity practice, batting cages and golf driving range.

"I encourage the students to not rush the completion date because it is very crucial that the workmen have privacy to finish their assigned tasks. Students should stay in the areas turned over to them," commented Mr. William Berrier, Athletic Director.

Berrier also sent out a bulletin in the campus mail which stated specific policies which were going to be enforced by security. They include entering the gym through the East Entrance only, having your student I.D. available, carrying your gym shoes to the gym, and having no tobacco or snuff within the facilities.

Anderson Delivers Gospel

British actor John Stuart Anderson, who has devoted his career to delivering a remarkable series of solo performances, will present "The Gospel of John" Monday, Nov. 8 as part of Juniata College's 1982-83 Artist Series.

The 8:15 p.m. performance, to be staged in Oller Hall, was devised by Anderson from the Gospel of Saint John using the text of the King James Version of the New Testament.

Born in Burma, where his father was a member of the British Army, Anderson has performed throughout Britain, Europe and North America. He has appeared at the Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Ontario, Royal Festival Hall in London and Carnegie Hall in New York.

Anderson's large and varied repertoire could enable him to present a different program each night for more than two weeks. In addition to "The Gospel of John," the repertoire includes "Good Evening, Lord Byron," "The Picture of Dorian Gray," "The Haunted Shore" and "Sherlock Holmes of Baker Street."

Although his solo performances occupy most of his time, Anderson does make occasional appearances in plays. He has had leading

Kix & Daddy Licks Rock J.C. students

The music of Kix and Daddy Licks rocked Memorial Gymnasium as both groups performed in concert on Sat., Oct. 30.

Daddy Licks started off the show about 8:15 p.m. with their song "Kids Out Looking For The Real Thing," from their last album, "I Got Wheels." Dave "Daddy Licks" Goddess provided lead vocals, while guitar player Scott Hot harmonized on the background vocals. The band went on to later perform the title cut off of that LP, which was released about one year ago. Other band members, Blaine McWilliams — bass, Tom Brobst — sax, keyboards, and Kevin Goddess — drums, completed the core of the group's sound.

The majority of the songs, however, came off of Daddy Licks' new album, which has not yet been released. Their new single, "You Can't Keep Me Out," was but a sample of their latest endeavor. At one point, Scott Hot and Dave "Daddy Licks" Goddess combined their talents to blare out a sax duet. Overall, their music was danceable and upbeat, and seemed to be well-received by the audience.

Many people have labeled their music as "new Wave" or "progressive" rock, but Dave Goddess says that the band very rarely defines their music. He stated, however, that they like to think of it as "modern rock music." The band also enjoys college audiences because "they are generally more aware," says Goddess. Their latest album is currently awaiting release. The music is basically a synthesis of a lot of influences, and, states Goddess, "We try to have as much fun as possible. We play rock music and we have a good time doing it."

Kix, the main attraction from Hagerstown, Md., stormed the stage with their mainly hard rock repertoire. They performed several songs from their latest album, which was released in 1981 on the Atlantic Recording label. Lead singer Steve Whiteman performed, in his unique style, such tunes as "Kix Are For Kids," "Heartache," "Poison," and "The Itch." He also played the harmonica for a few songs throughout the show. In addition, the guys played several selections from their new album which, according to manager John Harris, should be released in about three months.

Writer Presents Work

A second public reading by William Mickelberry, Juniata College's writer-in-residence for the fall term, will be given Wednesday, Nov. 10 at 8:15 p.m. in Shoemaker Galleries.

Mickelberry, who is on the faculty of the University of Florida, will read from his own fiction and poetry. He holds a B.A. degree in English and an M.A. degree in creative writing, both from the University of Florida.

The author of numerous stories and poems, Mickelberry has taught at Santa Fe Community College in Florida and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. His residency at Juniata is partially funded by The Edith B. Wertz Endowment for Support of Cultural Events, established to enable Juniata to emphasize teaching as the essential element in liberal arts education.

Mickelberry's reading is open to the public at no charge. Shoemaker Galleries are located in Carnegie Hall, corner of Seventeenth and Moore Streets.

Concert Flops

The concert this past weekend was not, as you might say, "an overwhelming success." Of the possible 800 available tickets, only 310 were bought; less than half.

Why? The concert had been widely publicized by posters, V103 and even The Juniatian. Kix ads were on V103 consistently. People buying tickets could have even gotten into a party for free. Yet, people remained apathetic.

What were the main causes for this financial disaster? We acknowledged that this school needed a concert; and the concert committee did deliver one. But was their timing off? Even the committee itself was not sure if it was the right time. The decision to have the concert, was passed by a small margin of 10-8.

It was apparent that their timing was off. Tickets were $6.50, quite a chunk out of the weekly budget; a budget which was already drained since it had been three weeks since paychecks were out. Another dent in this budget had come from the weekend before — Homecoming.

Also, who were the groups? Kix and The Daddy Licks Band may be good, but it seems that they were relatively unknown to the members of this campus. Unless, of course, people had heard of them, and that's why they stayed away. At $6.50 people are not very likely to take a chance on someone they haven't heard of.

Another problem is that the Concert Committee has their hands tied by only being allocated a budget of $4000. A successful concert at this college needs a "big name" band; a band which will satisfy the needs of the students of this college. It has been proven that "no-name" bands are flops — Fly By Night, Kinesis, The Shittons (who?). An allocation of $4000 is not enough to get a band which will be attractive to the student body. Maybe Center Board can help this situation.

The Concert Committee did an excellent job in getting Juniata a concert. A lot of hard work and effort went into this project; but, maybe they tried too hard. Last weekend was the only weekend they could have held a concert in the gym until after Christmas break, even then, they may have had to wait until basketball season was over. Last weekend was also the only date that Kix and The Daddy Licks Band were available. Maybe we should have waited until after Christmas and gotten someone who would be better accepted here at Juniata; but, that's the advantage of hindsight.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Ever since Homecoming 1982, Give Me A Smile, etc., the word apathetic has been circulating throughout some circles of this campus. Defined, apathetic means showing little or no emotion; personally I think this can be expanded to include laziness, close-mindedness and, put into Webster's terminology, one who refuses to take risks. Yes, that's apathetic. But what does being apathetic have to do with anything except for the seniors who failed to build a float?

Well, until the recently passed Sat. night, I had little appreciation as to how the "spirited seniors" felt when they didn't have a float. Ah . . . but then came the concert at Juniata College.

Yes, there are a few of us who can relate to the "spirited senior's'' efforts to build a float . . . we tried to promote a concert. Not the lesser of two evils. For three weeks, the majority of my time was spent promoting Daddy Licks and Kix. What's so frustrating is you're "damned if you do and damned if you don't." Sat. night in Memorial Gym you COULD HAVE had an enjoyable time (the catch is COULD HAVE). Even if your individual musical tastes weren't covered by Daddy Licks or Kix, with a little bit of effort and alcohol (a hush-hush word), Sat. night just may have been a different way to have a good time . . . very unlike a typical East House or Tussey-Terrace party. But I now see, apathy really does mean the unwillingness to take a risk. For some of you at the Daddy Licks performance it was the alternative to just sitting and politely watching (as good Juniata students do), as compared to taking a risk, getting up and boogieing. Wake up! Daddy Licks WAS a dance band. Well, so much for waking up a little late.

Actually, enough of the wrist-slapping; we are all old, maybe

Seniors do not have things easy and hassle-free. Probably the only comforting thing about being a senior is knowing that in two short terms we will be far away from institutional triviality. At times I often wondered about that. At times I was afraid to leave the pseudo-real world of Juniata, the extended high school version of life. It's times like these, however, when the red tape decisions get so suffocating, that I wish I was so far away from Juniata that I only had to see it on wash days when I did all my bookstore t-shirts.

I don't get this way often; I have a Juniata pennant, a Juniata button, a Juniata bumper sticker. Last week, however, was registration, a process akin to eating liver and spinach at dinner for the nutrients — definitely distasteful but the results are important. Many moons, many courses, one registrar ago, when I was a complacent freshman, I can remember hearing students complain of registration problems within the Juniata "system." I never had any problems — not until this, my senior year, the year when one Question: President Reagan is continuing to push for cutbacks in financial aid to students nation-wide. With a proposed 9.6% increase in tuition almost guaranteed to go into effect next school year (83-84), do you think you can afford to come back to Juniata without increased financial support from this institution?

Jeff Meeker (85) I think I'll be able to come back, but there is going to be more pressure to make more money over the summer.

Peggy Evans (85) I doubt it! It's tough now to make ends meet and things are bound to get worse. By raising the tuition every year the college really limits itself. The trustees are forgetting that we're not all millionaires.

Dave Lesser (85) No, I don't think I can come back without financial support from Juniata. Hopefully, they can come up with some ways to help compensate for the increase.

Robin Bird (86) Yes, I think I'll be able to return to Juniata, but my parents aren't going to like it too much.

Dave's Dribble

by Dave Lehmann

If an individual after biting into an apple, were to proclaim the apple tasty while another person were to call the same apple sour, an onlooker would notice a difference in taste between the two diners. However, if a man were to pick up an apple and after his first bite say, "This fruit is as sweet as jelly," but after the second bite, curse the fruit for being "sour as hell," I would question either the honesty or the sanity of the apple-biter. Yet, all through society, and even here at this center of enlightenment, many profess that the same piece of fruit has two opposite flavors, one sweet, the other bitter and rancid. Anyone who uses the slangs "stud" and "slut" to be single-sex inclusive is doing just this.

A stud, according to the dictionary, is an animal that is used for breeding purposes. The same word, used as slang, refers to a young man who sleeps (well, not actually sleeps) with a good number of females. The connotations of this slang often lean heavily towards strong attributes. Good looks, a quick wit, and confidence around women are all qualities that "studs" are believed to hold. Because of this, "studs" are admired by their male friends. The ability for a man to pull out the animal qualities from a woman (that society has tried so hard to teach her should only be in a man) sets the stud apart from his friends.

Not only men, but also women, admire the stud. To them, he is sometimes desirable because others desire him — sort of like the girl who's getting off the bus from high school says that she wants a car because everyone else has one. For the female, the stud is also someone to be broken of his animal-like roving for partners. One can imagine a newly engaged girl going home to brag to her parents, "He went out with almost every girl on campus, but he picked me to marry." The father may beam with pride of his daughters attractiveness.

Yet, if the following day, the girl's brother came home to brag about his new financee and said, "She went out with every guy on campus, but I'm marrying her," the father would drop his newspaper, hoist himself out of the sky-blue Lazy-Boy recliner, and yell loud enough to rattle the bifocals that had slipped halfway down his nose, "Holy hell, son! It sounds to me like you got yourself a slut."

Society shuns marrying its young men to sluts. Sluts have their purpose as part of the awakening of the male sexuality, but they aren't to be married. Studs can settle down, but sluts are tainted with their desires for life. This is what society in America seems to tell us.

A slut is the female equivalent of a stud, yet the connotations for her are usually negative: she is often not attractive, she can't converse well, for her intelligence is negligible, and she sleeps with many men because she lacks confidence. Other girls ignore her; they don't want to be called a "slut by association," and although men meet her, it is something shameful to be hidden from friends. A slut screws, while a stud makes love.

So "slut" and "stud" are just two halves of the same apple. The apple may taste sweet to some and bitter to others, but one must admit that the flavor of the apple is uniform throughout. Anything less seems hypocritical.

roles in "Hamlet," "Dr. Faustus" and with the late Dame Margaret Rutherford in "The Rivals" and "The Importance of Being Ernest." In addition, he has made many appearances as a narrator with symphony orchestras.

Anderson's Juniata performance is the third of eight programs that comprise the 1982-83 Artist Series. The Series is designed to provide cultural and aesthetic opportunities to both the campus community and the college's larger, regional constituency. Tickets for the Nov. 8 program may be purchased at the door.

Federal Aid

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — The vast majority of students who get federal aid to attend public colleges would have to drop out if they couldn't get aid anymore, a new study has determined.

The typical aid recipient works at a part-time job to help pay for college, gets relatively little financial help from his or her family, and then has to go into debt to make it through public college, according to the study of how federal aid is used.

The study, co-sponsored and undertaken by three administrators' associations in the wake of Reagan administration charges that student aid programs are inefficient and unneeded by students, found that families contribute an average of about 12 percent — $469 — toward their offspring's college educations.

About a third of the 2.2 million public college students who got aid last year received no financial help from their families.

Those independent students raised 51 percent of the money they needed for school through jobs, and 19 percent through need-based grants.

Students who got help from their families earned 23 percent of the money they needed by working, borrowed 19 percent, and raised a total of 39 percent from parents and aid grants.

The families that did contribute to their children's education and whose children received some federal aid had average annual incomes of $16,500 last year.

Half the students at public colleges who got federal aid come from families with incomes below the poverty line of $9500.

Dress For Success

David Zimmer successfully worked his way through business grad school by dressing his fellow students for success.

Zimmer has sold about 40 "B-School Suits" to fellow students at Carnegie-Mellon University's graduate business school, which primes Zimmer's customers by holding a dress-for-success forum each fall.

Zimmer declines to say how much he's grossed from the venture, except to say, "We've done very nicely."

He does it by buying the clothes from his uncle, a 30-year veteran of the clothes manufacturing industry.

Zimmer discounts them to draw customers. "We are offering $250-$300 suits at one-half to one-third off. When students finish graduate school, they have umpteen thousands of loans. It's almost necessary that they save some bucks."

Business school placement Director Ed Mosier declines to say how Zimmer-outfitted students did in the job market this year, demurring, "From a recruiter's standpoint, I don't think they would ask who the tailor was."

Some wouldn't even ask about how the applicant dresses. There are those who dismiss the dress-for-success urgings as a mere placement office fad.

"The prescriptions given in some of the dress-for-success guides are just a little too simple," claims Hilda Buckley, a clothing and textiles professor at the University of Illinois.

Some employers might be impressed by snappy clothing, she concedes, but others give little notice. A few might be intimidated if an interviewee looks better than them, she warns.

"At a job interview, the first thing your interviewer will probably notice is your resume," she says.

"And once you're into the interview, whether you're wearing an expensive navy-blue shirt and carrying Cross pens or dressed in Harris tweeds and writing with a Bic, your etiquette and personality will make the real difference."

Buckley agrees the dress-for-success guides can help, "but it doesn't mean you have to go out and buy $500 suits. Most likely, you can get by with something for $50."

Zimmer's customers are undaunted. Zimmer, who graduated into a job selling wines to foreign countries, has kept B-School Suits alive as a sideline, and plans to hire a sales rep this month to outfit the Class of '83.

too old. But there are a few of some more "spirited JC students" who tried their hardest just to see the campus let loose for one night. Yea, for $6.50 you could have had free beverages (yes, the college radio station held a pre-concert party in South's lounge). Uh huh, a free party . . . dear administration, we drink, we use it and by the time the weekend rolls around, some of us need it. For $6.50, a party, two bands and not just a typical Sat. night. True, you could have had the worst time in your life at that concert . . . or you could have had an enjoyable time. Either way, it would not have been typical. But then again, hindsight is 20/20.

To The Editor:

I am sorry, but I can't let Adam Schlagman get away with writing such a put-down. And that is all his latest "article" (and I use the term loosely) is; it is not an example of objective journalism. I have never before written a "letter to the Editor," but I feel that I cannot let this go undisputed.

The "Hot Wax" column seems to me to be a license to be obnoxious. I couldn't find a single neutral remark in it, let alone a positive one! Schlagman appears to idolize Zepplin (which is not a bad choice I admit), but he won't let go of the past, and this idolatry impairs his hearing.

In previous columns, Schlagman objectively discusses the artists albums. He doesn't, however, seem to know what he's trying to say; he contradicts himself many times. And where is the picture of Rush's Signals?

I take Schlagman's column to be an insult to my intelligence. Rush is one of my favorite bands, although I do not limit my musical enjoyment to such heavy metal sounds. I resent the insinuation that, as a Rush listener, I am of a simple mind. I would like to inform Schlagman that my level of intelligence is probably higher than his own, if his style of writing and grammar are any indications.

I would also like to comment on his basic crudeness: ". . . lead singer who sounds like someone is wrenching his testicles." The only taste you have, Mr. Schlagman, is in your mouth.

I am not trying to say that Rush is for everyone. But there are a lot of us who like their lyrics and music. I am not the only one he has offended. And, if you talk to almost any one (even those who don't care for Rush), Neil Peart is considered one of the best drummers alive. You have to see him to appreciate his mastery of the skill. But I could bet Schlagman has never been to one of their shows. Peart is simply amazing to watch. This aside, it is my guess that Schlagman just doesn't have an ear for music.

To make matters worse, all these pseudo-intellectual thoughts are backed by bad grammar and. . . .

Thank you,
Richelle Garver

Dear Editor:

Dear Dave's Dribble,

It is hoped that the next time you write a story on the Senior Class you can get your facts straight. Writing a non-fictional story is hard to do without verified information. (Keep the hearsay to yourself!) For instance, you stated in one paragraph that the "other three class officers" only showed up one night to work on the float. (How can you substantiate that when you were not there.) Personally, we know that this is not true. Some of us spent a lot of valuable time in, on the float behind the scenes. It takes time to plan, time to get the materials, time to contact sponsors, and many other things.

Granted it is the class officers responsibility to plan and try to organize the float. We did that! But the float is a senior class project of the whole senior class! It seems that some seniors found it more important to work on other floats like the off-campus float-right Dave?

We do not run a dictatorship. We run a democracy. It is not our job to force the seniors to work on a float. The senior class did not show up to work on the float and they did not show up at the parade expecting to see one or be on one, therefore we can only conclude that they did not want one. This "senior apathy" has been with us for the entire four years. Any suggestions on how to alleviate this problem can be directed to the Prez.

This letter was not written to condemn the Senior Class, it was written in response to last week's article in the Juniatian. The class officers have not given up and they will continue to try to bring some unity to the class. Hopefully in the near future we can all work together.

New York — Alexander Haig was accused by convicted Watergate conspirator John Dean of being "Deep Throat," the unknown source who gave reporters information regarding the scandal that led to the resignation of President Nixon. The accusation is in a new book by Dean, reports Time magazine.

Bombay, India — On Sunday, in Baroda, Hindu and Moslem rioters battled in the streets. Army troops were called in to calm this, the 5th day of clashes. Fourteen were injured this weekend. Thirty-six others injured last week remain in serious condition, while the death toll has reached seven.

Cairo, Egypt — The brother of the late president Anwar Sadat, Esmat Sadat, has been jailed along with three of his sons on corruption charges. The court has frozen Sadat's assets and prohibited him and his family from leaving the country. The corruption charges center around a $60 million fortune that he and other family members have collected. He is accused of importing meat and other products illegally, using his influence to evade customs, misappropriating funds, selling goods on the black market, and forcing people to pay him protection money.

Washington — Secretary of State George Shultz warned Russia that any Soviet leader who replaces President Leonid Brezhnev must realize the US is "determined to build and maintain strength." Shultz emphasizes that a relationship between the US and USSR does not have to depend on military strength.

Moscow — Soviet farmers have reaped 27 billion more tons of grain this year than last year, reported Canadian officials Sunday, as a quote from the Soviet agricultural minister. The minister, Valentin Mesyats, did not disclose what the harvest actually was; but the officials had unconfirmed reports that the crop was 176 metric tons which is still below their target, and if correct, would indicate the 4th consecutive poor harvest in the USSR.

Madrid, Spain — Pope John Paul II became the first pontiff ever to visit Spain, Sunday, as he was greeted by King Juan Carlos and Queen Sophia as well as tens-of-thousands of the faithful at the Madrid airport. At the start of his 10-day, 17-city tour, the Pope was heavily guarded by over 100,000 policemen and volunteers as he rode in his bullet proof pope-mobile and waved to the crowds.

Sunday night, a bomb blast near Victoria, 50 miles from the Monastery of St. Ignatius of Loyola where the Pope is scheduled to say Mass Saturday, killed 1 policeman and injured 5 others.

Bonn, West Germany — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited the Berlin Wall Friday, Oct. 29. The first British Government leader to visit West Berlin in 11 years attacked communism in a speech given at the city hall of Schoneberg. Thatcher described the Soviet Union as a "power dedicated to the denial of all we believe in" and the wall as a "grim monument to a cruel and desolate creed." She called for more Western conventional and nuclear preparedness, pointing out the wall as a "reminder that those who repress the liberties of our Eastern neighbors seek also to extinguish their own."

Knoxville, Tenn. — The 1982 World's Fair held closing ceremonies of fireworks and champagne Sunday. The energy fair, which included exhibits from 22 nations, ended its six-month run tallying 1,127,786 visitors. Officials declared the fair a financial success. It exceeded the totals of the 1975 fair in Spokane, Washington and the 1962 exposition in Seattle. The 1982 fair exceeded the expected total of 11 million by 127,786. For closing day, 85,670 tourists turned out.

The Stray Cats — Built For Speed

If taken in the right context, the Stray Cats could be considered as one of the better things to happen to music this year. Their sound is alive, fresh, but mostly kicking with enthusiasm.

The Cats could be considered the ideal bar band. Rockabilly, the Cat's genre, when played well is extremely danceable. Additionally, a new band like the Stray Cats has a certain thirst for fame that precipitates a powerful, energetic sound. Unfortunately, because they are relatively new, their sound has yet to establish any firm footing. Songwriter and guitarist, Brian Setzer relies on too much repetition to provide a danceable, as well as an artistically marketable attraction. The potential is there though.

Ace popabilly guitarist and producer Dave Edmunds produces only five of the LP's 12 cuts; and for those five alone, the record is worth buying. Using only a guitar, bass fiddle and an abbreviated drum set, Edmunds arranges the sound such that maximum usage is made of the band's basically limited resources. The album bursts open with "Rock This Town," a rather generic rockabilly tune that has certain brash appeal that just seems to start the feet moving. "Built For Speed," the title cut, was not produced by Edmunds, but keeps the beat moving fresh off the heels of the opener.

As a whole the record is rather generic. The theme is a 50's-type rock revival laced with the commercial arsenic of the 80's. The Cats are the first band, of recent knowledge, to attempt anything like Built For Speed, so the sound is not yet spoiled. Hopefully, the material that this band puts out in the future will become a little more groomed to the real personalities of the band members. There is nothing on the record that paints America with quite the realistic stroke as someone like Chuck Berry, obviously the band's major influence.

Built For Speed is definitely an attractive record, and the Cats are definitely an exciting band to see at a club; yet, something still does not sit right with me. It could just be nerves, or perhaps Go-Go-itis. The fear of another worn trend catching on and making it big time, while the real talent still waits to be discovered. But, for now, there is the fun of the first album and hopefully the fun can improve on its style. A little more work with Edmunds and some night classes in songwriting will insure success for the Stray Cats and wave of new imitators.

MBA Handbook

"The Official M.B.A. Handbook" is the title of the lecture to be presented in Oller Hall Thursday, November 11 at 8:15 p.m. Based on the book of the same name, which discusses how to succeed in business without a Harvard M.B.A., the lecture will be presented by one of the book's co-authors, Jim Fisk and Robert Barron. At press time it was not known which author will appear at Juniata. In its review, the New York Post predicted that the book "will be bigger than The Preppy Handbook because more people want to make money than want to wear pink sweaters."

Biblical Feminism Is Lecture Topic

Biblical feminism is the topic of the Nov. 9 J. Omar Good Lecture to be presented by Dr. Harvie M. Conn, professor of missions at Westminster Theological Seminary, Philadelphia.

The 8:15 p.m. lecture to be given in the faculty lounge, Ellis College Center, is entitled "Biblical Feminism: A Case Study in Evangelical Hermeneutic."

A graduate of Calvin College where he received his A.B. degree, Conn also holds B.D. and Th.M. degrees from Westminster Theological Seminary. He also received an Litt.D. degree from Geneva College.

Prior to his association with Westminster, Conn was a missionary in Korea and a home missionary for the Orthodox Presbyterian Church. For 10 years, he was a professor at the Presbyterian General Assembly Theological Seminary in Seoul, Korea.

Conn is the author of five books and numerous articles and book reviews. His material has appeared in such publications as "Presbyterian Journal," "Missionary Monthly," "Christianity Today" and "Eternity." He also has served as an editor for the Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Company.

The J. Omar Good Lecture series was established with funds from the estate of the late J. Omar Good, an 1896 Juniata graduate and Philadelphia printing executive who left the college $1 million, the largest gift ever made at Juniata.

Along Muddy Run

supposedly puts one's feet up and watches the world go by.

Last year during pre-pre-registration I pre-pre-registered for SVS during Winter Term at 1 o'clock. Perhaps mistakenly, I had always thought that the purpose of pre-pre-registration was to gauge exactly how many students were taking what, and to make necessary adjustments before pre-registration.

As I reached the dawning light of Dr. Woodrow at the SVS table last Wednesday, I was told that the 1 o'clock section was closed due to an enrollment of only four, and could I take the 9 o'clock? Once upon a time I was shy and withdrawn, but now that I've come through nearly four years of feeling intimidated by profs and prof-like authorities, I've realized that one must speak up for what one really wants. Perhaps I'm not as shy, but I'm still polite, so I very politely, but on the brink of hysteria, said, "Don't you have any other sections available?"

"No, the 10 and 11 o'clock sections are full," replied the intimidating authority.

"Well, my next class isn't until 2, and I really don't want to get up for a 9 and have so much time in-between," I said.

"Well, that's all you can do," was the shrugged shoulder comment.

By this time I thought I was going to cry. They-can't-do-this-to-me, I'm-a-senior-I'm-pre-registered-for-this-already, kept going through my mind. We students are conditioned to believe, perhaps out of our Logic and Language experience, that if we go to the trouble of finding courses to take a year ahead of time and getting our advisors to approve of them, then going through the two signature re-decision all over again the following year, means that we'll definitely get placed in the course we pre-pre-registered and pre-registered for. It's only logical — it's the purpose behind these procedures.

"So I can check you off for the 9 o'clock section?" he half-asked. I wasn't so eager to leave.

"What choice do I have?"

"You really don't have a choice," was the encouraging reply. I took his card and sought out the registrar.

I pointed out that the cancellation of the section was not included on the list we received with our pink cards just the day before registration and was told it was a faculty decision of registration morning due to the fact that the 10 and 11 o'clock sections were too full and others were unbalanced. Now I fully understand why the faculty chose to cancel this section but my point is this: The faculty should have known long before, or at the very latest, the week before registration when pre-registration forms were turned in, how many students were registered for the 1 o'clock section as opposed to the others, so why couldn't the four of us pre-registered been informed before the frenzy of registration so we could have made the changes?

What it comes down to is this: I had no choice. While we are led to believe that we have such freedom in choosing our courses during pre-registration, I was manipulated into taking the 9 o'clock class. Why am I any less of a student than those who got to choose the 10 or 11 o'clock sections? Had I already scheduled a class for 9, then undoubtedly, they would have had to put me in another section. My qualm is not with the faculty's decision except that it is grossly unfair to me in its timing. What is the purpose of pre-registering if we are shut out of classes anyway? So maybe we don't have the problems Penn State has, but then we don't have the numbers either. Why not turn us loose during registration without cards and forms and watch us clash like women at the Reading outlets in November?

Now rumor has it that five students from the 10 o'clock SVS section and five from the 11 o'clock must rearrange their schedules and take it in the Spring. Since Administration is so big with the drop-add fees, I feel that they should reimburse us for dropping our course and making us rearrange our schedules.

Whose fault is it anyway? I asked for individual consideration which was rather presumptuous of me, and if something can be done,

The sounds got the majority of the audience up and into the mood of the concert.

Kix has been together for about five years now. They have been known under various names, including The Shoes, The Generators and The Sharks, before arriving at their current title. Donnie Purnell, bassist, writes most of the group's material. The additional members are Brian Forsythe — guitars, Jimmy (Chocolate) Chalfant — drums, and newest member, Brad Devons, on guitars.

Overall, the show offered two entirely different types of music, which appealed to the majority of the listening audience. The total attendance, however, was a disappointment. About 300 students turned out to take advantage of the concert, and this may generally be attributed to apathy. Concert Committee Chairman Rick Brown stated that "I was more impressed about the enthusiasm of the people who were there than depressed about the people that didn't show up." He also feels that those who did not appear "missed a really good concert."

Circle-K Update

by Amy Smith

The Circle-K club, a service organization advised by Dr. David Eyman, has begun its projects for the 1982-83 school year.

After helping with the bloodmobile in September, members proceeded to collect money for United Way through Homecoming weekend. On Tuesday, Oct. 26, they conducted a Halloween party for the senior citizens at Deforest Apartments in Huntingdon. They are presently participating in "Handicapped for Horsepower," a program which involves spending time with handicapped children while helping them to ride horses.

Some of the future fund-raising activities being planned are the annual MS Marathon, as well as a bike-a-thon and walk-a-thon.

Elections held at the end of last year resulted in the present officers being chosen: Lisa Fusco, president; Kathleen Parrell, vice-president; Sally Gurekovich, secretary; Michele Bevard, treasurer; and Carol Stubbs, public relations person.

The club, consisting of approximately 20 students, is open to new members. The help would be appreciated. Meetings are held the second and fourth Mondays of each month.

Volleyballers MAC Bound

by Tracy Catanese

The Juniata Women's Volleyball team has amassed an impressive 34 win-3 loss record with one season game and MAC's remaining. The team has held on to second place in the NCAA Div. III National Rankings, behind first ranked University of California at San Diego.

The Lady Indians had a rather relaxing week as they hosted only one match with Messiah College of Grantham, PA in addition to their regular practices. On Wednesday, Oct. 28, the blue and yellow Messiah Falcons only managed one game victory by a score of 15-13. During the jayvee match, JC took both games 15-8 and 15-9.

In the first game of the varsity match, Messiah took a 7-0 lead. Behind the serving of Peggy Evans, JC then rallied to a 9-7 lead and went on to win the game 15-10. JC dominated the second game and won 15-8.

The third game showed liberal substituting by the Juniata coaches and Messiah managed to win 15-13 with some powerful serving. In the fourth game, JC was determined to win the match. They played very smooth and relaxed volleyball and won the game 15-1 and the match 2 games-1 game.

Individual statistic leaders for the match include Tonya Snyder, who was the best server, with ten serving aces and one error out of 23 attempts, and Sue Barker who had 8 kills, a 25% kill ratio, and 4 stuffed blocks. Barker also assisted Claudia Tweardy and Colleen Irelan with five stuffed blocks. Irelan did an excellent job passing with a passing ratio of 30+% and Tracey DeBlase also had a great evening on defense.

Because of illness, Eing Opanayikul sat out the Messiah game and JC's last regular season home game on Nov. 3 against Shippensburg. The coaches hope that Opanayikul will be ready for MAC's on Friday, but if not, "We still have a lot of very good players," commented Coach Larry Bock.

The Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC) Tournament will be held on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 5-6 at Dickinson College. Teams participating include Albright, Ursinus, Muhlenburg, Moravian, Western Maryland, Gettysburg, Juniata, Elizabethtown, Wilkes, and Scranton.

Juniata opens Friday with Moravian at 2:15 pm. Then they're scheduled to play Wilkes at 4:15 and Muhlenburg at 7:15. The Gettysburg match, slated for 8:30, should be a good match. According to Coach Bock, "Gettysburg has been improving each week and is much better since we've played them." JC previously defeated Gettysburg on Sept. 27 by scores of 15-8 and 15-11.

On Saturday, the semi-finals are scheduled for 11:00 am and the finals at 2:00 p.m.

Coach Bock feels that second ranked Juniata, fifth ranked Western Maryland with a 28-3 record, Gettysburg, and possibly Albright will be the dominant teams of the MAC's.

He also expressed his hopes that JC would play Western Maryland at the tourney. He commented that the matches between the two schools "last forever, are like a war, and are just plain great matches."

When speaking with a few of the Lady Indians after the Messiah match, their feelings on the season are very similar. One player summed her emotions up in just one word, "Great!" Another player commented that, "We're doing really well. We've had problems with illnesses and injuries, but we hope everyone will be healthy for MAC's.

JC Sticker, Judy Eastep, a Junior defenseman, dribbles the ball away from her opponent as teammate Tina Tweardy looks on.

C.C. Goal Victory at MAC's

by Paul Bomberger

This Saturday, November 6, the Men's and Women's Cross Country teams travel to Lebanon Valley College for the MAC Championship. The Juniatian spoke to both coaches, asking for their outlook on this most important meet of the season.

Coach Bill Latimore, who coaches the Lady Harriers, feels that any team can win this meet. "Dickinson and Franklin and Marshall will be our toughest competition," he said.

The Indians will run their seven consistent runners: Cathy Duffy, Carol Tendall, Chris Schleiden, Robin Bardman, Carolyn Andre, Sue Richards, and Kim Cesario. Coach Latimore summed it all up by saying, "Everyone of our girls have to run personal bests for us to win."

The Men's Coach, Dr. Mitchell, has five goals he'd like his team to achieve this Saturday. "My first and easiest goal is for us to finish better than last year. Secondly, I'd like us to finish in the top ten teams. Thirdly, we could possibly score under 200 team points. The fourth goal is for the team to finish in the top five teams. My last goal is for Tom Hoffman and Bill Ciesla, our frontrunners, to finish in the top twenty individually. If we achieve our goals for this meet, we will defeat most of our opposition."

Coach Mitchell feels his team is well-rested and in peak condition for this MAC Conference battle.

Stickers Drop 2, Tie 1

by Mark Shaw

In the past week, the Women's Varsity Field Hockey team suffered two losses and one tie.

Against 7th-ranked Franklin and Marshall, the women lost 2-0. Juniata had no shots on goal or penalty corners. F&M had 19 shots on goal with 26 penalty corners. Although the lady stickers had little offense, they did play well. The defense held up strongly against the offensive barrage of F&M.

On Wednesday, Oct. 7, the ladies traveled to Shippensburg and lost 4-0. It was their worst defeat of the season. Again, Juniata failed to get any shots on goal and had no penalty corners. Shippensburg, a tough Division II school had 21 shots on goal and 16 penalty corners. The game was played mainly on the JC half of the field.

On Saturday, Oct. 30, the Ladies traveled to Susquehanna and finished their regular season on a pleasant note tying 1-1. Juniata scored in the first two minutes of the game on a tip-in by Sue Occiano, coming off a shot by Laura Babiash. Susquehanna scored midway through the second half on a shot which deflected off a JC player's stick. The game was very even with both teams having 11 shots on goal. Juniata also had 10 penalty corners to Susquehanna's 8.

Over Thanksgiving break, the Field Hockey team is traveling to Florida to play in the Hockey Festival. It is an open tournament with JC playing at least seven games. Coach Hall feels that this tournament will be a good experience for the young team.

In terms of the season, Coach Hall was a little disappointed in the offense, but noted that many of her experienced players were defensive players. Next year, she feels her team should do much better in their tough division.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

The word is out, the gymnasium is open for hoops once again. After weeks of playing outdoors on a blacktop court with a basket that sounds like it's going to fall over any minute, semi-coordinated part time hoopers can look to move indoors.

For the freshmen it's the first time, but for upper-classmen it sets off a mild wave of hysteria. We can't wait to get into the hoop scene again. We realize that a lot of the senior talent is gone and that a younger breed has moved in to replace them.

The hysteria sets in when we realize that we knew all of those seniors and we knew how out of shape they really were. All of a sudden we realize that those underclassmen are a little closer to those high school days when those seniors were also once in shape.

Then it hits us. We realize that we are seniors now, but we can't be as out of shape as they were, can we? Sure, we've laid around on our couches for a while but we did manage to go out and run a mile or two every term. We play catch with the football once and a while, and fooseball is a very demanding sport, isn't it?

We decide that we haven't convinced ourselves that we're in good enough shape for that new gym and new wave of freshmen. We decide that it's time for a crash training program. On day one we run a few miles and feel pretty good. We even attempt a sit-up or two for morale. After day one seemed so easy we figure it will be a piece of cake. Then comes day two, and we can hardly get out of bed. We ask ourselves why we were so stupid to try such a stunt. But we make it through day two, three and four and are ready to tackle the gym. The sound of the bouncing ball fills the ears. We wonder, as the first game starts, why we didn't just stay on the couch and watch other fools do it on TV.

J.C. Soccer Shut Out

The soccer team lost two matches last week to drop their record on the season to 2-11. Last Wednesday, they were shutout at home by Bloomsburg State and on Saturday were shutout 3-0 at Susquehanna.

Against Bloomsburg, the Indians were outmanned by a Division Two power. The game was over in the first three minutes when Bloomsburg scored three goals. They led 4-0 at half and added two more goals in the second half to round out the scoring. Coach Jaegar wasn't disappointed with the team's play, but just felt Bloomsburg was a much better team.

The Susquehanna match was more a lack of team continuity, than a better team, which led to the Indians downfall. The Indians were without the services of several key players due to injuries, including captain Brian Bullock and the starting goalie. Susquehanna scored its first goal on a controversial penalty shot and scored another goal three minutes later to lead 2-0 at half. The Indians couldn't muster any offense in the second half while Susquehanna tacked on an insurance goal.

The Indians close out the season this week with a pair of tough games. On Monday, they lost to Shippensburg State at home, and today they finish the season with a tough road contest against Frostburg State.

it can't be until the beginning of the term after I've already gone to the 9 o'clock class. I'm not lazy and don't usually plan my classes according to how late I can sleep, but I know I can be more alert and contribute more (the purpose of SVS) if I don't have to get up for a lone class in the freezing 9 o'clock chill.

Right now I'm not only seeing red, I'm seeing pink — in registration cards, and blue pre-registration forms, and anymore, I think they're useless.

Tribe Stopped by Lycoming, 25-12

Warriors come back from 12 point deficit

by Andy Berdy

Second halves haven't been treating the Indians well lately. The Tribe was shut out after intermission last week, holding on to a 21-14 victory over Albright.

The Indians would like to forget half number two on Saturday, as they chalked up 12 early points over Lycoming and led 12-7 at the half. However, the Warriors came back with two touchdowns and a safety, to snap Juniata's five game win streak with a 25-12 win.

The Indians have been living on the pass this year, and especially had to do so against Lycoming, with leading Indian ground gainer Rick Eberly out for the season with a broken ankle.

The air game worked early as the Tribe started a drive on the Lycoming 19. Dave Pfeiffer hit Carl Fekula over the middle to the 31. He found Dave Murphy on the LC 44 and Fekula again on the 37. Six plays later Pfeiffer found Dave Hornberger out of the backfield who took it in untouched for a 31 yard score, and the Tribe led 7-0.

The Warriors almost tied it quickly, when Lycoming quarterback Domenic Pacitti found Jeff Wert all alone behind the JC defense, but the LC receiver dropped the football to the delight of Tribe fans.

Near the end of the first quarter Pacitti fumbled on a keeper and Tom McVay recovered for the Indians on the LC 26.

The Indians went right to the air seven straight times, managing to move to the LC six but failing to go any further. Mike Schaffner booted a 23 yard field goal, advancing the JC lead to 10.

The breaks continued for JC as Dave Nolan fumbled the following kick-off and was caught in the end-zone by Rick Schuck and Jeff Rexford. With a 12-0 lead, the momentum was with the Indians, but as they say, it's not over 'til it's over.

The Lycoming defense, now expecting the pass, began to give Pfeiffer some heat, sacking him twice back to the JC seven. Hornberger punted to the JC 44 and on the Warrior's next play, Pacitti stunned everyone, hitting Wert who beat cornerman Tom Devine in the left corner of the end-zone.

The Indians led at the half 12-7, but there was an uneasy feeling in the air.

Lycoming opened up the second half scoring, driving on the ground from the JC 47 to the seven. Joe Schmid gave the Warriors their first lead, bowling over from seven yards out. Pacitti passed to Wert for the two point conversion making it 15-12 Lycoming.

With 4:59 left in the third, Pfeiffer was sacked in the end-zone adding two more points to the LC lead.

If the Tribe still had a chance, it disappeared early in the fourth period when Pfeiffer fumbled the ball away on the JC nine. Mike Santoleri tacked on the last Warrior score on the next play, rambling in from the nine.

The Warrior offense held the ball 20:42 minutes to the Tribe's 9:18 minutes in the second half, as the Indian air attack lost wind. The Lycoming defense held their opponents to minus rushing yardage for the third straight week, limiting JC to minus 16.

Pfeiffer was 20 for 44 for 260 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions. The one bright spot came from Dave Murphy, who grabbed six passes, breaking the school record for receptions in a season with 40.

Without Eberly the ground game relied on Hornberger who was the only Tribe ball carrier, managing only 28 yards on 12 carries.

The defense played tough, but Tribe offensive mistakes kept them on the field too long, too often. Tom McVay and Gino Perry each had 15 tackles, Bob Waszak turned in 14 and Bill Stamp and Bob Wazalis added 10 apiece.

The loss creates a bottleneck in the MAC North with four teams with one loss. Delaware Valley is a step ahead at 5-1, followed by Susquehanna, Lycoming and Juniata at 4-1. The Indians can hope to eliminate one of those teams as they travel to Selinsgrove Saturday to take on the Crusaders of Susquehanna.

I-M V-ball Trouble

by Michelle Bartol

Fall term 82's co-rec volleyball may end in some controversy with either team not really understanding why. The championship game, according to the schedule, was to be played Thursday, October 28th at 5 p.m., directly following the semi-finals matches previously scheduled at 4 p.m. However, discrepancies as to whether a championship game should be played the same day or scheduled for another day seemed to be a problem just before the finals matches were to begin. Without the absence of confusion and tempers, both teams, along with the O.K. from coach Rob Ash, compromised to reschedule the match to a later date. Just when that later date will be nobody knows. Conflict between the teams concerning a time slot which would be most convenient for both is causing heated arguments. These last two weeks of the term are quite hectic for students academically plus winter sports practices have begun. Finding an appropriate time in which both teams will be able to have a maximum amount of their players present will be increasingly difficult as the term comes to a close. Co-rec champions may very well be in order.

The teams in the semi-final play, October 24 include: Hula Hula Boys, Wonderbuns, A.M. Gems and the Thumpers. Semi-final action was intense. Doug Matz accredited the serious play to the new rule concerning forfeits, which was strictly enforced this year. "It serves to weed out the teams which really aren't serious about the game."

The Hula Hula Boys were defeated in semi-final play by a very well co-ordinated Wonderbuns Dan Feruck and Jeff Ostrowski provided the Wonderbuns with a strong net game while Margie Guerrini and Tijen Aybar had key saves early on. A definite advantage for the winners was their ability to use all three hits to place the ball against their opponent. The Hula Hula Boys played past games with great team spirit and good composure. More often than once, they came from behind to take the match to three games and win it. Team members Joel Beach and Mark Murdoch provided verbal reinforcement; however, even with that, the Boys couldn't get it together to continue into finals play.

Other action included the Thumpers defeating the A.M. Gems in exciting play. Key sets by Kerry Hendershot and experienced serving by Jan Yahner brought the Thumpers to the finals.

Will there be a champion? If the Thumpers meet the Wonderbuns on the court, look for exciting play to go all three games.

Thanks to you...

Nuclear freeze issue elicits controversy

Pro and con views expressed by Jessie Amidon and Camille Means

The students and faculty at Juniata have been focusing on the controversial "nuclear freeze" issue for the past two weeks because of its importance as an election topic.

On Wednesday, October 27, a film entitled "The Last Epidemic" was shown, accompanied by discussion in the form of a question and answer session. On the panel answering questions were Professors Zimmerer, Dolnikowski, and Mutti. Professor Debra Glazier hosted the event.

The seminar and the movie dealt with the actual consequences of a nuclear attack. They covered the effects that an attack would have on the physical environment, as well as, effects on a personal/medical level. The information revealed a shocking reality and left the audience in a serious mood.

The issues in question are the Jackson-Warner Freeze resolution and the Kennedy-Hatfield Resolution. Both propose to the Soviet Union a long term, mutual and verifiable nuclear forces freeze at equal and sharply reduced levels of forces. But they differ in that the latter resolution proposes an immediate arms control objective whereas the former resolution is quite vague about when any action would be taken towards an actual freeze.

Consequently, the Reagan administration is in favor of the Jackson-Warner freeze. Neither resolution is binding and thus a representation of the feelings of the populace, a strong factor in our legislative system.

The most prominent issue now is that of a new generation of weapons, whether or not they are necessary and whether or not there does really exist an overkill factor.

On November 1, the night before the elections there was an informal open discussion about the freeze issue in the faculty lounge. Both faculty and students attended and participated. Difficulty in discussion arose because the issues are complex, and, though very few people held extreme views without compromise, several different levels of agreement and opposition surfaced as a result. The pro-nuclear view point focuses on the problem of keeping ahead in order to deter the Soviet threat. However, the non-nuclear/pro freeze position is one which is more idealistic, because if attempted would take a long period of time to achieve. Though complete disarmament is quite idealistic, the freeze is a start in a constructively, peaceful direction. The non-nuclear position holds that man needs and wants peace, not the constant threat of destruction hanging so closely overhead. The pro freeze movement is concerned with the fact that the economic factors involved with the making of weapons is one which too prominently influences the issue. It detracts from the importance of the issue of human welfare and peace.

The people in opposition to the freeze, as the Reagan administration would appear to be, view the issue in a different light. Few people do not see the issue as a serious

Juniata Policies Reviewed

by Jason Roberts

The Residential Life Committee of the Student Government has re-evaluated its objectives and has expanded the range of activities and projects which it will sponsor, according to Rory McAvoy, chairperson of the committee.

The committee consists of four dorm senators and these meetings are attended by a representative from each dorm, as well as, Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life, and Housing Director Jack Linetty. During the past four years the committee reviewed changes in policies affecting residential life and any purchases of equipment for the dorms.

Rory described the new objective to be the promotion of improvements in residential life through policy revisions, refurbishments, and coordination of residence hall programming and activities. "The committee is a good place to take complaints because of our ties with the administration," McAvoy said.

The committee was responsible for taking revenues from the vending machines in the dorms from the Student Government and giving it to the residence halls. The dorms have more money now than ever before. South dorm has $600 and plans to use some of the money to purchase picnic tables.

The committee has also stimulated the definition of party policies for the dorms. It felt that the old policies were discriminatory and not well defined, so it worked with Assistant Dean of Student Services Julie Keehner to revise the policy to its present state.

The committee is sponsoring the receptions which follow performances of the Artist's Series. Each dorm has taken money from the residence hall fund and funds from Center Board to finance the receptions.

Other activities are as follows:

— Purchase of an ice machine to be placed in a convenient location for use by all of the dorms.

— Refurbishment of lounges to improve ventilation during parties.

— Repair of the grill outside of Sherwood dorm.

— Organization of a winter carnival which will have activities and games in which the dorms will

Student Affairs Council Discusses Campus Activities

by Beth Stravino

The Student Affairs Council (SAC) met Tuesday, Nov. 2, to discuss policies regarding the use of the new Sports + Rec. Center, the registration of lounges for social activities, the coordination of campus fund raising activities, and solicitation on school grounds.

The Student Affairs Council deals primarily with co-curricular issues. SAC is chaired by Dean Tilden with Wayne Justham as Secretary. Three professors have membership on a three year rotational basis. Currently they are Professors Donaldson, Peterson, and Rhodes. Britta Harris represents Centerboard. Student Government representatives are Keith Fox, Rory McAvoy, and Ben Reichly.

The meeting began with a look at the rules and policies regarding the Sports + Recreation Center. Membership fees for non-students, space scheduling and hours for use were among topics discussed. A handbook with these conclusions and regulations will be distributed to Juniata students shortly before the Center is officially opened.

Lounge reservation for party use was discussed next. Several cases of individuals throwing a party and charging admission for personal profit were criticized. It was the unanimous decision of SAC to discourage this money-making scheme. The panel decided that lounge reservation for a party should be restricted to chartered organizations. This should narrow fund-raising to legitimate campus clubs. Dean Tilden stressed that this policy does not limit lounge reservation; it limits the charging of admission.

Next SAC discussed the coordination of fundraising activities. Sometimes groups sponsor similar sales or activities simultaneously. Perhaps with better scheduling and communications between groups, this could be avoided. A policy to control quality, ensure tastefulness, and reduce duplicity will be formulated by Dean Tilden and Mr. Justham with inputs from the other SAC members.

Complaints regarding a man espousing religious beliefs outside Good and Ellis Halls led to an examination of the college's solicitation policy. SAC decided that persons wishing to solicit opinions on any subject while on Juniata property must register centrally with Wayne Justham.

SAC meetings are open and students are welcome to participate, though deliberations are done privately. According to Dean Tilden, ". . . SAC does important things . . . It's a very responsible group . . ." Previous SAC accomplishments include the establishment of the current alcohol policy and the willful damage policy.

As the cold weather begins, the Juniatian staff is seriously beginning to wonder whether we will make it through the winter term or not. It is already November and although the weather has been warm lately, it is going to get cold soon. For the Juniatian, cold weather is equivalent to a cold Juniatian office. A cold Juniatian office leads to COLD Juniatian editors. Not something we especially look kindly upon.

Last year the typical night went as follows: The nose turns bright red as we enter the hallway leading to the office. Our bones begin to shiver; our teeth chatter. Yes, once again it is Monday night — layout time. After struggling through this dimly lit arctic corridor, we finally reach the door only to realize that we need our ice pick. Thank God we have one or there wouldn't be a paper. As we chip away the ice from the door, our thoughts turn despairingly to the night ahead. Finally, a breakthrough. Hopefully the lock is not frozen. Phew! We lucked out this time (if you can call it that).

We enter and are immediately greeted by our penguin landlords ____ & ____ (they know who they are). They are the ones who promised us heat when we took over the lease.

"Get the antifreeze for the typewriter," yells an eager, but cold typist. "Put the coffee on," yells another. We wait to hear that the water pipes are frozen but we luck out again and coffee begins to brew.

As the night wears on, colds begin to grip us; old issues become tissues. Hell, somedays those old issues keep us pretty warm — they are great insulators!

Although our point is exaggerated (everybody knows typewriters don't need antifreeze), we are tired of being neglected. We refuse to be neglected this winter as well. We need heat, we want heat, and we feel we better get heat. We are tired of begging and pleading.

If last winter is any indication of this winter, The Juniatian might be headed South — & we don't mean the dorm.

Should we have to suffer through this coldness in the basement of Ellis or should the staff move its office to the newly built steam rooms in our 4.5 million dollar "gym?"

We don't expect sympathy, but we do expect action.

Hey gang, no title or other niceties this week — this reporter has a lot of work to do. So, in order to fill the space on page two of everyone's favorite weekly rag, your faithful bi-weekly cynic and all-around good sport is diligently scouring his mind for another of those thought-provoking treatises on our mutual alma mater. While he types.

For you see, the trick of this type of academic commentary is not a patent formula. Oh, there have been theories floated that we columnists have these articles plotted out to correspond with the Pathfinder's list of fun stuff to do instead of studying, but it just doesn't work that way.

Now of course at a more professional level, that is probably how it is. Mary MacGrory and George Will probably give good old Ben Bradlee an outline of their ideas for the week and then report back when the rough draft is done. Probably (Mary is probably a step ahead of ol' George, who seems to think the depression was good for his soul in utero). But that isn't quite how it works here in the B league.

For instance, it is 4:00 pm Sunday afternoon. Deadline for this written embodiment of the wit and humor of this reporter is due at 5:00 pm. The past two weeks have been spent not working on this article.

Hold it, enough of this search for mercy. No one wants to hear it. All the masses of entertainment starved students want is a chuckle about their school during Thursday's evening meal. Why belabor the point — this reporter has nothing funny to say this week. And what has caused the death of D.H.'s funny bone? Well, the wide assortment of independent variables rules out a monocausal analysis of the problem. In fact, finding a solution to the situation will be difficult, so why try?

Because the space must be filled, bozo. To fail in one's duty is treason. School spirit, bully forth, muddle through, and all that. It must be done, so that the page isn't blank, the features editor doesn't bitch, and this reporter can keep his job for another fort-night.

As you can see, we're going nowhere. But hey, that brings to mind a topic, which has been lacking from this effort thus far. Nowhere. A concept that is aptly represented by the final days of the term. One must always say that it all adds up to an education, because when the diploma comes it does, but right now it still appears to a mere add/drop in the bucket.

A spark! Could the funny bone have been temporarily out of order? Well, try again. Obviously the concept of nowhere brought out a smidgeon of a snicker, so go for the guffaw. Um, well, um yeah o.k., did you hear the one about, yeah, thought so. It's just no use.

Well, the obligatory lines have been filled and your now dispirited former college humorist is about to give it up, to the joy of some and lesser joy of others.

Dave's Dribble

by David Lehmann

Of all the important knowledge that I have acquired since coming to college, the most surprising bit concerns "light housework." Light housework includes: sweeping, mopping, dusting, cleaning dishes, making beds, washing laundry, and other assorted fun things. It would seem that it is the combination of so many small tasks that makes light housework so time consuming, but, from experience, I have learned that given the wrong conditions, any one of these small tasks could sweat Hercules down to an Anorexia look-alike.

At Mission House, where I reside, my three roommates and I take turns at performing the different houseworking tasks. Recently, it came my turn to do the dishes. When I walked into the kitchen, my task appeared easy. True, the stack of dishes was high (from the ceiling almost to the floor — yes, I said this correctly; somehow the top dish got stuck to the ceiling and all the other dishes (being gregarious sorts) clung to their nearest neighbors backside), but the sink was already filled with soap and water, and unidentifiable kitchen utensils were already soaking.

After taking out a Brillo pad and a sandblaster, I reached into the soapy water to start my work. To my surprise, someone had put our electric knife, fully assembled, in the sink, and, to make my work more interesting, had left the knife plugged in and turned to the "on" position. I was quite shocked, and, after the bleeding slowed a bit, I called my roommates into the kitchen to tell them so. After a short discussion, I apologized for getting blood on the blade and took responsibility for shorting out the motor, agreeing to buy another.

After returning from the hospital with my newly stitched left hand, I resumed my task. With my left hand incapacitated, my roommates kidded me, I would now go about my chore the right way. However, it took some time to finally learn the right way of dealing with college students' dishes. First, I tried cleaning out a pot that had contained week-old banana soup by scrubbing it with a Brillo pad. Unfortunately, the pad completely dissolved after two or three micro-seconds. Next, I attempted to sterilize the dishes with the sandblaster, and, although the dishes didn't get any cleaner, I managed to blast the large stack from the ceiling; we are now the only building in Huntingdon with a sun-roof. Finally, I discovered the best way to handle the dirty dish problem. I threw all the dirty dishes away and bought a new set of china, thinking that my turn to wash the dishes wouldn't come up again until next term, and, by that time, I could afford to buy more dishes.

Comforted that this task was done, I decided that the time had come to do my laundry. On my way down the steps to the washer and dryer in the basement, I remembered that one of my roommates often played a practical joke of placing a handful of razor blades in the dryer. After pondering the result that the joke could do to my hand if I reached in before the dryer stopped, and my clothes, which I prefer without air-vents, I turned and slowly dragged my way back up the stairs. Maybe, I thought, if I asked my parents nicely, I could borrow enough money from them to pay for a change in wardrobe two or three times a term.

Chew Fad Bad For Health

ATLANTA, GA (CPS) — Chewing tobacco, which has achieved "big fad" status in some college and high school circles, can be extremely hazardous to students' health, and could lead to an eventual increase in oral diseases, a Tufts University medical professor has warned at an oral surgeons' convention here.

"It's gone all the way down to the junior high level," says Dr. Irving Meyer of the habit, and "among high-risk people — men between 40 and 45 who drink a lot — it someday is going to cause pre-cancerous conditions we call leukoplakia and erythroplasia."

Meyer says the diseases associated with chewing tobacco — they also include gum disease — aren't currently afflicting many students. He worries that people now "who drink a lot and use this crap a lot," however, are prime candidates for illnesses later.

"With 9000 deaths from oral cancer a year, and 27,000 new cases a year, it's already a very big problem," Meyer says.

Meyer attributes the fad's spread to tobacco and snuff companies' "invading this market. In this high school and college age group, they're very impressionable. They follow the macho image."

Chewing tobacco sales around Iowa State University, for example, rose 500 percent between January, 1979 and January, 1980, according to an Iowa State Daily report in 1980.

At Fort Hays State University in Kansas, a "Skoal ring" on a back jeans pocket — imprinted when the wearer keeps a can of chewing tobacco in his back pocket — became something of a status symbol last fall, the University Leader reports.

Meyer, however, wants to convince students to follow "total abstinence. The only answer is to absolutely stop this stupidity."

Off-Off Broadway

by Rod Keller

This past weekend the Fall dramatic production, Mirandolina, was performed in Oller Hall. Unlike the other 18th century work Juniata has produced recently (Volpone in Spring 1981), the director, Luise van Keuren, has translated the script into a more modern English, which made understanding the plot much easier.

The play is an Italian comedy based on the attempts of a beautiful landlady, Mirandolina, to make a woman-hating nobleman fall in love with her.

The role of Mirandolina was split between Carolyn Saulnier and the director, Luise van Keuren. Carolyn's performance was fairly energetic, however she had a great deal of difficulty remembering her lines. Prof. van Keuren knew her part well, but seemed to lack the energy and charisma that Carolyn had. If their two performances could have been combined, the part would have been much more effective.

The woman-hating Cavalier, played by David Merwine, stole the show with simple believable acting. His emotional speech at the end of Act 3 would have been superb if the laughter from the other scenes hadn't spoiled the tone for a serious section.

The Marquis, played by Jim Henry, and the Count, played by Pete Bartels provided numerous sub-plots by their amusing attempts to woo Mirandolina. Both actors gave fine performances both nights.

As for direction, Luise van Keuren did a wonderful job on sets and props, but some of the blocking seemed a little awkward, the numerous pacing scenes being one example. Another direction/production problem was created by the overhead lighting causing shadows under the three cornered hats; a little side lighting might have helped.

Audiences for the three performances were a little sparse, but capacity crowds weren't expected. With this small audience, some of the truly funny lines didn't get the laughs they should have; a larger audience would have loosened some inhibitions against audience response.

Overall, Mirandolina was a success as much as any other Juniata production. It had some good acting, some bad acting, great sets, and a few production problems. But the best comment on Mirandolina is that those who saw it enjoyed themselves.

problem. However, the pro arms race faction realizes that there is an intense conflict with a very intelligent and dangerous enemy. In their opinion, it is unrealistic to assume that Russia will comply with any proposal that we might submit. The evidence is available to those who are interested. Russia's communist doctrine entails the philosophy that as long as communism continues, capitalism must collapse. Our demise is their success. This view would equate the Soviets with the thief who prowls around your house looking for a way in. When he finds it, he will come in.

Another aspect of the nuclear freeze movement is its origin. It is purported that much of the disarmament discussion is being propagated by the Soviets themselves. However, it may be the small group of administrators in Russia who are in favor of the freeze in the U.S. Perhaps this is only to induce us into entering into an agreement which they have no intention of upholding. In Russia, if one speaks publicly in favor of a freeze, he is immediately arrested and jailed. This may be why Prof. Glazier added, "No, we are not being funded by the K.G.B." in a humorous note during the question and answer period. Of course, this is not in reference to the program at Juniata. However, as a national campaign, it may well be a concern. More appropriately, as an international campaign, because this has been noted in Europe also.

There has been, and currently is, an enormous expenditure of U.S. dollars going into the arms race, as well as, the efforts of many of our most highly skilled people whose efforts are needed elsewhere. There is no question as to the seriousness of the issue. The only debate is in regards to the solution. It is a problem which merits the concern and involvement of all, irrespective of their opinions on the issue.

Indian Volleyballers MAC Champions

by Tracey Catanese

The Juniata College Women's Volleyball team has successfully defended the Middle Atlantic Conference Championship Tournament and is now looking towards the Division III Nationals.

The team traveled to Dickinson College in Carlisle, PA on Nov. 5 and 6 for the weekend conference tournament. JC started pool play on Friday afternoon at 2:15 against Moravian and won the match 15-5, 15-11. Their next match was with Wilkes at 4:45 and they took this match by scores of 15-5 and 15-9. At 7:15, they played Muhlenburg and won 15-1 and 15-6. At 8:30, they ended pool play by defeating Gettysburg, 15-9, 15-7.

The semi-final match was scheduled for Saturday at 11:00 as Juniata was paired up against Elizabethtown and won 15-3, 15-8. In the final match at 2:00, JC outplayed Western Maryland for the MAC championship title by scores of 15-9, 15-7, and 15-9.

The Lady Indians played excellent volleyball as they won every game they played during the tourney.

High individual statistic leaders for the finals match include senior co-captain Sue Barker in the serving department with very tough services including 8 aces, and former All-American Colleen Irelan in the passing department with an outstanding 34% perfect passing ration. Irelan also performed well with 17 kills as Barker and Sue MacLachlan added 11 kills apiece. In addition, Barker, a middle blocker, was described by Coach Larry Bock as "mercilessly" blocking the net.

Setters Claudia Tweardy and Peggy Evans did their jobs as they turned most of the passes into legitimate attacks and directed the offense's "relentless attacks." Tonya Snyder played excellently during the final match. Coach Bock commented that she, "responded very positively to the situation and played as perfect a game as can be possible," when she filled in for the ailing Eing Opanayikul. Snyder contributed greatly to Juniata's victory as she made no hitting errors and only one passing error during the match. Opanayikul's health is improving and she did participate.

Earlier in the week, JC hosted Shippensburg and defeated them 15-3, 15-2, and 16-14 in a pre-MAC match-up. Including the MAC's, the volleyballers now have an impressive 41 win-3 loss record.

With regard to Division III Nationals, 24 teams will be participating. On Friday, Nov. 19, first round play will be conducted at eight different sites with 16 of the 24 teams playing.

The second and third rounds will be held at four different sites on Friday, Dec. 3, and Saturday, Dec. 4, respectively. Then, the four remaining teams will participate in the NCAA Division III Finals on Dec. 10 and 11.

Soccer Falls

by App

On November 1, the Juniata soccer team closed out its disappointing season on a sour note by dropping a 4-0 decision to visiting Shippensburg State. The Indians were scheduled to play at Frostburg last Thursday, November 4, but the game was canceled due to a scheduling conflict. The loss to Shippensburg made the Indians' final record stand at 2-12.

The Shippensburg game was much closer than the score indicates. The Indians were actually the better team in the first half, but missed scoring opportunities left the game scoreless at halftime. The game remained scoreless until Shippensburg broke the ice with a goal at the fifteen minute mark of the second half. After that, it was all down hill for the Indians as Shippensburg tacked on three more goals.

Viewing the season as a whole, Coach Jaegar felt the team's performance was better than what the 2-12 record indicates, but he was disappointed that the team didn't win a few more games. He felt key injuries and a lack of depth hurt the Indians considerably. Coach Jaegar felt some of the positive aspects of the season were the team's never-give-up-attitude, and several good showings against tough opponents.

C. Country at MAC's

by Paul Bomberger

Our Lady Harriers sped to a second place finish Saturday in the MAC championship. The Indians scored 59 points, just behind the winner, Franklin & Marshall, who had 65 points.

Carol Tendall and Cathy Duffy, finished second and fourth overall to pace the ladies. Carolyn Andre, Chris Schleiden and Robin Bardman, once again, added consistent performances securing the team's second place.

Coach Latimore & his Lady Harriers have one more goal in mind. Saturday, November 13, they will run in the National qualifying meet held at Lebanon Valley College. All the teams in the Mideast region will be vying for a trip to Nationals. The JC Harriers have a solid shot to make that trip.

The Men gave it their best shot at MACs on Saturday. They finished fifteenth in a twenty-one team field.

Individually, Mark Royer had a noteworthy race. Mark placed 42 overall with an excellent 27:15 clocking. His time was the fastest ever run by a Juniata runner in the MAC meet. Andy Marsh followed Mark with his personal best, 27:58, good for 67 place. Mike Murray, Andy Pearson, Tom Hoffman, Bill Ciesla and Bill Marshall all finished in the top 100.

Saturday, November 13, the Men's Cross Country team will also travel to Lebanon Valley College to run in the National qualifying meet.

Crusaders Conquer Indians

Tribe drops two straight

by Andy Berdy

MAC Championship hopes were dashed Saturday as Juniata traveled to Selinsgrove to face a co-leader, the Susquehanna Crusaders. With four teams in the race, the Tribe was trying to knock one off and retain a share of the title.

But it was not to be, as the Crusaders took a 14-7 lead into the locker room and added a pair of field-goals in the second half, while holding off Indian threats, to come out on top, 20-13.

The Crusaders drew first blood after recovering a Kevin Smith fumble on the Juniata 25 yard line. SU quarterback Jim Wisse hit Jim Elliot on the Tribe eight, and on the next play reserve quarterback Earl Fullerton scampered in the remaining distance, making it 7-0 SU. The Crusaders never trailed again.

The Tribe offense sputtered following the kick-off, and a punt gave SU another scoring chance. Starting from the Crusader 24, Susquehanna used their ground game on 12 of 14 plays marching 76 yards, the capper being an 18 yard pass from Wisse to John Dragon making it 14-0.

The Indians kept it close, carving out an interesting scoring drive of their own, beginning with a 15 yard personal foul call against SU, assessed on the kick-off. Starting at the JC 41, Dave Pfeifer's first pass of the series was picked off, but an interference call against SU gave the Tribe the ball on the Crusader 35. Pfeifer then hit Dave Murphy on the Susquehanna 20. Pfeifer then fumbled but Pat Davis recovered on the SU 27.

Staying strictly in the air, Pfeifer again found Murphy on the SU three. On second and goal Dave Hornberger ran right and broke the plane, but fumbled into the end-zone. Ron Fuchs recovered for the Tribe, putting them on the board with 5:20 left in the half.

In the second half, Susquehanna opened up the scoring with a 21 yard field goal with 1:21 left in the third. The Tribe took the kick-off and marched 87 yards on 13 plays for another touchdown. Again on the arm of Pfeifer, the offense moved with completions to Murphy, Smith and Tom Devine, who saw offensive action late in the game.

From the four, Pfeifer looked right and found Carl Fekula on a finger-tip grab, making it 17-13 SU, but the two point conversion pass from Devine failed.

The Tribe had another chance after a Crusader pass was picked off by Devine on the SU 30. However, two plays later Pfeifer returned the favor with one of his own.

Following a Crusader punt, the Tribe offense tried to move again but the pass protection was not there. Forced to punt with little more than two minutes left, the snap to Hornberger was over his head, forcing him to fall on it at the JC 15. Three plays later Susquehanna tacked on the final field goal making it 20-13.

The Indians mustered one last attempt highlighted by a Pfeifer to Devine hook-up covering 36 yards, but his next aerial was intercepted, ending all Tribe hopes.

Pfeifer completed 16 of 26 passes for 218 yards, one TD and three interceptions. Murphy grabbed six passes for 74 yards, followed by Devine with four for 73 and Smith also with four for 55 yards.

The ground game of Hornberger, Davis and Murphy was held to just 12 yards, when combined with Pfeifer's six sacks, the ground game produced negative yardage.

Susquehanna ran up 307 yards of total offense, 185 coming on the ground, with three backs over 50 yards.

On defense for the Indians, Tom McVay reached the 20 tackle mark, while Bob Waszak and Bob Wazalis were in double figures with 13 and 10 respectively.

Tom Devine grabbed his ninth interception of the year and Ben Reichley picked off his fourth.

Currently out of championship contention, the Indians make the long journey to New Jersey Saturday, where they take their 6-3 record to face the Vikings of Upsala.

Fate of Trimester To Be Reviewed

Students have chance to voice opinion

Editor's note: The following article was submitted for publication by a Student Government representative. It is intended to provide foresight to a mail survey scheduled for next week.

by Lenora Golamis

In Pennsylvania, Penn State, Susquehanna University, and Juniata have all developed curriculums around the three term system: fewer classes in a more condensed period. Certain reasons enhanced such a change from semesters to trimesters and certain other reasons promote a change back to semesters. It is an issue that may not affect our immediate stay at Juniata, but will decide on what kind of environment future students will find here.

An immediate effect of trimesters is a change of college breaks: trimesters have a longer fall-Thanksgiving break; a shorter Christmas break; longer winter term and Easter breaks. As a result, students graduate later in the year. There is most definitely a tradeoff: trimesters provide more opportunities to leave school, but also hinder efforts to hit the summer job market.

Academically, there are a few major tradeoffs. Learning style: memorization aspects; material coverage: effectiveness aspects; exam pressures: intensity versus quantity — all play a part in determining the strengths and merits of either system. Basically, the outcome is the result of collective individual judgements. We, as students, have to decide whether we like one way or the other.

Efficiency must also be taken into account. Two registrations and billings are obviously more efficient than three. The longer winter break may cut some fuel costs if the college can shut down or lower the temperature for savings. Could it be that tuition may decrease or possibly and even more probably remain consistent?

One last aspect involves the academics at Juniata and the respective changes that would be required if the semester system was adopted. Professors would have to redevelop their lesson plans and reorganize their teaching techniques. Classes would no longer meet every day. A student may not have greater pressure from three classes, but lesser pressures from five or six classes: an intensity versus quantity tradeoff.

The change would require upheaval: financially, and intellectually, but the rewards may be immediate. Transferring to or from Juniata would be smoother. Conforming with other college breaks may allow better social activities away from college. It all depends on the individual students' collective decision.

Chorus Presents "Xmas '82"

by Karyn Cable

"Christmas 1982" will be presented by the Juniata College Choral Union on Tuesday, December 14. The secular program will include both vocal and orchestral works by composers such as Daniel Pinkham, Giovanni Gabriele, and Gabriel Faure.

The Choral Union is an organization composed of students from both the Juniata Concert Choir, the Juniata Chorale, faculty and staff and friends of the college. Conducted by Professor Bruce Hirsch and accompanied by organist Terry Murry and harpsichordist Mary Ruth Linton, the Choral Union features several student soloists in Antonio Vivaldi's work: Magnificat. These soloists include Didi Pinkstone, Gaye Shelly, Kirsten Hauer, Susan Lytly, Ruth Ericson, Mimi Cummings, David Molchany, and Miguel Estaban. Also included in the program is the Juniata Brass and Percussion Ensemble.

Wix Pix Productions, Incorporated, will be in Oller Auditorium at 8:15 P.M. to film the concert in its entirety. Included in the production will be film of various sites on campus. Recorded and edited live, the broadcast is tentatively scheduled for telecast December 19, 1982.

Bob Howden, J.C.'s Director of Public Relations and Publications, puts his work background to good use in promoting our college. (See story below.)

Bob Howden "Sells" Juniata

by Robert Riefler

One of the key persons responsible for maintaining successful organization at Juniata College is Bob Howden, Director of Public Relations and Publications.

His responsibilities include press releases, media relations, and press phone calls. He is also The Juniatian's advisor and teaches the Journalistic Writing class.

Howden's past is rich in experience. He was on the staff of the school paper at Lycoming College and became editor in his senior year. He spent about a year as a reporter for "Grit" newspaper, and later joined the staff of his hometown weekly paper in New Jersey for four and a half years where he eventually became editor. More recently, he lived in Washington, D.C., serving as press secretary for a U.S. congressman.

One of his strong interests is politics: Howden was elected to the Democratic County Committee in Huntingdon County. Also, he is a member of the Sierra Club, a nationwide environmental organization.

Bob Howden has been with Juniata now for nearly two years. He feels that Juniata is a fine institution and a strong academic college, boasting top-rate faculty, administration, students, and facilities. In effect, he says this makes his job somewhat less difficult; in Juniata, he has a good product to sell and market.

Library Update

The construction improvements to correct structural defects in Beeghly Library have been completed. What yet remains to be done is the transfer of a great amount of books, which found temporary housing in the gym during the reconstructions.

The main factor which will determine when Beeghly will again be in full use is the weather. If all goes well, the library may return to its "full-time" status before Christmas break, or upon return from the holidays.

The Juniatian will be publishing further information concerning the library status in next week's issue.

Editorial

The great "Communicator," with somewhat less energy than a twenty mule team, has presented the nation with a basing mode proposal for the MX missile. Amongst all the arms control/disarmament muddle of the past year, in which multiple mudslinging has begun to replace true debate, the folly of the MX should be clear to all.

There are three basic reasons why the nation must bring pressure on the lameduck session of Congress to prevent the further funding and development of the MX: cost, success of arms control/disarmament talks, and the underlying purpose for this type of nuclear missile system.

The cost of the MX in the proposed "Densepack" basing mode will be approximately $26 billion. Under an administration that has continually threatened to do away with student loans, social programs, and environmental contraints all in the name of saving money, $26 billion for a missile system based in a manner that is highly controversial within the scientific community is unjustified.

The cost factor connects directly to the implied usage of the MX as a bargaining chip in strategic arms negotiations. Is $26 billion a fair cost for a system that the U.S. might bargain away — or are those dollars really needed elsewhere, right now, says "Densepack"? The sincerity of Reagan's START (strategic arms reductions talks) proposal has been attacked on the grounds that it asks much more of the Soviets than of the U.S., and this is born out by the stalled status of the Geneva talks. Pushing for the MX puts the President's sincerity into deeper jeopardy.

Besides its use as an expensive bargaining chip, the MX involves the purpose of targeting the enemies' missile silos. Although the concept is not a Reagan original, it seems that the push for this particular delivery system, in which each missile can deliver 10 warheads to independent targets and is accurate to 500 yards, is particularly threatening to the Soviets land based missiles, which represent 70% of their total ICBM force. Why do we need to threaten the Russians silos? Could our government want a strategic first strike capability?

The MX, dubbed Peacekeeper by the "Communicators" is anything but that. It is an expensive destabilizing boondoggle brought to us with a $200 billion plus deficit. It is our responsibility as citizens to let our Congressional representatives know that the people do not want, or need, the MX missile.

Along Muddy Run

by Lisa Ellek

I have deigned these two-and-a-half weeks between the first day of Winter term and the day Christmas break begins as "Do-nothing-but-search-for-the-spirit" days. (For the approval of my current professors, however, let me revise that to "Do-the-bare-minimum - while - searching - for - the - spirit" days.) I've reached a point in my life where I feel everything non-academic is passing me by . . . and often it seems as though the academics are also. Unlike the Grinch, I'm not searching for the true meaning of Christmas; I'm searching for Christmas. For the past four years, holidays have been passing me by like the salt shaker at a Thanksgiving table.

They say that when you're young, everything looks bigger than it really is and looking back on it, although I never had any Mr Rogerian fears of going down the drain, etc., I can remember being in second grade and being in "deep like" with the entire eighth grade basketball team because they were so smart, so mature, and so TALL. By the time I was in high school and my brother was playing for the eighth grade basketball team, I couldn't help laughing at how these 5'5" mini men kept pulling up their socks when they should have been rebounding. Maybe this is what happened with Thanksgiving and Christmas and Easter.

When I was "little" (it seemed like I was a 6x until junior high), I looked forward to Thanksgiving and Christmas for months ahead of time. Even Halloween was much anticipated and it pulled the string of holidays to come. As kids, we were conditioned to holidays. It began before Halloween when, every year, the teacher gave us paper pumpkins to color. Gradually we advanced until there were pumpkins made of construction paper which had accordian-folded strips of paper for arms and legs. Those were the days before Halloween was banned because people put cyanide in Tylenol, when you could come home and count 31 Clark bars in your pillowcase.

Once we did get our Thanksgiving break, I couldn't wait to wake up and watch every Underdog, Bullwinkle, and Superman that floated down NBC's street. Each year the food was endless, the football games were endless, the stomach aches were endless. But Thanksgiving ended, to our disappointment.

But that was ok because it meant that Christmas was coming. There were more pictures to color and songs to sing (I always felt Thanksgiving was cheated by having no songs). There were Nativity plays to be performed and Christmas presents to shop for. There were cookies to bake and trees to trim. It was a given that every year my brother and I would fight over which cardboard houses went under our side of the Christmas tree, that my mother would get 8 ten-cent glasses from my

by Dave Lehmann

Around this time of the year, I waste away many hours wondering about missiletoe. The whole idea of kissing someone under mistletoe seems quite absurd. Of all things that one may receive a kiss under, why a missile, and, of all the parts of a mistle, why is the toe the chosen part? The toe just doesn't seem to trigger a sensual response. Maybe, with our increasing concern over national defense, the missile has become an object of reverence and has been romanticized, but the toe of anything or anyone lacks any romantic qualities to me.

For instance, I hate pickled pigs' feet. First, there is no telling what those toes have stepped in. One can guess, of course, and knowing a little of pigs' habits, I refuse to eat the toes. My second reason for boycotting pigs' feet stems from my humane nature. Imagine all those pigs in the world that are ruthlessly crippled by having their feet cut off to be pickled. I think of those poor pigs hobbling around on stubby ankles and shudder.

Freud may have called me a psychotic, but the toe is that least sensually exciting part of a body to me. If we must kiss under part of a missile, why not kiss under the missile's head (although I'll admit that I'm not fond of calf's brains), or if we are feeling a bit kinky, we could kiss under part of the midsection. These choices seem more sensible to me. Unfortunately, anything associated with the toe has the same effect on me as a cold shower. I won't kiss under a dirty sock, a can of foot powder, or even a corn pad.

A second problem that I have with understanding missiletoe involves the dispute if missiletoe should be valued for its quality or quantity. If I see a girl standing under a small piece of missiletoe, I may give her a kiss. This is accepted manners, but if I see a girl standing under a large chunk of missiletoe, may I give her something more than a kiss? I hope so, but I would be uncomfortable if this situation arose.

Does a toe from one type of mistle warrant a better kiss than a toe from an inferior missile? To complicate this question, the new conflict about the public benefit of nuclear arms makes their value debatable. A person standing under a nuclear missiletoe may receive a record setting kiss in honor of the awesome power of nuclear arms, or just as likely, receive a slap for threatening detente.

I wish to learn more about accepted behavior around missiletoe, and if anyone sees me standing under some at a party, please demonstrate proper etiquette to me.

Review: "Meatballs"

by Robert Riefler

"Meatballs," an episodic account of the misadventures of counselors and kids at a summer camp, is notable only in that it lacks taste and believability.

Typical of modern comedies, the characters are mostly stock stereotypes. Bill Murray stars as a fast-talking counselor who has a way with words, a "Joe Cool" who comes out of every situation seemingly victorious.

For example, he is attacking one of the female counselors when he hears the head counselor approaching; through loud protest and quick physical maneuvers, he makes it appear as though the girl is attacking him. Later in the film, his camp's basketball team is playing the team of a rival camp. When he realizes the inevitability of his team's defeat, he arranges for the opponent's shorts to be stolen off their bodies and a quick escape on the bus.

The rest of the cast assembles a group of relative unknowns. There's the fat, stupid counselor; the skinny nerd with glasses; the moronic head counselor; and the rich kids from the rival camp who, of course, are all snobs and cheaters.

Some of the gags in "Meatballs" are somewhat amusing, but too incredible to really be appreciated. For instance, several times throughout the movie, the counselors sneak into the head counselor's room and move him, asleep in his bed, to various places around the camp, such as up in a tree. Unless he was tranquilized by some sort of drug, there is no way he could have been moved about like that without waking up.

Then there is the scene in which the two nerdish male counselors are peeping at girls through a hole in the floor boards. Why is it that every movie of this sort has a convenient hole for the horny boys to spy on the scantily clad girls?

However, "Meatballs" is not a total waste of time. It contained a touch of humaness, particularly when the lonely, out-cast kid wins the race for his camp, and the scene around the campfire near the end of the film which projects a closeness among the counselors. Perhaps if the film's characters were more human and less oversexed, and if the jokes were within the realm of believability, then maybe "Meatballs" could be considered a worthwhile film.

Out & About

The Tavern Restaurant, in State College, is the perfect place to take that special someone.

Located in the heart of State College, its outer decor gives the feeling of an Early American tavern. The inner decor is just as impressive. The restaurant itself is large, but it is sectioned in such a way that it is also intimate. The walls are covered with paintings and framed posters which give an "all-American" feeling to the place. The gently glowing lanterns at each table add to the romance of this feeling of the past. The atmosphere, for me at least, was perfect. It was romantic, but comfortable.

After waiting in the cocktail lounge for a few minutes, we were led to our seats. Almost immediately, we were greeted by our host who gave us glasses of water and presented the menu. Throughout the entire meal, service was great. We weren't rushed, and the waiter seemed to have the right timing in everything.

We started off the meal with golden-fried Mozzarella with Marinara Sauce. The Mozzarella was rolled in a light breading and fried to perfection. The marinara sauce added to the already great taste.

Along with the appetizer, we were served a loaf of bread and the salad of our choice. While my guest opted for no salad, I chose cottage cheese with fruit.

After we were finished with our appetizer, we were served the main course: Choice New York Strip Steak Maitre'D. This was a 12 oz. strip steak served with a seasoned herb butter spread lightly on top. It was, of course, broiled to our specifications; my guest's, medium rare; mine, medium. With her meal, my guest chose to have the Spaghetti Marinara — a thin pasta covered with marinara sauce. For myself, I chose french-fried potatoes.

Having filled ourselves with the appetizer and the main course, it came time to relax and order dessert. Upon looking at the dessert menu, my eyes immediately fixed upon the "chocolate chip cheesecake," and after about a second, that's what I chose. My date decided on the traditional cheesecake.

Overall, the meal was delicious. The steaks proved to be tender and tasty. The other accompanying selections were also very good. Personally, however, I think the dessert made the meal. I was well pleased with the chocolate chip cheesecake, as was my date with the traditional cheesecake.

After the meal, the atmosphere lent itself well to relaxing and talking; while finishing coffee and tea. It was a most enjoyable meal in a most enjoyable place.

The check didn't ruin the evening either. The final amount came to $29.00, but for that price, I feel that we were given a good deal: the food, service, and atmosphere were great.

If you are looking for the right place to take the right person, I strongly recommend The Tavern Restaurant.

brother (wrapped individually), and that we'd be finding Christmas jimmies on the floor in July.

Now I miss all that. I came to college and found there wasn't any time to dwell on things. It's finals which come right before Thanksgiving break, not cardboard turkeys. In the past few years I haven't wanted to get up to watch the parades, I've only wanted to sleep in. Thanksgiving is a meal — albeit a meal so utterly different from what we're used to eating at school — but it seems to end more quickly than we can ever remember.

Why does it seem that as people gather on Thanksgiving to give thanks for their health, for the fact that their family is together, that they haven't gone hungry, the first thanksgiving phrase from our mouths on the way out of the dorms is, "Thank God, my finals are over!?" (Maybe because for nine months out of the year we do go hungry!).

I refuse to let this Christmas slip by; I'm too young. Yes, we have Madrigal but we also have tests and papers and homework. Usually I've had enough time to return home, frantically buy presents, and blink before Christmas is over but this year I've decided to once again cut out paper snowflakes and sprinkle them with glitter.

We need to revolt against everyday rigors and hum Christmas carols and wear those blinky-nosed Santas on our lapels once again. I've already started: on the last Monday in November I was playing our lone Christmas album continually. On Saturday it was 70 degrees.

Maybe the problem is the past has been that I've always been too busy pulling up my socks when I should have been rebounding and I missed the ball. Not this year . . . now if only the weather would cooperate!

Ladies Top Grove City

by Tracy Catanese

In front of a very enthusiastic crowd, the Juniata College women's volleyball team defeated Grove City to earn a position in the NCAA Div. III semifinals. On Friday and Saturday, Dec. 3-4, Juniata hosted the NCAA Mid-Atlantic Regional Tournament which included second round and quarterfinal play for Div. III.

JC received a bye from first round play and earned a spot in the quarterfinals after they defeated Eastern Mennonite College from Harrisonburg, Virginia 15-2, 15-13, 15-11 on Friday. This gave them the chance to play Grove City, who had defeated Macalester from St. Paul, Minnesota, earlier by scores of 15-7, 15-12, 15-11.

On Saturday evening, the Lady Indians entered Memorial Gymnasium to a standing ovation from approximately 900 fans as the pep band played Bugler's Dream, the fanfare from the Twentieth Olympiad.

Coaches Larry Bock and Priscilla Gibboney were very proud of their team as they defeated the Grove City Wolverines 11-15, 15-8, 15-9, 10-15, 15-7. The team, which has a few ailing players, managed to play outstanding volleyball in order to have a shot at the 1982 national championship. Bock felt that the people who did play in the match and their supporting cast were just phenomenal. He was very pleased with the performances given by all of the players, especially those given by Sue Barker, who was not playing 100% healthy, and Colleen Irelan, who was playing with a sprained ankle and second-degree burns on her foot. With regard to Irelan, Bock commented that she was a very key factor to JC's victory and that "she may have played the greatest game of her life on Saturday evening." He continued to add that she displayed a lot of courage considering the pain she was suffering from her injuries. Other injured players include Eing Opaniyikul with a sprained ankle and Kathy Harwick with a broken finger.

Unlike the Eastern Mennonite match which became a psychological battle after JC won the first game and had the confidence that they would win the second round play, the Grove City match provided more of a challenge. At one point during the fifth and tiebreaking game, the JC volleyballers were down by three points. Behind the serving of Tracey DeBlase, they took a 11-7 lead which gave them enough momentum to clinch the victory 15-7.

In the individual statistics department for the Grove City match, Irelan led in serving aces with six and DeBlase was by far, the most consistent server with a 19% accuracy serving average, no errors, and five aces. Barker was lead passer with a 37% passing ratio, and Tonya Snyder was top blocker with four stuffed blocks. Sue MacLachlan was terrific as leading hitter with 15 kills and a phenomenal 50% kill ratio. Although all the players contributed greatly, Coach Bock felt that MacLachlan played "a cut above the rest, as she did everything well."

Members selected to the All-Tournament Team included Juniata players Peggy Evans and MacLachlan, and co-captains Claudia Tweardy and Barker. Smokey K. Mueller, a tri-captain from Macalester and Natalie Sutyak a co-captain from Grove City were also named to the team.

The coaches were very pleased with the crowd enthusiasm. The support from the school and community was unlike any support they have encountered at other schools. They were very appreciative of the cheering and felt that it was responsible for many points and that it provided the JC players with an experience they'll never forget.

JC will now travel to LaJolla, California with a 43-3 record to play the 1981 NCAA Div. III National Champions and hosting team of the University of California at San Diego, which sports a 22-14 record. The two teams will play at 8 pm Pacific Standard Time (11 pm, EST) to vie for a chance to play in the finals. The other teams participating include California teams LaVerne with a 27-10 rec-

JC Stickers Travel to Florida

by Paul Bomberger

Our Women's Field Hockey team traveled to Orlando, Florida, on November 24-28, to play in the National Field Hockey Festival.

The Indians competed in the Club Division, which was made up of teams from across the nation. There were All-Americans and former Olympic hockey players on the club teams.

The girls played six very tough games, failing to win any, but gaining valuable experience. Coach Rosalyn Hall noted one particular game against an excellent Delaware Valley team, in which JC scored two goals. Delaware Valley went on to finish second in the division.

Overall, Coach Rosalyn Hall was very pleased with the play of all her players. She said, "They all played with enthusiasm and gave their best efforts. We were looking forward to playing in the festival again next year in California."

C-Country Standout

by Paul Bomberger

Cross-Country is often a sport that goes unheralded in the public eye. The meet usually don't draw crowds, and no one understands how you win or lose a cross-country meet.

Freshman Carol Tendall is one who knows how to win a meet and deserves special recognition for her post-season performances on the Lady's Cross-Country team.

Carol led the Harriers to a second-place team finish at the MAC meet, November 6, placing second overall.

The following Saturday, November 13, Carol continued her winning ways, placing sixth in the Mideastern Regional Meet. Her sixth place finish qualified her to run in the Division III National Championship at Fredonia, N.Y., on November 20.

At Nationals, in a driving rain over a hilly course, Carol came in 28th place, just missing All-American status by three places.

Carol summed up her first collegiate cross-country season this way, "I really loved running on this team. I hope I can improve my dual meet season next year with more consistency."

I-M Update

by Michelle Bartol

Congratulations are extended to the Thumpers and Pigeons for being the J.C. fall-term intramural champions in softball and volleyball respectively. Thanks to all J.C. participants; fall I.M.'s were exciting. Keep up the good work as the winter competition rolls around.

Although I.M.'s are late in getting started this term, there will be something to get excited about. There is a better variety of programs this year than before. New attractions because of the new sports complex are: badminton, water polo, and water basketball. A maximum of 15 players are needed to sign up for a team, and a registration fee of 25¢ will be asked of each member on a team. Team captains are asked to submit his/her team entry form by the closing date of Thursday, December 16. It's imperative that the registration sheet be received by then so that play may begin immediately following Christmas break.

Other traditional sports such as basketball, volleyball and team handball will also be on the agenda. Basketball will consist of A, B, C leagues in both men's and women's. Volleyball will consist of men's, women's and the addition of co-rec due to popular demand. The same player amount and registration fee will also apply to these sports.

Minor changes in I.M. racquetball are expected with one possibility being to institute "tournament style" play rather than round robin as was in previous years' scheduling. Hopefully, this will prove to be a more efficient scheduling system.

In addition, women's indoor soccer will be added, however, the amount of interest will govern whether it will be scheduled or not.

Wrestlers Shine

The Juniata wrestling team began its 1982-83 campaign in fine fashion with a 3rd-place finish in this past weekend's competition at Lebanon Valley. The tournament consisted of 16 teams. It was the highest finish ever for our wrestlers, who came in 6th during last year's tournament.

Pacing the Indian grapplers were Chris Young and Keith Sherbine with first-place finishes in the 167 and 190 lb. weight classes respectively. This marked the first time that Juniata had two champions in tournament action.

A fine performance was also turned in Rich Schuck (177 lb.). He finished 3rd in his weight class and also earned the Most Pinned award by pinning 3 opponents.

Also for the Indians was Dave Sloan (150), who placed 5th, and Jeff Powell (142), who placed 6th.

Stellar performances were also turned in by Matt Siegel (heavyweight), Steve Moyer (158), Rick Noll (134), Tim Shultz (126) and P. McDonough (118).

Hoopers Now 2-0

The Juniata College women basketballers opened their season on a positive note with victories over Franklin and Marshall, 72-37, and St. Francis, 63-51.

In the November 30 opener against Franklin and Marshall, the host Indians dominated from the start. They cruised to a 43-20 lead at halftime allowing Coach Latimore to substitute freely in the second half. The Indians were sparked by senior guard Nancy Roach and freshman center Becky Rhodes. Roach had 14 points and six steals while Rhodes played a tough inside game accumulating a team high 17 points and adding 9 rebounds. Ellen Fasnacht added 10 points and Patty Ryan had a team high 13 rebounds.

The lady Indians visited St. Francis last Saturday and had trouble getting started. They fell behind early, but a switch in defenses helped them narrow the deficit to 2 points, 28-26, at halftime. In the second half, the Indians dominated the boards and got their fast break going to simply outrun St. Francis. The Indians were led by Ryan who scored 20 points and pulled down 20 rebounds. Fasnacht added 13 points and 9 rebounds while Michelle Wengryn was a key contributor off the bench as she had 10 points and 7 steals.

Coach Latimore has a positive outlook on the season and is pleased to have a 2-0 start. Team goals are to play up to their full potential each game, have a winning season, and perhaps capture a conference title. Coach Latimore feels this year's team, with 9 returning letterwinners, including senior tri-captains Aimee Brua, Fasnacht and Roach, and some talented newcomers, has good potential. The team's strengths are shooting, quickness and speed, and attitude, while improvement on defense and reducing turnovers is needed. Latimore feels execution and minimizing mental errors will be keys to the season. The women's schedule consists of 18 games, including two played this week.

Men Drop Four

by Andy Berdy

The Juniata men's basketball team got off to a slow start this season, dropping their home opener to Lycoming and then falling three more times on the road at Elizabethtown, Alvernia and FDU-Madison.

Saturday the Indians visited FDU-Madison in what should have been a close ball game. However, not being able to get into their offensive pattern, the Tribe started slowly shooting only 26 percent from the field in the first half. As a result, the Jersey Devils took a 37-21 halftime lead into the locker room.

However, in the second half, Paul Kardish came off the bench to score 20 of his 22 points and bring an FDU lead, from as much as 26 points, down to just six. The Tribe used the foul to capitalize on the Devil's poor free-throw performance, which was only 59 percent for the game. But the Devils made the clutch free-throws down the stretch to hold off the Indians in an 88-80 win.

Behind Kardish, Mark Rucinski pumped in 19 points for the Indians, and Dan Feruck added 14. Rucinski led all rebounders with 12.

The evening before, the Indians traveled to Reading to take on 0-3 Alvernia College. It looked as if Head Coach Dan Helm would pick up his first win of the season as the Indians struggled but held a halftime lead of 36-26.

But in the second half the offense went cold and turnovers mounted as Alvernia battled back to take a six point lead. The Indians whittled it down to two with less than 10 seconds left, but Rucinski's last second shot failed and Feruck's follow was ruled after the buzzer. The Tribe turned the ball over 23 times in a 61-59 loss that everyone thought should have been a win.

Feruck led the Tribe with 23 points, Rucinski, in his first game since coming off NCAA probation, followed with nine and led everyone with 14 rebounds.

In the only one sided affair, Elizabethtown greeted the Indians with a 77-54 win. The Tribe got off to another slow start, trailing 18-4 early in the contest. However, they battled back to cut the margin to five and went into the lockerroom down seven at 39-32.

In the second stanza, the Blue-Jays built up a 10 point lead and stretched it, outscoring the Tribe by 16 in the period.

Jeff Ostrowski led JC scorers with nine points while Lee Hudzicki, Andy Witmer and Feruck all added eight apiece, as JC shot only 37 percent from the field. Feruck and Witmer also pulled down eight and seven rebounds respectively.

In the Indian home opener, Juniata stayed with Lycoming through the first half, battling to a 45-45 intermission deadlock. In a high scoring affair, the Warriors built a 10 point second half lead to hold off the Tribe attack by a 94-84 margin.

Four Indians were in double figures as Feruck contributed 26 points, Kardish 13, Witmer 11 and John Voler 10.

At press time, the Indians were 0-4 and 0-3 in conference play. They returned home to face the Scranton Royals on Monday and meet the Bullets of Gettysburg tonight in Memorial Gym at 8:00.

Grid Wrap-up

by Andy Berdy

The Indians ended their 1982 campaign on a sour note, dropping a 13-10 decision to the Upsala Vikings in East Orange, New Jersey.

After spotting the Vikings a 7-0 lead, the Tribe came back on a Mike Schaffner 28 yard field goal and a Dave Pfeifer to Dave Murphy hook-up, which Murphy fumbled into the end-zone and Karl Fekula recovered, giving the Indians a 10-7 lead.

However, a fourth quarter Viking drive resulted in a 31 yard touchdown pass, giving Upsala the winning margin of 13-10. The injury-riddled Indian squad tried to battle back but could not.

There were some bright spots from the records standpoint for the Tribe. Murphy grabbed nine passes for 141 yards, breaking school records for season receptions with 55 and yardage with 909, while leading the MAC.

Senior cornerback Tom Devine picked off two more passes, bringing his season total to 11 and breaking his brother Bob's career record of 24 by one.

On the year, freshman quarterback Dave Pfeifer earned MAC Rookie-of-the-Year honors, throwing for 1593 yards and completing 47 percent of his passes.

Senior running back Rick Eberly led the Tribe in rushing with 503 yards and earned Academic All-American honors, despite missing the last three games with a fractured ankle.

Freshman Dave Hornberger was second in rushing and led the MAC North in punting with a 37.4 average.

On defense, seniors Tom McVay and Bob Waszak gained MAC honors, finishing one and two in tackles with 112 and 98 respectively. Geno Perri was third with 71 while Tim Clapper and Bob Wasalis followed with 68 apiece.

Behind Devine in the interception category, Ben Reichley grabbed four, along with handling the punt and kick-off returns with Gerry Crowley and Doug Fleming. McVay, Wazalis, Rick Schuck and Bill Stamp each picked off two passes also.

The rest of the 1982 senior members include running back Pat Davis, tight-end Bob Silsbee, defensive lineman Jeff Lynn and center John Widener.

After a hot start at 6-1 and 4-0 in the MAC, injuries took their toll on the Indians chances of repeating as MAC North Champs. Finishing at 6-4, Coach Rob Ash will be missing some key seniors, but the experience that this year's youth gained should provide the ground-work for another strong team next year.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

It's probably the biggest football game in Pennsylvania every year. Some people call it the Pennsylvania Bowl, and it brings together two teams who are continually in the top ten nationally in the major college football polls. If you don't know what I'm talking about by now, it's the Penn State-Pitt battle.

Not only are the teams always powerhouses, the game also seems to match up some of the greatest individual talent in the state. In 1973, it was John Capelletti, that year's Heisman Trophy winner, and a freshman named Tony Dorsett.

I got a chance to see that game at Beaver Stadium, and Capelletti ran for over 200 yards in the Nittany Lion win, not to mention Dorsett's 160 yard effort.

Since then a lot of big names have come out of both schools, but a few weeks ago I got another chance to witness the clash again in Happy Valley, and I saw some more big names.

There were guys like Dan Marino, Julius Dawkins, Dwight Collins and Bryan Thomas, looking for revenge over last year's 48-14 thumping that Todd Blackledge, Kenny Jackson, Curt Warner and company gave them at Pitt Stadium.

Being a Notre Dame fan, I was basically an impartial observer, sitting in a partisan crowd of P.S.U. student body. Deep down, I guess I was really for Pitt since Notre Dame beat them and lost to Penn State. But the bottom line was that I was there instead of watching it at home on TV.

The game seemed anti-climatic compared to the struggle that I had getting into the stadium. First of all, after the usual tailgating before the game, the trip into the stadium was wall to wall people. The structure only holds 83,600 and the attendance was a record breaking 85,522.

The next hurdle I had to overcome was getting in on a Penn State student ticket. You have to show your ID along with the ticket and only one of the three of us was a Penn State student. My one buddy got in on the other's ID and tossed it over the fence in a glove. A security man saw the play and tossed a penalty flag on us for illegal procedure. After a short lecture, he let the two of us go.

We got back into formation to get me in on the same ID. I got through the line with no problem, all that was left was for me to hit my buddy with his ID so he could get in. I rolled left by the security guard spotted me, causing me to scramble to my right. I saw my buddy in the clear and hit him over the fence with the ID concealed in a key-chain. But, on a play that I thought was a late hit, a security man saw me make the throw and escorted me out of the yard.

It seemed like fourth and long for the two of us, but I scrambled back in, putting a good move on the ticket taker, telling him I forgot my binoculars. He tried to make the tackle but I got a good block from a girl who had to ask him a question about a ticket.

I had new life and decided this time on a long pass play. I dropped back deep to the top of the stadium and found my friend over the fence who made the grab untouched. We had come up with the crucial victory of getting in.

I never could figure out why they were so picky about letting people in when the tickets were already paid for. I guess if they just let you in easy, it would take all of the fun out of it.

Well, we did get it. Penn State did win in a good game, and I saw a lot of Juniata people there. The goal posts did go down, one before the game's end, and Penn State had earned yet another shot at the National Championship. Sorry Penn State fans, I think that 1982 Heisman Trophy winner Herschel Walker and the rest of the Georgia Bulldogs will have plenty to say about that on New Year's Day. But wait a minute, Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions can't choke again can they???

ord and Nonoma State with a 23-10 record. These two teams will play at 6 pm PST (9 pm, EST). The consolation match will be held on Saturday evening at 6 pm and the final at 8 pm.

The JC-UC at SD match should be a very good match and will probably be against the best team that Juniata will see all season. UC at SD is a team which plays comparable to Div. I schools such as Penn State and plays many Div. I schools during their regular season. They played Juniata for the national championship last year and defeated us 3-2 games. Both teams have all of their players back from last year and Coach Bock commented that he doesn't know how UD at SD is performing this year, but he believes that JC is much improved.

The coaches are very optimistic; about the trip to California and strongly feel that it is an accomplishment to have made it this far. Bock also added that, "Anyone we play will have to play great volleyball to beat Juniata and will have to work very hard to do this."

Beeghly Sees End Of Reconstruction

Problems with science library topic of study

by Janet Walenta

Reinforcement of ceilings and floors in Beeghly library is now complete, with only housekeeping work still remaining to be done. Approximately two-thirds of Beeghly's books, Dr. David Eyman, director of libraries estimated, are still housed in the gym where they were placed for the duration of the fortification of the library.

The library may be in full use again before Christmas break, Eyman said, if there are no heavy snows between now and then. Eyman asserted that the library and physical plant staffs can move books from the gym in light rainfall, covering the books with garbage bags. Heavy rain and snow, Eyman fears, would penetrate the bags and damage the books.

Construction was interrupted because a shipment of steel did not arrive on schedule. Neither Eyman nor business manager Mr. William Alexander knows why, but Alexander was willing to speculate: present high interest rates, he explained, are forcing businesses to keep inventories low. For this reason, the steel may not have been in stock when it was scheduled to be sent to Juniata. Also, this shipment was a special variety — strong for its thickness — needed to reinforce Beeghly's basement ceiling. Since the book stacks in the basement nearly graze the ceiling the project demanded reinforcement that would not entail bringing the ceiling down further.

O.E. Hickes, Inc., the company building the sports complex, performed the construction at Beeghly. Alexander explained that lifts "with scissor mechanisms" were used to jockey the steel into place. "The actual installation went quite smoothly," he commented.

Alexander said the project, funded from reserve revenues, cost the approximate $125,000 set in the contract with only minor added costs.

Eyman and Alexander agree that steel beam fortification was the best plan for handling Beeghly's problem. This method was four to five times less expensive than expanding the library, Eyman estimated. He added that this plan was also accomplished more quickly than expansion could have been. Construction of additions to Beeghly would have had to wait until the sports complex had been completed.

The science library also has insufficient support for books. The library, which supports only 115 lbs. sq. ft. does not meet the 150 lbs. sq. ft. standard for libraries. The room is not dangerous, Eyman affirmed, but the library cannot hold many more books than it does presently. Older periodicals, in fact, are being moved from the science library to Beeghly.

Eyman explained that the science library presents problems of limited space for bulk and support for weight. The library, which has lower than library standard ceilings, does not have sufficient space for a great number of books. (The library cannot be expanded because it is circular.) If this were the only problem, books could be put on microfilm and stored in the library. However, the library could not support the heavy cabinets in which microfilm is stored.

Two other problems with the science library, Eyman noted, are that the lighting does not take into account that light tends to be stronger under the balcony area and that neither entrance is visible from the circulation desk. Library personnel, then, cannot monitor students' comings and goings. "We're studying alternatives for the science library," said Alexander.

Eyman took advantage of Beeghly's reconstruction to reorganize the library. Changes in Beeghly's layout — in part necessitated by the construction — will expand Beeghly's shelf capacity, make heating and lighting more efficient and help mask noise. Eyman asserted. Steel beams could not be placed in certain areas of

by Amy Smith

The VIIIth Centenary of St. Francis of Assisi was celebrated at Juniata College's Shoemaker Galleries on Wednesday evening, Dec. 8.

St. Francis, a "Seraphic Saint," is the founder of the Franciscan Order of men and women and is described by Dr. Jose C. Nieto as a "figure of universal value." A lover of God, mankind, and nature, he is honored for his extreme imitation of the life of Christ and his dedication in carrying out Christ's work.

The program, sponsored by Juniata's History Department, was opened with introductory remarks by Nieto, explaining the life and importance of Francis. Dr. Esther M. Doyle and Dr. Luise Van Keuren shared in the readings from The Little Flowers, stories revealing the significant events of Francis' life. These readings co-

Madrigal Weekend '82 Sparks X-mas Spirit

by Karyn Cable

Amidst the strains of "Joy to the World" and "O Come All Ye Faithful," 784 students filled Baker Refectory and Tote for Juniata College's Madrigal Dinner.

Chairperson Sharon Twaddell began the evening with a warm welcome. Jim Ways, a senior, explained the meaning of the traditional Wassail toast and wished everyone "good health, good cheer, and a Merry Christmas." As faculty and administration began serving the evening's meal, Craig Gruesel shared both traditional and original Christmas songs. The Juniata Flute Ensemble added to the evening as everyone feasted on Prime Rib of Beef, baked potatoes and French Apple Pie. Next on the program was Andy Jones. Andy's blend of classical and jazz was a special treat.

What would Christmas be without a story? Dave Merwine, accompanied by Terry Murray on the piano, charmed his audience with a reading of 'Twas the Night Before Christmas. Surprise guest Chuck Yohn knew a slightly different version of the popular tale, and told of hip, upbeat partiers who encountered moose instead of reindeer and a Santa Claus who enjoyed yoga and "rapping."

Andy Murray's traditional Christmas Medley was the hit of the evening. After a round of "Take Me Out to The Ball Game," to remember the volleyball team in California, Andy had Lords-a-Leaping from chairs, Pipers piping napkins and a whole row of Golden rings doing pirouettes on their chairs, as each of the Twelve Days of Christmas tried to better the day before with a new twist of creativity. The Partridges who were in the south alcove, rather than in a pear tree, received a round of applause for their twist of the lyrics. Not to be outdone, three French Hens became three French kisses, and the maids-a-milking went about their chores with red and green napkins on their heads.

Christmas spirits rekindled by the Passing of the Light and a verse of "Silent Night" ventured into the cold night with most people still humming "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" or "O Little Town of Bethlehem." But the night was still young. The Allies rocked Memorial Gymnasium until one AM, while Sherwood catered to the late night Christmas spirits who were reluctant to end the evening before dawn.

Sign-ups for tables at the Madrigal Dinner were held on Thursday, Dec. 2, with some students sitting in line in the Ballroom as early as 6 AM!! For all those who attended the festivities, the wait was well worth it. Commented one freshman: "If this is what Madrigal is all about, I hope it continues forever."

Madrigal Dinner

A New System?

The Madrigal dinner is one of the most special events of the year which takes place here at Juniata College. It is an event which everyone looks forward to, especially upperclassmen who have experienced it.

Unfortunately however, it is not an event which everyone can attend. The facilities used for Madrigal dinner can only hold a little over 700 people, but there are approximately 1300 students enrolled here at Juniata. That leaves 600 students without a place to go. (Almost half of the entire student body.)

In addition to not providing enough of a supply for the demand of tables, the system for getting a table is designed in such a way that the student has to get up at 5 or 6 AM to be assured of a table on the main dining floor. If you wanted to sleep in a little more (8 or 9 AM) you could have gotten a table in Totem Inn. Being in Tote however, can take away from the spirit of the occasion (poor visibility as well as poor audibility).

But, what can be done with the situation? For those who can get up early, and not worry about falling asleep in their classes, the system is fine. It is also fine for those who show up at 11:55 AM to run the system at noon. However, for those who can not quite make it at 7 AM to get a good table, the system stinks.

The Juniatian thinks that this matter should be looked into. We therefore suggest the following alternatives:

1) A random lottery could be held where the students would form their tables ahead of time and choose one person to represent that table. Then all the names could be taken and randomly selected "out of a hat" until all of the tables were filled.

2) A preference system could be established with the seniors getting first preference and so forth on down through class rank.

3) Open Madrigal to only Juniors and Seniors with any left over space being made available to Sophomores and Freshmen.

4) Consider the possible movement of the dinner from Ellis to a larger area such as Memorial Gym.

These suggestions have only been made to make the students think about the problem. The solutions may be viable, or they may be impossible. The problem, however, should be dealt with. Maybe, just maybe, our Director of Programming will look into this matter with the Juniatian's suggestions in mind. It may just help when they plan next year's dinner.

After a brief visitation by near-Floridian temperatures, the Arctic winds have descended upon our humble community once again. Along with snow and cars that won't start and cold toes in the early morning comes the ancient winter festival that is the chosen time to celebrate Christmas.

Charlie Brown's suspicion that the most holy of birthdays is really run by a "big eastern syndicate" seems evident all around us. The store shelves are full of plastic little people pleasers that blink and beep and break before New Years. Back on the market this year, after a decade-long post-Vietnam hiatus, is a refurbished G.I. Joe doll, replete with a computerish female counterpart. This pocket-size patriot even has a line of plastic breakfast ware that has been struck in his honor. The utensils are emblazoned with vivid accounts of his action exploits. It's reassuring to know that those big eastern (now sunbelt) syndicates are giving proper attention to the nurturing of nationalism in the nation's youth. And what better time than breakfast!

But even more ominous happenings darken the joy of this Christmas season. The strains of a weak economy and the mental stress of living in a world that is always thirty minutes from nuclear nothingness has taken a heavy mental toll. From the Washington Monument to Mifflin Street in our own little backwater burg, men have failed to resolve conflicts and frustrations, resorting to bullets to bring solutions.

The spirit of '82 could be read this past week in almost every church front sermon title. The common topic seemed to be the nuclear angst that will be the source of distinction for the year past in the chronologies of the future. The question — what can be done to remedy the ongoing saga of the violence, mental, spiritual, physical, that the human race inflicts upon itself — is evident. The answer continues to be elusive.

In view of the facts, the answer that this season offers seems corny. Can we really expect any help from someone who was born in a LOS ANGELES — The 1984 Summer Olympics organizers plan to run the games without public funds and to end up with a financial surplus.

The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, a group of private and professional people, committed itself to avoid using tax revenue and therefore have a two part strategy for running the games: they will use existing Olympic facilities for most of the competitions, and they will utilize money from private businesses to finance the games total cost — a figure they are keeping budgeted at $472 million. The committee president expects revenue in excess of $480 million for the games. The Summer Olympics are scheduled for July 28 through Aug. 12, 1984.

WASHINGTON — A $13 million American War headquarters is planned to be built in Britain by 1986, Reagan officials announced Friday. The headquarters to be built in London would be a "support center" for 1,000 staff officers of the United States European Command if war broke out in Europe. The main function of this center would be to support and assist U.S. commanders on the continent, moving troops and supplies from the U.S. to the battlefront.

BRUSSELS — NATO has urged the new Soviet leadership to consider building a climate of international trust. The message, which stressed NATO's willingness to develop trade and human relations, was sent via communique to Gov. Yuri V. Andropove, Friday. It read, "The allies are open for all opportunities for dialogue. . . . They will welcome any positive move to reduce tension, and desire, if Soviet attitudes allow, to cooperate in rebuilding international trust."

HAVANA — Fidel Castro denounced the U.S. as responsible for destablizing Central America, during his speech to 100,000 at a rally in Havana. He also denied that Cuba has been furnishing Soviet arms to Latin American revolutionaries.

WARSAW, POLAND — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski announced Sunday night that the "basic rigors" of martial law will be suspended before the end of the year in Poland; internment is to end and there will be a partial amnesty. The Communist Party chief and head of the Martial Law council said during a nationally televised broadcast that military rule would end "in the reasonably near future."

V103 — Program Changes

Juniata's number one radio station, V103, has experienced a few programming changes. The most dramatic difference for V103 staff members is the reduction of historically three-hour shows down to two hours.

V103 was faced with over 130 individuals who expressed interest in obtaining air time. By shortening the length of shows, the Voice has "squeezed" many more people into their broadcast day.

"The decision (to reduce show lengths) came after hours of debate among the V103 board members," said Dave Heisterkamp, Program Director. "However," he continued, "we believe we've made the correct choice." "You see," added Brian Check, Station Manager, "we have decided that it is not the purpose of V103 to cater to a small, select group but rather to involve, actively, as many students as possible."

A new feature to V103 is the "V103 LP." The Voice has discontinued the 12 INCHES feature because they felt it was unfair to monopolize a D.J.'s 6 to 8 p.m. show by requiring that an album be played in it's entirety. The V103 LP, not unlike the 12 INCHES, will feature a newly-released album daily. However, the V103 LP will feature the album throughout the entire day, playing one new cut an hour.

V103 has been gearing up to give Juniata a special Christmas treat for today. Beginning at noon, V103 began it's countdown of Juniata's Top 103 all-time favorite tunes. The list was compiled after the Does College Pay??

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — College doesn't necessarily help men get higher-paying jobs than high school grads, though it does help women, the National Center for Educational Statistics (NCES) has discovered.

The NCES found that, seven years after graduating from high school in 1972, men who didn't attend college at all actually earned more than those who did.

High school grads earned an average of $7.06 an hour. Those who went to college less than two years earned $6.94 an hour. Men who got a bachelor's or advanced degrees earned an average of $6.88 an hour.

But higher education apparently isn't as hazardous to women's success as it is to men's.

Women who had earned college degrees earned substantially more than women who ended their educations after high school, the survey said.

In its written summary of the findings, NCES which asked 17,000 members of the high school class of 1972 about their status in 1979, concluded that "over the long term for both men and women, the financial returns of a college education may repay the actual costs of schooling, as well as the wages lost by not working during the college years. College probably does pay for young women, but it is too early to say the same for young men."

Winter Carnival Planned

by Cinny Cooper

The Residential Life Committee together with Center Board is planning a Winter Carnival tentatively scheduled for the last week in January.

Centerboard is planning the activities to be held during the week while the RLC is planning the weekend activities. No definite plans have been made for the week's activities and, though the weekend activities have been planned, the details are still sketchy.

A co-ed volleyball tournament is planned for Friday, Jan. 28. Each game will operate under a 15 minute time limit. The teams, consisting of 8 people, will be charged a 50 cent per person entry fee to help pay for the T-shirts given to the winning team.

A pie eating contest will also be held on Friday. This will be a competition between residence halls with each hall sending one representative. Each contestant will receive one pie and the winner will be determined on how quickly he/she eats the pie.

A human pyramid competition is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 29. It will also be held as a competition between residence halls. The winner will be determined by the height of and the number of people in the pyramid.

Other activities planned for Saturday, but with no details worked out yet, include a Tug of War, Co-rec football, Tray racing (cafeteria style trays), and snow sculpturing. An "Almost Anything Goes" is also planned for the Winter Carnival.

Saturday night Center Board will be sponsoring a dance. The activities held during the week will be competitions between residence halls and will result in points given to the winner of each event. At the dance on Saturday night an award will be given to the hall with the most points.

The Residential Life Committee, an almost unheard of group, is made up of the vice-president of each RHA. The money that is raised from the Winter Carnival and other activities throughout the year will be used toward the purchase of an ice machine for all the halls to use and name plaques for all the residence halls.

barn? But if one takes a close look at the roots of the blackness that will blot the chronicle of the year past, it seems that the Light that came to us so long ago is really the last, best hope. Have a Merry Christmas, and may this one linger longer.

Sports Rec Center Ready for Use

by Jessie Amidon

The new Sports and Recreation Center will be completely finished and functioning when students return from Christmas break. The current restrictive hours will not apply as the Center will no longer be a construction site. The campaign for the $4.5 million project cost has also been accomplished.

The campaign, begun in September 1980, has been very successful because the need for the new facility was quickly recognized. Despite difficult economic times, the money has been entirely raised.

The Trustees of Juniata College donated more than $2 million, this being the largest amount attributed to any one group. Juniata's alumni provided $1.25 million and friends of the college gave nearly $300,000. Foundations and corporations contributed in excess of $800,000. Bequests amounted to $186,000, while faculty, staff, and students came up with more than $130,000.

Currently the varsity gymnasium, sauna and weight room are the only facilities open to the students. The restrictions are being supervised by a student staff and will be in effect until Christmas break.

Much work has been done lately on the pool and racquetball courts. The pool is filled and will be ready after break when the mezzanine is finished. Roslyn Hall, Aquatics Director, is in the process of choosing lifeguards. The Center will increase the availability of jobs on campus.

There will a Continuing Education program which will offer lifesaving and other water safety courses. There will be scuba diving certification classes offered mainly in the interest of marine biology students. In addition, the program may include other physical education courses which are non-credit but an added bonus for the student. The intramural program has been greatly expanded and includes water sports. Examples of new intramural sports are: handball, racquetball, pool, water polo and water basketball.

Nancy Latimore will be in charge of scheduling and coordinating the Sports and Rec Center. In order to use some parts of the gym, the student will be required to fill out a facility request form.

An example of this is the wrestling-judo area which is a large, square room completely covered with mats. The carpeted multipurpose room will be utilized in the same manner for social events and large group activities. The facility request forms will be available through the Athletic Department. Locks will be available on a daily basis for students to secure their belongings in the intramural locker rooms. The equipment room will be locked at all times. Students may request equipment at the Center office.

The Center will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. after break. During the day, both main entrances will be open. In the evening, however, only the east entrance will be used for reasons of security.

the library — for example, in areas where the beams would interfere with pipes. Such floor spaces, then, cannot have stacks of books or other heavy materials resting on them.

Eyman saw an opportunity to make further organization changes while the building was in a state of flux. Dewey Decimal system 001 to 309 will now be on the main floor, 310 to 999 on the second floor. The archives will be moved to an area adjoining what will become Dr. Eyman's office on the main floor. Eyman feels this will increase security. The new arrangement will allow more space for audio-visual equipment in the basement.

Each library shelf will contain a fewer number of books so that books purchased in the future may be added to the stacks without necessitating reorganization. The lowered ceilings on the first and second floors will allow for more efficient heating and lighting. Government documents have been integrated with the rest of Beeghly's books. Study carrells and tables have been placed back between the stacks on the basement floor because the shelves help to mask sound. The building has been painted; carpets and curtains are being cleaned.

Alexander says these housekeeping improvements are allowed for in Juniata's budget. Most allowances for such improvements will be concentrated in the one building this year, he said, but both he and Eyman agree that Beeghly needed to be cleaned and painted. "Most of these walls hadn't been painted since '63 when they built the place," said Eyman.

Eyman believes that because of this new organization and the use of data bases for indexing, Beeghly may be able to house Juniata's books and periodicals for as long as the school exists. The only problems Eyman sees are that data bases do not allow for browsing and that such off-sight storage seems inappropriate for fiction books. "No one wants to curl up with a computer terminal and read Dickens on a cold winter's night," Eyman quipped.

Eyman professed that the problem of how to move the books from the library to the gym and back is "interesting — if you like a puzzle." He remarked that the disorientation caused by the construction taxed the library staff, the physical plant staff, and the students. Public service director Celene Seymour declared she was very glad the construction was almost over. "Librarians, as a general rule, like to live ordered lives," Eyman stated. "I guess that's why we became librarians."

by Dave Lehmann

In a couple of days, most of us will be home until after New Years. While we are home, we will decide to do something that we do every year: make a New Year's resolution. This year's resolutions will probably be the same as the resolutions that we have made for the last three or four years. Why? Because we seldom stick to the resolutions we make for a year.

Resolutions usually fall into the quitting category; we promise to quit something. These are tough resolutions to keep. The reason we practice an activity regularly usually stems from us liking to do this activity, and we have difficulty in quitting something that we enjoy doing. It would be easy to quit drinking cod liver oil if we don't like to drink it, but this sort of resolution holds no value.

I remember a New Year's Eve four years ago when I promised never to drink a beer again. I swore never to open a bottle, go to a bar, or even whistle the Budweiser theme again. You could have handed me an icy bottle of Bass Ale (my favorite brew), and I would have poured it onto the floor without a grimace. Drinking disgusted me then. The smell of beer made my stomach play hopscotch; the sight of it made my eyes water with hatred. However, two days later I was sitting in a bar drinking a warm Pabst. This shouldn't surprise you if you realize the physical state that I was in when I made my resolution. I had been drinking beer all night and was well on my way to a two day hangover.

The following year, I decided to make a resolution that I could keep. Time had come, I thought, for me to stop cursing when I became annoyed. From January 1 on, I would never utter a nasty word regardless of how upset I became. This wouldn't be that difficult, I prophesized; limiting my own language only meant that I used some self-control.

Driving to a New Year's Eve party at a friends town-house, I felt reborn. My soul seemed to be white-washed by the thrill of my upcoming self-control. I pulled into a parking space, got out of my red Fairmount, and began to follow the sidewalk to my friend's front door. I hadn't walked more than ten feet when a white VW bug hopped the curb and ran over my foot. I curled my lips in and clamped my teeth down on my tongue to insure myself of not spitting out a foul expression. The drunken man driving the VW jumped out of his car and gave me a tongue thrashing for getting in his way while he was trying to pull out.

After apologizing for startling the man, I hopped to the party. I greeted the host and crawled over to the punch bowl to get a glass of pain reliever for my flattened foot. Unfortunately, I never received my drink. Just when I reached for the ladle, a tall curvy blonde in a white gown that left little to the imagination, accidentally bumped the punch bowl, and it departed company from the table. The punch never stained the carpet though; it all landed on my new blue suit instead. The host told me that he was shocked at how poor my manners had become and that he never expected me to hog all the punch.

The rest of the evening was uneventful except for the one fellow who got mad at a friend and threw a perfect left hook. His friend ducked, and the punch was blocked by my jaw. This didn't bother me much though because I figured that since I already had to go to the hospital to get my foot set, wiring my jaw shouldn't be any extra problem.

By the time the clock read midnight, and the year was indeed new, I was in a wonderful mood. When a friend smiled and wished me the best of luck in the coming year, I told him exactly what I thought of the old one in language that would cause a child-molester to blush. Despite not keeping my resolution, I felt much better.

Scanning back through all the New Year's Eve promises that I've made, I can't remember one that I've kept for even a week. This year's resolution will make up for all those broken promises; I resolve not to make any more resolutions. This promise will be easy to stay honest with.

Trinidad's Best Music

The artistic excellence of Hugh Borde's World Famous Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band was featured at Juniata College's Oller Hall on Dec. 15 at 8:15 p.m.

The band, which has toured with Liberace and Sergio Franchi, has won numerous awards including a 1972 Grammy Award for their gold album, "Liberace Presents,"and the national Hummingbird Medal Award from their native Trinidad. They were also winners at the 1964 Steelband Music Festival in Trinidad, and have presented two command performances for Queen Elizabeth II of England, along with command performances for two United States presidents. Their television appearances include such major shows as Ed Sullivan, Mike Douglas and David Frost. Rounding out their accomplishments are extensive appearances at state fairs, colleges, major hotels and concert halls.

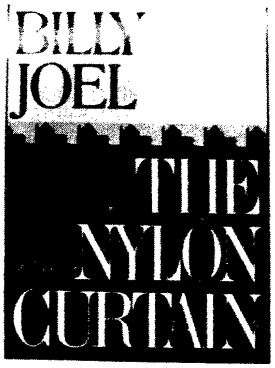
Their performance featured a repetoire of music ranging from classical to rock and roll played on steel oil drums. It also included exciting Calypso and Reggae numbers highlighted by native dancing and chanting.

Hugh Borde, maestro of the band, is a pioneer in steel band music. He had been active in it since 1942 and was one of the founders of the steel band movement in 1950. He served as vice president of this organization for three years and was granted a Kentucky Colonel Award for his "outstanding musical performances throughout the U.S.A."

Vocals for the band are done by The Buzzing Bee, Trinidad's National Calypso Queen runner-up and the new Reggae sensation, Emile.

Steel band music was born following World War II when the price of instruments was high and money was scarce. It was discovered that abondoned oil drums could be used to play Calypso music. This lowly beginning has grown into a highly respected and widely acclaimed style of music.

Hot Wax



by Adam Schlagman

Billy Joel has always been an adequate performer. He had the potential to be a fine performer, but too often he became overwhelmed with an excessively dramatized self-pity that completely destroyed his blue-collar cause. Songs like "Captain Jack" are not without good intent, but the fact is that the song's very essence is based solely on self-pity and not a more legitimate theme. Over the years, however, Joel has developed as a lyricist as well as an artist, and with the release of The Nylon Curtain, Joel has compiled his best effort to date. Gone is the "housewife" music that plagued many of his earlier albums, and gone is the frivolous nature of much of Joel's secondary work.

On The Nylon Curtain, Billy Joel has finally performed to the best of his potential. I believe there are three songs on the record which stand out as some of the best pop material scored this year. The record's opener, "Allentown", is a marvelous number which paints a mighty grim picture of a blue-collar industrial city. Far from the frivolousness of Glass Houses, "Allentown" is flooded with an insightful realism that I never would have expected of Billy Joel. Additionally, the song is important artistically for Joel in that it sees him escaping from suburban New York and making music on more of a universal level. The American dream is having a tough time of it, and "Allentown" paints, beautifully, the plight of the sons and daughters of the World War II veterans who gave us the factories in Allentown. It is not a bitter song, but "Allentown" is a sad song, as are most of today's topical works.

"Goodnight Saigon" is the best song Billy Joel has done to date. Joel's voice sounds so strong and so pained that one has to feel the sincerity behind the words. "And we would all go down together", "we" meaning every soldier who lost his life in Vietnam, climaxes the song. The line pieces together the images which Joel offers along the way; the letters home that were never written, listening to Doors tapes, Bob Hope and Playboy, and smoking hash to make the days slightly more bearable. "Goodnight Saigon" beams with unity and camaraderie. It affords respect and sympathy for all who fought in Vietnam without being superficial. The song captures the heart and soul of the problem, and ends with the ominous sounds of the helicopter blades that will carry men off to the Vietnams of the future. "Goodnight Saigon" rocks with realism and emotion; it's descriptiveness is remarkably touching. It might be worth the price of the album just to have this one song.

"Pressure" has been receiving a great deal of radio airplay as it is the albums most top-forty oriented song; it is also one of the record's best. It draws a very clear picture of the middle-class motivation. One can almost see the house with its tailored hedges and the broken tricycle in the driveway. An ode to suburbia. Inside the house, Mom is watching the soaps and gossiping on the phone. "Pressure" is about keeping up with the Joneses. Plastic motivations and paper dixie cups in the bathroom. The kids watch Mr. Rodgers and take clarinet lessons, but Dad, he's got to deal with the pressure, Maintaining status and improving the externals at every juncture.

Hence we have The Nylon Curtain. I believe the name was well chosen by Joel and may be interpreted in the following manner. It is the curtain which we wear to conceal our real selves, a veil of pretentiousness to hide or alter our true nature. In the 80's more so than in the previous three decades, we have taken to putting these nylon curtains around ourselves. An obvious example are the punkers whose nondescript expressions on their faces and angry attitudes directed at nothing in particular serve the purpose of concealing their own personalities. Wearing a Mohawk doesn't mean a thing, and if you think it does, you're just an imposter. You're wearing a nylon curtain, and that is the underlying theme of this album. To strip away the air of insecurity that surrounds us, to reveal rather than conceal ourselves, because what we conceal is the truth, and all that it is hidden by is a nylon shroud which can be so easily stripped away.

Adam's Picks & Pans

by Adam Schlagman

1. Another Grey Area — Graham Parker: A combination of everything good and traditional that rock and roll had to offer this year. Perhaps the record that got me through this year of the synthesizer invasion. If indeed The Clash are the new Who for the 80's, then Graham Parker has to be the new Stones. Parker is real R&B for the 80's, uncompromising and busting with soul . . . don't miss out.

2. The Envoy — Warren Zevon: Easily the best recording that Zevon has done since his debut album. Realizing that he is no longer L.A.'s bad-ass is the best turn that Zevon's career could have taken. The song "Charlie's Medicine" is a return to the form that produced material like "Carmelita" and "Hasten Down the Wind." The Envoy is a must for all Zevon fans, as the album improves with every listen and will certainly earn him a spot on Mohammed's Radio.

3. The Blue Mask — Lou Reed: Brilliant. This record gets better every single time I hear it. From rocks most complex mind comes this gem of an album that has gone virtually unnoticed. Too bad. Musically, it is an impressive album with Reed himself playing half of the guitar. Lyrically, the album takes time, but keep listening; it's worth the wait. It's music for the veteran listener.

4. Love Over Gold — Dire Straits: Making Movies was one heck of a tough act to follow, and Love Over Gold is a noble project. The songs are rather long making airplay difficult, but in a time where groups feel compelled to write two and a half minute ditties, Love Over Gold is an even more ambitious effort. Art over form is vastly more important to me than the commercial appeal of the album. Mark Knopfler continues to establish his name as one of the best guitarists in the business. With a more experienced producer, this could have been a classic album. I'm looking forward to a Dire Straits tour and maybe a live album.

5. Nebraska — Bruce Springsteen: If I hear one more complaint that Springsteen can't sing I may flip out. Of course he can't sing, but then neither could Bob Dylan or Chuck Berry. I find his voice perfectly adequate, and as far as Nebraska is concerned there should be no argument. Springsteen's apocalyptic picture of America is the most startling and moving since Woody Guthrie and The Weavers. To dismiss the music on this album by virtue of its lack of external beauty is simply close-minded and pigheaded. Easily one of the year's ten best.

6. Combat Rock — The Clash: While it may not be the best Clash record, Combat Rock established The Clash not only as the versatile group thay they always have been, but as the marketable band that they now are. Riding the crest of "Rock the Casbah" and "Should I Stay or Should I Go", the Clash have sold a great many new records and bought a great many new fans. Additionally, they are still making the music that they like without selling out to their longtime fans. Still very much a political and progressive punk band, it is hoped that the success of Combat Rock will inspire some new fans to check out some of the older Clash material. You will be pleasantly surprised, in fact, you might even like some of the music that your mothers told you to stay away from.

7. Tonight I'm Yours — Rod Stewart: The best work that Rod has done in years. He recaptures much of his early sensitivity and his singing has never sounded better. Moreover, the new band that Stewart assembled here is the best one to back him up in nearly ten years. "Just Like a Woman" is excellent, as is Paul Carrack's "How Long". It's good to have you back, Rod, apology accepted.

8. Imperial Bedroom — Elvis Costello: Costello's masterpiece as a singer and a songwriter, however, I found him more effective as a rock and roller. The music lacks that old familiar Elvis punch, but the lyrics more than fill the void. I find it difficult to place this album as one of Costello's very best, yet by virtue of the songwriting alone, this album is one of the year's ten best.

9. It's Hard — The Who: Yea, I know it's hard, but it's also been hard filling in these last few spaces of the year's ten best. Granted this is a very good album, but it is not everything that it was hyped up to be. The filler by John Entwistle was less than adequate and Kenny Jones is not maniac enough to inspire greatness in the rest of the band. All that aside, the album is a fine one. The songs, "Cry if You Want", "I've Known No War", and "Eminence Front" are the best that The Who have done since Who Are You. The band is still an effective communicator and their politics are just as universal. The Who has long been one of the primary movers in the music industry and perhaps Chuck Berry's most powerful sons. It's Hard does no injustice to that reputation. Face Dances did.

10. Lone Rhino — Adrian Belew: A man who obviously has a great deal of fun making records, something generally undetectable these days, witness for example the new Asia album. It sounds like those guys were really in great pain making their '82 debut. Belew on the other hand sounds like a man who truly loves playing his drums and play them he does. Belew, who has played in the past with people like Zappa, Fripp, and David Byrne, wails on his newest effort. Quite obvious is the Hendrix influence which sounds ominous on the howling feedback which runs rampant throughout the album. This is an album free of pretentiousness and the enthusiasm that it affords is unparalleled by any other recording done this year. Lone Rhino is an exciting new album and one which should not be ignored.

Biblical Lecture

A biblical view of the person was the topic of Juniata College's Dec. 13 J. Omar Good Lecture presented by Dr. C. Stephen Evans, associate professor of philosophy and psychological studies at Wheaton College and Wheaton College Graduate School, Illinois.

The lecture, "Towards a Biblical View of the Person: Between Reductionism and Self-Deification," was held at 8:15 p.m. in the faculty lounge, Ellis College Center.

Evans' areas of specialization include 19th century philosphy, philosophy of religion, phenomenology and existentialism, philosophy of the human sciences and philosphy of the mind. He is the author of four books and numerous articles, papers and book reviews which have appeared in such publications as "International Journal for Philosophy and Religion," "Christian Scholar's Review," "Man and World" and "The Southern Journal of Philosophy."

Tribe Ends Slide at Five

Grab two wins after 0-5 start

by Andy Berdy

After dropping their fifth straight decision to the Royals of Scranton, the Indians picked up two home wins over Gettysburg and Messiah on the week.

The Tribe pulled out a 69-68 thriller over the Falcons of Messiah on Saturday. After jumping out to a 10-point lead, the Indians went into the locker room with a 40-32 edge.

JC shot 55 percent from the field, but their 27 turnovers allowed the Falcons to cut the lead and go up by one with less than three minutes to play. The lead see-sawed until Mark Rucinski sank a pair of free throws, giving Juniata a 69-68 lead.

Messiah had a last opportunity to win it and Dave Barnett scored on a baseline drive, but he was called for stepping on the end-line.

Rucinski topped all scorers with 24 points and led the Tribe with eight rebounds. Dan Feruck added 16 and Jeff Ostrowski 10 in the second Juniata win.

In another one point squeaker, the Indians stopped the Gettysburg Bullets 77-76. JC led by seven at the half and built a 16-point lead before seeing it wither to just one. But the Tribe hung on with some more clutch free throws to pick up their first win of the year.

The Juniata scoring was balanced, with Rucinski netting 16, John Voler 12, and Paul Kardish, Lee Hudzicki and Feruck all chipping in 11 apiece. Rucinski again led all rebounders with nine.

The Indians opened the three-game homestand with Scranton, dropping a 88-71 decision to the nationally-ranked Royals.

JC hung with the Royals in the first half. Keeping the turnovers down to just 11, Juniata was down by only two at intermission. But the Royal shooting improved and their height controlled the boards, allowing them to build a decisive lead.

The Royals got 23 points from Mickey Banas and 16 from Scranton head coach Bob Bessoir's son, Bill. Feruck was tops for the Indians with 14. Kardish added 12 while co-captains Andy Witmer and Hudzicki netted 10 each.

The Tribe showed that they could win the close game but coach Dan Helm is still concerned with the team's consistency and turnovers, as they look to rebound from an 0-5 start.

In their last contest before Christmas break, The Indians take on Susquehanna tonight in Memorial Gymnasium.

Indians Fourth at NCAAs

Ladies fall to USCD and Sonoma

by App

The women's basketball team lost their first game of the season last Saturday at home to a strong Grove City team by a score of 78-53. The loss dropped their record to 2-1. The Lady Indians were also scheduled to play Wilson College last week, but the game was cancelled due to contract difficulties.

On Saturday the Indians hung close throughout most of the first half, but Grove City spurted near the end of the half to take an 11-point lead, 38-27, into the locker room. Grove City quickly increased their lead at the outset of the second half, and the Indians couldn't recover.

The ladies were paced by Becky Rhodes who had team highs of 17 points and eight rebounds, and Ellen Fasnacht who added 12 points. For Grove City, Jody Imbrie, who led the nation in scoring last year, had a game high of 34 points.

Coach Nancy Latimore felt the team was hurt by too many turnovers and a dominance in rebounding by Grove City.

Lady Roundballers Drop Their First

by Tracy Catanese

The Juniata women's volleyball team has finished its sixth season under the leadership of Coach Larry Bock, and it is undoubtedly one of which they should be very proud.

The Lady Indians amassed a 43-5 record during the 1982 season and accomplished many individual and team tasks along the way to the Div. III Nationals.

At LaJolla, California, the home of the 1981 NCAA Div. III Championship University of California at San Diego team, JC suffered through a tough weekend. Their volleyball talents weren't quite up to par as they played two very capable teams and came up short in both matches.

On Friday evening JC was defeated by UCSD, who was the nationally ranked first place team going into the tourney, by scores of 3-15, 3-15, 6-15. The Lady Indians had a bad night, committed many passing errors and were unable to execute successful offensive attacks. On Saturday evening JC played Sonoma for the consolation match and was defeated 8-15, 6-15, 15-10, 15-13, 7-15. The statistics for this match were much better than those for the previous night, but they just weren't typical of Juniata volleyball.

Claudia Tweardy led the JC serving department with nine aces and Sue Barker had the highest serving accuracy percentage with 13% and no errors. Tracey DeBlase's passing ratio was 19% and Sue MacLachlan led the hitters with 20 kills and a 27% kill ratio. Barker had two stuffed blocks and Peggy Evans assisted on two blocks.

Of the 244 Div. III teams, the standings at the end of the NCAA National Championship Tournament left LaVerne (29-10) in first, UCSD (23-15) second, Sonoma (24-11) third, and Juniata fourth.

In addition to the team being among the final four, two Juniata players received national recognition as they were named to the Div. III All-American Team. Six All-Americans are chosen in each division on the basis of their overall season performances. JC senior co-captains Sue Barker and Claudia Tweardy became two worthy recipients of this award.

Coach Bock commented on the outcome of the weekend in good taste. He stated that, "It was just not going to happen this weekend. It wasn't our time to do well." He continued to say, ". . . we will live with it and next year we will try to do better."

The coaches appreciate the fact that their team was determined to play volleyball throughout both weekend matches. In the end they lost to very good teams, but Bock commented that on Assistant Coach Priscilla Gibboney's and his behalf, "We've got a team we wouldn't trade for anyone along the way."

The team will be saying goodbye to four seniors, each which has had a distinguished volleyball career at Juniata, and has helped establish Bock's 168-34 record over six seasons. Included in this group are co-captains Barker and Tweardy, MacLachlan, and 1981 All-American Colleen Irelan. Each of these players is to be commended and in Bock's words, "We all owe them a great deal for all they have done for Juniata volleyball. They are most responsible for what the program is right now." He believes that "Everything the team does in the future will be a legacy of this and past years." He also has good people to carry on what these seniors have started.

With regard to this season, the team has accomplished many things. The team titles include first in the following tournaments: Army, Juniata Classic, Naval Academy Invitational, Washington Invitational, Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC's), and second in the Mansfield Invitational. Also, many of the individual players who worked together to make this a memorable season were named to various all-tourney teams.

The 1982 JC volleyball team should be proud of this season's accomplishments. The ladies are a team which will be remembered for trying their best during each game they played. In the coaches' eyes, as well as those of their many supporters, "They're champions regardless of where the last tournament ended."

$4.5 million Raised for Sports Center

Assures $250,000 from Kresge Foundation

The successful conclusion of Juniata College's $4.5 million Sports+Recreation Center capital campaign was announced today by President Frederick M. Binder.

"The $4.5 million fund raising goal has been met, assuring receipt of the $250,000 Challenge Grant issued by the Kresge Foundation in July, 1981, when ground was broken for the facility," Dr. Binder said at a press conference held on campus.

The president said that the Sports+Recreation Center phase of the Century II Campaign raised a total of $4,857,499.29 in cash and pledges. Of that figure, the largest pledge totals came from alumni ($1.25 million) and members of the college's Board of Trustees ($2.1 million). Other major pledges came from foundations ($412,100); friends ($275,085); businesses and corporations ($204,878); bequests and other gifts ($185,926); faculty, staff and students ($132,850); organization funds ($35,000); and parents ($29,820).

"There are literally thousands of individuals and groups who deserve a sincere vote of thanks for their support," Dr. Binder said. "The Campaign Leadership team under the direction of Honorary Chairman Edwin L. Kennedy of New York City and General Chairman Henry H. Gibbel of Lititz, did an excellent job. These gentlemen, and all members of the Leadership Team, spent countless hours working on this project. For that, everyone at Juniata is very grateful."

The president also praised the staff of the college's Development Office for a job well done. "The Development Office is the front line of any campaign and once again, they have performed magnificently. Raising $4.8 million is not an easy task, and I thank them for their hard work and dedication," Dr. Binder said.

"Certainly the Kresge Foundation deserves our vote of thanks for its support and confidence. This Challenge Grant is very important to Juniata and served as a prime factor in the success of the campaign," the president added.

The new structure contains a six-lane, 25 meter swimming pool, four racquetball/handball courts, weight training room, multi-pur-

J.E.C. Tax Help

by Jason Roberts

The Juniata Executive Club is offering help to students having to file income tax returns and refund forms this year.

The JEC is working in cooperation with the IRS's Voluntary Income Tax Assistance program which the IRS offers to colleges across the nation, according to Brenda Bradt, Chairperson of Accounting for the JEC. Each year the IRS's Pittsburgh office sends a representative to instruct JEC members, most of whom have taken Juniata's tax accounting course, about the technical points of tax returns.

The JEC will also offer its services to the elderly and low-income residents of Huntingdon at the DeForrest apartments every Tuesday from 7:30 to 9:30 P.M. The program service will be offered beginning next week and continue until returns are due April 15.

Student hours will be every Wednesday from 7 to 9 P.M. in the Ellis Hall Blue Room.

Bradt encourages students to begin collecting their W-2 and W-4 forms and to come to Ellis Hall for assistance with returns and refunds. "Even if your refund is for a small amount, we can help you claim it. It's your money," Bradt said.

Binder's Indian Grinders Debut

No one could call Small Business Management a "tasteless" class this term. The 400 level course has been busy organizing their Binder's Indian Grinders project. And tasteless it is not.

Binder's Indian Grinders is a business venture dreamed up, planned, financed, and executed solely by the thirteen students in S.B.M. After three years of business theory, this is finally a chance to use some of that knowledge in an almost real-life situation. "It's not boring, and it's a good opportunity to apply what you've learned," says Karena Stellar ('83).

All thirteen class members are "partners"; this company has no president. Marketing, Finance, Production, and Personnel are the four departments that comprise Binder's Indian Grinders. Students can rotate from department to department to get a different perspective — something not easily done in the "Real World of Business."

Everyone in the class donated fifteen dollars as initial capital and, when more funds were needed, a loan of $100 was taken out. With a little luck, an abundance of good management, and lots of hungry J.C. students, Grinders should break even profitwise.

Binder's Indian Grinders has advantages over all the hoagie shops in the area. No minimum order is required, and deliveries are within a half-hour. Orders are being taken from 8:30-11:30 p.m. and deliveries are from 9-12:00 p.m.

Right now, a ham and cheese sub and an Italian sub are the menu specialties. The business hopes to expand the menu line to include other selections like soda, cupcakes, and other varieties of subs. So next time the midnight munchkins strike, fend them off with one of Binder's Indian Grinders.

Simpson Performs in Oller

The music of Handel, Mozart, Puccini and Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" was performed in Juniata College's Oller Hall on Jan. 10 by award winning soprano Joy Simpson. The concert was part of Juniata's 1982-83 Artist Series.

Since winning the coveted Naumburg Foundation 50th anniversary vocal competition in 1976, Joy Simpson has been a guest soloist with the Minnesota Orchestra, and the National, Baltimore and Pittsburgh symphonies.

Miss Simpson made her New York recital debut in Alice Tully Hall in 1976, and has since toured extensively throughout North America, England, India and the Soviet Union. In her native Philadelphia, she is music director and soloist of the weekly television series "Time of Deliverance" which is broadcast internationally.

Miss Simpson has had extensive training and experience in a wide variety of music. She began her vocal studies with Dorothy DiScala at the Academy of Vocal Arts in Philadelphia, winning a full scholarship to Temple University where she studied with Robert Page and George McKinley. She continued her studies with Mme. Marion Freschl at the Julliard School.

Named an "Outstanding Young Woman of America" in 1975, she has maintained the ties to her artistic roots in sacred music, and is much in demand for performances at religious conferences and conventions. In addition to her performing career, Miss Simpson is a successful choral conductor, an accredited teacher of black studies and an accomplished pianist.

During her career, Miss Simpson has been the recipient of many prestigious awards. After her second Naumberg Award recital in Alice Tully Hall, the "New York Times" said, "Her singing is largely seamless . . . Miss Simpson's way with music was dramatic and emotionally generous."

Another Artist Series performance, this one by the Central Pennsylvania Youth Ballet, will be held in Oller Hall Sunday, Jan. 30. The performance time, originally scheduled for 3 p.m., has been changed to 1:30 p.m.

New Complex Open to All

The new Sports and Recreation Center is now completed and the question which remains in some of the students' and faculty's minds is whether or not the complex was worth its price tag.

There are some people on campus who would answer no. Many of these people feel that the 4.5 million dollars spent on the gym should have been spent elsewhere.

To the Juniatian, however, the answer seems clearly to be that the gym is worth it. The new gym offers a greater diversity of activities with better facilities. The new racquetball/handball courts are being used extensively already. In fact, it is tough to get a court without going early the preceding morning to reserve it. The sauna is also a much utilized addition, as it is rarely seen empty.

Intramurals have also been expanded with the expansion of the gym. The larger facilities allow for a larger amount of sports. There are over 900 students involved in the winter intramural programs. That is about 70% of the student body. The participation is there because the facilities allow for it. For those who are not in intramurals the gym is no longer a "closed" place. There is now room for non-intramural athletes to exercise inside the gym, unlike in years past when one would either play IM's or sit and watch. The gym's facilities are now open to a wider range of students.

The new facilities may also help to eliminate or at least dull the blahs of winter term. Students will not be forced into always playing basketball or running in circles. There are more diverse activities in which they may take part, such as the added intramurals of swimming, racquetball, etc. The diversity will help to break up the doldrums. When you get bored with one activity there are plenty of others to get involved in. The Juniatian feels that the new gym will be a positive force in helping it's students to better cope with college.

Along Muddy Run

by Ellek

No man or woman who walks the face of the Juniata campus is complete without a Sports and Recreation Center procedures manual. When she came back from Christmas break expecting to find more literature from the Goodbee Pecan Plantations, instead she found "The Manual." When she opened it and saw the "a," "b" and "c" of floor plans, the "statement of purpose," the "food-beverage-tobacco policy," and "towels and locks" (the Arabic version of bagels and locks), she was confused. By the time she reached Appendix A on page six, she was lost.

She was consumed by a fever — one which was sweeping campus — a regional strain of Noojim Fever — and she decided that to expose herself to the cause, no matter how nauseous it would make her, would give her future immunity. After memorizing the policies and procedures and reciting them aloud to her roommates, she headed to the Sports and Recreation Center. Halfway there, however, she realized she had forgotten her I.D., violating a policy on page one of "The Manual." As it was 13° out and she lived three blocks away, she decided to chance it.

When she arrived at the "Center" a guard was standing at the door, both billy club and walkie-talkie strapped to his hips. The initials "J.C." were sewn across his left shirt pocket and across his baseball cap. She breathed a sigh of relief being she knew him.

"Hey, you're just the person I wanted to see . . . did you do this calc problem?" he asked.

She looked at his book then explained how to do the problem.

"Thanks," he replied smiling. "Hey, it wasn't your apartment making all the noises above us last night, was it?" he asked. She shook her head.

"Nah, I didn't think so. You guys aren't troublemakers." Politely she smiled, then took a step to the hall.

"Uh, could I see some I.D.?"

"But you know me . . . I'm in your class . . . I live above you . . ."

"It's school policy . . . I'm just following procedures . . ."

"But . . ."

"Look," he said, pointing to the billy club, "don't make me have to use this." Slowly she walked the three blocks back to her apartment.

When she was satisfied with the familiar I.D. fondled in her pocket, she attempted her entrance again. "I.D.?" asked her friendly guard, all four teeth and two fangs showing. She pulled her identity from her pocket.

As she took her second first step, he stopped her. "I can't let you in," he pointed at her sneakers. "It is strongly advised that you carry your shoes in," he paused, "and I can't stress how strong that strongly is."

"But what did you expect me to wear from my apartment to here with my sweats?" she nearly wailed.

After analyzing her navy blue sweats with the hole in the knee and her grass-stained tube socks, he replied, "Well, moccasins would have looked o.k. — in cream, maybe."

Outside, just around the corner of the building, stood a guy in a long beige trench coat, listening to her mild expletives.

"Psssst," he whispered, "Don't be discouraged. Is it the blonde one or the one still waiting for a moustache?" he asked.

"The blonde one," she heard herself answering, frustrated.

"Well, in that case . . ." he opened his coat to reveal several pairs of tennis shoes and plastic tooth brushes strung to the lining. "I can rent you a pair of these for 75¢ an hour."

"I'm not going bowling," she replied, "I just want to run."

"If it was the other guy I could rent you a toothbrush and you could clean out your soles, but this guy won't look the other way. It's a good deal — they're white-soled. You need white soles, you know."

Letters to the Editor

Editor,

I would like to use your newspaper to thank a student for going out of the way to be honest. During the holiday break, I received an envelope in the mail with cash and a note stating the cash was extra change the student had received when purchasing Madrigal Dance tickets. It is always encouraging to see someone going out of the way to be honest. I wish the student had signed the note so I could personally express our appreciation.

Sincerely,
Wayne Justham

Dear Editor,

The Student Government Student Concerns Committee is disappointed that of the 40% of the student body polled in the College Issue Questionnaire only 34.3% responded to the three campus issues that we covered.

According to questions about Two-Term vs. Three-Term Academic Year, an overwhelming majority (84.4%) were for keeping the three-term system. Comments showed us that this was a reason for choosing to attend Juniata.

Students were fairly evenly divided on alternatives to the Plus-Minus Grading System: continuing present system, 26.1%; making it optional for every class, 28.9%; using a different scale (no minus), 26.7%; and abolishing the system entirely, 13.3%.

Concerning the Tuition Increase, a slight majority felt that the increase was not economically justified. However, a majority of those polled felt that they could return to Juniata, despite the increase. One main suggestion for decreasing costs was a better utilization of campus heating.

Our tabulation is still in process because we feel the need for a more accurate response from our sampling. We are waiting for students to return unanswered questionnaires. Eventually we hope to report to the administration that at least fifty percent of those polled answered. To us, every opinion counts.

Sincerely,
Student Government
Student Concerns Committee

Dear Editor,

I am writing in reply to an article summarizing a National Center for Educational Statistics study (NCES) appearing in the December 16, 1982 Juniatian under the headline, "Does College Pay?" The article cites the finding that men who didn't attend college earned more than college graduates, seven years later. For women the finding was less "hazardous." Women holding college degrees, according to the study, earned "substantially more" than women who did not attend college.

"Future Habits" Sells Out

by Larry Schmidt

Super drum work and funky bass riffs characterized Saturday's college debut performance of "Future Habits" in Tussey-Terrace's Lounge.

The band, composed of guitarist Dan "Lightning Licks" Labes, keyboardist Chris "Machine Fingers" Remetz, bassist Alfred "Thunder Thumbs" Jackson and Juniata's own Carl "Butch" Pavolic on drums enjoyed a sell-out crowd of funkers.

The band performed many original numbers including "Connie was a D.J.," "Espionage Love Affair," and their hit tune, "Perculator." Their music was highly original and defied rigid classification. Rock, jazz, new English wave, and of course funk were all discernible elements of "Future Habits" repertoire. Their original tunes and even their reproductions of songs reflected the individual talent and diverse musical preferences of each band member.

"Future Habits" performed a whopping 32 songs to the absolute delight of the crowd. Butch Pavolic felt the event was most successful despite a shaky start when a speaker toppled over, causing a brief unscheduled break during the first set.

The highlight of the evening occurred as the band broke into their tune, "The One O'Clock Club." Butch describes the number as the band's "theme song." The audience response was exceptional as everyone participated in a line dance.

All of the band members collaborate in writing their music. "One member gets an idea and we all work on it and expand on it," Pavolic remarked.

"Future Habits" said they would be happy to return to Juniata for another show during the spring. They have engagements scheduled at the University of Penn, Tyler and Drexler University in the near future and anticipate continued success.

The event was sponsored by the Cloister R.H.A.

Circle K Sponsors Marathon

by Cinny Cooper

On January 21-22 Circle K, a campus service organization, will hold a marathon for multiple sclerosis, a yearly event and the highlight of the club's activities for the year.

Students will play volleyball, dance, rock in rocking chairs, and play card and board games for 24 hours beginning 8:00 Friday night. There will also be a disc jockey playing music for the entire time to provide entertainment and raise money. All of the money raised will go to the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

All of the estimated 100 participants will receive MS t-shirts. Other prizes will be awarded on the basis of the most sponsors collected, the longest lasting participant, and other as yet undetermined categories.

The event will be held in Juniata's new gymnasium, and all students are welcome to come and watch. Refreshments donated by the community will be available for all participants.

Thursday night, Jan. 13, at 7:00, there will be a meeting in Alumni Hall for all participants.

Stationery Sale

Colorful stationery featuring an authentic Pennsylvania German fraktur design is being offered for sale by the Friends of the Juniata College Library.

The design is copied from a birth certificate of Maria Meiern, dated 1765. The certificate is one of several pieces of original Pennsylvania German printing and art in the Juniata College collection.

The stationery is available at the Juniata College Book Store located in the basement of Ellis Hall, and at the circulation desk in Juniata's L.A. Beeghly Library.

Out & About

by Sheila Squier

This week's "Out and About" could not be more appropriately named. The original destination of my companions and myself was the Farmer's Table located in McAlveys Fort. In mouth-watering anticipation we pulled into the restaurant parking lot only to feast our eyes on a sign saying; "Open Feb. 2." After the initial letdown passed, we decided to head for Petersburg under the assumption that we would come across a decent restaurant there or en route. (Lesson no. 1: never assume anything). We pulled into Petersburg with the radio blaring, to drown out the growling of our stomachs, and stopped at a quaint grocery store to get the local lowdown of where to eat. We were directed to a "steak house" down the block: our spirits were lifted and away we went.

The exterior of the Logan House Lounge looked promising so we hurried inside. (Lesson no. 2: never judge a book by its cover). The interior consisted of a bar along one wall, with booths and tables hugging the remaining three walls. The center of the room was dominated by a pool table — typical decor of most steak houses! The other form of entertainment for diners was a large screen T.V. with the sound turned off. Dim light was provided by stained plastic (glass would look tacky in a place like this) PBR lamps over the tables. All this might have caused others to quickly leave before being noticed, but hunger drove us on.

Shirley, our waitress, eventually brought us menus of high quality construction paper. It didn't take long to decide what goodies to order since the choices were few. We sent Shirley, who doubled as the cook, off to the kitchen to prepare a Cheese Steak ($1.50), a 7-inch Pizza ($1.95), and a Shrimp Basket ($3.95). The remaining six selections we turned down were: Roast Beef Sandwich, Fish Filet, Ham and Cheese, Meatball Sub, Chicken Basket and Strip Steak Dinner ranging in price from $1.50 to $7.95.

We soon discovered the food wasn't the only item available in limited selection when we attempted to order drinks with dinner. After successfully passing the, is-that-really-her-picture-on-the-ID-test, Shirley told us they serve mixed drinks. We still don't know what they are. When her first two requests of a wine spritzer and an amaretto sour were denied, my companion quickly decided on the red wine suggested by our waitress. I ordered a Genessee (only Genny and PBR on tap), and my second companion settled for water after she discovered the Logan Inn discriminates against dieters by not serving TAB.

As we waited for our meal to arrive, we watched the T.V. screen and practiced lip-reading, which we thought might be necessary later due to the deafening sounds bombarding our ears each time a pool player took his shot.

When the meals arrived, we were more than ready for them. My Cheese Steak, which was technically a steak-um with cheese, would have been much more appealing hot. Obviously Shirley needs more practice synchronizing the food preparation so that everything is done at the same time.

The 7-inch pizza came on a 6-inch paper plate, but it was hot! Even though not ordered, it came with pepperoni. This must have been added as a consolation prize for not being served on a plate. The pizza was considered to deserve a rating of "good."

The Shrimp Dinner which included fries was by far the best selection of the three. It was hot, tasted like shrimp and fries, and there was a lot of it. We also ordered fried mushrooms and onion rings. Both were excellent. We suggest if you ever find yourself at the Logan Inn, go for the fried foods. Better yet, if (on some crazy whim) you decide to make a trip to this lounge, go there with the intent of drinking. The food would probably be much better when viewed from the standpoint of someone with the munchies than when viewed from the standpoint of someone desiring a meal.

Keep Red Cross ready.

Donald Fagen — The Nightfly

by Adam Schlagman

Way back, when I was just a kid, I went to a public school in Brooklyn. At this particular school, they were pretty strict about things, so, on the days that it rained we would always have recess indoors. Our vice-principal, an ugly woman with a disposition tantamount to Stalin's, would file all the kids into the auditorium. In an attempt to sedate us, the most talented kids were invited up on the stage to perform in a primitive form of talent show. Very few people usually participated because it was a really stupid idea to begin with, but one girl would always get up and sing. Definitely cut from the Annette Funicello mold, this girl would sing the same pathetic rendition of the Mickey Mouse theme song. It was some swinging time. I would sit there in that auditorium and dream of being up on that stage. With a banjo in my hands and a harmonica in my mouth, I'd be up on that stage like a seven-year-old Pete Seeger, dancin' and singin' to the delight of all of P.S.225.

Needless to say, I never learned how to play the banjo and I never made it up on stage. In fact, that girl never even learned a new song, every time it rained it was MIC...KEY, what a drag. That chick was definitely not cool. Essentially, Donald Fagen's solo album, The Nightfly, is about the same as my Pete Seeger fantasy.

In the mid-1960's, folk music was considered by many to be a progressive medium, just as jazz had always been. The Nightfly represents the fantasies entertained by Donald Fagen as he grew up in the suburbs of a northeastern city during the late fifties and early sixties.

Set to a beautifully arranged jazz tempo, The Nightfly is just what Fagen would have performed on those rainy days, although his dreams are slightly more mature than my vision of bubblegum and wax-lips for everyone. Fagen creates fantasies with beautiful and cool women at his side and others that he'll never get. Most of all, however, Fagen dreams of the nightfly, the midnight-to-six-in-the-morning time slot. During this time, a DJ can play all the progressive jazz he feels his audience needs and fills the gaps with enlightening conversation. WJAZ is an independent station; there are no commercials, nothing but talk and cool, cool jazz.

Donald Fagen usually performs with Walter Becker as part of Steely Dan. Becker is not on this album, however; I suppose Donald's fantasies are too personal to share the credits. That's alright, he's still got the same fine studio boys backing him up, and the music and production are as fine on The Nightfly as they are on any of the Dan's albums. The only thing missing is Becker's sweet guitar.

There is talk of a "New Frontier" by Fagen. After the reds "decide to push the button down," there is a vision of a world with "Lots of beer" and tall blonde women with "a touch of Tuesday Weld." They're into Brubeck on the new frontier, "he's an artist, a pioneer." I like it, I really like it. On the song "I.G.Y." Fagen really gets into his teenage utopia. "What a glorious world this will be . . . Perfect weather for a streamlined world, there'll be spandex jackets — one for everyone. What a glorious world this'll be . . . Ninety minutes from New York in Paris (more leisure time for artists everywhere) A just machine to make big decisions . . . We'll be eternally free yes and eternally young."

This sounds great Donald, but even you should know that fantasies rarely become real, for unfortunately behind every fantasy is some girl with pony tails and glasses singing MIC...KEY. I guess that means that reality is out of tune as well; it sounds like Donald Fagen thinks so.

News Briefs

WASHINGTON — President Reagan announced in his weekly radio speech that Vice-President George Bush will meet with America's European allies on a seven nation tour beginning January 30.

Bush will start his European trip in Bonn and will then travel to Berlin, the Hague, Brussels, Geneva, Rome, Paris, and London before returning to Washington Feb. 10. While in Geneva Bush will address the Committee on Disarmament. The Soviet-United States arms negotiations will resume next month in Geneva and Mr. Reagan said "a serious foundation for progress had been laid" by latest proposals on weapons from both Washington and Moscow.

LOS ANGELES — The Social Security system's financial problems are worsening as local governments and non-profit organizations drop out of the system at accelerated rates. On Dec. 31, Los Angeles County dropped out of the system. It is the largest local government to do so as of now and will cause Social Security to lose more than $130 a year.

Over the nation, more than 100 smaller counties, cities, school systems, hospitals and other non-profit organizations dropped out of the program on Dec. 31 as well, with a total Social Security loss in revenue of $250 annually. Many of the workers have worked long enough under the Social Security system and are still eligible for Social Security benefits when they retire; but, neither the employee or employer will be taxed anymore to support the system.

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency reports, after a study of the Soviet economy, that the Soviet Union has a greater ability to live without imports than possibly all other industrial countries. Chairman of the C.I.A.'s National Intelligence Council, Henry Rowen, delivered the report to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress on Dec. 1. The report suggests that American trade embargoes against the Soviet Union have only a limited effect.

— The C.I.A.'s study on the Soviet economy showed that the average Soviet diet consists of more grains and potatoes and less fish, meat and sugars than an average American diet. The average Russian consumes 3,300 calories a day compared to the average 3,520 for an American.

The value of a higher education cannot be confined to earnings seven years after high school graduation. More appropriate criteria would relate to the "quality-of-life" led by college graduates in roles not only as workers but as spouses, parents, leisurites and citizens.

Strictly on economic grounds, however, I would challenge the conclusion of the article that "college doesn't necessarily help men get higher paying jobs . . ." For one, seven years after high school is a time when a proportion of college graduates would still be enrolled in graduate or professional study and reporting modest incomes. If you've had medical expenses recently, you would know that physicians have high incomes. Second, many other studies report, time-after-time, that college graduates earn dramatically more over a lifetime than those persons not holding college degrees. It is often claimed that a college education will add as much as $250,000 to lifetime earnings (Shertzer, Career Planning, Freedom to Choose, 1977).

Related to the subject of earnings is that of placement and unemployment. We have all heard celebrated examples of persons with Ph.D.s driving cabs. I'm sure there are. The cold facts, though, are that unemployment is profoundly higher among workers without college degrees. In the late seventies, unemployment among high school drop-outs was 15%; among high school graduates 10%; and among college graduates 5%.

Does college pay? You bet.

Sincerely,
Arnold J. Tilden, Jr.

Juniatian Ads Bring Fast Result

Baker Series Begins

by Robert Riefler

A free lecture series concerning Peace and Conflict Studies will be held at Juniata this year.

The Baker Lecture Series will consist of four lectures on foreign affair topics, sponsored by the Peace and Conflicts Studies and Political Science committees.

The purpose of these lectures, says Campus Minister Andy Murray, is to "have knowledgeable people who are involved in policy decisions . . . increase our knowledge and awareness of various international areas of conflict or potential conflict."

The first lecture will be held Tuesday in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge at 8:15 p.m. Dr. Dimitre Simes, director of the Soviet and Eastern European Research Program at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, will discuss "Changes in the Soviet Union and its Impact on the United States."

Additional lectures are scheduled for Feb. 3 and March 10. The fourth lecture has not yet been scheduled.

She handed him three quarters.

Again at the door, she was stopped.

"Name me rule number five under letter "b" under section nine on page four."

Her mind frantically raced to remember. "Bathing suits are required, bathing suits are required!!" she shrieked.

"Fine," her classmate added, checking a stopwatch. "Now you've got to tell me your purpose for being here, you must sign your name here, give us your room key, and wear this beeper so we know where you are at all times." He paused. "And if you came to run, be advised that in addition to I.M.s in both gyms, the upstairs floor of the Memorial Gym is being refinished, we're letting the Honor Society kids play Yahtzee in the multi-purpose room, the 72-hour psych experiment candidates are weeping in the racquetball courts, and the football team is having orgies with the Women's Studies class in the sauna. You'll be restricted to the hall between the two doors of the laundry room. Now why are you here?"

She contemplated stabbing him with her I.D. or strangling him with her white-soled shoelaces, but it was against rule five under section eight on page nine.

Sports Rec Center Now in Use

by Kathy Novak

The expanded Sports and Recreation Center has officially been opened to the college community, with the pool being the only area not yet available for use.

The Athletic Department has distributed a procedures manual to members of the college community, indicating the guidelines for using the facility. Some of the new features include a sauna, handball/raquetball courts, a multi-purpose room and swimming pool.

The hours that the center is open are from 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. during the regular academic year. The facility is open to use by full-time students, faculty, administrators, staff, and their dependents, and also anyone obtaining proper identification cards. Varsity sports have first priority for using designated areas, followed by major campus events, and intramurals, which encompass approximately 981 students this term.

The pool is the only area which is not yet open for use, but the Athletic Department is hoping that it will be ready this Mon., according to Athletic Director Bill Berrier. Hours for using the swimming area will be posted, and announced at meals in Ellis and on V103. The area is expected to open at 7:30 a.m. for lap swimming, and also include afternoon and evening hours, but not later than 10 p.m.

The hours for use of the sauna stated in the procedures manual have been extended. The sauna will also be available after dinner, not just until 4 p.m., as previously stated. The buddy system is recommended for those who use this area.

Building security will be provided by the Athletic Department, student attendants and Campus Security. They will be requiring the proper identification for use of the facility.

The procedures manual also lists important guidelines on the guest policy, food, beverage and tobacco policy, and other rules and regulations which should be followed. Anyone with questions should refer to this manual or see someone in the Athletic Department.

A historic reproduction of the front page of the Ulster County (N.Y.) Gazette, dated January 4, 1800, has been donated to Juniata College by Edwin A. Malloy of Westport, Conn., a member of the college's Board of Trustees.

The paper's lead story on that day was the death of George Washington. Glowing tributes to the Revolutionary War hero and first President are featured elsewhere on the page, including comments from President John Adams and a poem written by "A Young Lady."

"Although we do not know the exact age of this reproduction, it is obviously quite old," said Juniata President Frederick M. Binder as he accepted the gift on behalf of the college. "Juniata has several historic documents and works of art in its possession, and this reproduction will be a great asset to our collection. On behalf of the college, I thank Ed Malloy for his generosity."

A member of the Juniata Board since 1978, Malloy is president of the Fred F. French Investing Company, Inc. of New York, N.Y. and a graduate of Harvard University.

The Ulster County Gazette was established May 5, 1798 at Kingston, N.Y. as a weekly newspaper supporting the Federalist Party. Publication continued until 1803 when the title was changed to the Ulster Gazette.

The historic reproduction will soon be on display in the Rabinowitz-Wald Room in Juniata's L.A. Beeghly Library.

Grant Aids JC Goal

A $50,000 grant from the Josiah W. and Bessie H. Kline Foundation of Harrisburg has been received by Juniata College for its new $4.5 million Sports+Recreation Center.

In making the announcement, Juniata President Frederick M. Binder said that the gift reflects the generous nature of the Kline family. "Everyone at Juniata is very grateful to the Kline Foundation for its support in making our Sports+Recreation Center become a reality. Throughout this campaign, the support of organizations like the Kline Foundation has been very helpful and rewarding," Dr. Binder said.

Without the outstanding support of organizations like the Kline Foundation, such a project could never have been completed," Dr. Binder concluded.

The Kline Foundation was established in 1952 for educational, benevolent and charitable purposes. Over the years, the Foundation has distributed millions of dollars throughout Central Pennsylvania.

Gift Certificates Flop

Some colleges, experimenting with offering gift certificates as a way of keeping enrollment up, didn't fare much better than the nation's other retailers during the holiday season.

Creighton University, the College of Charleston, Maricopa Technical Community College in Phoenix and Greenfield Community College in Massachusetts, among others, all sold gift certificates applicable towards tuition, textbooks and even cafeteria meals.

Administrators figured friends and relatives would buy the certificates for financially-struggling students.

Sales were less than brisk. Creighton only sold "about 20," while Greenfield sold 40.

Both schools blame themselves in part. "We just had the certificates out two or three weeks before Christmas," explains Greenfield business manager Henry Boucher. "Just about the time they really got off the ground, the season was over."

Maricopa offered its gift certificates in $11 denominations — the price of a credit hour — and billed them as the "best stocking stuffer a student could ask for."

Nieto Publishes

Dr. Jose C. Nieto, Mary S. Geiger professor of religion and history at Juniata College, has recently published a thoroughly revised and rewritten Spanish edition of the widely reviewed book, "Mystic, Rebel Saint: A Study of St. John of the Cross."

The 334-page Spanish edition, entitled "Mistico, Poeta, Rebelde, Santo: En Torno a San Juan de la Cruz," contains three new chapters and three new appendices, and is double its original size.

Dr. Nieto remarked, "This book is not just a translation of the 1979 English edition. The Spanish edition introduces a 'new understanding' of the poetry of St. John of the Cross, and is a contribution to literature as well as history, philosophy and theology."

In his work, Nieto focuses upon St. John the patron saint of Spanish poets, a universal figure of 16th century Spain, who is also known as the "poet of mysticism." He explores the saint's life, experiences, and thoughts in an attempt to explain his paradoxical description of St. John as a "submissive rebel."

A highlight of this book is an analysis of Dali's famous painting, "The Christ of St. John of the Cross," and the sketch which the saint drew of his vision of Christ on the cross. This analysis marks the first time a comparison of the two has been made, and allows Nieto to more fully explain the paradoxes of St. John.

Published in paperback by Fondo de Cultura Economica of Mexico, Madrid and Buenos Aires, this book also contains lectures on poetry and mysticism which Nieto delivered at the University of Salamanca, Spain, in November, 1981. The book is part of the series of "Language and Literary Studies."

The author's next effort will be a Spanish revision, in collaboration with Professor George H. Williams from Harvard University, of his "The Radical Reformation" to be published later in 1982.

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1967, Nieto received his TH.M. degree and Ph.D. from the Princeton Theological Seminary. He has published numerous articles and papers, and delivered many scholarly lectures.

His previously published books include "Juan de Valdes and the Origins of the Spanish and Italian Reformation," in both English and Spanish, and "Valdes' Two Catechisms: The Dialogue on Christian Doctrine and The Christian Instruction for Children." Along with serving as chairman of the religion department at Juniata he has also served as a minister of the United Spanish Protestant Church in Spain, and as a resident scholar at the University of Marburg, West Germany in 1981 during his sabbatical.

Because she checks her body the same way, she discovered a lump in her breast a few years ago.

She discovered it early. And these days, 85% of early breast cancers can be treated successfully.

Judy has since had reconstructive surgery, too. And she feels like herself again. Alive, vibrant, ready to get on her bike and take on the world.

Judy Lafferty is living proof of the progress we're making against cancer.

The American Cancer Society takes some credit for that progress. But credit won't finance our work.

Juniatian Ads Bring Fast Results

Many students spend more time researching how and where to buy their first cars than they do in picking a college, the president of the College Board says.

Fred Hargadon, who heads the College Board, is Stanford's dean of admissions, and who had mounted a one-man crusade recently against subjective, interpretive college guides, claims "the first purchase of an automobile is more thoroughly researched than the purchase of an education."

In an interview with the Stanford News Service, Hargadon said the subjective guidebooks treat "prospective applicants and colleges alike as fixed objects, as if the matter of selecting a college to attend were a mere matter of finding a nut to fit a bolt."

Hargadon recommends students to use the traditional objective guidebooks — Peterson's Annual Guide to Undergraduate Study, Cass and Birnbaum's Comparative Guide to Colleges, and, of course, the College Board's College Handbook — and then send away for specific college bulletins and catalogs.

The guidebook market has been flooded in recent years by subjective directories like the Yale Insider's Guide, the Selective Guide to Colleges, Everywoman's Guide, and The Black Student's Guide to Colleges.

The study indicated students' college choices are dictated more by family background and demographic characteristics than by grades.

"The building is everything we dreamed it would be and there is no doubt that the facility will greatly enhance Juniata's academic and athletic programs," the president said. Since more than 80 percent of Juniata's students participate in varsity or intramural sports, Dr. Binder noted that the new Sports+Recreation Center will be well used.

Although the building officially opened in January, Dr. Binder announced that the official dedication ceremony will take place on Juniata's Founders Day, Sunday, April 17.

GSL Requests Decline

Fewer students are taking out fewer Guaranteed Student Loans (GSLs) than last year, despite continuing worries about a shortage of student aid funds.

According to a report prepared by the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation, almost 500,000 fewer students took out GSLs from October, 1981 through last August than during the prior year.

Nationwide, students took out $2.8 billion in GSLs during the year, compared to $3.8 billion the year before.

"I think it's because students don't believe there are any GSLs available," speculated an Indiana University aid official, who said applications for GSLs appear to be down in Bloomington, too. "People may not even be bothering to apply."

In presenting the study results, New York loan agency Vice President Peter Keitel said the major reason for the decline is the "needs test" imposed October 1, 1981.

Since then, students from families earning $30,000 or more a year have had to demonstrate financial need in order to get a GSL.

College Violates Copyright Law

As part of "an ongoing crackdown" against colleges that allow students or faculty members to photocopy copyrighted materials, a publishers' group filed suit over the holidays against New York University, ten of its faculty members and a nearby copying center.

After successfully challenging several large companies and a number of independent photocopying services that cater to college campuses, the Association of American Publishers (AAP) says it now will aim at campus libraries that continue to ignore the copyright laws.

In the case of New York University — which AAP officials admit is not necessarily the worst violator of copyright laws — the association of book and magazine publishers charged certain university professors with illegally reproducing "virtual anthologies" from copyrighted textbooks and periodicals.

Ever since Congress amended the copyright laws in 1976 to specifically protect material against unauthorized photocopying, the AAP has vehemently pursued alleged violators as diverse as giant Squibb Pharmaceuticals and the relatively-small Gnomon Corporation, a Boston-based photocopying service.

NYU is the first university to be sued by the association. It may not be the last, adds spokeswoman Carol Risher.

"Back in 1979, when we first started to crack down on copyright violators, we took the position that the law was new and that we would give universities a chance to adjust and adopt new policies to comply with it," Risher explains.

"But some schools have not instituted policies at all, and many ignore the policies they do have. NYU is just the beginning of a continuing enforcement effort to get these schools to comply," she warns.

According to copyright laws, Risher says, instructors can only make copies of copyrighted material under certain extenuating circumstances.

The copied material must be brief, there must be clear evidence that the instructor did not have time to secure permission from the publisher before copying the material, and "most importantly, the copying shall not be used to create or replace purchasing the book or materials copied."

In NYU's case, she continues, instructors were having chapters of certain books photocopied regularly, often on a semester-by-semester basis, "with the clear intent of copying the materials rather than purchasing them from the publishers."

The NYU instructors, on the other hand, claim the copyright laws allow them to make multiple copies of articles for classroom use, and contend that asking students to purchase dozens of books just so they can read one or two articles from each one would be unreasonable.

Still, the suit has already sent shudders through university libraries and copy centers across the country.

At San Diego State, for instance, the privately-owned College Copy Center now requires students and instructors to fill out permission slips before photocopying lengthy or cumulative passages from books and magazines, says owner Don Freedman.

And at Ohio State University's copy center, director Debbie Gill says copy center personnel now require instructors and students to produce letters of approval from publishers before they are allowed to copy any copyrighted material.

A University of Florida student who literally fried his pet guinea pig has begun serving an unusually tough jail sentence for cruelty to animals.

UF math major George Schiro is serving 60 days and paying a $198 fine for abusing his pet Albert, who has since been taken away from him by the court.

Police arrested Schiro earlier this summer after one of Schiro's dorm neighbors reported hearing the guinea pig screaming. The neighbor, Ruth Rose, says she's heard the butterscotch-colored rodent scream in pain before, and had seen Schiro throw Albert against a wall once.

Besides putting Albert in a hot pan because the creature, according to Schiro's testimony, refused to play with him, Schiro forced the animal to take showers with him.

Albert himself, now adopted by another Gainesville family, is "happy and doing just fine," Duncan reports. "All his hair has grown back, and he comes when his name is called. He's coming out of it all very nicely."

The Florida case was the second recent instance of students disciplined for abusing animals. A Penn State fraternity was threatened with abolition last month for holding annual salamander-eating contests among its members.

Cancer strikes 120,000 people in our work force every year. Although no dollar value can ever be placed on a human life, the fact remains that our economy loses more than $10 billion in earnings every year that cancer victims would have generated. Earnings they might still be generating if they had known the simple facts on how to protect themselves from cancer.

Now you can do something to protect your employees, your company, and yourself. call your local unit of the American Cancer Society and ask for their free pamphlet, "Helping Your Employees to Protect Themselves Against Cancer." Start your company on a policy of good health today.

Intramural Action Invades New Gym

Men's I.M. B-ball Action

A. league

by John Summers

Paul "Pope" Miller poured in 20 points and ripped down 17 rebounds to power a balanced Numbnut team to a 73-33 drubbing of the G-Spotters in the IM basketball season opener Wednesday night.

The game was never really close. After G-Spotter Mike Lang opened up the scoring with a short jumper, the Numbnuts reeled off 28 unanswered points covering a span of nearly seven minutes.

Consistent rebounding on both ends of the court by Miller, Doug Wallace, and Randy Dieke enabled the Numbnuts to run with the ball which keyed the barrage of points. It was not until the 12:50 mark of the first half when Paul Bomberger, the Spotters high scorer with 14, broke the string.

By halftime the Numbnuts had put the game on ice at 40-10. The second half was much the same as the first as their lead ballooned to as many as 49 points.

Numbnut Keith Fox trailed only Miller in scoring as he canned nine fieldgoals for 18 points. Wallace chipped in 13 points, while Eric Dezii and John Surbeck added 12 apiece. Surbeck also dished off six assists.

For the G-Spotters, Lang finished with 10 points and 12 rebounds. Teammate Matt Garrett also collected 12 boards.

In other Wednesday night action: the Wide Rides, led by Rick Eberly, slipped by Sherwood 66-62 and the BAMF's forfeited to the MO FO CO'S.

Sunday night saw the Wide Rides retaining the only unblemished record in the league. Fighting back from a nine-point, first-half deficit, they knocked off the Numbnuts 46-38.

Also on Sunday, Sherwood notched its first win of the young season as they outlasted the BAMF's 60-48, and the G-Spotters evened their record at 1-1 by defeating the MO FO CO'S.

B. league

by Michelle Bartol

The "B" League Intramural Basketball League began Wednesday, January 5th. The league is composed of two flights, Blue and Gold, with a complete round robin in each flight.

The initial games seem rather extreme with some teams almost doubling their opponent's score. This week's story covers Gold Flight's Snatchers Men vs. 217 of Tussey. The scoring was even up until eight minutes left in the game. Snatchers Men had control of the boards after the shooting percentage for Tussey began to decline and leading rebounder for Tussey, Dave Challenger was in foul trouble. Captain Pat Clark of Snatchers Men kept his team steady and confident as they played excellent defense. With time expiring and Snatchers Men ahead by four points, Captain Glen Bouder of Tussey made the decision to go with man-to-man defense. A few costly fouls followed and the game ended with an impressive 41-36 Snatcher win.

Other scores include Runnin Rebel's over Jerry's Kids 45-74, 206 Long crawling past the Cripples 42-35, Babylon by Bus takes Wet Sand 62-22, Gypsy tops the Maranders 42-36, Return of TAB over Kayo's 35-29.

C. league

by John Summers

The considerable height advantage of the Weekend Warriors proved to be too great an obstacle for Fred's Last Million as the Warriors hung on to win 41-34 as C-League action began Sunday night.

Relying heavily on the rebounding of Rob Yelnosky and Tom Fort, the Warriors never trailed in the first half and owned a 20-15 lead at intermission. However, despite their dominance on the boards (38-19 on the rebound chart), the Warriors had trouble putting the game away.

Fred's Last Million came out strong in the second half and pulled ahead 25-24 on a John Dimartino jumper with 9:45 remaining in the contest. However, the lead was short-lived. Just 12 seconds later, Dave Wagner's bucket gave his team a lead it would never relinquish.

The Warriors surged ahead by seven, but Fred's Last Million battled back once again. Guided by Mike Wasilus' 10 second-half points, the Millionaires moved within two, 34-32, before finally giving in.

Yelnosky netted 15 points and pulled down 13 rebounds while Rich Kimmey added 10 points and seven rebounds for the Warriors. Wasilus led all scores with 16 points.

The 1-0 Warriors meet the Prodigal Sons Wednesday night, while the 0-1 Millionaires take on FA-Q the same night.

In the only other C-League game, FA-Q breezed by the Prodigal Sons 51-22.

Weekend Warriors 41,
Fred's Last Million 34

A Preview

by John Summers

As the 1983 basketball intramurals get underway the general consensus is that the BAMF'S and the NUMBNUTS should be the top teams in A-league action.

Following is a team by team breakdown of how the captains of each team view their teams and the rest of the league. Also included are this writer's predictions of things to come.

NUMBNUTS — CO-CAPTAINS: Doug "Dooger" Wallace and Paul "Pope" Miller . . . STRONG POINTS: Quickness . . . WEAK POINTS: Height, Rebounding . . . KEY PLAYERS: Miller, Wallace, John Surbeck, Keith Fox . . . TEAM TO BEAT: BAMF'S . . . OUTLOOK: "We should make the playoffs. If we get hot at the right time we could take it all." . . . PREDICTION: 7-3.

G-SPOTTERS — CAPTAIN: Phil Torcivia . . . STRONG POINTS: Quickness . . . WEAK POINTS: Size . . . KEY PLAYERS: Jeff Nicholas, Mike Lang, Matt Garrett . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Numbnuts . . . OUTLOOK: "We'll surprise a few teams. We hope to make the playoffs." . . . PREDICTION: 1-9.

SHERWOOD — CAPTAIN: Mike Smale . . . STRONG POINTS: Quickness . . . WEAK POINTS: Size . . . KEY PLAYERS: Dave Musser, John Michelone, Eric Cutting . . . TEAM TO BEAT: BAMF'S . . . OUTLOOK: "We should make the playoffs." . . . PREDICTION: 6-4.

WIDE RIDES — CAPTAIN: Bob Maruca . . . STRONG POINTS: Quickness, Ball Handling . . . WEAK POINTS: Height . . . KEY PLAYERS: Rick Eberly, Mike Appleby . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Numbnuts . . . OUTLOOK: "We should be competitive. It depends a lot on our outside shooting." . . . PREDICTION: 8-2.

BAMF'S — CAPTAIN: Tom McVay . . . STRONG POINTS: Height . . . WEAK POINTS: Lack of Depth . . . KEY PLAYERS: Dan Helm, McVay, Chris Ortyl . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Hard to say . . . OUTLOOK: "If we have all our players there and healthy, we should take it all." . . . PREDICTION: 5-5.

MO FO CO'S — CAPTAIN: Rich Howey . . . STRONG POINTS: Outside Shooting . . . WEAK POINTS: Rebounding . . . KEY PLAYERS: Jim Laphan, Tim Clapper . . . TEAM TO BEAT: BAMF'S . . . OUTLOOK: "We hope to win a couple." . . . PREDICTION: 3-7.

Mike D'Olio goes up for the shot with Scott Thomas defending and Tom Tracey looking on in intramural action last week.

Talent seems to be spread fairly evenly around the league this year with any one of four teams having the makings of a champion.

A key factor on the road to the finals will be the presence or absence of six-foot, eight-inch Dan Helm of the BAMF'S. When Helm is on the court, he turns a good team into a great one. However, conflicts arising due to his obligations to the varsity basketball team will limit his playing time.

The BAMF'S are also hampered by a pre-season shoulder injury to captain Tom McVay. It is not known how long McVay will be out of the lineup. Without these two players, much will depend on the play of junior Chris Ortyl. The team should make the playoffs, but the semi-finals may be their last game.

The Sherwood ball club should be another shoe-in for the playoffs. Led by the ball handling of point guard Dave Musser, the sizzling outside shooting of John Michelone, and the board domination of Eric Cutting, they will indeed be a team to be reckoned with. Their ability to play "team-ball" will determine if this team will make it into the finals.

The Wide Rides should get out to a fast start due to a solid all around team and, more importantly, the cohesiveness of the team. The players work well together and their only weakness is a lack of height.

The consistent outside shooting of Rick Eberly, Mike Appleby, and Andy Berdy along with the tenacious rebounding of Bob Maruca should carry the Wide Rides into the finals.

Finally, the Numbnuts. Probably the best rounded team in the league, lacking only the teamwork that comes from time together. They may lose a few early in the season, but come playoff time should be ready to take all-comers.

Paul Miller may be the best all-around player in the league and he has a fine supporting cast. Doug Wallace is tough under the boards and is a steady shooter. Add Randy Dieke's rebounding, Keith Fox's shooting, John Surbeck's playmaking, and Eric Dezii's scrappy play and you have a potential champion. If the Numbnuts can blend these talents effectively, they should take it all.

Co-Rec V-Ball

by Michelle Bartol

Co-rec volleyball began a little sluggish. Early games usually don't show much intensity, however, miss hit balls, inaccurate sets and unfamiliarity among teammates combined for an overall good time. I'm certain these first game jitters will disappear in the near future.

This week's coverage will concentrate on Green Flight's Jug's Jammers vs. The Red 'A'. The first two games were close, with almost identical scores. Red "A' captured the first game with a 13-15 score but dropped the second 12-15 to send play into the third game. The final contest was not as evenly matched, however it proved to be the most exciting. Jug's Jammers had the lead the entire game. The score was 14-2 when Red 'A' came on strong, scoring six straight points. With the momentum going in their favor, they unfortunately lost the serve. Mary Palladino of the Jammers took control while serving the winning point to end the contest 15-8.

Other scores include Empty Sets over "Nut" Cracker Sweet 15-8,5, Valley Lobes over the Untouchables in two games 15-2,5, 4-Play taking the Terrors 15-7, 12-15, 15-7, All the Way over FUB'S 15-9,10, and Corporal Punishment II captured the Defenders 15-2,6.

Indians Lose A Pair

by Andy Berdy

The Juniata men's basketball team opened up the new year on a sour note, dropping a pair of close decisions to St. Vincent and Albright.

Saturday the Tribe traveled to Reading, taking on the Lions of Albright in an evening contest. Both teams started out slow with neither team reaching double figures until late in the first half.

The Lions built a nine point lead late in the first stanza, but the Tribe cut it to five and went into intermission down by seven, at 23-16.

In the second half both teams shot better from the field but the Indians began to control the defensive boards and cut the Lion lead. The Tribe built a three point lead before Albright battled back to knot the score at 41. The Tribe held for the last shot, but a turnover with three seconds left sent the game into overtime.

Juniata built a 46-43 lead in the extra period before Albright again came back to lead 47-46. The Tribe had 13 seconds for the last shot but Dan Feruck's 18-footer fell short and no foul was called when he was tackled by two Albright defenders.

Feruck led the Indians with 16 points, Mark Rucinski added 13 and John Voler dropped in eight.

The Tribe's first January contest saw the Indians build an 11 point lead just after half-time, only to see it wither away as St. Vincent scored 52 second half points.

The Indians led 31-26 at the half, but the offense went cold and turnovers allowed St. Vincent to pile up the points. The Bearcats built most of their lead late in the game, winning 78-62.

Rucinski led all scorers with 22 markers and all rebounders with 15. Feruck and Voler added 12 and 10 points respectively.

The Indians, now 2-8, should probably be a .500 club but some tough breaks, questionable officiating, and plain bad luck have contributed to the poor start. The Tribe traveled to Susquehanna last night, looking to avenge their overtime loss to the Crusaders before Christmas.

Mark Rucinski drops in two of his game high 22 points. He also led all rebounders with 15.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

The intramural basketball season is barely a week old and already there seem to be problems. The gym is great, the lighting is good and I think everyone has adjusted to the new facilities.

The one thing that no one seems to agree on is the officiating. Then again maybe a lot of people do agree on it, but that consensus is that it is bad. Some people will just tell you it's bad and others like to display their displeasure on the court, slamming the ball down or shouting obscenities at the officials. I know, I know, a lot of that is just because people are in the heat of athletic drama, you know, the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat. I don't think a lot of people are really serious, but it just doesn't look good.

Intramurals are meant for physical exercise, promoting competition, and allowing for some spare time enjoyment away from studying. But I haven't seen anyone experiencing those things, especially the officials.

I know that they aren't doing that great of a job, and something should be done about the situation, but put yourself in their white-soled gym shoes. How would you like to run up and down the court and have various criticisms hurled at you for $3.35 an hour? I think it takes guts because I sure wouldn't want to do it, and I bet about 99% of the people hurling those criticisms wouldn't want to either.

So the next time you have a gripe on the court about something, think about how you would feel if you had to take what you were dishing out. Save it for after the game and let the intramural coordinators know about the problems. Coaches Ash and Turnball can't do anything to change things unless they know that something isn't working well.

I think that the more that people start forgetting what the purpose of intramurals is, the less an I-M program is worth to the students of this campus.

Women Fall To Crusaders

by App

On the Thursday night before Christmas break, the Juniata women basketballers dropped a one-sided game to a strong Susquehanna team by the score of 83-52. The loss gives the Lady Indians a 2-2 record as they head into post holiday action.

Showing why they are ranked 18th in the nation, Susquehanna was in control throughout the entire game. Susquehanna led 45-28 at half, and outscored Juniata by 14 in the second half as they were never seriously threatened. The Indians were hurt by terrible shooting and poor board work. Holly Crable came off the bench to lead the Indians in scoring with 18 points. Becky Rhodes added 12 points and 12 rebounds.

The Indians began their 1983 play at Gettysburg on Tuesday night and host a nationally ranked University of Scranton team on Saturday night.

Grapplers Winning

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Invitational Tournament will take place Saturday, Jan. 15 in the Sports and Recreation Center.

The Juniata wrestlers will be competing against Lycoming, Scranton, Gettysburg, Penn State Altoona and Montgomery.

The matches will begin at noon with the 119 lb. weight class. There will be about 20 minute intervals between each weight class. The finals will start at 6 p.m.

In pre-Christmas action, the Indian Grapplers defeated Widner and Susquehanna, but lost to Western Maryland. Currently the team is 2-1 in league play. In non-league action they placed third at the Lebanon Valley Invitational Tournament.

Standouts for Juniata in the Widner and Susquehanna competition were Chris Young, Keith Sherbine and Dave Sloan who won both of their matches, and Matt Seigel who pinned his only opponent.

All Juniatians are urged to attend the upcoming tourney and support the grapplers as they strive to continue their winning season.

Women's I.M. V-Ball

by Tracy Catanese

The Women's Intramural Volleyball Winter Season began on January 9th. The field is comprised of twelve teams which will be vying for the season volleyball championship.

Each team plays two matches per week. The games are usually played on Sunday afternoons and Tuesday evenings on the intramural courts of the new Sports and Recreation Center.

The schedule is a complete round robin, which enables each team to play every other team once during the season. The top six teams will earn berths in the playoffs and the top two teams will each receive first-round byes.

During Sunday's 2:00 action, The Zingers, led by captain Sue Cervino, defeated SS & AJ, the team of Britta Harris, by scores of 15-6, 16-14. The Red Cross II team, with captain Didi Pinkstone, defeated the Tussey Terrors, with Cheryl Hagenbarth as captain, by scores of 15-4, 15-10.

Other game action included the defeat of Ester's Molesters by the Awesome Forces. The scores were 15-10, 10-15, and 10-15. The Sluggs defeated Miller High Life 15-2, 16-14, and Ron's Women were victorious over Great Expectations by scores of 15-3, 15-11. The Bumpin Babes were credited with a win from the Slammers' forfeit.

Game action will continue throughout the season on Tuesday evenings at 6:00 p.m. and Sunday afternoons at 2:00 p.m.

Winter Week, coordinated by Center Board and Student Government, will be held Jan. 20-30. Center Board is organizing a variety of entertainment while Student Government is sponsoring competitions between the residence halls.

"The Paul Brothers Band," a southern country rock band from Elmira, New York, will kick off Winter Week at dinner, Thurs., Jan. 20. Besides some original works, they will be playing songs by Lynyrd Skynyrd, the Atlanta Rhythm Section, the Eagles, Pure Prairie League, and many others.

"Scroll Night," one of the activities to be held as a competition between dorms, will be Mon., Jan. 24. A scroll for each residence hall will be in the lobby of Ellis during dinner for each dorm member to sign. As with all of the dorm competitions, points will be based on the greatest percentage of residents participating.

Tues., Jan. 25. will be "Hat Night" and Chinese Banquet night. A Chinese dinner will be undertaken by the Food Service workers and Student Government is sponsoring their second dorm competition.

Also, Tues. night in Catharsis, there will be a coffeehouse sponsored by Laughing Bush with entertainment provided by Andy Murray, Larry Mutti, and Debra Kirchof-Glazier. They will be performing a series of protest songs.

Wed., Jan. 26, Center Board will be sponsoring a dance-concert by "The Sharks." It is important to note that no one will be admitted without a Juniata I.D. card.

The dorm competition scheduled for Wed. will be "Sweatsuit Night."

On the agenda for Thurs. night is a drive-in dinner, the "Mr. Lesher" contest, and "Blue and Gold Night." The drive-in dinner will consist of hamburgers, hot dogs, and a movie to be shown during dinner. The "Mr. Lesher" contest, sponsored by Lesher RHA, is a spinoff of the Miss America contest with various Juniata men representing one floor of a dorm.

There will be two dorm competitions Fri., Jan. 28. It will be "Juniata Night" where all dorm members should wear something that has Juniata printed on it and a pie-eating contest will be held. Each residence hall will send one contestant to represent them in this competition.

Las Vegas Night, sponsored by the varsity athletes of J Club, will be held Fri. night in Memorial Gym. Sat. night, Men's Lacrosse is sponsoring a party featuring a Fred Binder lookalike contest.

The last of the competitions between the dorms will be held on Sat., Jan. 29. Snow seulptures, tray races, and a human pyramid contest will be among the competitions.

Winter Week comes to a close on Sun., Jan. 30 with the Central Pa. Youth Ballet's performance at 1:30 p.m. Everyone is asked to note the time change due to the Super Bowl being played.

Russ Rupiper, Associate Director of Alumni Affairs, smiles as he enjoys his first year at Juniata. Russ also shares involvement in Alumni Club programming. See related story.

Meet Russ Rupiper

by Ron Renzini

One of the fresh faces on campus this year belongs to the Alumni Office in the person of Russ Rupiper.

Rupiper, whose official title is Associate Director of Alumni Affairs, is enjoying his first year at Juniata very much. "You feel like you're part of the program right away."

A native of Iowa, where he attended the University of Northern Iowa as a business/education major, Russ finds the climate and geography of Central Pennsylvania basically the same. "It took a while to get used to the fog, mountains, and winding roads, but I have adjusted now."

As Associate Director of Alumni Affairs, Russ shares the responsibilities of Alumni Club Programming. Some of the activities coming under Alumni jurisdiction include: Reunion, Parents, and Homecoming Weekends, Alumni Correspondence, and Alumni Club Programming.

Russ went on to emphasize that organizing alumni club functions was an important way for the college to keep associated with recent and past graduates. To date, there are approximately 20 such alumni clubs across the nation.

Goals for the future include having a good working knowledge of alumni affairs. Russ feels Juniata is a good place to learn his profession "because of the people you work with. The whole office works as one here; it is easy to get used to the programs that are in existence."

Married for three years, Russ and his wife Lisa are active enthusiasts in their hobbies of sports and music. They also enjoy the great outdoors of Central Pennsylvania with their dog Casey.

News Briefs

WASHINGTON — President Reagan dismissed Eugene V. Rostow from his position as Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency last Wednesday. Saturday, Senior Reagan Administration officials cited two reasons contributing to Mr. Rostow's dismissal. These were two episodes where Rostow was said to have exceeded his authority in arms talks with the Soviets. In a Geneva compromise in July, US and Soviet negotiators agreed informally to limit each side's medium-range-missiles, an agreement called "very faulty" by a senior State Department Official. The other incident was a private meeting Rostow held in Vienna with the head of the Soviet delegation to the East-West talks on reduction of conventional forces. Rostow was admonished in a memorandum to Secretary of State George Shultz by National Security Advisor William P. Clark.

ROME — Italian and West German governments are now more interested in the "interim solution" on the deployment of NATO medium range nuclear missiles. Rome and Bonn are more receptive about NATO's ability to reduce the number of American missiles it plans to station at the end of the year if the Soviets agree to reduce its total of SS-20 missiles targeted on Europe. This is not an official position of either government, but will prove influential in talks this week in Bonn between the West German Government and the Soviet Foreign Minister, Andrei A. Gromyko and during the tour of Vice President George Bush starting Jan. 30. The hope is still alive that the US and the Soviets could reduce the totals to zero through continued negotiations in the next four to five years.

MOSCOW — The nuclear fuel core of the Soviet Cosmos 1402 satellite will fall into the earth's atmosphere in mid-February, reports the director of the Moscow Physics Technical Institute, Oleg M. Belotserkovsky. During the 10-minute televised explanation Saturday, he acknowledged that the reactor and spent fuel of the nuclear satellite should have been sent to a higher altitude and therefore into a safe long term orbit. He confirmed assertions US experts made earlier this month that the Sputnik had malfunctioned and that its radioactive components would fall to earth. But he contended that the fallout would not exceed limits "recommended by the International Commission on Radiological Protection" — a United Nations Organization.

Poor Snow Removal Leaves East Houses Out in the Cold

This past weekend the campus was besieged by about four inches of snow. It was the first major snowfall of the school year. The blue army appeared to do an adequate job, plowing the pathways on Saturday.

Sunday, however, was a different story, especially for those of us who live in East Houses. As the residents poured out Sunday morning to go to lunch, they were met with what normally accompanies cold weather: ice.

This would not have been so bad if it had not been that the rest of the campus was properly taken care of. Cinder and salt were in abundance everywhere, except for the pathways to East Houses and the parking lot.

Numerous people were seen falling as they tried to make the short, but treacherous walk towards Ellis and the rest of the campus. One was risking his life if he dared to walk on the designated walkway. The bridge was especially dangerous with the ice that was covering it. One could have easily ended up swimming in Muddy Run; not a particularly great place to end up with books, homework, and good clothes.

The parking lot was just as potentially hazardous as the pathway. To be blunt, it was a sheet of ice. Have you ever tried to drive on a sheet of ice? It tends to lead to accidents; that is, cars hitting cars or even cars hitting people.

These kinds of situations are things that should be avoided in the future. There was the potential of a serious accident occurring for which the school would have been responsible. The rest of the campus was cleared of ice, why not East Houses?

It should be noted that as of Monday, the situation was taken care of, but a lot of serious injuries could have occurred in the 24 hours before action was taken. The Juniatian hopes that the administration does not let this occur after the next snowfall.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We would like to comment on an unfortunate practice that happens annually here at Juniata around Christmas time. This concerns the removal of trees from area residents' property as well as on the campus itself.

The significance of these trees may appear small to many of us, but to the owners they hold much more value. They are growing, living things and often involve much sentimental and monetary value. Many people take great pride in the appearance of their landscape. To take and destroy a tree from someone's property is a selfish act which can not be justified. The Christmas season is a time for giving, not stealing.

It is against the rules of the college to have cut Christmas trees in the campus dormitories as they can become fire hazards when they dry out. Students at the University of Rhode Island lost their lives in a fire caused by dried-out Christmas greens. You not only endanger your own life, but those of others by using cut greens in the rooms. Live, uncut trees are permissible along with artificial trees during this season. Why destroy someone's property if you can't even keep the trees?

Please take into consideration the owner's feelings and the worth of these trees in the following years. There are many alternatives to the taking of these trees. We wish you would consider them. Thank you.

Signed,
Tim Bilger

Dear Editor,

Well the new gym has been completed. After patiently waiting, pledging and donating money the people can now enjoy the facilities. Or can they? As I read the rules and regulations for the new gym, I looked for the racquetball court rules. And it was there that my hopes for good fun and exercise were shot down. White soled shoes only! Now this may sound petty and it probably is to some folks, but those of us (there are more than one or two) with colored soled shoes, other than white, now either go buy new shoes or don't get in! So I'm out in the cold along with others. I can afford neither the time, nor the money to get new shoes. The last time I went for shoes I spent a whole day and 20 dollars to buy shoes that fit, are comfortable for sports, and now I find aren't worth the proverbial snowball because I can't use them to play in our new gym.

I discovered that the school is supplying towels and racquets. After spending money on a good racquet to play with, I don't have the extra money to buy the shoes that I didn't know I needed. So I have a good racquet and a good comfy pair of shoes and can't play because the school neglected to inform us of these stipulations to get in the gym. Why didn't the Athletic Department tell us the rules before break so we could have gotten the "proper" footwear? Why not supply shoes too? Why only white shoes? Sign me as a dissatisfied customer.

So, it's finally here. Winter, that dreaded season that is anticipated only by skiers and penguins. The onset of real winter, from which all the closet winter haters thought they were being spared, is here and with it comes such glorious delights as the common cold.

Yes, that joy of joys: the cold. According to cheerful, noncongested T.V. doctors, the makings of a cold stay dormant in our bodies all year, just waiting for the moment our resistance is lowered. A likely story, probably invented to placate some red-nosed youngster who came down with a virus in the wake of learning of Santa's lack of corporal existence.

A cold contracted here in the college environment is really the peak of sinus-blocked experiences. Lack of vitamin C and the dormitory atmosphere exacerbate familiar symptoms such as: speaking as if silly putty had been forcibly implanted in the nasal passages; a nose reddened from attempting to drive up Kleenex sales; eyes fogged and cheeks puffed from ingesting enough fluids for a desert crossing; and responding to friendly salutations by bending over and coughing into a balled fist. Individuals thusly afflicted will be referred to as coldees.

The coldee who is strong enough to venture into public is often accosted with remedies and nostrums that to those who are still breathing and speaking in their normal octave may not seem particularly savory. A small smattering of some commonly forwarded cures is listed here for those readers who are considering the contraction of a cold.

Garlic: It may not do anything to alleviate the current symptoms but it will keep the healthy, and vampires, out of cough and sneeze range.

Chicken soup: Did you ever see a hen with Kleenex in its nest?

Over-the-counter-drugs: Probably invented by Juniata chemistry dropouts. But of course, without chemicals, life itself would be impossible.

But there are things that the coldee can be thankful for. A cold is a great cover for someone who is already a professional grump. Anti-social behavior under the aegis of stuffy sinuses is even better than the standard 'I was very drunk at the time.'

Another bright note is the extra attention the coldee receives from friends and others. At what other juncture in one's college career do peers conduct themselves in such an amiable fashion? Especially heartening is the fact that people are willing to spend time fawning over someone who is honking like Felix Unger.

Well, that about covers the pros and cons of the common cold. Next week the discussion will center on another wintertime winner, frostbite.

A Bedtime Story

by David Lehmann

Once upon a time, there was a small college named Wan Eata. You may not have heard of the school's name, but you've probably heard its nick-name: Juney Atta. Anyhow, one cold, cold, winter Sunday morning, a poor, naive freshman woke up lying on the snow-covered lawn in front of a building called Hussey. Marshall, the freshman, had a headache, a cold, and women's undergarments hanging from his pocket. Worst of all, Marshall couldn't remember anything since Friday afternoon.

Marshall crawled through Hussy's doors and dragged himself up a flight of stairs. Then Marshall tried to stand-up to walk to his room and got dizzy. He decided to crawl again. So Marshall crawled into his room and got undressed. After grabbing soap and shampoo, he crawled towards the bathroom to take a shower. Marshall was half way to the bathroom when Sue and Jane came walking out of another room. Sue and Jane started laughing at Marshall.

"I know why you're laughing at me," said Marshall. "You're laughing at me because I'm crawling."

"No, you're wrong, Marshall," giggled Sue. "We're laughing at you because you're naked, and you look funny."

Poor stupid Marshall had forgotten to put on a robe or even a towel. After sitting naked in the hall for an hour crying about looking funny, Marshall finally took a shower. Marshall had trouble shampooing his hair because the shampoo felt like it weighed a hundred pounds when he put it on his head. Instead of shampooing, Marshall decided to put his head in a toilet and flush. Poor Marshall forgot to take off his toupee though, and, after flushing, his head looked like a snowball.

After getting dressed, poor, bald Marshall crawled to lunch, which was being served at Baker Rejectory. A girl behind the counter handed him a plate full of stuff, and Marshall looked at it. There were chunks of yellow swimming around in a greenish fluid. Marshall was happy; he liked scrambled eggs.

Marshall got tweive glasses of water and sat down at a table. A girl walked up to Marshall and asked, "Marshall, can I have my clothes back?"

"Who are you?" asked Marshall; he couldn't remember.

The girl slapped Marshall in the face and ran away crying. Marshall cried too — not because he was sad, but because the girl was bigger than him, and she had broken his skull.

The moral of the story is: if you've had a tough weekend, transfer immediately.

Leadership Development Program Offered

by Cindy Duick

Improving the skills of all Juniata students is one of the goals of the Student Services Department. In achieving this goal they have presented and will continue to present leadership development programs.

Fall term's program concluded in a dinner sponsored by Student Services on Jan. 6 in the Faculty Lounge. The purpose of the dinner was two-fold, as Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Students, explains "to recognize the people who showed interest in their own self-improvement" by attending the Fall sessions and "to get feedback" so it will be possible to offer another worthwhile program.

The Fall Program consisted of five meetings held in South's carpeted lounge on Friday afternoons between October 15 and November 12. These sessions included: Budget Procedures — presented by Mr. William Alexander, How to Run a Meeting — presented by Mr. Wayne Justham, College Governance — by Dr. Arnold Tilden, Group Dynamics and Conflict Resolution — by Dr. Jay Buchanan, and Motivation — by Julie Keehner.

There was also an earlier start to the program in a Summer Leadership Conference-Workshop held Sept. 4-5. This session, presented by a member of Playfair, aimed "to bring together student leaders to give them cohesion to work together and learn personal leadership skills," says Keehner.

Next on the upcoming agenda is the Leadership Development Program — Part II. Student Services will offer beginning Jan. 25 five more sessions: Jan. 25 — Leadership, Feb. 1 — Motivation and Interpersonal Relations, Feb. 8 — How to Run a Meeting, March 15 — Group Building, March 22 — Communicative Skills. The meetings will take place on respective Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock in South's carpeted lounge.

Student Services will be sending brochures to the heads of all campus organizations. So, if you are interested check with your club, organization or group leader, or stop in or call the Student Services Office in Founders Hall for any additional information.

JC Shark Attack

by Larry Schmidt

The sensational sounds of central Pennsylvania's hottest band, the Sharks, will rock Juniata College on Wed., January 26.

The event, sponsored by the Dance Committee and part of Winter Week, will cost a mere $2.50 and will occur in the gym.

The Sharks have opened for such national acts as Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, the Romantics, A Flock of Seagulls, and Dirty Looks. The Sharks consist of vocalist Shea Quinn, guitarist Steve "Zero" Wettig, and drummer Doug Phillips.

From the moment the first chord is sounded, those on the dance floor will be unable to escape this band's incredible energy.

In terms of success and competition, the Sharks have the standard by which other local bands measure their progress.

Their accomplishments in their three short years magnifies their long-term potential for the national music scene. The Sharks presently have one LP out entitled "Live at the Village" and one newly released EP.

After experiencing the Sharks several times, I personally feel no one should miss their performance on Juniata campus. Their mixture of new wave and punk is guaranteed to have everyone rocking.

Put some electricity into your week and step out to see the Sharks. For only $2.50, you too can experience central Pa.'s hottest band.

Ray Owens Plays Catharsis

by Larry Schmidt

Singer, guitarist Ray Owen performed last Tues. evening at Sherwood's Catharsis Lounge.

Owen's three-hour performance consisting of audience requests demonstrated a rather large musical repertoire. Owen performed tunes from the Grateful Dead, Neil Young, Jerry Jeff Alker and the Band.

The performance was sponsored by the Coffeehouse Committee. The next Catharsis Coffeehouse is scheduled for Jan. 15.

Stroman Publishes Extensive Work

Stereotypes and discrimination aimed at physically handicapped people are analyzed by Dr. Duane F. Stroman, professor of sociology at Juniata College, in his latest book, "The Awakening Minorities: The Physically Handicapped."

Stroman's book looks at six groups such as the blind, hearing impaired, dwarfs and midgets, facially disfigured, obese and paraplegics, and makes a clear distinction between that impairment and a handicap.

"Many impaired individuals are realizing that the handicapping conditions imposed on them by society are akin to racist and sexist practices," Stroman says. "Awakened by what the civil rights movement did for racial minorities in the 1960s, these new minorities are developing a consciousness of their fundamental similarities with 'normal' people and want to alter the stereotypes and restrictions that emphasize their impairments rather than their abilities."

Although Stroman's book is primarily based on existing research, it provides in one volume, an extensive analysis of many studies. "I tried to take what research was available and rethink it in a sociological framework," Stroman says.

The research was not always easy to find. Stroman notes that good material is available on physical handicaps, but very little research has been done on dwarfs or the obese.

Stroman began work on his book in the spring of 1979. The original manuscript was 700 pages so Stroman broke the book down into two volumes. "The Awakening Minorities: The Physically Handicapped" is the first book. The second volume deals with behavioral minorities, but work on that project has been "put on hold" for now.

"This is a book that should be read by social scientists, rehabilitation counselors, government officials and the physically impaired who confuse an impairment with debilitating and handicapping restrictions imposed on society," Stroman says. The book, which is also designed as a supplementary college text, reviews legislation and personal gains that some impaired people have made.

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1963, Stroman received his B.A. degree from Ohio Wesleyan University. He also holds a S.T.B. degree from Boston University School of Theology and a Ph.D. from Boston University.

Stroman is the author of "The Medical Establishment and Social Responsibility," published in 1976, and "The Quick Knife: Unnecessary Surgery," published in 1979.

South Leads RHA Competition

by Amy Smith

Current standings in the annual Residence Hall competition finds South at the top of the list with 282 points. The rest of the campus point totals are as follows:

Off-Campus — 278
North — 252.2
Sherwood — 198
Lesher — 195
Tussey-Terrace — 163
Cloister — 109
East Houses — 39

Points are earned by conducting various RHA programs: social, recreational, educational, cultural and service. Residence Halls are awarded for separate floor projects, activities involving the whole hall, and those including the whole campus. Naturally, the more people the event includes, the more points the hall earns.

In addition, bonus points are awarded for programs of educational and cultural nature, and those that are unusually creative and well done.

The points are tallied at the end of each term by four Senate members of the Residential Life Committee and the Associate Dean of Student Services.

The winners will be based on the point system and general contribution to the overall improvement of life at Juniata. The 1983 "Hall of the Year" will receive money and a plaque.

Projects completed by May 1, 1983 will be considered in arriving at the final totals.

Juniata Draws Blood

by Beth Stravino

Last Thursday, the Huntingdon Red Cross hosted Bloodmobile collections in the Ellis Ballroom. One hundred sixty-three people applied to donate, 10 were deferred (many had taken aspirin that day), and approximately 84 Juniata students gave.

I went to the Ballroom near closing time to get the above information. As I questioned the Director of the Huntingdon Red Cross, a fellow J.C.er was registering as a first-time donor. Registering seemed easy enough; name, address, and telephone number were given in exchange for a sticker that says "Be nice to me. I donated blood today."

After registering, the prospective donor moved on to different stations. The first station took temperatures. The second station tested your hemoglobin by taking a few drops of blood from a finger. After that, a disease history was recorded and blood pressure was taken. Then, if all this occurred without any complications, the candidate actually got to give a pint of blood.

Trained Bloodmobile nurses took the blood, and as the Lab Technician who took my blood sample said, "They're good at it. It's all they do." They're specialized and have had lots of practice.

The last part of the donating process is to sit quietly for a few minutes and eat a free sandwich to replenish some of the lost nutrients.

The entire procedure is not painful at all. Most people's arms hurt more from playing racquetball. The Bloodmobile will return to Juniata next term, so be brave and plan on donating. Remember, donating a pint of blood makes the same amount available to you or your family if they ever need it.

JC Adds to Exhibit

Three Pennsylvania German documents from the Juniata College collection are on loan as part of a Pennsylvania German art exhibition touring the United States for the next year.

The front page of an August, 1739 newspaper, title page of a 1743 Bible and an early calendar, all original works by Pennsylvania German printer Christopher Saur, represent Juniata in the exhibit.

Organized by the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Winterthur Museum and Gardens, Winterthur, Del., the exhibit consists of 350 objects including works in metal, textile and ceramic as well as furniture, weapons, fraktur, printer books, architectural elements, paintings and glass. The materials cover a period of time from 1683 to 1850.

The exhibit, which will tour through January, 1984, celebrates the 300th anniversary of the initial German settlement in the United States at Germantown. Before the Revolutionary War, the Pennsylvania Germans were the most important minority culture in the Delaware Valley. The emigrants were literate and skilled, farmers and craftsmen who produced art reflecting their middle European origins using media varying from ceramics to textiles and paintings.

"By participating in this exhibition, Juniata is giving people in other parts of the country an opportunity to see for the first time the colorful, often witty and pragmatic works produced by this group between 1683 and 1850," said Dr. David H. Eyman, director of libraries at Juniata. He added that this exhibit is the most concentrated study of the artistic efforts of the Pennsylvania Germans ever assembled.

Juniata College has one of the largest collections of Pennsylvania German prints in the Commonwealth. The collection was donated to the college by Martin Grove Brumbaugh, former Juniata president and governor of Pennsylvania.

Following a three-month showing at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the exhibit is in route to Houston where it will be on display at the Museum of Fine Arts from March 5 to May 15. From there it travels to San Francisco for a July 2 to Sept. 3 showing at the M.H. de Young Museum.

The exhibit's final stop will be the Art Institute of Chicago where it will be on display from Dec. 10 to Jan. 24, 1984.

Debate Club Formed

By Sheila Squier

Do you enjoy speaking publicly? Or perhaps defending a good argument? If you answered yes to one or both of these questions then the newly forming Debate Club needs you. This coming Monday, January 24, at 8:15 p.m. in the Gold Room, an organizational meeting will be held to determine if there is enough interest to form a debate team at Juniata.

Dr. Thomas Baldino, a Political Science Professor, is shouldering the responsibility of resurrecting an institution not heard at Juniata since the late '60's. He feels that if students are interested in debate they should be offered the opportunity to pursue this intellectual sport. Debate is obviously valuable practice for law majors, but anyone who anticipates a career involving public speaking of any type can benefit from this kind of experience.

Presently, Dr. Baldino is communicating with LaSalle College, previous international debate champions, to obtain information on the mechanics of a debate team. His current strategy is to begin as a debate club and maintain this status for at least one year. Then, if the club is firmly established, advance to the status of debate team and participate in collegiate competition. The structure of the club will center around one-on-one or team debate, or a combination of the two, depending on the interest expressed by the involved students — which means you. So attend the meeting January 24; you and your input are necessary for the sounds of a heated debate to echo through the halls of Juniata once more.

Thanks to you...

College Budget Survives

In the final 1983 federal higher education budget passed by the lame duck Congress just before Christmas, federal college programs avoided the drastic cuts proposed by President Reagan, but didn't get much additional funding, either.

Some specific programs within the budget fared better than others.

For example, the student aid budget rose by $25 million. Both Guaranteed Student Loans and College Work-Study programs got marginal increases, but the State Student Incentive Grants program suffered substantial cuts.

Congress made its biggest college cuts in the College Housing Loans program, which administrators draw on to build and maintain on-campus housing.

Legislators cut $160 million — or 80 percent of the total — from the housing loans for fiscal 1983, which stretches from October 1, 1982 through September 30, 1983. It was one of the few instances in which President Reagan got the cut he wanted.

The process is about to begin again, however. In late January, President Reagan is due to make his 1984 fiscal year budget proposals. Administration officials told an October convention of financial aid administrators to expect the president to once again propose broad cuts in student aid programs.

Seniors Plan Ahead

by Betsy Halsey

Interview technique seminars are being held by the Director of the Career Planning and Placement Office, William B. Martin.

Seniors are encouraged to begin planning for their future now. The seminars are designed to prepare students for interviewing by covering topics such as how to prepare for an interview and what type of questions to expect.

Seminars started in December and will continue through mid-February. Hours are posted on the Career Planning and Placement office door downstairs in Ellis Hall.

U.S. experts have recalled the incident where another Soviet satellite Cosmos 954 came down in 1978 and caused a $6 million project in Canada's North West Territory where radioactive fragments landed. The US, Britain, and Sweden among other nations, have set up teams to monitor the progress of Satellite 1402. An American nuclear emergency research team is on standby alert.

LONG ISLAND — The most expensive reactor ever built, which will provide a third of Long Island's electricity, is nearly completed. The Shoreham Atomic plant, whose price will be $3.1 billion if commercial operation begins by September, is 10 years late in starting and 10 times over budget. Its cost will probably make the Long Island residents' bills the highest in the nation. Rates are expected to increase at 38 percent according to the Long Island Lighting Company (Lilco), if the cost is passed onto the consumers. State Legislature is considering, however, a proposal to forbid rate increases to pay for the plant, an action which would leave the company with an enormous debt.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, urged by advisors who see re-election chances in jeopardy, will begin a series of program changes to improve his standing among women, the unemployed and blacks.

President Reagan is studying the possibilities of legislation in the areas of stopping discrimination against women in pensions and insurance, in tougher measures against delinquency in child support and alimony payments, in new incentives for the employment of women thrust into the job market suddenly, and in incentives for businesses to hire the longterm unemployed, unemployed young people and people out of work due to declining industries.

Recent action of his new program changes includes the appointment of Elizabeth H. Dole, former White House assistant for liaison with constituent groups, as Secretary of Transportation. Also, the appointment of Margaret M. Heckler, former representative of Massachusetts, as Secretary of Health and Human Services. In a gesture to blacks, Mr. Reagan paid tribute to the 54th anniversary of the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. during his weekly radio address.

MIAMI — Meyer Lansky, known as the "Financial Wizard of Organized Crime," died Saturday of cancer. The 81-year-old was admitted to Mount Sinai Hospital in Miami Dec. 31 suffering from dehydration, according to a hospital spokesman.

'Custer's Revenge' Protested

A few nights before holiday break, 100-some students filed into an auditorium at the University of Washington to wait for Stuart Keston.

Keston was due to call the auditorium from California to talk about his latest invention: a video game called "Custer's Revenge."

In the game, the player becomes Gen. George Armstrong Custer, who must dodge cacti and arrows to reach an American Indian woman seemingly bound to a pole. When he reaches her, he scores by having intercourse with her. She smiles and picks up her heels.

A lot of people came to the Washington auditorium to say unkind things to Keston about his game.

Many more probably would like the opportunity. The game has provoked angry protests and threats of boycotts from scores of groups, as well as from Washington, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Minnesota and other schools.

The Colorado chapter of the National Organization of Women has pledged to picket any store selling the game. Suffolk County in New York is considering banning the game altogether. Keston has sued the county, adding he'll "sue any jurisdiction that tries to ban 'Custer's Revenge.'"

There's been no such reaction to the banning of "Jungle King," a video game in which a Tarzan-type man rescues white women from black men, from Loyola-New Orleans' Wolf Den after protests from the Black Student Union.

"There are enough negative images in society not to have another one on your campus," explains Black Student Union Treasurer Michael Johnson.

Kickers Begin

Women's

by Cindy Duick

Women's Indoor Soccer Intramurals are scheduled as a triple round-robin competition between three teams: The Wall, Terrace, and D.C. and the Destroyers.

The Wall kicked off their season victoriously by defeating Terrace 3-2 in the first game of the round-robin Wednesday Jan. 12 at 7 p.m. The game held in Memorial Gym was action-packed from the start as both teams fought for control of the ball on a slippery floor. Players buckled down into their positions, and the situation became tight at the Wall's goal 10 minutes into play as Terrace's Kathy Murphy led an offensive push. The Wall took the initiative seconds before half-time. A corner shot resulted in a shot on the Terrace goal, but the defense remained tough and ended a scoreless half.

Two to three minutes into the second half, Terrace's Captain Rory McAvoy slipped one by the Wall goalie putting her team ahead 1-0. Terrace struck again five minutes later as Nancy Fieldman slammed one in past the Wall defense to make the score 2-0.

Congestion in front of the Terrace goal provided an opportunity for the Wall's Marie Olver to push the ball in for a score, making it 2-1 in the middle of the second half.

Both teams fought hard for the ball despite the slick floor and confusion in the corners. The Wall's attack resumed with less than two minutes to go as Mary Ellen Sullivan scored to even it up 2-2 and to give the Wall extra psych power. Terrace was not easily put aside as they tried another shot. Kay Rockefeller, the Wall goalie, saved the shot and the chance for her team.

With less than a minute til the buzzer, The Wall's Michelle Shields completed their victory with a shot into the Terrace goal. The Wall claimed the game 3-2.

Other games scheduled for the week, The Wall against D.C. and the Destroyers and Terrace versus D.C. and the Destroyers, were cancelled due to construction in Memorial Gym.

Men's

by Paul Bomberger

The Men's IM soccer league kicked off Wednesday, Jan. 13 at 8:00 P.M. with the Quintessence battling the M+M's.

Led by their captain, Mike D'Olio and teammate Sean Ruth, the M+M's took control of the game from the outset. Quintessence goalie, Ben Reichley, had his work cut out for him trying to contain the onslaught from M+M halfbacks, Ruth and D'Olio.

Midway through the first half, D'Olio sprung loose from defenders and beat Reichley from midcourt, putting the M+M's on top to stay.

Later in the first half, Ed Trow-

BAMF's KNOCK OFF WIDE RIDES

by John Summers

A revamped BAMF ball club, highlighted by the return of Tom McVay from the injury list, slipped by the previously undefeated Wide Rides 45-39 in A-league action Wednesday night.

Going into the game, the Wide Rides were 2-0 while the BAMF'S were winless at 0-2, but it was evident from the opening tap that the league leaders were in for a battle.

The teams exchanged unproductive trips down the court before Chris Ortyl scored off an offensive rebound to put the BAMF'S on the scoreboard. The Wide Rides bounced right back with field goals from Bob McDonald and Rick Eberly to take a 4-2 lead.

A short while later, the BAMF'S were back on top 7-6. And so it went. The first half, which saw the lead change hands nine times, ended with the Wide Rides holding a slim 24-23 lead.

The second half, although remaining close until the end, saw only one lead change. On the BAMF'S first possession McVay fired in a 20 footer, for two of his game high 18 points, to give his team a lead it would hold for the duration of the contest.

The Wide Rides never gave up, but in the end the BAMF'S height advantage proved to be too great. Ortyl controlled the boards pulling down 17 rebounds while teammate Fred Santarelli collected nine of his own. McDonald was the high Wide Ride rebounder with eight.

Ortyl also chipped in 12 points, as did Andy Berdy for the Wide Rides.

In other Wednesday night action, the Numbnuts rolled over the MO FO CO'S 71-41, and Sherwood blasted the G-Spotters 83-50.

Sunday night's only game featured the Numbnuts and the BAMF'S. The Numbnuts held on to win this one 68-66 in double overtime after squandering a 12-point second half lead. Keith Fox scored the deciding bucket just seven seconds into the sudden death, second overtime on a neatly executed layup.

The win ups the Numbnuts record to 3-1 and moves them into first place, one-half game ahead of Sherwood and the Wide Rides, each 2-1.

Kerry Hendershot netted 20 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to pace the Return of Tab past Tussey 217, 43-32, Sunday night in Gold Flight action.

Return of Tab started out slowly as Tussey jumped out to a quick 4-0 lead. However, it would be the last lead they would enjoy. The Tab men started rolling when captain Bill Marshall entered the game. Marshall's hustle and enthusiasm seemed to light a fire under his teammates as they opened up a 20-12 halftime lead.

The second half continued much the same as the first as Hendershot took control of the game. When the Return of Tab needed a bucket they turned to Hendershot who responded in fine fashion with 14 second-half points.

Trailing by eight points with under seven minutes remaining, Tussey got hot. Three quick buckets closed the margin to two at 32-30. Once again it was Hendershot to the rescue.

At the three minute mark he went to the hoop, scored, and was fouled by Dave Agostinelli. Agostinelli had a few choice words for the referee and was immediately ejected from the game.

Although Hendershot made only one of his three foul shots (one for the foul, two for the double technical ejection), the loss of Agostinelli took the wind out of Tussey's sails. For all intents and purposes, the game was over. The 2:55 remaining was only a technicality.

Dave Challenger dropped in 10 points to lead Tussey's scoring.

Last Wednesday night's action took place as follows: The Gypsy beat the Kayo's 36-30, The Grim Reapers out-scored Tussey 217 49-38, Return to Tab crushed the Purple Helmets 40-12, the Smegmas edged Snatcher's Men 39-37 in overtime, and Corky's Creampuffs beat 206 Long 32-25.

In other Sunday night games: the Slayers forfeited to Wet Sand, the Kayo's bombed the Marauders 41-23, The Gypsy got by the Purple Helmets 30-26, The Smegmas knocked off the Grim Reapers 37-23, Jerry's Kids outscored the Cripples 36-24, and the Pioneers defeated Babylon by Bus 43-37.

Rich Kimmey and Jeff Rexford combined for 30 points to lead the Weekend Warriors to their second win, a 33-23 victory over the Prodigal Sons.

The game began slowly as neither team scored until four minutes into the game. Lee Canfield then lit up the scoreboard with a bucket from the top of the key to give the Prodigal Sons an early lead.

Rexford responded at the other end with some long-range bombing of his own to set the tone for the game. Both teams seemed content to abandon the "good per-

I.M. V-Ball Play Improves

Co-Rec

by Michelle Bartol

This week's co-rec volleyball action marks the ending of the second week of play. First week jitters are gone but scores indicate the domination of a few teams within each league. Hopefully, this indicates exciting, good quality play for the semi-finals and finals during February.

On Thursday, January 13th, The J.C. Impersonaters, led by Jenny Kauffman, beat Barb Brecht's Tower of Power without too much trouble. The action went only two games with the scores being 15-6, 15-10. "Awesome teamwork" could only describe the Impersonaters play. Great sets by Debbie Barker and Dave Switzer to Barry Miller and Jenny Kauffman combined for a great offensive attack. Mistakes plagued Tower of Power. Their defense didn't allow them to gain control of the ball offensively, but their spirit and good sportsmanship kept the game enjoyable, nonetheless.

Green League's Empty Sets pulled off another win, upping their record to 3-0. The Terrors led by Lisa Hocker couldn't contain Empty Set's key combination play. Tom Shaw, Denise Avis and Carol Uber had key shots early on in the game while Kerry Hendershot displayed fine defense at the net. One disadvantage the Terrors experience is having only two games under their belt, whereas most teams have three.

Red League action led by Sonny Varner's, "All the Way" collected two quick wins against the Lame Ducks, 15-5, 15-4. Hustling and aggressiveness were the key qualities for "All the Way." Much communication between teammates during play helped keep the turnovers to a minimum.

Teams to watch as the season continues are Green Leagues' Empty Sets and 4-Play both with 3-0 records. The Volley Lobes are also undefeated with a record of 2-0. Red League has a three-way tie for first with Ozzies, All the Way and Hula, Hula Boys II all with 2-0 slates. The Yellow League also has a 3-way tie with F.U.V.M., Ballers and the S&M Stromboli's with 2-0 records.

The characteristics exhibited by all winning teams seems to be: TEAMWORK.

S.S.&A.J. made a brilliant comeback against a tough Miller High Life team in women's intermural volleyball on Sunday. After losing the first game 15-17, S.S.&A.J. got together and won the next two games 15-7 and 15-9 respectively.

In the first game, S.S.&A.J. took off to a 3-0 lead on the strong serving of Britta Harris, but Miller High Life came back strongly on two serving aces by Judy Estep to take a commanding 9-5 lead.

S.S.&A.J. had a problem serving in the first game, but quickly gathered themselves to tie the score at 14-14. After 5 game points Miller High Life won on the serving of Estep.

The second game started as a close battle, with both teams trading points. However, S.S.&A.J. stood strong and built a 14-4 lead with great front line play. Miller High Life tried to make a comeback but fell far short losing the game 15-7.

A lack of teamwork on the part of Miller High Life helped S.S.&A.J. get ahead 5-0, a lead which was never relinquished. Harris was a standout while serving the team from a 8-6 lead to a 13-6 lead. Once again Miller High Life tried to comeback and forced three game points until finally bowing to S.S.&A.J. 15-9.

In other women's volleyball action: the Slugs defeated Awesome Forces 15-3, 15-3, Ron's Women defeated Bumping Bubes 15-9, 15-6, Red Cross defeated Great Expectations 15-8, 15-3 and Ester's Molesters defeated Tussey-Terrors 15-5, 15-9.

Men's

by John Surbeck

The reigning league champion, Defenders, continued their winning ways this week by "spiking out" two victories in as many tries.

In their second game of this young season, the Defenders playing with only five players met a fired-up opposition, the Contenders. In the first game, the Defenders took the air out of the Contenders early by opening up a six to three margin on the hustle of the five players led by captain Bob "Chachi" Ademak. The Defenders opened their lead to nine to four when the Contenders captain, Jay Jones, called a time out to regroup his inexperienced team. After the time out, Defenders star player, Tim Zeller, with the help of powerful front liners Randy Ketchum and Bob Wazalis, blew open the lead to thirteen to four behind Zellers fine serving. The Contenders cut the lead in half, 14-7, on the efforts of Ed Williard's fine serving and hustle, but it wasn't enough as the Defenders won the game, 15-7.

In the second game, it looked as if the Contenders were going to force the match into a third and deciding game. The Contenders exploded to a five to one lead behind Todd Naylors exact serving and Williards continuous strong play. The Defenders made a rush to tie the game at five behind Ketchum's fine serving. Play became even as the score was tied at six, seven, and eight, but then the overpowering front line of the Defenders flexed their muscle by spiking their way to a fourteen to eight lead. Zeller served a bullet that was not returned to give the game and match to the Defenders.

Overall, the Defenders look extremely tough as evidenced by their five man victory over a good Contenders team. Ketchum has put the Defenders challenge out to the league by affirming "We are the team to beat."

Handball Action

Intramural handball started last Monday, January 10, with a doubleheader at Memorial Gymnasium. In the first game, the Quad Boys romped over the Worms I by the margin of 42-18. The Quad Boys, who started quick, held a commanding 21-6 halftime lead and were never threatened. They were sparked by the offensive play of Rick Eberly and Dave Murphy. In the nightcap, Miller-East was given a severe thrashing at the hands of the Black Knights by the score of 33-14. The Black Knights were led by the one-two scoring punch of Tom McVay and Bobby Wazalis.

Now, a preview of the four teams for the upcoming season.

Black Knights. Strong points are defense and size. Weakpoint, if any, is over aggressiveness. Key players are Fakula, McVay, and Waszak. Prediction: Should be the best. First place with a 7-1 record.

Quad Boys. Strong points are defense and quickness. Weakpoints are depth and conditioning. Key players are Clapper, Eberly and MacDonald. Prediction: Could challenge Black Knights if pieces fall together. Second place with a 5-3 record.

Miller-East. Strong points are quickness and intensity. Weakpoint is size. Key players are Schmidt, Herrera, and Miller. Prediction: Don't have the guns for drive to the top, but could pull an upset or two. Third place with a 3-5 record.

Worms I. Strong points are depth and conditioning. Weakpoint is an extreme lack of size. Key players are Pearson and McDonald. Prediction: Rough times ahead. Benefit of the doubt with a 1-7 record.

This week the Handball game of the Week is an early season shootout between the Black Knights and the Quad Boys.

Women's I.M. B-ball

by Linda Ramsey

The women's intramural basketball season has begun its first round of action as of Mon., Jan. 10. The four teams involved in play this year and their captains include Ramblin' Rappers under leadership from Stephany Porter; Slopers with co-captains Linda Ramsay and Sue Wampler; Lesher under freshman Linda Hann; and The Slammers under the control of Terry Molvihill.

The women have, in the past, played a very physical game due to the limited officiating skills involved. This year, however, with the combined efforts and abilities of two refs instead of one, there is hope for better-played games and a greater degree of quality play.

Last Monday's action included The Slopers squeaking by the Ramblin' Rappers, 30 to 29. Tracey DeBlase and Stephany Porter were dominant on offense for the Rappers. Sue Wampler and Kathy Dempsey pulled down enough defensive rebounds for The Slopers' offense to pull through with the win. Lesher, in a surprise upset, beat The Slammers 42 to 38.

Games that were supposed to be played on Thurs. but weren't due to the varnishing procedure of the mezzanine will be rescheduled.

bridge booted it home from 20 feet out on the left wing, which put the M+M's up 2-0.

The M+M's ran into some trouble when Scott Steffy and Trowbridge were penalized 2 minutes for kicking the ball off the gym ceiling. The Quintessence capitalized when "Dooger" Wallace pushed the ball upcourt to Eric "Vito" Dezii, who found the net from point blank range, closing the gap to 2-1.

However, the M+M's closed the first half with two more quick goals from the sure-footed D'Olio and Ruth, making the score 4-1 at halftime.

In the second half, the M+M's merely kept the ball in the Quintessence territory and preserved their 3-goal lead. The Quintessence saw new light when halfback, Tom Hildebrandt, found paydirt from 15 feet on the right wing.

There was no further scoring in the second half and the game ended with the M+M's coming out on top 4-2.

In other games on Wednesday night: the Off Campus team shut out the Generations 4-0, and the Team got by the Cloister team 4-3. Due to the work being done on the Memorial Gym floor, Friday night games had to be postponed.

The Warriors pulled out to a 17-7 lead behind Rexford's hot hand. However, the Prodigal Sons scored the last six-point of the half to close the gap to 17-13 at intermission.

Unfortunately for the Prodigal Sons, they did not pick up in the second half where they had left off in the first. In the first seventeen minutes of the second half, they could manage but two points and the outcome was inevitable.

Kimmey carried the Warriors in the second half, with nine of his game-high 16 points, as they went to their inside game.

Rexford added 14 points while Canfield led the Sons with 11 points.

The Warrior win, coupled with FA-Q's 51-46 decision over Fred's Last Million, set the stage for Sunday night's confrontation between the two undefeated teams.

In that game the Warriors had all they could handle as they squeaked by FA-Q 41-39. In Sunday's other contest, the injury-riddled Prodigal Sons, got destroyed by Fred's Last Million 60-29. The Sons could be in for a long season as they recently lost Lee Canfield, their leading scorer, indefinitely due to a shoulder separation.

Injuries Trouble JC

by Mark Shaw

Juniata wrestling team placed sixth in the Juniata Invitational Wrestling Tournament which took place in Memorial Gym this past weekend.

The team, which was plagued by numerous injuries, had only two place winners: Joel Beach, fourth place (177) and Rick Noll, second place (134).

Beach was defeated in his first round match, but quickly regained momentum in the second round by pinning his opponent from Keystone in 20 seconds. He won his third round bout against his opponent from Penn State, Altoona campus, 8-2. Beach then lost a tough match to the third place finisher from Lycoming 19-12.

Noll, team captain, did away with his first two opponents from Lycoming 8-5 and 7-6, respectively. In the finals, however, he was defeated by the captain of the Keystone team 9-7.

Unbeaten Keith Sherbine (190) suffered a dislocated elbow in his first match against an opponent from Montgomery College. Sherbine, who was leading 9-2 at the time, will be out for about six weeks.

Other injuries included Dave Sloan (150), Alan Kreuzburg (118) and Matt Siegel (H-weight).

The next wrestling match will be on Sat. at 1 p.m. when Juniata will host Kings College and Frederick College at Memorial Gym.

Mark Rucinski and John Voler each poured in 14 points but it wasn't enough as Susquehanna defeated the Juniata Indians for the second time this year, by a 67-63 score in Selinsgrove.

"We did everything we could, but win. We just can't get over the hump," commented Head Coach Dan Helm, after seeing his Indians lose their ninth in 11 outings.

Junior guard Dan Feruck added 10 points in the loss, and Rucinski, the Tribe's leading rebounder, grabbed eight boards.

The Indians started out strong, leading early in the first half. Susquehanna came back to take a 33-32 halftime lead which they never lost.

Susquehanna had four men in double figures with Bob Fisk dropping in 19, Jack Esworthy and Mike Greff each with 15, and Jim O'Brien adding 10.

The Indians face Delaware Valley on Saturday in Memorial Gymnasium at 7:00.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

Who's going to win the Super Bowl? It's still hard to say I guess, but will this year's Super Bowl really mean anything? A lot of people say that the strike ruined this year's season, but I disagree.

It did hurt from the records standpoint. No one rushed for 1,000 yards or threw for 4,000. Well, Wes Chandler still had over 1,000 yards in receptions, but he's just incredible.

I think that the strike-delayed playoff system is working out just as good as the regular system — maybe even a little better. The new system gave three more teams per conference playoff berths. It matched up the top seeded teams with the lower qualifiers. The system made no distinction between the divisions, and that was the only thing that made it questionable.

I think the new system was a good idea for two reasons. The first being that the balance of power in the NFL has changed in the past few years. There are more good teams capable of making the Super Bowl. Look at last year. The past Super Bowls were dominated by a few powerhouses like Green Bay, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Miami, Minnesota and Oakland. Of the 16 Super Bowls, one of those teams has been in almost every one. Then comes San Francisco and Cincinnati. Were they that good or was it just a fluke? I think it was because more teams are getting better and deserve a shot at the playoffs.

The second reason is that playoff football is more exciting and I think more people like to watch playoff football than the regular season. So why not have some more teams in there for more excitement? That way a fan's favorite team would have a better shot at getting in and that will get more people involved with the playoff action. Then again, you can't let every team in because that would give the Eagles a chance.

The NFL did a good job in adding two more wild card spots but why don't they go a little further? Why don't they knock off a week of the regular season and let the top two finishers in each division go to the playoffs along with two wild cards. It wouldn't take any longer to play than the regular system which already takes three weeks.

With the new equality in the NFL I think more teams have to have a chance at making the playoffs. I think this year's tournament will show that.

Oh, what about who's going to win it all . . . . . I have to go with my favorite coach and team, Don Shula and the Dolphins.

Lady Lions Drop Pair

The Juniata girl's basketball team lost twice last week as they saw their record drop to 2-4. On Tuesday, the girls traveled to Gettysburg, and were beaten 80-70. Then, on Saturday, they hosted a nationally ranked Scranton team and lost by the score of 87-57.

Against Gettysburg, the Lady Indians started out of the gates fast and held an early ten point lead. The fast start was keyed by hot outside shooting and good offensive ball movement inside to Becky Rhodes as she was able to get several easy short jumpers. However, Gettysburg fought back from the early deficit to take a 4 point lead 40-36, into the locker-room at halftime. In the second half, Gettysburg slowly increased their lead to 10 points thanks to some hot shooting of their own and frequent trips to the foul line. The Indians cut the lead to 7 late in the game, but couldn't make up the difference as 3 starters fouled out. As a team, the Indians played well offensively as they shot 47% from the field and 80% from the line. However, the Lady Indians couldn't stop the Gettysburg team on defense. Rhodes and Patty Ryan were the big guns for the Indians. Rhodes had 20 points and 15 rebounds while Ryan had 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Against Scranton, the Indians played well, but were beaten by a very good team. Scranton jumped to a quick 8-2 lead and increased it to an 11 point lead at the ten minute mark of the first half. The Indians played Scranton almost equal the rest of the half and were down 39-25 at half. In the second half, the Indians could get no closer than 11 points. Finally, late in the game, Scranton pulled away keyed by a series of Juniata turnovers. In the game, the Indians held their own on the boards against the taller Scranton team but were hurt by 28 turnovers. Also, the Indians shot only 38% from the field while Scranton shot 46% for the game. Ryan was the big gun for the Indians again as she scored 23 points. Ellen Fasnacht added 15 points and Rhodes led a well-rounded team rebounding effort with 9 caroms.

This week the Indians have a busy schedule consisting of 3 games. On Tuesday, they traveled to Susquehanna to play a tough nationally ranked team. Tonight, they host Lycoming, and on Saturday they are on the road again as they travel to Shippensburg.

$3,125 Earned In Marathon

Proceeds benefit Multiple Sclerosis

by Cindy Duick

Juniatian Marathoners earned $3,125.44 benefitting the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation during the 24-hour Circle-K Marathon Friday and Saturday in the new gym.

Eighty-two Juniata students participated in the marathon playing volleyball, board games, dancing or rocking the hours away. "We'll give up our healthy bodies for frail bodies," is how one marathoner explained their motivation and commitment to stay awake and active for 24 hours on a weekend.

There were eight volleyball teams which rotated every 15 minutes to take a break every 45 minutes. In total, by the end of the marathon, each team had played over 72 games. Individual teams had up to $17.66 pledged per hour and together acquired $1920.72 in the 24 hours.

With three hours left to go, volleyball players remained undaunted, commenting, "It's FUN!" . . . "I'll do it again." And despite swollen and sore hands, arms and feet, "I want to do it next year!" These experts at marathon volleyball had some advice for next year's crew, "Wear very comfy shoes, even slippers . . . Don't forget ace bandages or old socks to protect your arms."

The board games group consisted of four teams who had a 15-minute break each hour. One team had a $28.37 per hour pledge for MS due to Anita Heinbaugh who had collected $21.93 in pledges per hour. As a total, the board games tallied $1062.48 after 24 hours for MS.

The games each team played were varied, including Dungeons and Dragons, Star Fleet Battles, Backgammon, Monopoly, Life, Othello, Battleships, UNO, Pinochle, Water Works, and Rummy.

When asked why they would put themselves through all the monotony, board games players replied, "Because we felt it was well worth it," and, "Because we thought it was for a good cause."

Even Dr. Eyman, Circle-K advisor, and Dr. Gooch joined the marathon Friday night as they sat down and played board games for a few hours.

There were two rockers. Penny Anderson and Melynda Davis continually rocked on their rocking chairs with a 15-minute break each hour to together donate $49.20 for MS.

Neither of the two dancing teams made it through the 24 hours. Carolyn Saulnier did last 11 hours, and with her partner Rick Dietz, who lasted 9 hours, contributed $22.25. Claire Barnard and Dave Trinkley danced 7½ hours before giving in to painful muscles and feet, adding $34.65 to the total. The dancers also had a 15-minute break after each hour.

Disc jockey Chris Johnson kept the music flowing, the volleyballers rotating, and the break schedule intact as he donated 24 hours and $24.14 to the cause.

Food, donated by churches of the area and local organizations, was available to participants during breaks at the marathon. Assortments of cookies, sandwiches and fruit were donated by the 15th Street Church, the First Baptist Church, Feagley's Produce, and Riverside Market. McDonalds donated 150 hamburgers and orange drink Friday evening. The Huntingdon Kiwanis Club, especially Rick Hoke, fundraising chairman, helped in getting the local organizations to donate food.

In addition, all participants had meal breaks 8-8:30 a.m., 12-12:30 p.m. and 5-5:30 p.m. Saturday.

During the marathon a weary but still enthusiastic Circle-K President, Lisa Fusco, exclaimed, "I think it's going great!" She felt the DJ idea was good and resulted in a variety of music. Being in the new gym

Binder's Grinders — One Hot Item

by Ron Renzini

With an average nightly sale of 175 hoagies, Binder's Indian Grinders have become the hottest selling item on Juniata's campus.

The grinders, which are being made this term by Small Business Management class, are offered for sale Sunday through Thursday 8:30-11:30 p.m.

The group of 12 students, who make up the Binder's Grinders organization, believe that "The quality one receives for the price" is one of the main reasons for their success. They also attribute their delivery service for the large amount of orders thus far received.

Original forecasts done by Binder's Grinders revealed that the campus would buy between 30-50 Italian or Ham and Cheese hoagies a night.

This would require a staff of four students every evening to take phone orders, make the product, and deliver it to the customer. The staff has now been stepped up to six students an evening in order to meet demand.

Like all new enterprises, Binder's Grinders has run into problems during the first few weeks of operation. One problem is keeping up with demand. The students, during the first two weeks, have had difficulty finding a median of rolls to order. The problem is in the fact that the rolls are picked up twice a week. With limited storage space, the group has had a problem in forecasting ahead of time the number of grinders to be sold. This has resulted in twice selling out of grinders before closing time.

Starting this past week, Binder's Indian Grinders have raised the prices of their Italian and Ham and Cheese hoagies by 30¢ and 25¢, respectively. Although a better quality meat is now being used in the Italian Sub, the Ham and Cheese has remained the same.

According to Karena Stellar, an Indian Grinders worker, "Our main reason for increasing prices was to decrease demand." But she said the increase has failed to make a noticeable curtailment in orders. "We are still getting a lot of orders."

With all of their success, the group now has the task of deciding what to do with their profits. Different ideas are being discussed by the group, but nothing has been determined as of this date.

For the future, Binder's Grinders is planning to run "weekly" specials. The specials include this week's Roast Beef, Turkey Subs, and taking orders for delivery on Super Bowl Sunday.

Soviet Issue Addressed

by Beth Stravino

On Jan. 19, Dr. Dimitri Simes spoke to an overflowing crowd in the Faculty Lounge at 8:15 p.m. Dr. Simes is the department head of Soviet and Eastern European Research at Johns-Hopkins University.

Dr. Simes, a Soviet born, raised, and educated Ph.D., emigrated to the United States ten years ago during a liberal Soviet period. Simes opened his lecture by joking that hell is a local call from Moscow. He then went on to describe Andropov, the newly selected General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

Andropov's past experiences include an ambassadorship to Budapest and Chairman of the KGB. Simes cautioned against American hopes that Andropov will prove to be a liberal Soviet leader. Simes said that it will be impossible to predict Andropov's behavior on the basis of his record as a subordinate. His actions as a leader will surely differ, but before he can act as a leader, he must protect his position. Soviet government loyalties are currently divided, and Andropov first must stay in power and gain polit-

Recruitment Policy Questioned

It has come to the attention of The Juniatian that there is a serious problem with the football recruitment policy here at Juniata.

This is not a recent problem which has just occurred, but is rather a problem that should have been dealt with a long time ago.

Presently, the football team brings recruits up for the weekend; that is so they can see what college life is all about. But, is that what they really do? The recruits are given a license of complete freedom. They are thrust upon a current member of the football team who is responsible for giving them lodging and entertainment for the weekend.

Unfortunately, most of the entertainment consists of parties and drinking; activities it seems most recruits are unable to handle. It appears that after a night of drinking, the recruits seem bent on making trouble.

The events of this past weekend in South, North, and Lesher strengthen the point that something needs to be done. Football recruits who came up for the weekend, decided to go on a rampage; and why not, who is there to control them.

Many of the recruits don't even consider coming to the school; they come up to get the free room, free food, and entertainment.

Who is responsible for these recruits? The football players? Should they be expected to give up their weekend to babysit immature high school seniors?

Juniata's notoriety does not come from sports, although they are important for college life. Our notoriety comes from our academic excellence; more specifically the high percentage of Ph.D.'s this school produces.

However, football recruits get special treatment at this school, while others who are coming here for the educational aspects do not get special treatment.

The contributions of the latter student far outweigh the contributions of the former prospective student. So, why should football recruits be given special treatment?

The Juniatian believes that this is an intolerable situation which should be corrected immediately!!

Dear Editor:

As a student of Juniata College, I have become increasingly worried about an issue that I believe can no longer be ignored; the wholesale recruitment of high school seniors for Juniata's football program. Although I realize that recruitment is important for all intercollegiate sports, there is a growing concern among the student body that the football team's current system of recruitment is doing significant physical, as well as, psychological damage to Juniata College and its residents.

As well as being a student, I am also a Resident Assistant. In this capacity I am directly confronted with the emotions of the individuals of my floor, as well as, the damage caused by the football recruits. The incident that occurred this weekend in South Hall is only one of a long chain of occurrences pertaining to recruits that R.A.s and residents have had to face. Fortunately most confrontations are not as severe as what happened in South, but too frequently these unnecessary situations do occur, and when they do, the resources that the R.A.s have to deal with them are limited.

As President of Varsity J Club I see the recruitment program in a different, but unfortunately negative, light. The recruits that are accepted here at Juniata are deceived into believing that they are stamped with a special status. A stamp that gives them the right to carry a chip on their shoulders throughout their four years of college. Too often I have heard complaints from athletes and non-athletes alike about incidents in which football players have used intimidation as a means for getting their own way, both in the dorms and in the new Student Recreation Center. The mishandling of recruits is only a part of what the college has let the football program become. This past football season was nothing short of an embarrassment for Juniata, not so much in the team's win/loss record, but for the actions of its individuals both on and off the field.

Although I am a strong supporter of intercollegiate sports, no team should ever be allowed to continue behavior that is detrimental to the positive atmosphere of the student body or the reputation of the school. I hope that with past experiences in mind, more strict measures are taken to curb such negative actions in order to preserve Juniata's tradition of excellence.

Signed,
Dave Sloan

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my appreciation to the ALGS for cleaning up promptly and properly after their party on Friday the 14th. Only our own RHA has done a better job of leaving the lounge as they found it. Thank you.

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter last week concerning the prohibition against wearing dark-soled shoes on the racquetball courts. I sympathize with Mr. Kralik about spending all kinds of time and money to find a good, comfortable pair of shoes. However, if he knew anything about playing racquetball or racquet sports in general, he would have known that white-soled shoes are worn for playing. If he didn't know, he could have asked the salesperson which shoe would be best for the sport he wanted. For instance, high-top sneakers used for basketball would not be bought for serious running. Generally, dark-soled sneakers are for outdoor use, specifically, running. The dark soles would scuff up the floors of the racquetball courts. I don't think it was the Athletic De-

Part I: Historical Background

by Lisa Ellek

"Couldn't you choose a less expensive sport?"

My Mother. The woman who complains that I pick out the most expensive item of clothing even on the sales rack. So when my mother suggested when I was back in junior high — when plaid elephant-leg pants and mood rings were "in" — that I express an interest in something other than skiing (basketball, volleyball, etc.), I didn't pay much attention. Then my mother looked at me and realized that at 84 pounds, I wasn't the basketball-volleyball type.

The First Time. Everyone remembers their first time. My first time on skis came at a phase where it didn't matter if I had eight layers of clothing on. Of course, I was thoroughly convinced that I was the fattest blob that ever stepped into her bindings, but with my seventh grade weight I didn't have to wet my finger to see which direction the wind was blowing, I just stood there and whichever way I fell was nature's sign.

I wasn't good that first time, but it was to be expected. There was snow and there was frustration. There was the nagging problem which occurs when one gets cold and drinks two cans of pop on the bus and realizes it's not going to be easy to take off the leotards, long underwear, and two pairs of wet jeans. To think, that first night, that getting my skis on was going to be my worst problem. . . . After that it was all downhill . . . on my bottom, however.

When I was in eighth grade I joined the church youth group — the week before they went on their three-day ski trip. I can remember deciding that Father Joe looked niiiice in his ski bibs. Then I felt I should go to confession but I was afraid Father Joe would be my confessor. It was during that trip that I had my first "neg-

Rome — A new revision of the Roman Catholic Canon Law, issued Tues. by Pope John Paul II, took nearly 20 years to complete and shows changes set forth by the Second Vatican Council. The revision stresses rights of the laity, giving bishops more power to make decisions locally, and reducing the number of religious obligations expected of Roman Catholics. Church specialists familiar with the revised code say it emphasizes meeting peoples' needs rather than issuing restrictions. One example of this is that it reduces the number of offenses punishable by excommunication from 37 to six.

Washington — U.S. Government Officials report investigations are underway to discover if nuclear plants throughout the country are using substandard steel components sold to them fraudulently marked.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials said Sat. that only a small part of the fraudulently marked steel had been found. They stressed that the material traced to nuclear plants did not impose a threat to public health or safety. However, the parts could cause a problem if used in primary or emergency cooling systems.

The investigations began earlier this month after the Commission learned that perhaps thousands of substandard and falsely labeled small steel components had been sold since 1960 and could have been used in nuclear plants. The components included items such as small pipes, pipe fittings, and tubes.

Managua, Nicaragua — Central America is still in civil war, five years after the rebellions against Nicaragua's Somoza regime spread instability throughout the region. The prospects for peace remain minimal according to government officials, rebel leaders and foreign diplomats. There are many divisions and contradictions within rightest and leftist forces. A few dozen army and guerrilla commanders control the fate of the 22 million Central Americans.

Washington — Federal farm price support costs rose to their highest level in 50 years during the last fiscal year and are expected to rise even more this year. Federal budget officials say support costs for the year ending on Sept. 30 were $11.9 billion and will exceed $15 billion this year. This is three times the amount anticipated when the fiscal 1983 budget was proposed a year ago.

Buenos Aires — Members of a visiting U.S. Congressional group said Sat. that the Reagan Administration is considering lifting the ban on arm sales to Argentina, while at the same time maintaining the arms embargo of Chile. Both embargoes were imposed by Congress in the mid '70's because of human rights abuses. Conditions in the human rights situation have improved in Argentina more than in Chile, hence the reason for considering to raise the ban.

Warsaw — Polish authorities plan a 15% price increase on gas, electricity, coal, cigarettes, coffee and certain types of fish as well as a 12% price increase on alcohol, and increases of 100% in apartment rents, reported the newspaper Zycie Warzawy Sat. These increases are added to earlier increases this month of 100-200% on bus and train fares. The plan of increasing prices is aimed at reducing an inflationary surplus of $5.2 billion.

Tote To Improve

by Jim Biles

A committee to improve the second floor of Ellis and the Totem Inn has been organized by Center Board.

The committee, which includes both students and faculty, will meet to discuss ways that "Tote" and the entire second floor can be made more attractive and useful to the college community, according to Center Board Chairperson Britta Harris.

Director of Programming Wayne Justham will meet with the committee to help with the decision making, but he had no ideas for changes, saying that he would "leave that up to the committee to decide."

Opportunity for Peacemaking

by David Hostetter

Juniata students once again will have the opportunity to participate in the collegiate New Call to Peacemaking Conference. This year's meeting of students and faculty representing Friends (Quaker), Mennonite, and Brethren colleges will be held at Manchester College in Manchester, Indiana.

1983 marks the fourth time that the annual conference has been held. Juniata students have been a part of the New Call for the past three years, the conference having taken place at Juniata in 1982. The theme for this year's two day conference will be based on the relationship of Peace Studies and the liberal arts.

The dates for the conference are Friday, February 25, through Saturday, February 26. Those participating will leave early on that Friday and return late Sunday. Students can get involved by signing up for the trip at the College Info desk in Ellis Hall. Costs of transportation and registration will be underwritten by the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee.

Vocke Returns From Europe

Sabbatical spent on research & teaching

by Robert Riefler

After nearly a year in Europe, Professor William Vocke, chairman of the Political Science Department, has returned to Juniata.

Vocke teaches political science classes, mostly in the international relations area, as well as statistics. He is on the International Program and Peace and Conflict Studies committees, advisor to the International Club, and involved in the foreign exchange program.

Originally from Ohio, Vocke attended Wittenberg University before going on to graduate school for international relations and foreign affairs at the University of South Carolina. He taught for two years at a state university in New York. His work has been published in books and magazines.

On sabbatical last year, Vocke spent nine months in Germany and four months at the University of South Carolina, where he was the visiting research professor. He lectured and taught at several European universities, and studied the political process in Europe. Vocke says his trip was a "thrilling experience," but it was "nice to be home."

Vocke loves sports and movies. He lives with his wife and two daughters. He likes Juniata, and feels the atmosphere is good for raising a family. He would like to see more students take advantage of the International Program and other campus activities.

Gambling on Success

by Sheila Squier

This year, the J-Club's annual tradition, Casino Night, will help kick-off Winter Week's Weekend.

At 9:00 p.m. all anxious gamblers can begin testing their luck on black jack, roulette, craps, and various other games of chance. Those who crave the thrill of a day at the track will be happy to place bets on their favorite hamster and cheer it on to victory.

The game tables will be manned by J-Club members and professors. According to Dave Sloan, J-Club President, the response from the professors is encouraging. As of Jan. 20, 30 had already agreed to participate.

Throughout the night, winners will accumulate stubs; one for each victory against the house. At the end of the night, a raffle will be held. Gifts, such as old uniforms, items donated by local merchants and of course the typical gag prizes (empty coke cans, broken shoe strings) will be among those disguised packages that unsuspecting stub holders will bid on, hoping Lady Luck stays with them in this final, crucial gamble-what-their-stubs-will-purchase.

All this wild wheeling and dealing will take place in the Sports and Recreation Center's Multipurpose Room. Casino Night will be the first party held here, so don't miss out on this "first."

The two remaining traditions of the night not yet mentioned are the refreshments and the proper attire. No jeans are allowed. Remember, you are going to spend your evening in a casino; we're talking classy. Music will be provided for the gamers (music calms the savage beast or gambler, whatever the case may be!) by none other than the station that means music, V103.

The J-Club is relying on this annual event to boost their budget. While any student receiving a letter is automatically a member of J-Club, not all letterers are active. This year, however, the 50 members who are active are all working hard to accumulate points toward jackets. These points are then converted into dollars which taps the Club's finances. So, by releasing your gambling tendencies, you are supporting an athlete.

J-Club isn't stopping with Casino Night. In the near future, they will be selling Juniata painter caps. Keep your eyes open for those. In the meantime, see you at Casino Night!

Neil Young — Trans
by Adam Schlagman

Neil Young's latest album, Trans, is the perfect example of good intentions lost in translation. The ostensible theme of Trans is danger of a computerized human metamorphosis. Young sees the present day man in a state of transition between man's complex emotions and ultimate humanness to a state of computerized thought and control. The battle scene is set, Young versus Computer, yet neither wins. Young delivers his argument in such a manner that all meaning is lost in the impersonality of the album's production.

Young testifies in the song "Computer Age" that "you need me like ugly needs a mirror" and that is precisely the point that he is trying to make by so varying his musical style.

Effectually, a traditional rock and roller, Young stands out with certain folk and anti-establishment tendencies. With three exceptions, Trans is a computerized mania of music. The vocals sound as though Young sang them through his nose and passed them through more wires than a transcontinental phone call. The music, for the most part represented by a computerized symphonic bleep, is not at all moving or interesting. At least half the music on the album is reminiscent of the type of work done by Kraftwork, a German synthesizer band which emphasizes repetitiveness. The question remains, however, why the drastic change in musical styles.

Young believes that through his presentation of a computerized shape of things to come, he is best able to make his point clear. I disagree. The extensive use of synthesizers employed by Young only serve to negate the sensitivity of his words. In fact, the nature of the music in some cases causes the lyrical argument to be weakened by repetitiveness. Make note, by no means do I suggest that Neil ought to stifle his musical creativity, but that the usage in this context is simply not effective.

As previously noted, there are three songs on Trans that conform to Young's traditional nature. "Little Thing Called Love" and "Hold on to Your Love" are more representational of earlier work, yet are no better than filler here. The third, "Like an Inca" will be reserved for later comment. Essentially, the first two songs do not belong with the general flow of the album, but are probably added to provide some acoustic relief. Of the synthesizer material, I find only one song worthy of merit. "Sample and Hold" is a song very much in the vein of Roxy Music's later work under Bryan Ferry. The logical end to Ferry's observation of plastic love in a transient society, "Sample and Hold," is a computerized attraction which replaces love.

What distinguishes "Sample and Hold" over songs like "We R in Control" is that the former displays emotion in more human terms than the latter. Young's voice is not channeled through quite so many wires; it almost sounds like a person singing.

In order for these songs to be effective, the pleading voice of Neil Young, that distinguishes man from machine, is needed. It is for the same reason that the new version of "Mr Soul" failed here. Originally, a Buffalo Springfield song of a musician in search of himself, Young now indicates that the modern musician must search within a maze of wires to find Mr. Soul. The emotional side of the song is destroyed in that because of its synthetic delivery, the new version searches with a head rather than a heart.

This finally brings us to "Like an Inca" which is easily the best song on the album. Sounding to the tune of "Like a Hurricane," "Inca" sums up Young's position on music and on progress. Recorded in traditional fashion, Young rebukes the notion that progress is the savior of man: "Said the condor to the praying mantis: 'We're going to lose this place just like we lost Atlantis. Brother we got to go sooner than you know. The Gypsy told my fortune. She said that nothin' showed!'" In "Like an Inca" Young displays the sensitivity and tenderness for which he is famous. A sensitivity which is indeterminable through the waves of machine translation that comprise most of the album.

I am encouraged by Young's intentions on Trans, if nothing else, for it is a four song album at best. As for Young's computer work, it sounds fine, only not in this context. It will be interesting to see where this album goes commercially, but regardless, expect something completely different from the master of surprise on the next circuit. Neil Young, man of a million moods.

Review
The Rose

by Robert Reifler

"The Rose," shown in Oller Hall last Friday night, succeeds in presenting outstanding characterizations. The movie's flaw is its length.

The 1979 film, based loosely on the life of Janis Joplin, concerns the career of rock singer 'The Rose' (Bette Midler). Her personal relationships and abuse of alcohol are followed; the theme is "The price I pay for my success is failure in my personal life."

The Rose's emotional swings are portrayed with uncanny credibility. One moment she'll be in her glory performing, the next she'll be screaming angrily, and the next she'll be begging forgiveness. Bette Midler's outstanding performance won her an Oscar nomination.

Frederic Forrest stands out as 'The Rose's' lover, who has trouble putting up with her mood swings. His performance earned him an Oscar nomination also. Alan Bates is effective as 'The Rose's manager, who does his best to protect her career from her unbalanced personal life.

Unfortunately, "The Rose" is too long, running over two hours. The result is a slow paced film, particularly at the beginning and end. Perhaps a more extensive editing of the film is in order.

A considerable amount of the film is devoted to 'The Rose' in concert. 'The Rose's' concert is true to the spirit of Janis Joplin. The title song ends the film.

Overall, "The Rose" is a worthwhile film. It holds the viewer's interest because it deals with a different kind of lifestyle. Its slow pace simply makes it a good film rather than an excellent one.

ative" encounter with the ski lift. I was entirely too busy trying to decide which hand my poles should be distributed to and how to uncross my heavy skis, that when the mechanical chair swept me off my feet it only took one bun at a time and left me dangling.

In a spectacular feat, I jumped from ten feet in the air to the surprise of my friends further back in line: "Geez, that girl who just fell off the lift looks just like Lisa. Oh, my God, it is!" My companion on the lift watched me let go and felt sorry for me, so she jumped. To the gasps of many the lift stopped, and as I lay sprawled out in the snow, the operator ran over to Sharon who was sitting in the snow fluffing her hair, and anxiously asked, "Are you all right?" I've had an aversion to lifts ever since.

Throughout high school we played a game of "Yes-we-do-have-a-ski-club/No-we-don't-have-a-ski-club," ending up on the losing side most of the time, so college reactivated my exposure to schussing and snowplowing. Once again I was not good but was it to be expected? My wintertime goal was to be the replacement for the Wide World of Sports "Agony of Defeat" example; my falls were all spectacular. The results were all in brilliant technicolor — green around the eyes, a black and blue chin.

"Couldn't you choose a less expensive sport?" my mother asked last year when I told her I absolutely needed the $150 jacket, the $99 pants, the $48 sweater, the $24 turtleneck, and the $15 hat. "Couldn't you choose a less expensive sport?" my mother asked this year when I quickly said over the phone, "Mom-have-you-decided-what-to-get-me-for-Christmas-how-about-skis."

Taking a slope expert with me to the ski shop, the first thing I noticed about "my" skis was that they would match my outfit. "You don't choose skis because they are color-coordinated. You want performance, durability," my expert scolded. A few days later when I took my mother back to the shop and she marvelled at the color of my skis, I looked her squarely in the eyes and haughtily said, "You don't choose skis because they are color-coordinated. You want performance, durability."

There was a big controversy as to which part of the car my skis should rest on when my brother and I went to pick them up. Should they rest on the dashboard? on the back of the driver's seat? the passenger's seat? Should they float in mid-air above the emergency brake? Tensions rose when we pulled into the driveway and the skis had to be removed from the car. "Don't hit the wall!" "Don't scrape them on the car!" "Don't carry them that way, you may break them!" My brother felt justice was served when I walked into the refrigerator with the tips . . . And then there was the "Office Christmas Party Aftermath."

The skis were standing against the wall next to our twinkly-lit artificial tree. My father had just returned home from his Christmas party and was sitting in the swivel chair next to the skis, extolling the future virtues of having a daughter out of school and working to buy her own skis, when he swiveled too far to the right. My mouth dropped open from the couch as I watched my beautiful new skis slide across the wall and fall into the tree in slow motion. I screamed. My weary mother mourned," "My tree did look nice at one time," as she saw the two broken hinged branches. The three of us looked at my father.

"Bob, go to bed."

My skis were broken in.

Who Is Mr. Lesher

by Amy Smith

Juniata's most appealing guy will be chosen at the "Mr. Lesher Charisma Challenge" in Catharsis lounge tonight at 9:00 p.m.

This unique Coffee House entertainment, sponsored by Lesher Hall, will be under the direction of Asst. Dean of Student Services Julie Kheener, Master of Ceremonies.

The eight contestants, nominated by members of the student body, will be judged on appearance — extent of personality expression in the formal dress competition, creativity and execution of a talent, and their conduct in a brief interview. The panel of judges will consist of selected members of the faculty and administration.

The admission is only $1 in advance/ $1.50 at the door to watch your own classmates compete for the $30 first prize ($20 second prize) and the title of "Mr. Lesher Charisma."

A disc jockey will provide background music, and traditional Coffee House refreshments will be served.

partment's fault for not telling him. Anyone who is serious enough to buy racquetball equipment should also be serious enough to buy the proper kind.

While I'm on the subject of shoes and the new gym, I've heard several people complaining about the fact that they have to carry in the shoes they will play in. Some of the people who think this is a dumb rule think they are beating the system by carrying their token sneakers, but not bothering to change into them, or saying they have another pair when they really don't. Although there may be some rules around this campus which seem a little crazy, I believe in this case there is a method to the madness.

After all, think about all the crap that gets carried in on your sneakers, especially during this time of year. There's oil, ice, grit and salt to name a few of the possibilities. All of these things have a tendency to ruin the finish on a new gym floor, not to mention making the surface slippery to play on. Therefore, I don't think that playing in shoes used strictly in the gym is an unreasonable request. We all know that the excellent condition of the new gym will wear off sooner or later. Wouldn't it be nice if it could be later?

where everything was on the same level, instead of Memorial Gym as in past years, took some reorienting, she noted.

"Everybody is a lot more energetic and into it at this late hour," as she compared this year's atmosphere at 5 p.m. Saturday to other years.

The efforts of the participants are recognized in not only the satisfaction they feel for contributing to the cause to wipe out MS, but also through various prizes offered by Circle-K. Every participant and Circle-K member who helped out will receive a marathon t-shirt. There are special prizes to be awarded according to the amount of money collected by individuals and teams. A black and white TV set will go to the person with the most amount of sponsor money collected. A check and other prizes will go to the team in each category with the most sponsor money.

Additional funds were also earned for MS during the weekend. Circle-K members collected donations for MS at the door of the marathon. Tussey-Terrace held a party Friday night during which 25¢ of every ticket sold went to MS.

Dave's Dribble

by Dave Lehmann

"Lately, newspapers mention cheap air fare
I've got to fly to Saint Somewhere
I'm close to bodily harm
Twenty degrees and the hockey game's on Nobody cares, they are way too far gone
Screaming 'boat drinks,' something to keep them all warm.
This morning, I shot six holes in my freezer,
I think I've got cabin fever
Somebody sound the alarm."

Jimmy Buffet (1979)

This chunk of Jimmy Buffet's "Boat Drinks," does a good job of expressing my winter depression. I'm sick as hell of ice, snow, and cold. Mittens, down coats, and knit scarfs cause me to scream. I don't enjoy looking out my window and not seeing one green leaf, and the only kind of skis that I want to see are water skis. Glimpses of snowmen fill my demented mind with devious plots concerning bunsen burners and extension cords. My favorite snowball is drenched in rootbeer syrup. Winter is again stealing the small measure of sanity that I hold.

Only one month of winter has passed and I'm already dreaming of the summer. Whenever lectures get a little dull, my mind drifts off to Ocean City, Maryland, and I'm suddenly stretched out on a body towel in the sand. My body sucks in the warmth of the sun, and my hair blows in the breeze off the surf. At my feet is a cooler full of Pina Colada, and at my head, alongside my left ear, is a transistor radio blaring out the Beach Boys. Once in a while, I prop my head up on an arm to watch the tanned boneys in bikinis strut by.

I don't know how much longer I'm going to accept winter. I smiled at our first snow, accepting it as inevitable, but my limit has been crossed. To the rest of Central Pa. it may be freezing outside, but today starts the first day of summer for me. I'll be sunbathing on the Sherwood Beach everyday after classes. Of course, I'll be careful not to stay out so long that I get burned. I've checked my inner tubes for leaks, and I'm ready to go tubing down the Raystown branch again. Finally, a steak and beer picnic out at the lake seems like fun. Nothing can match the good feeling of cooking steaks over a charcoal fire while my buddies, McD and AP, drunkenly float face down in the lake. After all, what would summer be like without a picnic?

Black Nights Unbeaten

by App

In a key early season handball matchup, the Black Knights soundly defeated the Quad Boys by the score of 33-19. The game was close throughout most of the first half as the teams traded goals. Bobby Wazalis had several goals for the Black Knights while Rick Eberly scored 6 consecutive goals to keep the Quad Boys in the game. However, late in the first half, the Black Knights took advantage of some poor defense on the part of the Quad Boys to score several point blank goals to take an 18-11 lead at halftime. In the first half, the Quad Boys shot 11-32 while the Knights were an impressive 18-36. At the beginning of the second half, Wazalis led an early Knight spurt that built their lead to double figures which the Quad Boys couldn't recover from. For the game, the Knights had 73 shots on goal making 33 of them with the team scoring leaders being Wazalis with 10, Tom McVay with 8 and Joe Rahs with 6. The Quad Boys converted 19 of 54 shots with Eberly leading the team in scoring with 9 goals. The win left the Black Knights with an unblemished 2-0 mark while the loss dropped the Quad Boys' record to 1-1.

No other games were played last week. This week's game of the week features the Quad Boys taking on Miller-East live from Memorial Gymnasium on Thursday nights at 8 o'clock.

Women's I.M.s Going Strong

by Cindy Duick

Women's indoor soccer action continued Wed. Jan. 19 with Terrace coming back to defeat The Wall 3-0. On Sun. Jan. 23 The Wall faced D.C. and The Destroyers at 7 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

In first half action, D.C. and The Destroyers took a 2-1 lead due to scores by captain Deb Casper and Esther Comphor. Michelle Shields scored for The Wall.

The Wall's Mary Ellen Sullivan missed a penalty shot on the D.C. goal in the first minutes of the second half. The ball remained on the D.C. side of the field as the Wall offense pushed for a score to tie the game. A Sullivan dead-center shot was deflected by the D.C. goalie.

A revitalized D.C. team took up the attack only to be prevented from scoring by Wall defensemen Kay Rockefeller and Laurie Rasco. The Wall's Beth Gallagher ran the ball downfield for a score tying the game 2-2.

Action returned briefly to the Wall goal as D.C. tried to regain their lead. Wall halfback Beth Gregory cleared the ball back downfield where the Wall offense took control once more. D.C. goalie remained strong against shots by the Wall, but the Wall's Marie Olver seized an opportune moment and slammed a shot into the D.C. goal on an assist by Jill Drexler. With this score The Wall gained the lead 3-2.

D.C. offensive attacks were cleared by the Wall's defensemen Gregory and Lisa Diener. The D.C. defense kept alert also. Goalie Patty Renwick saved a shot from Wall's Olver which would have put the Wall up by two. Renwick was under attack by the Wall again halfway through the second half as Wall halfback Denise Litecky sent the ball downfield setting up a Julie Robbins shot. The shot was high.

With three minutes to play D.C.'s Denise Cutillo started an offensive attack deep in Wall territory. She battered through the Wall defense but the shot with two minutes left to play was saved by the Wall's goalie. As time ran out the ball was in Wall control being dribbled down mid-field by Lori Swivel. The final score was The Wall 3, D.C. and The Destroyers 2.

by Michelle Bartol

Women's I.M. Basketball is in its second week of action. A strong offense by the Scopers led them to a 37-28 victory over Lesher, while hustle and rebounds made the difference for the Slammers as they defeated Ramblin Rappers 41-23.

Jessica Gould exploded, ripping down 16 rebounds and adding 12 points, to bring the Slammers to a 1-1 slate thus far in the season.

The first shot was low scoring with both teams working for the sure-shot. Terry Mulvihill, Gwen Heidecker and Jessica Gould combined to out-rebound the efforts of Tracy DeBlase, Carol Uber and Kathy Gibbons 20 to 10. The offensive boards allowed the slammers to get good position underneath for the follow-up shot. Excellent, quick defense by Stephanie Porter and Kathy Gibbons at the guard positions curtailed any outside shooting by the Slammers. The second half was a much faster paced game. The Slammers once again dominated on the defensive boards with Terry Mulvihill and Jessica Gould hitting Debbie Beran and Michelle Bartol with outlet passes for easy buckets. Ramblin Rappers' decision to go with a half-court press opened up the game even more for the Slammers, but the outside shooting of Stephanie Porter and "back-door" passing from Carol Uber to Tracy DeBlase kept the Rappers always within catch-up range. It wasn't until 4 minutes left in the game that the Slammers began to pull ahead.

Gould and Bartol led the Slammers with 12 apiece while Gwen Heidecker added 9. Rappers' Porter and DeBlase combined for 21 points.

The Scopers, led offensively by Suzanne Hickle, Sue Wampler and Linda Ramsay, kept turnovers to a minimum. The Scopers led at halftime, 22-11. The second half brought Heather (apple) Roche and Kathy Harwick up with consistent offensive rebounds. With the score 35-28, Linda Ramsay put in a buzzer shot to make the final 37-28, Scopers.

I.M. Basketball:
Three Teams Still Unbeaten

A-League

by John Summers

Mike Smale led all scorers with 17 points and also dished off six assists to pace Sherwood to a punishing 64-39 victory over the MO FO CO's Wednesday night in A-league basketball.

The MO FO CO's started out strong, as is their custom, but soon fell victim to frigid shooting (19% from the floor in the first half) and a staunch Sherwood defense.

Sherwood took advantage of this and sped to a 32-14 halftime lead.

The MO FO CO's field goal percentage increased markedly in the second half, but the deficit was just too big to overcome.

Sherwood spread their scoring around in this one as Mike Lesh hooped 16, John Michelone and John Brogan chipped in 11 apiece, and Rob Yelnosky hit for 10.

Rich Howey and Tom Cable each scored 12 for the MO FO CO's.

The Wide Rides won two of two this week to move into a first place tie with the Numbnuts. Wednesday night they had a strong second half to knock off the upset-minded G-Spotters 61-39, and Sunday they struggled by the MO FO CO's, 59-47.

The BAMF's week was not so productive. Not only did they lose the services of center Chris Ortyl for the season, but they forfeited their second game of the year. At the time of this writing it is not known whether or not they will still be eligible for league play.

Sunday night's big game featured The Numbnuts and Sherwood, two 3-1 teams vying for a piece of first place. It was supposed to be a battle and no one was disappointed.

Sherwood trailed by five with under two minutes remaining in the first half but battled back to hold a slim 33-32 halftime lead.

The second half remained close until the eight minute mark when The Numbnuts pulled away to win 69-57. Doug Wallace and Paul Miller both turned in stellar performances for the Numbnuts.

This Sunday at five o'clock the Wide Rides and the Numbnuts square off, with the winner gaining sole possession of first place.

MO FO CO's (39)

West 2 1-5 5, Clapper 1 0-0 2, Lappan 0 0-1 0, Cable 6 0-2 12, Howey 5 2-2 12, Melos 2 0-2 4, Haley 1 0-2 2, Ulmer 1 0-0 2, Ellery 0 0-0 0, TOTALS: 18 3-14 39.

B-League

by John Summers

The Runnin' Rebels continued their winning ways this week as they won two games and moved into first place in the Blue Flight of B-league basketball. The Rebels, now 4-0, hold a half game lead over Corky's Creampuffs, 3-0.

The Rebels survived a first-half scare Wednesday night to down Babylon By Bus, 43-32.

Behind Jay Hinish's strong offensive rebounding and the slick outside shooting of Dom Digennaro, Babylon By Bus moved to a 20-17 halftime lead. However, they were not as successful in the second half.

Rebel captain Chris Coller elected to go to a man-to-man defense after intermission and it proved to be a successful move.

The scrappy defense, combined with some hard-lock shooting by Babylon, was all the Rebels needed to take the lead for good.

Rebel point-guard Dave Pfeiffer led all scorers with 13, while Digennaro and Hinish tossed in 10 apiece for Babylon By Bus.

In other Blue Flight action this week: Corky's Creampuffs went 2-0 trouncing Wet Sand 48-25 and just getting by Jerry's Kids 37-34; The Pioneers defeated The Cripples 46-26; and 206 Long slipped by Wet Sand 34-31.

In Golf Flight Play, the Smegmas handed Return of Tab their first loss with a convincing 40-21 victory Wednesday night. The win, coupled with Tussey 217's 47-31 upset of The Gypsy, leaves The Smegms alone on top of their division.

In other games: The Grim Reapers had no problem in their 52-32 victory over Snatcher's Men, the Purple Helmets picked up their first win by beating the Marauders 38-36, and the Kayos knocked out the Purple Helmets 26-22.

C-League

by John Summers

As we approach the half-way mark of the Men's Basketball "C" League, there seems to be only one question: "Can anyone stop the Weekend Warriors?"

Theoretically, of course, the answer is yes! Any one of the other three teams in the league could knock the Warriors from the unbeaten ranks. Realistically, however, FA-Q seems to be the only team of comparable talent.

Following is a team-by-team breakdown for the clubs:

PRODIGAL SONS — CAPTAIN: Derek Flaig . . . STRONG POINTS: Coaching . . . WEAK POINTS: Depth, Rebounding . . . KEY PLAYERS: Lee Canfield, Gary Weston, Flaig . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Weekend Warriors . . . OUTLOOK: "Dismal, but we will win a couple." PREDICTION: Cellar Dwellers at 1-8.

FRED'S LAST MILLION — CAPTAIN: Pat Hepner . . . STRONG POINTS: Speed, Endurance . . . WEAK POINTS: Height . . . KEY PLAYERS: Mike Wasilus, Kevin Grube . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Us . . . OUTLOOK: "It's a well balanced league, but I think we will win it." . . . PREDICTION: A good "C"-league team, unfortunately others in this league would fare well in "B-league," 4-5.

WEEKEND WARRIORS — CAPTAIN: Jeff Rexford . . . STRONG POINTS: Size, Rebounding . . . WEAK POINTS: Depth . . . KEY PLAYERS: Rob Yelnosky, Rich Kimmey, Rexford . . . TEAM TO BEAT: FA-Q . . . OUTLOOK: "Undefeated" . . . PREDICTION: Should go uncontested for the most part, 8-1.

FA-Q — CAPTAIN: Gino Perri . . . STRONG POINTS: Height . . . WEAK POINTS: None . . . KEY PLAYERS: Everybody contributes equally . . . TEAM TO BEAT: Weekend Warriors . . . OUTLOOK: "We already forfeited one, but we're still going all the way." PREDICTION: Could be a Dark Horse, only one with a shot of overtaking the Warriors, 5-4.

The C-League, unlike its "A" and "B" counterparts, will have no playoffs. Competition consists solely of a triple round robin where each team will meet its three opponents three times apiece.

For this reason, every loss will be critical. The overall records after the round robin will determine the champion.

The Weekend Warriors have gotten off to a quick start at 4-0 and are two full games ahead of a second-place FA-Q. This is due in part to an untimely forfeit by the FA-Q squad this past Sunday night.

The Prodigal Sons and Fred's Last Million each sport 1-3 records.

If anyone is to catch the Warriors they had better do it soon, before another "Weekend" rolls by.

The Bumping Babes were beaten by the Red Cross II in a tough three game match, 9-15, 15-5, 11-5.

The first game began slowly with both teams exchanging serves. Then, Rachel Brown's serving led the Red Cross II to an early 5-1 lead which was never given up.

The Bumping Babes came within one point, 4-5, on great serving and playing by Cindy Foreman. Red Cross II remained undaunted and gradually built up a 10-5 lead. Play then became sloppy as the teams traded serves five times. The Bumping Babes tried another comeback combining the serves of Shirley Parsons and good teamwork to narrow the difference to one again making it 9-10. The Bumping Babes then lost serve and Didi Pinkstone led Red Cross II to a 14-9 lead with excellent serving. Red Cross II put the game away, after two game points, on a Vicki Hoffman spike.

In the second game, The Bumping Babes were in complete control. It appeared that Red Cross II had fallen apart. Foreman served the Bumping Babes to a 5-0 lead. After an exchange of points, Michelle Bomba took the Bumping Babes from an 8-2 lead to a 12-2 lead. Red Cross II tried to come back but failed as Karen Bollman put the game away on her serve 15-5.

The third game looked like it was going to be a rout as Red Cross II built up a 9-1 lead on the serves of Pinkstone and Brown. The Bumping Babes, however, would not die. They came back on the serves of Lisa Wilson and Roxanne Binner to within one point, 8-9. The game became deadlocked as both teams exchanged serves and points, with the Bumping Babes taking the lead 11-10. The letdown that Red Cross II suffered in the middle of the game did not remain. Jean Moulder served Red Cross to a 14-11 lead; then after one game point Red Cross became victorious, winning 15-11.

In other volleyball action on Sunday, Miller High Life defeated the Zingers 15-1, 15-6, Great Expectations defeated Ester's Molesters 6-15, 15-4, 15-12. The Sluggs defeated Tussey Terrors 15-5, 15-8, and Awesome Forces defeated S.S. & A.J. 15-7, 4-15, 15-12.

In Tuesday action, the Bumping Babes defeated Awesome Forces 15-3, 4-15, 15-12. The Sluggs defeated Red Cross II 16-14, 15-12, Ron's Women defeated S.S. & A.J. 15-3, 15-5, Great Expectations defeated Tussey Terrors 3-15, 3-15, 15-10, 15-10, and Ester's Molesters defeated the Zingers 6-15, 15-6, 15-12.

Ma Head never made any of my games because she was always downstairs in the kitchen where it sounded like the ceiling was going to fall in. It must have been those 100,000 screaming fans, because I never thought I made much noise.

I remedied that situation by moving my home court to the basement where I had more court space, and also a real backboard. I taped off sidelines and a key and I was set for the next big game.

What reminded me of all this was finding my old nerf hoop in the closet over break. I brought it down to school just for the heck of it to give everyone a laugh. Little did I know that there would be two-on-two games going on in my room every night. As a matter of fact, I just got hit with a loose ball while typing this column.

All my childhood practice must have paid off, because I currently lead the apartment in free-throw percentage at 91%, seven points ahead of my roommate.

So, any time you feel like getting a pick-up game together and the gym is full, stop over to 104 Flory where the nerf hoop action is fast and furious.

Grapplers Win After 22-0 Deficit

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Men's wrestling team notched up two more victories this weekend defeating Fredrick College 42-9 and King's College 25-22.

What was to be a tune-up for the Juniata matmen proved to be full of forfeits. Those who won for Juniata were Chris Stutz (142 lbs.), who won 6-5, Craig Stafford (150 lbs.), who won 12-5, and Chris Young (177 lbs.), who won by a fall.

Juniata faced a tough King's College team in their second match, coming from behind to defeat the Kings 25-22. The Grapplers found themselves losing 22-0 when things began to turn around.

Dave Sloan (150 lbs.), nursing an injured ankle, defeated his opponent 7-0; Young defeated his opponent by a fall; and, Rick Schuck won by a superior decision, 9-0. These victories brought Juniata to within three points, 22-19.

Then, in the most exciting match of the day, Joel Beach went up against the Kings' heavyweight. Beach took control from the beginning, using speed and skill to outmaneuver his opponent. Beach built up an 11-0 lead before pinning his Kings' man and giving Juniata the victory 25-22.

The wrestling team's overall record is 4-2, not including tournaments; and they are 4-1 in the MAC's.

This weekend the wrestlers will travel to the two day Allegheny Tournament where they will face many Division I schools, including the University of Pittsburgh.

Women Drop 2 but win at Home

The women's basketball team had a busy schedule last week with 3 games and the highlight was the snapping of their five game losing streak by beating Lycoming at home 64-48 on Thursday night. Earlier in the week the Indians dropped a 69-53 nod at Susquehanna and on Saturday they were beaten 109-72 at Shippensburg. The girls' record for the season now stands at 3-6.

Against Lycoming, the Indians started slowly as it took them 3 minutes to get on the scoreboard. They recovered to knot the score at 10 at the 12 minute mark of the half, but sloppy play allowed Lycoming to open up a 7 point lead late in the half. However, a hustling defense and good shooting by Becky Rhodes and Holly Crable sparked a comeback that sliced Lycoming's lead to one point, 24-23, at the half.

In the second half, the teams traded buckets until Lycoming team leader Amy Elder drew her fourth foul. Taking advantage of this, the Indians turned a one point deficit into a commanding 7 point lead. Ellen Fasnacht and Nancy Roach keyed the spurt with 2 baskets apiece. Juniata slowly pulled away from there and built their lead into its biggest margin of 16 points, 64-48, at the buzzer. Rhodes led the Indians with 18 points and 15 rebounds with Crable chipping in 14 points and Fasnacht adding 12.

In a rematch on an earlier season confrontation, the Indians traveled to Susquehanna and the outcome was the same as they lost a 69-53 decision. Susquehanna jumped to an early lead and led by 15 points, 39-24, at half. Juniata was hurt by cold shooting as they shot only 34%. However, Susquehanna was hot as they singed the nets at an impressive 58% in the first half. In the second half, the Indians played Susquehanna even, but couldn't cut the deficit down to a working margin. The Indians had a balanced scoring attack with 4 girls in double figures. Michelle Wengryn led the way with 13 points, Crable had 12, Patty Ryan had 11 and Rhodes added 10. Rhodes also led the team in rebounding as she hauled in 13 caroms.

Against a powerful Division II Shippensburg team, the Indians hung tough early and trailed by only a point, 11-10, when Shippensburg called their first timeout. After the timeout, Shippensburg proceeded to reel off 10 unanswered points and never looked back. They led 56-35 at the half and increased their lead throughout the second half as they scored almost at will. Fasnacht led the lady Indians in scoring with 16 points and Rhodes had a well rounded effort as she amassed 15 points and a team high 15 rebounds.

The lady Indians have a light schedule this week with only one game on Saturday when they host Messiah.

Fans Needed For Albright

A balanced scoring attack and a second half surge allowed Juniata to hold off a scrappy Dickinson Red Devil come-back and hold on to a 65-64 victory, snapping a seven game Indian losing streak.

The Tribe trailed early but knotted the score at 26. Dan Feruck's jumper at the buzzer gave the Indians a 33-32 halftime lead.

Red Devil forward, Ed Ward, gave Dickinson the early second half lead with a three point play to open up the period's scoring. Juniata battled back and took a 41-40 advantage on an Andy Witmer inside bucket.

The Indians opened up an 11 point lead on Lee Hudzicki's six straight points and John Weiner's bucket and pair of freethrows.

The tension then mounted as Juniata turned the ball over four straight times, allowing the Devils to come to within one. But the Indians held on to the ball in the last minute to save the win.

Paul Kardish led the Tribe with 12 points, followed by Feruck and Mark Rucinski with 10 apiece. Witmer and Hudzicki added nine and eight respectively.

At Lebanon Valley, the Indians started slow and trailed by six early. They battled back to take an 18-14 lead before their 12 first half turnovers allowed the Flying Dutchmen to take an 11 point lead into the locker room.

In earlier action, the Tribe dropped a pair of three point decisions, falling to Delaware Valley 57-54 and at Lebanon Valley by an 88-85 score.

On Saturday the Indians saw a 23-20 halftime lead slip away as the Aggies outscored the Tribe in the second stanza 37 to 31.

Jay Nichols led all scorers, netting 21 points for the Aggies. Feruck was high for the Tribe with 20, while Kardish and Rucinski followed with 12 and 10 respectively.

With 12 minutes left in the game, a Hudzicki three point play and a following jumper cut the lead to two. Rucinski tied the score at 68 before Feruck gave JC their first second half lead at 70-68. However, the Dutchmen weathered the storm and pulled out the win.

Rucinski led JC with 26 followed by Feruck with 21.

Everybody has a favorite sport, right? I mean the sport that always made you late for dinner or kept the neighbors up at night when you played it under the lights. I had one or two favorite sports that often caused that kind of trouble but there was a different version of both sports that frequently caused some disharmony between me and the family heads.

The two sports were basketball and football and the other version was that one known as "nerf."

Nerf football became popular in my neighborhood because there were a number of younger kids around and the regular ball was too big and hard for them to handle. Some little kid got a nerf football for Christmas and the craze was started. Not only could the little kids catch the new ball better, we few bigger kids who used to always be the quarterbacks soon developed the touch of Dan Fouts with the smaller pill.

The problem that always got me in hot water came from Father Head. We could play the game on a smaller field so anyone's yard did nicely. Mine was probably the best because it was the biggest and had the fewest trees, which in anybody's yard always seemed to come up with some touchdown-saving tackles and sent some kid home crying in pain.

The problem was that Father Head wasn't in to us tearing up his lawn. He had enough trouble containing his anger at my golf divots, let alone having eight or ten kids out there digging trenches. After we let him in on a few games he began to see things in our perspective.

The other nerf related problem came indoors from Mother Head. The sport was nerf basketball. I had a nerf hoop mounted on my bedroom door and frequently liked to relive great fictional moments in basketball history. Fictional because the games always involved me playing for the Knicks

Senator Hatfield to Lecture at J.C.

Addresses issue of Christian Politics

U.S. Sen. Mark O. Hatfield (R-Ore.) will speak at Juniata College Friday, Feb. 4 as part of the college's J. Omar Good Lecture Series. The 8:15 p.m. lecture will be in Oller Hall.

A member of the Senate since 1967 and a two-term Governor of Oregon (1959-67), Hatfield will speak on the topic "Christian Politics in an Age of Crisis." Hatfield's address will carry the theme that there is no Christian answer to complex problems, only a Christian process for dealing with them. He will then discuss a variety of current national issues within that context.

A graduate of Willamette University and Stanford University with bachelors and masters degrees in political science, Hatfield served in the U.S. Navy from 1943-45, commanding landing craft at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Hatfield taught political science at Willamette and was dean of students there from 1948-56. He entered Oregon politics in 1951 when he was elected a State Representative. Hatfield moved on to the State Senate in 1955 and became Oregon's Secretary of State in 1957.

Because he represents a state where the federal government owns more than 50% of the land, Hatfield's prime areas of expertise include natural resource and public land issues. His chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee and its Energy and Water Resources Subcommittee, and service on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, provides daily involvement in energy-related areas, forestry, housing and water resource development.

As one of the earliest opponents of the Vietnam War, Hatfield maintains a keen interest in foreign affairs. He serves on the subcommittee funding U.S. foreign assistance programs, and is a Congressional leader in efforts to combat world hunger and raise human rights issues.

In addition, Hatfield serves on the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, the Joint Committee on Printing and the Joint Committee on the Library. He is the fifth ranking Republican in the U.S. Senate.

A leading Christian layman, Hatfield has been a critic of "civil religion." He has written extensively for religious publications, and is the author of three books, Not Quite So Simple, Conflict and Conscience and Between a Rock and a Hard Place. He is the co-author of Amnesty: The Unsettled Question of Vietnam.

Hatfield is married to Antoinette Kuzmanich Hatfield, former dean of women at Portland State College in Oregon. They have four children.

The J. Omar Good Lecture Series was established with funds from the estate of the late J. Omar Good, an 1896 Juniata graduate and Philadelphia printing executive who left $1 million to the college, constituting the largest gift ever made to Juniata.

Mr. Good was an active member of Philadelphia's First Church of the Brethren where he served as missionary treasurer, clerk and trustee. He died in 1969 at the age of 92.

The public is cordially invited to attend this free lecture.

Sharks bassist Shea Quinn lends vocals while lead vocalist Sam Lugar looks on in their dance/concert last Wednesday in Memorial Gym. The Sharks performed original music as well as that by other groups.

Author discusses Soviets

Soviet foreign policy toward Iran, Afghanistan and the Persian Gulf region will be the topic of the second Baker Lecture to be given at Juniata College Thursday, Feb. 3 at 8:15 p.m. in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge.

"The Soviet Union and the Arc of Crisis" will be discussed by Dr. Alvin Z. Rubinstein, professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania and a senior fellow at the Foreign Policy Research Institute.

The author of numerous books on Soviet foreign policy, Dr. Rubinstein is a leading expert in the field, and has served as a lecturer for the U.S. Department of State. He has received several grants, fellowships and awards from organizations such as the Earhart Foundation, American Philosophical Society, National Science Foundation, Rockefeller Foundation and Ford Foundation.

Dr. Rubinstein received his B.B.A. degree from the City College of New York, and holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania.

Sharks Attack Memorial Gym

by Ron Renzini

The Sharks, Central Pennsylvania's hottest new wave band, played to over 200 students in Memorial Gym on Wed., Jan. 26.

Here as part of Juniata's Winter Week, The Sharks were sponsored by the Dance Committee. According to Bill Herrera, a spokesman for the committee, "When the band was playing, no one was standing still in the whole place. It was incredible."

The Sharks, consisting of lead vocalist Sam Lugar, bassist Shea Quinn, guitarist Steve "Zero" Wettig, and drummer Doug Phillips, performed for three electric hours.

Songs they performed included material by A Flock of Seagulls, Billy Idol, Generation X, Elvis Costello, The Romantics, and The Clash.

The crowd seemed to enjoy The Sharks the best, though, when they performed their own numbers. "You Better Watch Her" and the sensational "(Take Me) Back To The Water" were just two of the songs that kept the crowd dancing and yelling for more.

They were so well received for the night's performance, that the crowd on hand demanded an encore. And an encore they gave, as they did a tune by The Ramones, "I Wanna Be Sedated," before a blown fuse cut the number short.

The Dance Committee is now hopeful that The Sharks will be available for an engagement sometime in the spring. If last week's performance and response was any indication of this group's dynamics, by all means, get ready for one great Shark attack this spring.

Applications now accepted

Anyone interested in applying for an editorial position for The Juniatian is reminded to pick up an application form at the Ellis Information Desk. The new board will take over spring term.

Anyone wishing to write or take photographs is welcome to attend weekly Tuesday assignment meetings in the office.

The deadline for board positions is Feb. 14. Applications should be mailed to Box 667 or given to a current board member.

Campus Activities: What Do Students Want?

Last Wednesday, the Sharks came to the Juniata campus as a part of the Winter Week festivities. The Dance Committee should be applauded for their efforts.

They brought a band to campus that proved to be a success. About 225 students attended the dance-concert, approximately one-sixth of the campus. Although the committee was disappointed with the turnout, the turnout was as good as past performances which have taken place on weekends.

The Juniatian asks, "Just what do the students at Juniata want from these respective committees?" Finally, a band of the highest quality in showmanship and music comes to campus and the turnout is still small. When Kix and Daddy Licks came, people complained of the price and the lack of dance room.

At the Sharks concert, the price was minimal and dance space was plentiful. Are the students here "dead" on weekday nights or what? What has to happen before students will come out in numbers to support an activity sponsored by the school?

The Juniatian hopes that the dance committee will take the hint of the crowd that did attend, to get the Sharks back in the Spring. Maybe a weekend date can be arranged and more of the students will feel they are able to attend.

Also on campus this week were activities sponsored by both the Winter Week and Spirit Week committees. The Juniatian would also like to congratulate these respective groups for their fine work in getting the campus involved in mid-week activities.

The week was full of events that helped the students in each dorm to work together in a fun way. Enough events were scheduled by the committees in various forms of activities, from sports to dress, that all could feel part of the competition.

The Juniatian hopes that activities during the week continue to be scheduled for the student body. It is our hope that many more students will take advantage of these opportunities when they present themselves. Events such as the Sharks are ones that students do not always have the opportunity to experience. Next time, let's open the door when opportunity knocks.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We would like to express our thoughts on last week's editorial on football recruitment and football players here at Juniata. We are not writing this letter in support of last weekend's recruits, but to clarify some important facts that have been established.

It is true that some football recruits in the past have gotten out of hand. This we do not deny. We would like to apologize to those students who were hurt in any way by recruits last weekend. This we are quite sincere about. However, we challenge certain comments made in last week's editorial.

First, recruits are not given a "license of complete freedom." These recruits are extended a friendly hand by the football program. It is some recruits who through this hand of friendship, get drunk and cause trouble. Sponsors in the past have not kept a tight hold on their recruits. This we admit. This problem has been addressed, and sponsors will now be responsible for their recruits' actions.

Next we challenge the comment that football players are "stamped with special status," and use "intimidation to get their way." These kinds of comments are unjustifiable in certain situations. We, as football players, do not enjoy any "special status." We go to class, study just as hard, live in dorms, and eat the same food as our fellow students. We may have been labeled with this kind of status, because we are more visible than other students through our athletic endeavors. This is something that cannot be avoided. As for the intimidation statement, this cannot be denied. It is just a few football players who use this tactic to obtain their way. We hope that the college community will not label the entire team as "hard asses," just because of a few players. In reality, the majority of the team are decent student-athletes.

The football team would like to assure the Juniata community that actions have and will be enacted to curb future incidents that involve football players. Some of these policies have been enacted by the administration. These include that no recruit can attend a social function where alcoholic beverages are served, and the football sponsor is responsible for their recruits. Along with these policies, the football team has enacted policies of their own. There will be stricter discipline established throughout the program, more Senior leadership, and the football players will "police their own ranks" both on and off the field.

In conclusion, the football team would like to let the college community know that their concerns have not fallen on deaf ears. We, as players, realize that our image has been tarnished. However, through these new policies, stricter discipline, and better Senior leadership, we as players feel that a New Beginning has emerged, and with the college community's support things will get brighter.

Dear Editor,

As a student and football player at Juniata College, I would like to respond to Mr. Dave Sloan's degrading remarks directed at all Juniata football players in last week's editorial column. I realize that there was a problem with the football recruitment policy. But, what was not known to Mr. Sloan was that there was a voluntary meeting of the football players (held prior to his letter) which concerned the recruitment problem. There was close to 100% turnout; showing that the players are also concerned. We confronted the problem and progress has been made.

However, more importantly, I would like to comment on Mr. Sloan's narrow-minded attitude towards J.C. football players in general. His insulting remarks

Style Points

by David Hostetter

The content of this week's article will be of particular interest to those irksome perfectionists who have been named to the Dean's List consistently since freshman year, or have exhibited other supernatural abilities. Maybe you'll gain some insight into how the other half lives.

The topic of this column is a drastic suggestion for the overhaul of the system by which we students are roped, sorted, and branded like steers for slaughter. I am referring to the grading system. Through four years of careful scrutiny, it has become evident to this reporter that the grades one receives are not commensurate to the actual effort put forth. Papers, presentations, projects, and tests do not begin to address the realities of how a student approaches the individual assignment or subject.

What is needed is a remedy for the disparity between final grades and the unmeasured intangibles that form an integral part of the learning experience.

One method that would fill the gap that now exists would be to adopt a method presently employed to score competitive diving and gymmastics: a style point system. Such a system could be standardized to evaluate the wide variety of behaviors that now are unmeasured. Specific examples shall be examined below.

Chronic lateness is a behavior common among students who cannot seem to adapt to an academic day that runs counter to previously acquired nocturnal habits. Tendencies towards boldness, such as striding right in front of the professor's lectern rather than quickly scooting into the first available seat should not go unrewarded. Some other techniques that need evaluation are the type that are employed in classes where the professor feels obligated to inquire about the reason for the student's tardiness. Immediately complimenting the professor's attire or discussing the details of the previous evening's big game serve as examples of behavior that should be measured as an addition rather than a detriment to one's overall score.

Another area that needs attention is the manner in which a student prepares an assignment or for a test. Presently it is only the content of these supposed exhibits of a student's capabilities that is considered. Not considered are things such as the time a student uses for preparation. It seems obvious that the student that can churn out a C paper by getting up 2 hours before class and typing one draft from memory is equal or superior to the student who incrementally prepares the same report a little each day and then gets a proper amount of sleep. Such a display of aptitude in the face of self-imposed adversity should not be dismissed.

News Briefs

Washington — Secretary of State, George P. Shultz embarked Saturday on a 12-day tour of the Far East. The visit includes talks in Japan, China, and South Korea. Shultz hopes to ease strains and disagreements in Chinese-American relations during the four days of talks to be held in Peking with top Chinese leaders. These are the first such talks between the two countries in nine months. Officials hope talks will clear up misunderstandings between the two nations, broaden the relationship and make it more stable. This is Shultz's first trip to this region since entering office last July.

United Nations, N.Y. — Worldwide illegal drug use is rising, threatening political stability and producing violent crime, reports a United Nations agency last Friday. The vast sums earned from drug trafficking override the resources devoted to surpressing it, warned the International Narcotics Control Board in Vienna. The board sighted new sources of serious concern in the uncontrollable production of cocaine in Peru and Bolivia. It is estimated that more than 4 million people, half of them 18-24 years old, abuse cocaine in the United States.

Los Angeles — Around 150 lbs. of cocaine, worth about $28.6 million, was seized Sunday when police raided a freighter in Los Angeles Harbor. The drugs had been stored in crewmen's dufflebags, strapped to couriers and delivered to a drug network run by Columbian nationals. Fifteen people were arrested in connection with the incident.

Washington — United States confiscations of heroin and cocaine increased greatly in 1982, but represent only 10-13 percent of the estimated total drug shipments in the U.S. The amount the Federal Government has spent intercepting drugs has tripled from 1977-1981.

London — British water and sewage workers voted Saturday to continue their 6-day strike and ignore Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's call for a return to work. Nearly 6 million people were advised to boil water and over 14,000 homes are without water.

Atlanta — The national Centers of Disease Control reported Saturday that outbreaks of influenza throughout the nation are beginning to result in an increasing number of deaths. Six hundred forty-nine deaths resulted from pneumonia and influenza during the week of Jan. 22. Total deaths from the previous week was 672. Federal health officials said several deaths usually occur from these two diseases each week regardless of whether there is a high amount of influenza activity or not.

Peking — China reached a $4.6 billion trade surplus last year — a record according to official figures released Saturday. Imports fell by 12.8% to 17 billion and exports rose by 3.5% to 21.6 billion. Surpluses led to rapid growth in foreign exchange reserves, which more than doubled.

Bangkok, Thailand — Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper, Nhan Dan said Saturday that President Reagan is "incapable" and has not learned from his mistakes. It also reported that there are many limitations to the United States' "global strategy of counterrevolution."

Students Default on Loans

SALT LAKE CITY, UT (CPS) — For the second time in a month, a study purporting to identify students most likely to default on their student loans has been released.

In a presentation to a meeting of the National Commission on Student Financial Assistance, researcher John Lee said the student most likely to default on a Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) borrowed less than $5000, attended a public two-year school, borrowed the money through a credit union, and borrowed last as a freshman.

The least likely defaulter borrowed more than $9,000 to attend a private college, borrowed for his or her senior year, and got the money through a bank.

Earlier in January, two University of Kentucky administrators released a study of National Direct Student Loan defaulters that showed a student's personality, not income level, was the most important factor in the decision to default.

Lee said using such data to help determine if a specific student

Meet the Prof

by Amy Smith

"Fresh out of grad school," Dr. Laurence J. Mutti was added to Juniata's Geology Department in the fall of 1978.

After receiving his Master's Degree from Beloit College, Wis., in 1971, Mutti held a teaching and maintenance job at a small Quaker boarding school in eastern Iowa. He then continued his education for five years at Harvard University.

An 1810, two-story, log house near Alexandria is where Mutti lives with his wife, Ginny, his two young daughters, and his blind Collie, Teiresius (who, by the way, was named after the blind Greek mythological prophet).

Included in his many interests is Mutti's hobby of raising Angora rabbits. He also enjoys hiking, camping, canoeing, photography, choral and folk music, and woodworking. He is currently in the process of building a partial solar addition to his house.

While doing research for his doctoral dissertation, a geographical mapping project entitled "Structure and Metamorphism of the Cranberry Region, Thor-Odin Gneiss Dome, Shusways Metamorphic Complex — British Columbia," Mutti and his wife spent three summers living in a mountain tent in British Columbia. Almost all the work was done above tree line, and they had to be lifted to the field area by helicopter.

In addition to his trips to British Columbia, Mutti has also visited other areas of the world. Prior to college, he spent a year in West Africa. West and East Europe and Russia are also included in his travels.

His most recent expedition, however, was spent a little closer to home. He spent the summer of 1981 exploring for diamonds in Colorado. Although he never actually discovered any, he did find deposits that most likely had diamonds in them.

"There are lots of things in the fire," said Mutti, referring to his future plans. He's hoping to spend a good part of the coming summer in Maine, vacationing and exploring rocks. A hopeful sabbatical is also in his plans: "I'm anticipating one sometime in the near future. I'm hoping to spend part of that time in Great Britain," he said.

It's a bit surprising that a man of Mutti's experience would end up in the small rural college of Juniata. He is satisfied, though, saying, "I enjoy it a lot. I like the size and the general philosophy. It's very much like that of the college I went to."

Queen Hog Named

Congratulations to the 1983 Juniata Ground Hog Queen and her Court. In a close race, the Raystown Field Studies gave their illustrious award to Beth Ann Reuther. Her runner up, should she not be able to fulfill her duties, went to Ellen Zaleskie.

The "Boss Hog" Ground Hog King award went, hands down, to Kevin "Kevy Kev" Smith. Finally, the Senior Hog Referendum winner was J. "HOG" Wittington.

Stepping down as reigning Co-Queens were Shirley Parsons and Sandy DiFelice. Bowing out as reigning Hog was Henry "Hide-a-bed" Coyne. Congratulations until next Ground Hog day.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS) — Nearly 25,000 college students lived in substandard campus housing — dorms or apartments which failed to pass fire and health inspections, were structurally unsafe, had no usable toilets, bathtubs or showers, or lacked basic hot and cold running water — during the 1980-81 school year, a just-completed study reveals.

The survey, conducted by the American Council on Education for the U.S. Education Department, found that of the estimated 2.4 million students living in college-operated housing, slightly over one percent lived in substandard facilities.

"Generally, colleges have been doing an excellent job of running a multi-billion dollar business," says study director Charles Anderson. "But we did find a very low percentage (of schools) where there were problems and concerns."

The "one-shot study," Anderson says, found that of the 25,000 students living in substandard facilities, "the highest percentage were in the four-year school sector, where for both public and private schools it was nearly one-and-one-half percent."

In ranking priorities for the next two years, 40 percent of the schools gave top priority to rehabilitation, 29 percent to energy conservation projects, 21 percent to construction of new facilities, and 10 percent to "other spending" on housing.

What's Happening Outdoors

The outdoor clubs on campus have recently formed a new coalition called the Juniata Outdoor Society. The clubs include Laughing Bush, Ent., the Conservation Club, the Caving Club, and the Andy Lawson Geological Society.

The Society formed a board comprised of representatives of the four clubs and will work to coordinate activities, fund raising, a monthly outdoor program series and newspaper columns. The board members include Matthew Hugg and Sheri Wescott of the Conservation Club; Greg Donaldson and Lisa Compton of the Caving Club; Dorothy Vesper and Brian Zimmerman of Andy Lawson; and J.P. Gambatese and John Brogan from Laughing Bush. Chuck Yohn will serve as secretary.

Future programs and activities are listed below for the individual organizations. If you are interested in becoming involved in any of the clubs, or their activities, contact one of the representatives from the various clubs.

Outdoor Society board meetings will be held every Monday evening at 6:30 p.m. in the Laughing Bush office. All are welcome to attend! These clubs were created to meet the needs of outdoor enthusiasts, not necessarily natural science majors.

February:

Wednesday 2/2 — Laughing Bush meeting at L.B. office 8:30 p.m.
Monday 2/7, 2/14 — 6:30 Outdoor Society Meeting at the "Bush"
Monday 2/7 — 7:30 Conservation Club film "Wetlanders" and meeting at the "Bush"
Tuesday 2/8 — 7:00 Sky Diving organizational meeting with guest speaker
Saturday 2/12 — Survival Skills workshop: meet at Ellis at 9:00 a.m.
Monday 2/14 — Conservation Club meeting at the "Bush"
Tuesday 2/15 — 7:00 Caving Club meeting in the Blue Room of Ellis
Tuesday 2/15 — 7:30 Sky Diving film and final preparation

Out & About

by Mark Shaw

Being determined to eat at every restaurant in State College before I graduate, I once again ventured there for my out and about. However, with age comes fewer places that I haven't been yet.

After walking up and down College Avenue for awhile and looking at all the menu boards, my guest and I decided to dine at the Corner Restaurant. I had my stomach set on some real Veal Cordon Bleu.

After waiting a couple of minutes we were seated. The atmosphere was quite relaxing as we talked and waited for our waitress. Booths lined the walls of the room with tables in the middle. The chandelier and candles at the table provided soft lighting which added to the nice atmosphere.

Much to my chagrin, the menu that we were handed was not the same one we had looked at before. After pondering what happened we realized we had gone to the wrong room; it seems as though there are several different dining areas within the same restaurant. I had to accept the fact that I wouldn't get my Veal Cordon Bleu as we decided to remain.

I started off with French Onion Soup, while my guest began to munch on some Deep Fried Cheese Balls. Both were very good and a great way to start off the meal. Next came our salads, which came with the dressing of our choice. They weren't too bad, but I was disappointed with the lack of tomatoes.

For the entree, I had the Roast Prime Rib of Beef which came with two side-orders. I selected french fries and buttered corn cobbette. I was not very satisfied with my side-orders: the fries were on the cold side and the corn on the cob was very mushy. However, the Prime Rib was very tender.

My guest ordered the Surf and Turf which also came with two accompaniments. She selected a baked potato and the corn. Her fillet was broiled to her liking and she was delighted with the shrimp. My guest was very satisfied with her meal.

After our entree came dessert. My guest ordered coffee and chocolate mousse while I ordered tea and New York Cheesecake. Both of us were pleased with our selections, but neither of us could finish.

The bill came to around $25.00, not bad for what we had gotten. Although I thought some of the food was not up to par, I would give the Corner Room of the Corner Restaurant a fair to good rating based on the atmosphere and the cost. Next time, however, I think I'll see if I can find where they serve Veal Cordon Bleu.

showed more of a "chip on his shoulder" than on ours. Football players on the field function as a unit. But, off the field we are individuals like members of any other team. Because someone uses "intimidating" tactics, does not make him a football player. Nor does being a football player make one use intimidation to get his way. Complaints such as Mr. Sloan's should be made on an individual basis, not by group stereotypes.

There was nothing constructive about Mr. Sloan's editorial; it was destructive to a lot of fine "individuals." And, it is in poor taste that he should use the media as a weapon to take a free shot at a varsity team. Also, it is especially surprising to receive such insulting comments from the president of the Varsity J club.

Finally, if Mr. Sloan is so worried about the Juniata College tradition of excellence, he should take some time to curb his negative actions.

Sincerely,

Artist Series Reviewed

On Sunday, January 30, the Juniata College Artist Series presented the Central Pennsylvania Youth Ballet in Oller Hall auditorium. The youth ballet is mostly composed of students between eleven and fourteen years old who are seriously interested in studying ballet. Over thirty students under their artistic director, Marcia Dale Weary, presented a variety of classical ballets with guest performers Robert Wallace and Patrick Corbin from the Washington School of Ballet.

The afternoon performance was enjoyed not only by the college community, but by several local youth organizations, including a Girl Scout and a Brownie Troop. As usual, there was a notable lack of support from the Juniata student body, but large numbers of alumni, faculty, and townspeople managed to fill the hall.

Among the favorite pieces of the audience were the Dying Swan, performed by Virginia Laws, and the two Pas de Deux pieces performed by Anita Intrieri, with Carl Mojta, and Shelly Cohn, with Patrick Corbin. Another favorite was the Pas de trois, by Tracy Julias, Heather Jurgensen, and Robert Wallace.

Overall, the company showed great improvement since their last visit to Juniata two years ago. It was a pleasure having them and it would be nice to see them again. Perhaps there would be greater attendance next year if the pre-Super Bowl celebrators found out that even a troop of Brownies enjoyed watching these performers.

Muddy Run

The ability to study in concentrated periods rather than uselessly preparing ahead of time also needs a more complete examination. Those students who can achieve a passing grade on a midterm by reading the previously assigned material between 12:00 and 8:00 am should have their score raised by at least one letter grade. Incidentally, such students can easily be spotted because their tear ducts have ceased to function, which robs them of the ability to blink.

Another area that has been neglected for grading purposes is the techniques utilized for the handing in of late papers. Students that arrive, out of breath, five minutes past the deadline, at their professor's office should receive an extra point or two. Other outstanding examples that merit more attention are: the student that breaks into a locked office building in order to turn in a very late paper; better yet is the pupil who pursues a faculty member that is driving home. These fine athletes that actually chase a moving auto should automatically receive an A.

Some faculty consider regular class attendance to be essential. However, there are always some students that feel that activities such as intense observation of the inner side of the eyelids or study of the effects of resting one's head on a pillow are more important than attending class. Amazingly, some of these students actually manage to meet course requirements by attending class only on test days. Such outstanding aptitude should be honored by appointment to the Dean's List.

The suggestions above require immediate action if we are to rectify the inequities of the present grading system. We students must speak with one voice, and demand change. All avenues of communication must be used, starting with course evaluations. So when that time comes, have your sharpened No. 2 pencil ready for action, and let's lift ourselves from the quagmire of low GPAs that result from an incomplete grading system. Unless, of course, you're late for class, or happen to oversleep, or are hungover, or just bag class, or have a paper due yesterday, or . . .

Winter Week Shows Spirit: Enthusiasm There, Snow Not

by Sheila Squier

The 1983 Winter Week drew to a close Sunday after seven days devoted to dorm competition, not to mention a variety of interesting events as well.

Spirit Week began on Monday with the signing of hall scrolls by residents. Tuesday was a day for hats and a wide conglomeration, from painter caps to moose antlers to hard hats were displayed while dining oriental style. Wednesday seemed like a typical night at first, when diners turned out for their meal attired in sweats. However, the RHA members recording the hall of each "sweater" gave it away as another Spirit Week activity. Thursday, blue and gold night, was slightly more challenging — one actually had to plan an outfit, not just bop over to dinner after a workout in the gym! Friday wound up the spirit competitions with Juniata night. "Juniata" was seen roaming the cafeteria on T-shirts, and buttons. Even the Center Board's Winter Week paper clip (which bears the desired word — JUNIATA) was present.

At this point Sherwood and Lesher, followed by South, North and Off-Campus were in the driver's seat.

Now the team competitions began. On Friday, 6 p.m., diners were entertained with a pie eating contest. This tasteful event was won for Sherwood by "Duffy" who sacrificed his nose for the victory. Tussey-Terrace placed second, and Off-Campus took third with the help of Tom McDonald who "pinch-ate."

Saturday was a day for team action. Women's Volleyball started off the competition at 1:00 p.m. with a single elimination tournament. Cloister's women bumped and set their way to the number one spot followed by Lesher, East and North.

Tussey-Terrace formed the winning Human Pyramid with eleven levels of bodies, proving they are one "close". dorm. Lesher, Off-Campus and East took the remaining places.

Tussey-Terrace also managed to "pull-off" a win in the Tug-of-War competition. Points were basically awarded in this event to the halls who sent teams to participate even though no tests of strength actually took place.

The Almost Anything Goes competition was challenging. Teams began by showing their skill in a tumbling and team-roll race. (Team-roll means the entire team lies on the ground. The person on one end then rolls over the whole team to the opposite end of the group. Each member repeats this process until the full length of floor has been covered.) After this battering, the teams ran a three-legged race. Next, team members received toothpicks. These were clenched between the teeth and used as implements for passing lifesavers to other team members.

By this time, with only two events remaining, the pressure was mounting. Thus everyone was willing to take their clothes off for the clothes relay. (Actually, only extra clothes that were provided were removed.) After this stimulating team event, the Almost Anything Goes competition concluded with a basketball spin relay. Team members had to hold a basketball above their heads, after running the length of the room, and spin ten complete times, while watching the ball. Then the real test began: trying to run when dizzy!

Sherwood showed their all-around athletic ability by winning Almost Anything Goes. East, Lesher and Tussey-Terrace grabbed the remaining spots.

The events requiring snow, tray racing and snow sculpturing, had to be canceled due to a slight lack of the obvious.

Sunday brought the whole affair to a climatic close, when despite the gloomy weather, a muddy North team was victorious over Cloister in the Men's Football tournament.

The final points for each hall tell the story of the week.

Lesher 76	East 36
Sherwood 66	Off-Campus 35
Tussey-Terrace 57	Cloister 34
South/North 39 (tie)

For their fine show of spirit Lesher will receive a plaque, compliments of Center Board, $50.00, and 25 dorm points. Sherwood will also claim a plaque and 15 dorm points. Tussey-Terrace will receive 10 dorm points and the remaining residence halls will receive 5 dorm points.

The Spirit Week competitions were brainstormed and organized by Residential Life Committee under the leadership of Rory McAvoy. Commenting on the outcome of the week, Rory says it went well and she "sees where improvements can be made for next year."

Casino Night, the J-Club's annual tradition, attracted quite a few midnight gamblers on Friday evening.

Tables played included black jack, roulette, craps, and poker. Each table was manned by a professor or Juniata official with students trying their hand at slipping them a fast one.

Dave Sloan, J-Club president, said the evening went well, netting a profit of $300. He also commented that the administration was pleased with the outcome of the first party in the multi-purpose room and will likely be receptive to future activities in this area.

Prizes were auctioned off at the end of the evening, including albums, sweatshirts, and a racquetball racquet. Many of these items were donated by the bookstore although some were the contributions of area merchants.

Sloan added that although the traditional beverage was on hand, the non-alcoholic beverage was the big sell of the night.

Quad Boys Prevail

by App

In the handball game of the week, the Quad Boys, as expected, successfully defeated Miller-East 27-20.

The game started as if neither team could stop the other. The Quad Boys hit 6 of their first 7 shots on goal, and Miller-East scored on 6 of their first 8 shots. However, Miller-East went into a scoring drought midway through the half that allowed the Quad Boys to take the lead. By halftime, the Quad Boys had taken a 15-9 lead. For the half, the Quad Boys connected on 15 of 32 shots while Miller-East after their fast start connected on only 3 of their last 17 shots to finish 9-27.

In the second half, the Quad Boys increased their lead to 9, but Miller-East led by John Surbeck cut the lead back to six. However, the Quad Boys stabilized and didn't allow the lead to dwindle any further. For the game the Quad Boys shot 27-59 while Miller-East converted only 20 of 55 shots. Bobby MacDonald, who moved to offense from the goal position, was the big gun for the Quad Boys as he scored 13 goals including 6 of the team's first 7. John Surbeck was the leading scorer for Miller-East with 7 goals. The win upped the Quad Boys record to 2-1 while the loss dropped Miller-East to 0-2.

In other games last week, the Black Knights crushed the Worms I by the score of 33-18 in the early game on Thursday. The game of the week, this week, is a battle between Miller-East and the Worms I on Thursday night at 8:00.

Numbnuts break A-League tie.

A-League

by John Summers

A balanced scoring attack, which saw five players hit double figures, along with rebounding supremacy paved the way for the Numbnuts 64-49 victory over the Wide Rides Sunday night.

The win ups the Numbnuts record to 5-1 and gives them sole possession of first place, a full game ahead of the second-place Wide Rides.

The Wide Rides, hampered by the absence of Rick Eberly and Bob McDonald, tried a slowed-down offense in an attempt to keep the score respectable. For awhile it looked as though they had found a way to cool down the fast paced Numbnuts but, as the final score proved, it just was not to be.

"It was really nice to win this one, especially since they gave us our only loss this year," commented Captain Doug Wallace after the game. "We played really well as a team tonight."

Teamwork was indeed a key for the Numbnuts. When one man cooled down, another would pick up the slack. In the first half it was Keith Fox and Paul Miller with the hot hands as they combined for 22 of the 28 Numbnut points. While in the second half, Eric Dezii and Wallace hooked up for 24 of the team's 32 points.

Although they never trailed, the Numbnuts' "sweet revenge" was at times in jeopardy. After outscoring The Wide Rides 12-2 in the closing minutes of the first half to move ahead 28-18, The Numbnuts had the favor returned at the beginning of the second half and once again, it was a two-point ball game.

However, this would be as close as The Wide Rides would get as the Numbnut offense shifted into high gear.

Miller led all scorers with 15 points while Fox, Dezii, and Wallace each hit for 12. John Summers added 10 to round out the Numbnut scoring.

Bob Maruca and Doug Fleming chipped in 11 and 10, respectively, for the Wide Rides.

In the only other A-League game this week, the MO FO CO's also enjoyed a revenging triumph as they knocked off the G-Spotters 53-36.

It has been decided by the intramural directors that the BAMF'S will not be dropped from the league, but will be ineligible for playoff action, because of their two forfeits.

The Numbnuts (64)

Miller 5 5-6 15, Wallace 6 0-0 12, Fox 5 2-4 12, Surbeck 1 0-0 2, Dezii 6 0-0 12, Summers 5 0-0 10, Dieke 0 1-2 1, TOTALS 28 8-12 64.

The Wide Rides (49)

Maruca 5 1-2 11, Appleby 3 0-0 6, Fleming 5 0-0 10, Berdy 4 0-0 8, Reichly 3 0-0 6, Hiltz 4 0-0 8, TOTALS 24 1-2 49.

B-League

by John Summers

Does the "B" in B-League stand for Boring? Perhaps not, but anyone who saw this week's games might have thought so. Except for a 33-32 Snatcher's Men's upset win over Return of Tab, the week was rather uneventful.

In Blue Flight action the top two teams, Runnin' Rebels and Corky's Creampuffs, had the week off. This enabled Babylon By Bus to move into a second place tie with the Creampuffs with a 31-23 victory over The Cripples. Both teams are now just one-half game behind the Rebels.

206 Long also won 40-21 over Jerry's Kids to up their record to 3-1.

This week's "Game of the Week" featured The Smegmas and The Gypsy. The highlight of the game was when The Smegmas showed up and the Gypsy did not. This quickly upped The Smegmas record to 4-0 and allowed this writer to get back to the Super Bowl.

In the only other game, Tussey 217 romped over the Marauders 63-36.

This week should help to determine who will eventually make it to the playoffs. In all there will be 20 B-league games, over one-third of the season, played on Tuesday, Friday and Sunday nights.

C-League

by John Summers

The Weekend Warriors, who were 4-0 just a week ago and two full games ahead of their nearest competitor, have been struck down by a decision passed by intramural directors Dave Turnball and Rob Ash.

The team was seemingly on its way to the C-league championship only to be found guilty of having an ineligible man on its roster. The ineligibility results because the player, Rob Yelnosky, was also playing on an A-league team.

Turnball explained, "It was simply a misunderstanding. Evidently this type of thing has been going on in the past and was either never detected or was overlooked."

The rule which was broken states that "an individual can play for only one team. . . ." Turnball said that players are committed to the team for which they play for first. Participation on another team will result in a forfeit by that team.

Some people have interpreted the rule to mean "one team per league," when in fact it means "one team per sport." This apparently is where the misunderstanding occurred.

"I don't think that there was any deliberate attempt to cheat, but the teams who were involved must pay the consequences," added Turnball.

So far the decision has affected only two teams, Jerry's Kids of B-league and the Warriors. There is suspicion that there may have been other teams involved in the practice, but obviously only those caught can be penalized.

Due to the forfeits, FA-Q and Fred's Last Million now share first place honors in C-league with identical 4-1 records. The Weekend Warriors have slipped into a third place tie with the Prodigal Sons at 1-4.

This week's results: FA-Q beat the Weekend Warriors 48-17 while Fred's Last Million defeated the Prodigal Sons 60-29.

Ballers Still Unbeaten

by Mark Shaw

The Ballers defeated FUVM in yellow flight co-rec action on Monday night 15-6, 15-8.

The game was the battle of two of the three undefeated teams in the yellow flight. In the first game, FUVM won the serve after a long volley which was a premonition for the action in the game to come. The game was characterized by excellent play by both teams. The Ballers took the lead, 2-0, on the serve of Colleen Irelan. They extended their lead on a great play by Alan Mateo to 4-1. Steve Whitely served the Ballers to a 6-2 lead but a lack of communication gave the ball to FUVM. FUVM tried to come back but the Ballers held strong and kept winning the serve back. Both teams exchanged serves numerous times, with the Ballers being the team capitalizing and gaining points. Behind the serve of Suzanne Hickle and Terry Sagan, the Ballers took a 11-6 lead. Despite good play by both Chris Kanaski and Jim LeDane of FUVM, Marie Glendenning served the Ballers to victory with an ace to end it 15-6.

The second game was also a hardly fought contest. FUVM jumped out to a 2-0 lead on the serve of Kanaski. Kathy Harwick brought the Ballers to tie the game at 2-2. The struggle then began. With both teams setting very well and playing very well, they exchanged serves about 10 times. Then it appeared as though FUVM had won out as they took the lead 6-3 on the play of Kanaski and Pam Keeney. Mates turned the tide of the game as he served the Ballers to a 6-6 tie. A lack of communication momentarily slowed the momentum but the Ballers regained the serve and Hickle put them up 8-6. Bill Herrara then gave them a 10-6 lead.

FUVM then began to fold while Terry Sagan served the Ballers to a 13-7 lead. LeDane tried to stage a FUVM comeback, but it was short-lived. The Ballers won serve and Capt. Steve Whitely put FUVM away 15-8.

In Thursday's action in the green flight, 4-play defeated Jug's Jammers 15-8, 15-8; the Untouchables defeated the Terrors 16-14, 15-12; Empty Sets defeated Volleylobes 15-11, 15-8; Nut Cracker Sweet defeated the Red A 13-15, 15-0, 15-10. In the red flight the Queffs II defeated the Lame Ducks 9-15, 15-8, 15-6; All the Way defeated the Hula-Hula Boys II 15-7, 15-10.

In action last Monday, Nut Cracker Sweet defeated the Untouchables 15-12, 11-15, 15-12; the Empty Set defeated the Red A 15-4, 15-4; the Fumbling Fubs defeated Lame Ducks 15-9, 15-5; the Hula-Hula Boys II defeated Queffs II 13-15, 15-11, 15-4; All the Way defeated the Ozzies 15-1, 15-2; Entropy defeated Omnikron II 15-10, 14-16, 15-5; TBA defeated Tower of Power 12-15, 15-8, 15-10; the Ballers defeated Corporal Punishment II 15-10, 15-11; Juniata Volleyball Impersonators defeated the Mansion Dwellers 15-4, 15-12; and the S&M Strombolis defeated the Defenders 8-15, 15-3,15-5.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

Well I'm 0 for two this year in Time Out column predictions. Why do I continue to stick my neck out? First I played the perfect idiot and said we'd be a shoe in for the intramural softball championship, and all we had to worry about was what color shirts we should get. That jinxed us just enough to lose in the semi-finals by an unheard of 1-0 score.

Then I have the nerve to pick the Miami Dolphins to win the Super Bowl. I figured since they had Super Bowl experience with Don Shula at the helm, they couldn't lose. Another factor was that they are my favorite team, how could I bet against them?

I didn't think I had time to jinx Miami since the paper doesn't come out till Thursday. How could word travel to Pasadena in three days that I picked Miami to win in the Juniatian? Somehow I guess it did, which taught me a lesson never to make a prediction in this column again.

Something about this past Super Bowl made me wonder whether I was getting older or younger in the past ten years. I remember when I was 11 or 12 years old, I had complete confidence in the Dolphins. After they won eight or 10 in a row, I just expected them to win. And they did, 17 straight in fact. Well, they lost three the next year but I still didn't have to worry about them winning the big one.

I sat watching those two Super Bowls with Coke in hand without a worry. But this one was different. The situation was a little different in that I had a beer in hand this time, but the feeling was different.

It didn't matter that they beat the top passing offense two weeks ago, or that they beat one of the most balanced offenses last week, I still was uneasy. At halftime I had the feeling that things were going to slip away, and when John Riggins scored the go-ahead TD, I threw my Dophin hat across the room like a tearful 12 year old should have.

I have a nickname theory. In 1973 the Redskins were just the Over the Hill Gang. But this year the Smurfs and Hogs were just too much translate for the Killer B's.

Spikers Win

by John Surbeck

In the match between the Gypsy's and the Super Spikers, the score did not reflect the closeness of the contest.

The Super Spikers served to open the first game, building their lead to 3-0. The Gypsy's defense came up with a big play to stop the rush by the Spikers. Play went back and forth with the score landing at 4-1. The Gypsy's made a strong comeback behind the powerful serving of Dave Sweitzer to take the lead at 6-4.

The rest of the game was in the manner of back and forth play. The Gypsy's only managed one more point but continually slowed the game's end by not allowing the Spikers points on all of their serves. However, the Spikers lived up to their name by spiking the ball, to a 15-7 win behind the leaping front line of John Kolonch, Andy Pearson and Steve Deparol.

The second game's score of 16-14 was true evidence of how close the match was. The same front line combination for the Spikers opened a lead of 3-1 by overpowering the Gypsy's above the net. The Gypsy's came back strong taking a 5-3 lead behind the serving of Jeff Meeker. Play then went back and forth as the lead was tied at seven and eight. Defense was the key force for both teams.

The Spikers gained incentive on a freak play when Deparol went high to spike a ball, but the ball caromed off his head and fell helplessly to the ground, inbounds on the Gypsy's side. The Spikers then upped their lead to 12-8 with Scott Berratty serving. The Gypsy's were not to be denied as they fought back to tie the game, 12-12 behind the unreturned serving of Sweitzer. The Spikers earned the ball back, and increased the lead to 14-12. Meeker then served for the Gypsy's and tied the game at 14. The game would be decided by a two point margin as the Spikers gained the lead and ended the game on an ace serve by Kolonch, 16-14 to win the match.

The Gypsy's play was determined as they gave a strong Spiker team all they could handle, even though the match lasted just two games. The Spikers looked talented and worked well together.

In other action, the Defenders remained undefeated and will face the Spikers, the second place team, next week. Defender, Bob Wazalis, has again put out a challenge to the league stating, when asked about up coming games, "we'll destroy them."

Ron's Women Looking Good

Ron's Women came back from a one game deficit to defeat the Zingers 10-15, 15-11, and 15-8.

In the first game, Ron's Women jumped out to an early 6-1 lead despite only having 5 players. Jenny Kaufman led the way with her excellent serve which the Zingers couldn't handle. Once Ron's Women lost serve, the Zingers came back full force with Denise Gontar serving. The Zingers went from a 6-1 deficit to a 9-6 lead. A lack of teamwork and having only 5 players hurt Ron's Women. With the Zingers building a 11-6 lead, Edie Masters kindled a comeback as Ron's Women came within two, 9-11. The Zingers would not collapse though and Jackie Oldane put the game away with an ace; final score, 15-10.

Game two was a hard fought contest. The Zingers had the early lead 5-1, and looked like they were going to put Ron's Women away. However, Kaufman won the serve for Ron's Women with a good save; then, she proceeded to serve Ron's Women into a 6-5 lead. During the middle of the game Marie Craig, the sixth player for Ron's Women came into the game. She filled the hole that the Zingers had been hitting. Good teamwork by both teams kept the game close as they traded serves and points.

Then, once again, with the score 11-10 in favor of the Zingers, Kaufman got control of the serve. She led Ron's Women to a 15-11 victory.

The third game looked to be a blowout by the Zingers. Oldane served the Zingers to a 5-0 lead. Service changed hands until Jodi McAllister, from Ron's Women, got the serve. She served three points for Ron's Women with the last point coming from a good hit by Marsters. The two teams exchanged service and points a few times until Craig took over for Ron's Women. Being behind by four, 8-4, she led Ron's Women to victory. Her serves were excellent and the Zingers appeared to just fall apart. Ron's Women took the game 15-8.

In other action on Sunday, Awesome Forces defeated Miller High Life 15-12, 15-4; Bumping Babes defeated Ester's Molesters 15-12, 3-15, 15-9; Sluggs defeated Great Expectations 15-13, 15-11 and the Tussey Terrors won by a S.S. & A.J. forfeit.

In Tuesday's action, the Sluggs defeated Ester's Molesters 16-14, 12-15, 15-6; Great Expectations defeated the Zingers 15-7, 15-6; Ron's Women defeated Miller High Life 15-5, 15-10; Bumping Babes defeated Tussey Terrors 15-10, 15-10; and S.S. & A.J. defeated Red Cross II 15-10, 13-15, 15-11.

San Jose, California — The Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest, a search for the most "wretched" author, has been opened to the public by English Professors at the San Jose University. The contest, in its second year and previously not opened to the public, seeks to find the worst possible opening sentence to the worst of all possible novels. The contest was inspired by Edward Bulwer-Lytton an early 19th century author.

Ladies Topple Messiah

Becky Rhodes drops in a hook shot for a pair of her 18 points as Juniata topped Messiah 69-52.

Playing by far their best game of the year, the Lady Indians trounced Messiah at home on Saturday night by the score of 69-52. The win improved the team's record to 4-6.

At the beginning of the game, both teams were sluggish. At the ten-minute mark of the first half, the score was only 10-6 in favor of the Indians. However, after another Juniata bucket, Messiah scored 7 consecutive points to take a 13-12 lead with six-minutes left. The Indians recovered and regained the lead taking a 25-20 score into the lockerroom at halftime.

The Lady Indians took command of the game at the start of the second half as they held Messiah scoreless for 5 minutes while in the same span they reeled off 12 unanswered points. Instrumental in the spurt were Peggy Evans and Becky Rhodes, who both scored a pair of buckets. Messiah closed the gap to within 10, but the Indians called timeout, regrouped, and quickly rebuilt the lead back to 17. The Indians were in control the rest of the way as they held a 21 point lead late in the game. The Indians were led by a stellar performance by forward Patty Ryan. She shot 7 for 12 from the field, and canned 10 of 13 from the line for a total of 24 points. In addition, Ryan hauled in a team high 12 rebounds. Rhodes added 18 points and Evans had 11, while Marie Glendenning was a big help on the boards as she pulled down 10 rebounds.

The Indians remain at home this week for two contests. On Wednesday, they host Elizabethtown and on Saturday they host King's College.

Lions, Warriors Top JC

by Andy Berdy

Albright forward Roger Yoh poured in 27 points and Keith Bricker added 19 off the bench to pace the Lions to a 71-59 victory over Juniata Saturday, dropping the Tribe's record to 3-11.

The Lions jumped out to an early 2-0 lead before freshman John Hunter countered with a three point play, in his first starting role for the Indians.

Albright built a five point lead midway through the first period, but a JC spurt gave the Indians the advantage, as they outscored the Lions 11-4 in a five minute stretch.

A Bricker three point play with five minutes left ignited an eight point Lion rally that gave the winners a 30-27 intermission lead.

Mark Rucinski scored on back to back hoops, giving the Indians their first and only lead of the second half, before the Lions battled back to build as much as a 16 point edge.

Late in the contest the Tribe cut the margin to seven on a basket and pair of free throws by Jeff Ostrowski, but the Albright ball handling and foul shooting held off the Indian come back.

Rucinski led the Indians with 16 points, followed by Andy Witmer with 10. Dan Feruck was held to just two points on a cold one for nine shooting evening from the field.

Field goal percentage was the key, as Juniata shot only 37.5% from the floor, to the Lion's 52.9 performance, which included a 62.5% second half.

Wednesday, the Tribe traveled to Lycoming and saw the same problems produce the same results. A 26.3% first half from the field got the Indians only 14 first half points, as the Warriors led by eight at the half.

Both teams were more accurate in the second half, but the Indians still had trouble at the foul line, shooting only 12 for 21 from the stripe on the evening. Lycoming again outscored JC by eight in the second stanza to win by a 62-46 score.

Feruck led all scorers with 20 markers. He was the only Indian in double figures while a pair of Warriors dropped in 18 apiece, and another added 12.

Juniata hosts King's College in a men's-women's doubleheader, tipping off at six o'clock Saturday.

V103 Elects New Management Board

Station now at 70% listenership

Juniata's radio station, V103, has recently acquired a new management board, who will assume their positions starting spring term.

The new board members and their positions are as follows: Station Manager — John Lynch; Program Director — Dave Peters; News Director — Tom Welch; Business Manager — Mark Kirchgasser; Chief Engineer — Greg Molchany; and Chief Announcer — Dan Vukmer. Each was elected to the office by fellow staff members at last week's Wednesday night election.

The newly-elected board will be helped through a transition period in the beginning of spring term by current board members. They will also be responsible for appointing several positions within their respective departments.

The new management board hopes to continue in the direction of past management, to keep V103 in the number one spot of listenership on campus. The results of a recent music survey indicate that 70% of the 200 students surveyed listen to V103, with WRLR at a distant second with 18.2% of the votes. Through the music survey, V103 was also able to compile a list of Juniata's top 35 recording artists. Journey edged the Rolling Stones out of their previous number one position to their current number two spot, followed by Pat Benatar in third place. A copy of the survey may be picked up in the station's lobby.

V103 has made some major programming changes since the beginning of the year. Weekday hours were extended from midnight until 2 a.m., and morning openings were filled so that V103 is broadcasting 19 hours a day. Also, traditional three-hour shows were cut back to two hours to accommodate a greater influx of interested DJs.

The News Department has also expanded its production of News-Voice to include Rock Voice three times weekly, and Sportsbeat. The Business Department has been busy with sponsorships, while the Chief Announcer has been overseeing a DJ Evaluation Committee, helping DJs with their over-the-air sound. The Engineering Department has also been making necessary improvements around the station, ranging from rewiring to fixing and installing equipment.

V103 has been run for the past two years under the leadership of Brian Check, Station Manager. Other board members who will be leaving their posts are Dave Heisterkamp — Program Director, Craig Johnson — Chief Announcer, and Jim LeDane — Business Manager.

The current board feels that they have come a long way in developing a consistent, improved sound for V103, and indeed they have. V103 has gone from 19.2% listenership in 1981 to its current 70% ranking. The new board will work to uphold this number one position, and will also contribute fresh ideas to keep the "Voice of Juniata College" sounding good.

"Art and Truth" Displayed

An exhibit of engravings, etching and lithographs entitled "Art and Truth" is on display in Shoemaker Galleries through Feb. 25.

The exhibit concentrates on 19th and 20th century prints which reflect the movement in the art world from realism to surrealism, in an attempt by the artists to represent truth.

All of the art in the exhibit belongs to members of the Juniata faculty, and is organized historically, beginning with the early 19th century in the East Wing and moving towards the later development of the 20th century in the West Wing and Rotunda.

The question of truth is one which all artists have been forced to confront. The 19th century artists presented truth in terms of the ideal and real, in the forms of classicism, romanticism, and realism. In classicism, emphasis was placed on the truths of classical mythology and religion. Romanticism reflected the truth of nature and the surrounding world in its most idealized appearance. In realism truth is represented as not what ought to be, but as what is.

At the turn of the century, the focus of artists was placed on how the world is perceived, rather than on the actual objects themselves. This created the problem of how to

by Bob Riefler

After several weeks of great popularity, the selling of Binder's Grinders has been discontinued.

The students involved felt the project was a great success. According to Greg Pyles, over 3,000 hoagies were sold, and most of the supplies were used. However, Binder's Grinders cannot be continued because legal complications, such as licensing, would arise.

"A sizable grant will be given to a student with a background in all areas of business," says Jane Povey. The students are hoping that the grant will be matched to increase the total gift. The rest of the funds will be divided among the partnership, as with last year's class.

Those involved averaged 13-14 hours out of class working on the project. They enjoyed the work, and learned a great deal about all aspects of business. More money was made this year than by classes of the last two years. Next year's class will probably do a different project in order to curtail guaranteed success.

All the students involved with Binder's Grinders would like to thank customers for their patronage.

Students compete For scholarships

by Cinny Cooper

Admissions' Scholarship Day was held Saturday, February 12, despite the heavy snowfall dumped on the Juniata campus on Friday. Prospective freshmen completed the test with hopes of receiving an Alumni Annual Support Fund Scholarship or a Brumbaugh-Ellis Presidential Scholarship.

Twenty alumni scholarships and ten Brumbaugh-Ellis scholarships are available to incoming freshmen. Alumni scholarships are worth $500, $1,000, or $1,500 and the Brumbaugh-Ellis scholarships are worth $2,000.

Registration for the tests took place in Alumni Hall at 9:30 Saturday morning. Of the 100 students expected, only about 25 were able to make it due to slippery roads. Including the students who will take the test in their high schools, approximately 130 applicants are expected.

Gayle Kreider, Director of Admissions, began with a welcome to the "hearty souls" who made it through the snow to Juniata. Dr. Binder extended his welcome to the students as he gave a brief background of Juniata and bragged of the college's academic excellence, athletic teams, and new sports complex.

While the students completed the 2 hour exam, the parents were invited to attend two workshops on Financial Aid, and Career Planning and Placement. After the test and the workshops, many of the visitors joined JC students for lunch in Baker Refectory.

The remainder of the day was spent on tours and at an Academic Fair held for the benefit of the stu-

100 Reasons — No excuses

Where were you?

Tomorrow night the film "Alien" will be shown in Oller Hall. There will, undoubtedly, be quite a large student turnout as the film is quite popular with college level audiences. What is surprising, however, is that on February 4 there was a student turnout in Oller of no more than 100. Less than 10% of a college's student body turned out to hear perhaps the most liberal republican Senator in America speak.

Senator Mark Hatfield spoke in Oller Hall, a walk no greater than the walk to see "Alien" this weekend, yet no one showed. The issue here is not the ever popular one of apathy. No, this time the issue is simply gross irresponsibility. The fact that almost an entire student body ignored the opportunity to hear a United States Senator speak is in complete contradiction of our reason for being in college.

Granted that the work week may be tough and to schedule a lecture of this nature on a Friday night may not be the wisest of all possible moves, but do we value escapism to the point where it takes precedence over our responsibility as students. It is no wonder that voter turnout is so pathetic. Looking back, was what you were doing that particular evening so stimulating and important that it could not have waited an hour and a half? The staff of the Juniatian thinks not.

There is simply no reason for the students on this campus not to attend such a lecture. Even if the text of the lecture did not seem to interest you, the question and answer period which followed was an open forum, any political question could have been posed and then answered by the Senator. Not a self proclaimed expert who wrote a book on some political tangent, but a United States Senator. This lecture should not have been considered a tax on free time, but merely a healthy way to spend it.

One may have had 100 reasons for not attending that lecture, but not one excuse. The staff of the Juniatian wishes everyone an enjoyable time at "Alien" this weekend.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Juniatian,

Well, it's that time of year where our senior class does what every other senior class before us has done and gets boned one more time in the form of a graduation fee. Hey, I'm not complaining, at least I know it's the last time my name will appear on a check to Juniata.

Yes, folks, our lives in college are not marked by a transcript but by a "sales" record, measured not in grades, but in receipts and past due notices. Along this four year road of fees, fines, and charges, I have seen a new image of higher education — big business.

I'm not bemoaning a graduation fee, which I haven't the faintest idea where it goes or what it's for. I'm paying the hearty sum of $45. In the end, I get the final satisfaction when someday, I answer my phone and hear a voice over a familiar watts line asking me for a donation. Then I'll realize that $45 now actually saved me money and that perhaps that fee should have been a little higher.

Jim LeDane
Future Deadbeat Alumnus

The Juniatian welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by The Juniatian for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Dave's Dribble

by David Lehmann

Another term has passed me by leaving me nothing but memories and finals to study for. This limits the 82-83 school year to just one more trimester. I've been a J.C. student now for three and two thirds year, but it seems more like three months. It seems like yesterday that I walked into my dorm room (yes Julie, they were called dorm rooms back then) to find out I had been stuck with two straight-laced hick Bald Eagle boys. They were certain that I would go to hell for my carrying-ons, and I was certain that they'd be bored to hell for not carrying-on. Somewhere between their eleven o'clock bedtime and my two months of laundry on the floor, we became friends. I guess they learned to accept my inevitable fate, and I decided that despite their naive outlook on life, they were alright guys.

Not long after meeting my new roommates, I had another surprise concerning a certain college tradition. My second Wednesday of aboding here I was rousted from my room in the name of Freshman Class spirit. Fifty of us were supposed to run down a concrete sidewalk, climb up steps, and shoot through the Cloister arch while two hundred upperclassmen hurled insults, food, and many unmentionables down at us. After two attacks on the arch, there were only about ten of us left. Most of these fellows became my friends because I admired their complete lack of common sense and their total disregard for personal safety. The wonderful thing about these guys is that they still haven't matured. This year, one went as far as living in a tent to prove what a free spirit he was. He'd probably still be living there, but administration was afraid that tent-living would catch on since tents are roomier, cleaner, and quieter than residence halls, and they made him move into a regular building.

Then there was that memorable post-spring finals party. About eight of us from second Sherwood were stuck here for the last final. That evening, with the test finished, Robert E cleared his room of furniture, covered the floor with mattresses, and deposited a keg in the middle of his room. Since there weren't many freshman girls left up here, we made a run up to McDonalds and invited the whole night shift. At eleven thirty, we were half way done with the keg, when seven Huntingdon girls dressed to kill came bopping into Bob's room.

It doesn't seem possible that over two and a half years have passed since my freshman year. Maybe it's just that I've had such a good time over these years that I haven't had much of an opportunity to look back. Well, there is still the spring term left, so look out. Anybody that claims that there isn't enough to do up here is just lacking creativity and immaturity.

Jazz Not Rock

"Look Sharp," a rock band from Easton, Pa., was unable to perform at Juniata College last Saturday night due to bad weather conditions.

A Penn State band, called the WBC Band, provided entertainment for the Multi-Purpose Inauguration dance. The band's repertoire consisted almost entirely of jazz music, which they performed very well. However, there was some disappointment among the audience, who was expecting to hear top 40 dance selections.

According to Phil Torcivia, Dance Committee member, it is possible that "Look Sharp" may appear for the All Class Night celebration in March.

One-Acts A Mixed Review

by Rod Keller

The annual One-Act Plays festival was produced this past weekend. Instead of the usual three student-directed One Act plays, a two-act play directed by Prof. Doris Goehring and a One Act play directed by David Merwine were performed.

The Cave Dwellers, by William Saroyan, included several fine performances by Jim Henry, Lisa Ellek, and Kazumi Shimada. The play is set in an abandoned theatre where several homeless people live. The rather avant-garde script required a performing bear played by Tim McCarthy. Perhaps the strange nature of the plot was a little too much for the Juniata audience, since several people expressed dissatisfaction with the weird things that happened on stage during the show. But more disturbing than the script deficiencies were the acting skills of some of the performers.

Fine performances by Lisa Ellek, Jim Henry and Kamuzi Shamida managed to balance out these and made The Cave Dwellers worth watching.

The Understudy, by Edward Kahn, is a musical One-Act play about a young boy and his problems dealing with reality. The difficulties in understanding this plot did not detract from most viewers' enjoyment of this show. The music in this show was beautiful and the pianist, Pierre Brenneman performed well despite the sad state of the piano that was made available for the show.

Good performances by the entire cast, especially Marty Keeney and David Merwine made this show very entertaining, despite the cast virus that hurt the musical aspect of the show. Also impressive for both acting and singing was Lori Swivel, in a difficult role that demanded a wide variety of talents.

Overall, it was an evening to enjoy some fairly good theatre and it was nice to have the amount of people that attended the Friday and Saturday performances.

Area residents and groups who have a talent they would like to share are invited to participate in the "Summer of '83" performing arts series sponsored by Juniata and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

According to Howard H. Crouch, professor of education at Juniata and director of "Summer of '83," anyone who sings, plays an instrument, dances or possesses some other talent is invited to apply for the summer series held at the Seven Points Amphitheatre, Raystown Lake.

"One of the original objectives of the summer series is to offer an opportunity for promising new talent to perform. We are always looking for new faces and performers," Crouch said.

Juniata's summer arts series which will begin its seventh season this year, offers a variety of programming including the annual Raystown Country Banjo Pickin' Contest.

Anyone interested in participating in the "Summer of '83" should contact Crouch at Juniata College, Huntingdon, 16652.

Special Open House

Area residents are invited to a special open house at Juniata's Sports+Recreation Center Saturday, Feb. 19 from 2 to 5 p.m.

During that time period, the four racquetball/handball courts, intramural gymnasium, swimming pool and sauna will be available for public use at no charge. Residents are also invited to come and tour the complex, whether or not they wish to make use of the facilities.

"Juniata is very proud of the new Sports+Recreation Center and we invite our area neighbors to stop by and visit the complex," said President Binder. "This open house is an ideal opportunity for residents, friends and alumni to become familiar with the building's many features."

Beginning at 5 p.m., an accommodation buffet, priced at five dollars per person, will be served in the Sports+Recreation Center multi-purpose room. Those wishing to attend the buffet must make their reservations by Wednesday, Feb. 16 by contacting the Alumni Office.

The accommodation buffet will be followed by the men's and women's varsity basketball game against Wilkes College. The women begin playing at 6 p.m. followed by the men at 8 p.m.

News Briefs

Jerusalem — Israel's Prime Minister Menachen Begin demoted former Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to the post of minister without portfolio Sunday. Begin appointed himself to head the Defense Ministry and indicated he would name a permanent successor to Sharon but did not reveal any names.

Washington — John W. Hinckley, Jr. is reported to have attempted suicide for the third time since he shot and wounded the President and three other men in March 1981. Hinckley, 27, was found semi-conscious Sunday morning in his room at St. Elizabeth's Hospital where he has remained in indefinite confinement since last year's trial in which he was found innocent of shooting the President by reason of insanity. He is believed to have taken an excessive amount of an unidentified substance and as of Monday was connected to a respirator in the critical care unit receiving around-the-clock nursing and security protection.

Rome — Blizzard gusts ripped three cable cars off their tracks and dropped them 150 feet onto a ski resort mountainside Sunday, killing eight adults and two children. The accident occurred on the Alpine Slope at Champoluc in Aosta between Italy's borders with France and Switzerland. All the victims were Italian.

Moscow — The Soviet government has sharply increased retail prices on timber, cement, steel, other construction materials and other items including certain cereals, alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages, tools, technical instruments, telegraph and mail services, according to well-informed sources. Foreign analysts suggest the immediate goal of such maneuvers is to ease economic pressures. The moves also suggest that the new party leadership of Yuri Andropov might be moving toward economic adjustments assigning a greater role to the use of price mechanisms in the centrally planned economy. Andropov said, "as a general strategy" to solve shortages "we must say that we do have certain price imbalances and incongruities, and we are going to have to put them right," while speaking to workers of a Moscow machine-tool factory.

Presentation Opens

Capek Play: R.U.R.

In an increasingly hectic and impersonal age, when a national magazine can select a computer as its Man of the Year, the Karel Capek play, R.U.R., first appearing in 1923, assumes renewed significance and an almost eerie timeliness. This early science fiction masterpiece, which first gave currency to the word robot, will be presented by the newly organized Stone Church Family Theater at the Stone Church Of The Brethren Wednesday, Feb. 16 through Saturday, Feb. 19.

R.U.R. (i.e. Rossum's Universal Robots) begins by introducing us to the curious factory where robots, all perfect facsimiles of human beings, are manufactured for industrial, agricultural, and even military purposes in every corner of the globe. Its personnel, secluded in a remote island from the rest of mankind, consists of an elite corps of scientists and technicians dedicated to perpetuating the awesome technological discovery made by the Rossum's father and son — the creation of the robot.

Their world seems safe, and the planet appears to be approaching utopia when the unexpected happens. Some of the robots acquire enough human characteristics, desirable and undesirable, to lead the others in a vast revolt against the human race. They succeed in destroying the whole of mankind except for one humble architect at the Rossum factory. On the very day of their triumph, however, the doom of the robots is sealed when Helena Domin, wife of the plant general manager, burns the manuscript containing the secret of their reproduction. Does the play then end on a note of annihilation?

It is sufficient to say that Capek held a final surprise for us, and the Stone Church Theater will share it with its audiences. The strategy overall of Director Howard Crouch is to treat R.U.R. as a period piece still starkly relevant in 1983. No attempt at an update has been attempted, and theater-goers will take note that the pacing and style of plays has changed over the past sixty years, although not to the detriment of R.U.R.

Crouch, assisted by Debi Peterson, has assembled a veteran cast who have appeared in numerous past presentations by the Huntingdon Community Theater, the Carriage House Experimental Theater, and GoWest Productions. Newcomers will be well represented also, as the Stone Church Theater stresses its determination to enroll new talent into local community theater.

The list of players are the following: Chris Peterson as Harry Domin, Anita Moore as Helena Glory, Rick Lombard as Dr. Gall, Al Mosser as Alquist, Lew Mermel as Consul Busman, John Muir as Hellemeier, Paul A. Blaum as Fabry, Gladys Mock as Nana, Henry Coyne as the robot Radius, Elaine Thornton as the robotess Sulla, and George Dempsie and Guenever Norris as the two beings who stand in the ultimate twilight zone between robot and man reborn.

The price of admission to see R.U.R. is $2 for the general public and $1 for students and senior citizens.

represent a three-dimensional world on a limited flat surface. These modern artists came to assert that the truth of art must come from within the individual. Their task then was to represent those images in a way to provoke understanding of them. This turn inward to find truth is reflected in the styles of impressionism, cubism, expressionism and surrealism. The surrealist ultimately attempted to relate the visible world to the unconscious.

The exhibit includes many notable works by such artists as Luigi Rossini, Henri Matisse, Marc Chagall, Joan Miro, Salvador Dali and Pablo Picasso.

Shoemaker Galleries, located in Carnegie Hall, are open to the public Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Study Break Planned

This Saturday night, Feb. 19, there will be an official Study Break (for those who will be studying), or a Cartoon Special (for those who should be studying); either way a fun night is planned starting at 9:00 P.M. in the Ballroom of Ellis College Center. Featured at this event will be the Pink Panther, of course, Rocky and Bullwinkle, and some Italian cartoons guaranteed to make you laugh. Admission is free, and so is the popcorn! Come and bring a friend — who says cartoons are only for Saturday mornings?

This event is sponsored by S.N.A.P. (Saturday Night Alternative Programming), a committee of Centerboard. Although fairly inactive this term, S.N.A.P. hopes to be back in action Spring term with a calendar full of sometimes innovative, always fun, alternative things to do on Saturday Nights.

Zada Sier: She Lives Here, But Who Is She?

by Jim Biles

She lives in the little green house across from South, and can be seen walking to and from Weis Markets occasionally, but other than that, nobody knows who Zada Sier is.

Mrs. Sier was born and raised in Huntingdon, and has lived close to the college since 1919, when she married her husband. Now at 87, she is proud of her age saying, "I used to just reverse it, but whether I'm 78 or 87, I'm still old."

She moved into the green house, which her husband built as a workshop, in 1945. Since then she has come to know some of Juniata's most distinguished and important alumni, including Jack Oller, Harold Brumbaugh, I. Harvey Brumbaugh, and Calvert Ellis.

Mrs. Sier especially likes Calvert Ellis, calling him "a nice fellow." She recalls a time when she and her husband were celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. At a church service held in their honor, Mrs. Sier greeted Ellis. When Ellis commented that he didn't think that he could stay married to the same woman for 50 years, Mrs. Sier said, "You should try it you might like it." Ellis replied that he would give it a shot.

Though she has lived in the midst of the college for all these years, Mrs. Sier has never really attended classes here. She did take voice lessons years ago when Founder's Hall housed classrooms, but, "When I found out what other courses I had to take, I didn't like it anymore." Her brother went to Juniata, and for that reason she knows Calvert Ellis and Jack Oller today.

After her husband died in 1978, the college attempted to buy the house from Mrs. Sier. After hearing her offer, the college refused. Mrs. Sier believes that the college wanted to buy the house for an incredibly low price, but that she was too smart for them.

She also believes that the college might expect to receive the house in her will after she dies, but she states emphatically, "They're crazy."

Mrs. Sier also points out that many people don't even know that she owns the house, but as she says, "They're wrong, I own this house." So it appears that the college will never own the house, at least not as long as Mrs. Sier has a say in the matter.

Strangely, Mrs. Sier finds it interesting living across from a college dormitory. Occasionally on weekends she hears noises, but, "I just fall back to sleep and ignore them." She enjoys the company when a curious student drops by for a visit, but she points out she receives fewer visitors these days.

Mrs. Sier has very little contact with the college nowadays. She has never met President Binder, though she has seen him walking down the street several times. She receives no special privileges from the college such as use of the new Sports and Recreation Center.

She knows only two of the school faculty well. She has met Prof. Robert Wagoner, and describes him as "a nice chap" and she also knows Klaus Jaeger and says enthusiastically, "I like Klaus!"

Mrs. Sier points out that the college has grown much since the early 1900's but says, "the college is still the same." When asked to comment on her 38 years on the college campus, Mrs. Sier states, "Everyone has always been so nice to me . . . why I think it's kept me young."

M&M's Crush

Second place M&M's defeated the previously unbeaten Generations team 7-4 in soccer action last week.

M&M's totally dominated play in the first half jumping out to a 3-0 lead. The first goal was scored by Mike D'Olio, who made an excellent play. The second goal was scored by Ed Trowbridge, with an assist by Ron Renzini. The third goal was pounded in by Sean Ruth from half court. It was the first of four goals which he scored.

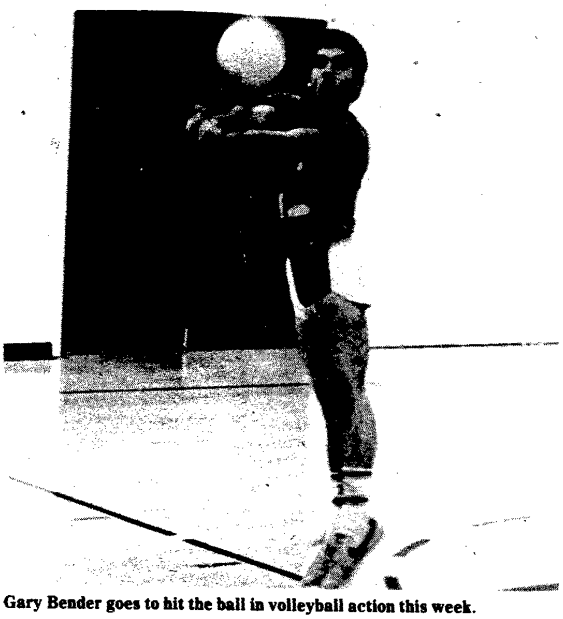
The first half was characterized by many missed opportunities by Generations. Playing without any substitutes, the Generations team was slow getting to the net. Many passes crossed in front of the M&M net untouched.

Play really opened up in the second half with both teams playing rather wildly. Ruth was first to score as he put one in from up close as the goalie was down. Ruth had his third goal occur much like his first goal as he wound up from half court and put the ball in to make it 5-0 M&M's.

Generations started their scoring as Rainer Mueller took a pass from the goaltender, Rob Yelnosky, making it 5-1. Next, Trowbridge put in his second goal of the night as he put the ball through the legs of the Generations goalie. The two teams continued to trade goals as Barry Keister, Generations, scored making it 6-2. Then Ruth put his fourth goal of the night past the goalie. Generations finished the scoring as Mueller and Generations goaltender put goals in; but, it was not enough as M&M triumphed over Generations 7-4.

In other soccer action on Sunday, Generations defeated Cloister 6-2, M&M's defeated Team 3-1, and Off-Campus defeated Quintessence 4-1. In Wednesday night action, Team defeated Quintessence 5-3, and Off-Campus defeated Cloister 6-5.

Generations, M&M's, Off-Campus and Team all made it to the playoffs.



Gary Bender goes to hit the ball in volleyball action this week.

Defenders Unbeaten

by John Surbeck

The big game of the season that featured the undefeated Defenders (7-0) and the second place Super Spikers (6-1), was a main attraction that lived up to all expectations.

The first game of the eventual three game match looked as if the Defenders were going to make a joke of the hyped match. Carl Fekula's outstanding, high deep serve crashed down on the Spikers as if the volleyball were a basketball, making the Spikers return the ball without a hard spike. This opened the way for the Defenders good teamwork and powerful front liners to return the ball onto the open areas of the floor to build a quick 11-0 lead.

The Spikers only points came behind the serving of Suk Cho who managed two points. Bob Wazalis finished the easy first game by serving an ace to end the lesson by the Defenders, 15-2.

The second game proved the extreme closeness of the match as both teams battled for every point. The flow of the game went back and forth but at the end, the Spikers' clutch play pulled them through in a tight 15-13 game. The Spikers used their good team unity to equal the contest at one game apiece.

The all important third game was equally as close as the second game. The Spikers, behind their momentum from the second game win, quickly opened to a 7-0 advantage behind their strong front line play. The Defenders came back to tie the game with Rick Eberly serving, but the Spikers came right back to take a 10-7 lead. The lead, however, did not last as the tough Defenders fought back again to take a 13-10 lead and eventually the game and match as Tim Zeller put the game away with an ace on his serve, 15-13.

Forces Strong

by Mark Shaw

In women's volleyball action last Sunday, Awesome Forces easily defeated the Tussey Terrors 15-5, 15-6.

The pre-game volley for serve was not an indication of what the match was going to be like. After the long volley, Awesome Forces won first serve honors. Peggy Daugherty started serve for Awesome Forces and gave them a 2-0 lead. However, after an exchange of serve the Tussey Terrors took temporary control. Becky Hay served the Terrors to a 3-2 lead. The Awesome Forces then pulled into the lead as Sandra Savidge and Holly Hoffman served to a 5-3 lead. The Tussey Terrors momentarily slowed Awesome Forces to get within one, but Beth Stravino took control with a couple of great serves and, combining it with a lack of communication on the part of the Terrors, gave the Forces a 9-4 lead.

The game stood at a standstill as both teams exchanged serves several times. Amongst the exchanges, the Forces gained points on the serves of Sara Sonntag and Stephanie Lent giving the Forces a 13-4 lead. The Forces put the game away as Savidge served an ace to give them a 15-5 victory.

The second game was almost as entirely dominated by the Awesome Forces. Savidge started serve and gave the Forces a 3-0 lead. The lead was extended to 9-0 as Karen Neibauer served well. Stravino added one more point for the Forces and Sonntag added four to give Awesome Forces a 14-0 commanding lead. The Forces then relaxed as the Terrors began to stage a comeback. Janet McChesney served for three points to make the score 14-3. Then, Hay served for three points making it 14-6. The Awesome Forces were not to be upset though, and Captain Stephanie Lent put the game away for the Forces victory 15-6.

In other Sunday action, Miller High Life defeated Great Expectations 15-17, 15-7, 16-14; Ron's Women defeated Ester's Molesters 15-9, 7-15, 15-9, the Bumping Babes defeated S.S. & A.J. 15-9, 13-15, 15-10; and the Red Cross II won by forfeit over the Zingers.

In Tuesday's action, Red Cross II defeated Awesome Forces 15-4, 15-3; the Sluggs defeated S.S. & A.J. 15-2, 4-15, 15-1; Ester's Molesters defeated Miller High Life 11-15, 17-15, 15-13; Ron's Women defeated Tussey Terrors 15-3, 17-15; and the Bumping Babes won by forfeit over the Zingers.

Teams playoff bound in the women's league were the Bumping Babes, Ester's Molesters, Red Cross II, Awesome Forces and getting a bye were the Sluggs and Ron's Women.

3 Unbeaten in Co-Rec

In co-rec volleyball action this week, it was the battle of the unbeaten as the Ballers took on the Juniata Volleyball Impersonators and lost in two straight games 15-12, 15-9.

The Ballers won first serve and took an early 1-0 lead, but the Impersonators came on strong to take a 6-1 lead. Billy Herrera, of the Ballers, staged their comeback as the Ballers took the lead 7-6. The Impersonators pulled away by combining good teamwork and excellent setting to take the lead 13-8. The Ballers tried to stage a comeback coming within two, 12-14, but the Impersonators triumphed 15-12.

In the second game, the Impersonators jumped out to an early 6-1 lead on good playing by Barry Miller and Sue Silvestri. The Ballers would not roll over and play dead as they came back to tie the game and then take the lead 7-6. Jenny Kaufman of the Impersonators, took over serve and gave them a 13-7 lead. The Ballers managed to score two more points but the Impersonators put the game away wth a 15-9 victory.

In other action on Sunday, the Hula-Hula Boys II defeated the Fumbling Fubs 15-9, 15-12; F.U.V.M. defeated the Tower of Power 15-12, 15-6; the Mansion Dwellers defeated the Defenders 15-9, 15-12; TBA defeated Corporal Punishment II 12-15; 16-14, 15-12; and the Lame Ducks defeated the Ozzies by forfeit.

On Monday, February 7, the Ballers defeated the S&M Strombolis 15-2, 15-4; TBA defeated the Defenders 15-3, 15-7; Juniata Volleyball Impersonators defeated F.U.V.M. 15-2, 13-15, 15-6; Corporal Punishment II defeated the Tower of Power 15-9, 15-2; the Empty Sets defeated Jug's Jammers 15-7, 15-4; the Untouchables defeated Red A 15-8, 15-7; 4-Play defeated Nut Cracker Sweet 15-10, 15-10; Volleylobes defeated the Terrors 11-15, 15-7, 15-6; Queffs II defeated Omnikron Spikers II 18-16, 15-13, and All the Way defeated Entropy 15-6, 15-11.

Making it to the playoffs were the Hula-Hula Boys II, Nut Cracker Sweet, Volleylobes, S&M Strombolis, Entropy, 4-Play, F.U.V.M. and the Fumbling Fubs. Getting first round byes were the Juniata Volleyball Impersonators, All the Way, the Empty Sets and the Ballers.

Playoff Finals Tonight

FA-Q wins C-league title

A League

by John Summers

Keith Fox directed a balanced Numbnut offense to a hard-fought 71-65 victory over Sherwood, Sunday night, to clinch the regular season title for the Numbnuts. This pitted the Numbnuts against fourth place finisher Mo Fo Co in the first round of A-League playoff action.

The Mo Fo Co's qualified thanks to a Sherwood forfeit Saturday night. This tied them with the G-Spotters at three wins apiece. (The G-Spotters also won by forfeit last week.) In head-to-head competition the teams were one and one, however the Mo Fo Co's had a higher margin of victory in their decision.

For the same reason the Numbnuts, 8-2, received the first place seed over the Wide Rides, also 8-2.

The Wide Rides met Sherwood in the other semifinal game. The winners of the two games meet tonight at 9:30 for the A-League Championship and the coveted IM T-Shirts.

Numbnut captain Doug Wallace commented, "Now that the BAMF's are ineligible for the playoffs, I feel we have the best chance of taking it all."

In other action in the final week of regular season play: the BAMF's beat the Numbnuts 87-69, the Wide Rides defeated the G-Spotters 71-54, and the Wide Rides beat the Mo Fo Co's 67-53.

B League

by John Summers

Last week Corky's Creampuffs and Snatcher's Men claimed the final two spots for the B-League playoffs.

The Creampuffs filled out the Blue Flight qualifiers by posting a sound 44-25 victory over the hapless Cripples. Meanwhile Snatcher's Men slipped by The Kayo's 48-45 and trounced the Purple Helmets 51-19 to complete the Gold Flight entries.

The top two seeds in each flight wrapped up the season with victories. In the Blue Flight, the Runnin' Rebels won via a Wet Sand forfeit, while Babylon By Bus crushed 206 Long 52-31. The loss eliminated 206 Long from the playoff scene. The Pioneers also won by forfeit over Jerry's Kids to round out flight action.

In the Gold Flight, the Grim Reapers notched two impressive wins, 79-41 over the Marauders and 74-35 over The Kayo's, and appear geared up for the playoffs. Grim Reaper captain Steve Johnson said, "We hope to meet the Smegmas in the playoffs to avenge our earlier loss."

The Smegmas, meanwhile, were having very little problem of their own as they handily defeated Tussey 217, 70-27. Should the two teams meet, it will not be until the finals. However, before that happens, the Smegmas will have to get by Babylon By Bus and the Grim Reapers will have the Runnin' Rebels to contend with.

Glenn Hineman of the Smegmas feels the match-up will occur, "I think we can win it all, but if we don't it will definitely be the Grim Reapers. We are the top two teams."

Bob "Chachi" Adamek of the Runnin' Rebels figures the outcome to be a little different. "If the Smegmas are lucky enough to get to the finals they'll wish they hadn't, because then they'll come up against the real men (the Rebels). We'll see what happens."

And so we will. Playoffs began Tuesday night with four quarterfinal games. At 9:00 the Smegmas, 8-0, took on the Creampuffs, 4-3, and Babylon By Bus, 6-1, locked horns with Return of Tab, 5-2.

The 10:00 games featured the Grim Reapers, 7-1, against the Pioneers, 5-2, and Snatcher's Men, 5-3, squaring off against the Runnin' Rebels, 7-0.

The winners of the two 9:00 games met Wednesday in one semifinal matchup, while the winners of the 10:00 games met in the other.

The B-League championship will be held tonight at 9:30.

C League

by John Summers

It was the final chance for Fred's Last Million. Any hopes they had of taking the C-League championship rested on the outcome of their match-up with the front-running FA-Q squad Wednesday night.

As the game began, the Millionaires were the only team to have a shot to overtake FA-Q. After the game, they had joined the others in defeat. FA-Q survived a sloppy first half to win this one going away 45-27.

The game began slowly as both teams had trouble finding the hoop. With just five minutes remaining in the 20-minute first half, the score was an unheard of 8-4, in favor of FA-Q. At intermission it was only 14-8, FA-Q.

Things started to gel for the FA-Q men in the second half, however, as they surged ahead 24-12 in the opening minutes. Fred's Last Million tried to fight back but their poor shooting, a dismal 19% from the floor, along with a scarcity of rebounding sealed their fate. By game's end, FA-Q boasted a 54-22 rebounding advantage.

Leading the FA-Q squad to their title-clinching victory were: Nate Plank — 13 points, seven rebounds; Gino Perri — 10 points, 14 rebounds; and Eric Schalm — eight points, 15 rebounds.

Mike Wasilus led the Millionaires with 12 points and nine rebounds.

In other C-League games: the Weekend Warriors scalped the Prodigal Sons 46-26, FA-Q defeated the Warriors 39-33, and the Prodigal Sons squeaked by Fred's Last Million 26-24.

FA-Q 45, Fred's Last Million 27

FA-Q (45) — Perri 5 0-2 10, Schalm 4 0-1 8, Plank 6 1-2 13, Vasalini 1 0-0 2, Strosser 3 0-0 6, Taylor 3 0-0 6, TOTALS 22 1-5 45.

Fred's Last Million (27) — Hepner 2 0-0 4, Dodson 0 0-1 0, Hoover 3 1-3 7, O'Dowd 0 0-0 0, Dimartino 1 0-0 2, Grube 1 0-0 2, Wasilus 5 2-4 12, TOTALS 12 3-8 27.

Scopers, Rappers Win

by Michelle Bartol

Action in this week's women's intramural basketball sparked some changes in the rankings.

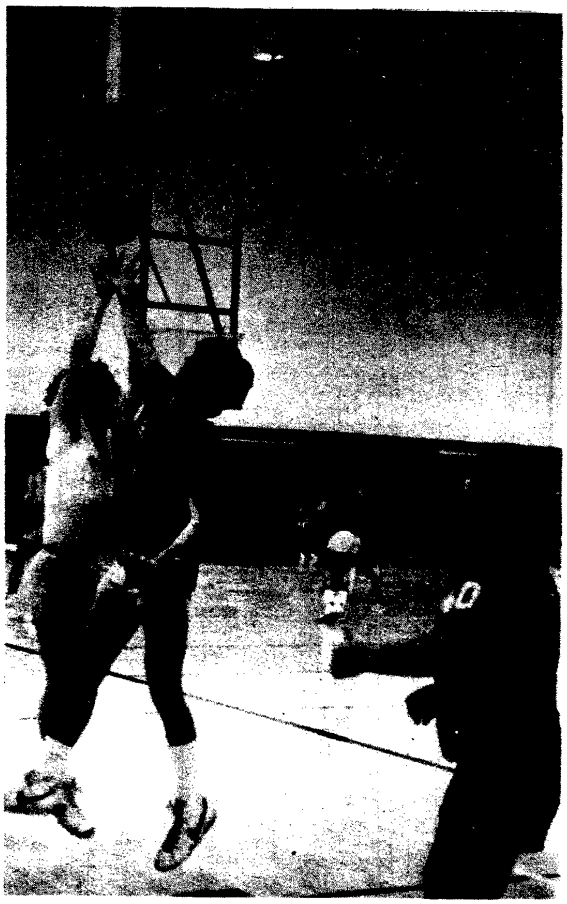
The last round of a triple, round-robin playoff was scheduled for this week with two teams, the Slammers and the Scopers, in contention for first.

Monday night brought the Scopers against the Slammers and Lesher against the Ramblin' Rappers. Competition was tight for the Slammers who held the lead in the league at this point. The first half started off slow for the Slammers. Two of their starters and key scoring figures, Terry Mulvihill, out with an injury, and Gwen Heidecker were not able to contribute. Jessica Gould picked up the slack leading the team with 16 points and 12 rebounds. However, her efforts just could not contain the outstanding performance by Linda Ramsay with 12 points, 10 rebounds and Kathy Harwick's dominant board control with 16 rebounds. Scopers' patience in working the ball proved effective and was shown through awesome shooting percentages from the floor of 75% for Ramsay, 100% (3-3) for Heather A. Roche and 65% for Michele Bevard. Unfortunately, Slammers shooting percentage on the night didn't even break 50%.

Ramblin' Rappers had some tough breaks throughout the season but finally came through to a 38-34 victory over Lesher. Stephany Porter and Katie Gibbons combined for 25 points to boost their record to 1-4. Team captain Porter attributed their success to the fine defensive efforts of Lynn Basham and Caren Ogrisek. The key was being able to contain Ginger Jones, Sue Occiano and Tarin Kita.

Thursday night action practically clinched the season's outcome. Ramblin' Rappers dropped another game to a forfeit against Lesher. That places them definitely in fourth and Lesher holds the third position.

The deciding game to break the tie for first between the Slammers and Scopers was a run-away by the Scopers, 52-36. They capitalized on the Slammers height disadvantage and lack of substitutes. The second half was only a matter of time. Scopers' strategy to contain Jessica Gould, the Slammers only rebounding threat, had proved successful. The victors out-rebounded their opponent 41-18. Linda Ramsay and Heather (apple) Roche combined for 18 points for the Scopers while Bartol had 16 and Gould canned 6 for the Slammers.



Men's IM Basketball action can be seen tonight at 9:30 as the championship games for A and B leagues take place.

Women Near .500 Mark

by App

In their only game last week, the women's basketball team travelled to York College and were victorious by the score of 80-66. With the victory, the Lady Indians upped their record on the season to 6-7. Saturday's game at Messiah was cancelled due to the snow.

Defense and hot shooting were the keys for the Indians against York. The Indians played tough aggressive defense which led to some easy transition baskets in the first half. These breakaways combined with the good inside play of Becky Rhodes and Patty Ryan helped the Indians shoot a sizzling 67% from the field in the half. By halftime, the Indians held a 15 point, 46-31 lead.

In the second half, the Indians cooled off in the shooting department, but their good defense wouldn't allow York to cut the lead down into single digits. The Indians shot only 42% in the second half, but the defense held York to a 37% shooting percentage for the game. Rhodes and Ryan were the big guns for the Indians once again. Rhodes was a hot 9 for 11 from the field for a game high 20 points and also hauled in 8 rebounds. Ryan was 6 for 13 from the field and a perfect 6 for 6 from the charity stripe for 18 points. She also had a team high 9 rebounds. Nancy Roach also hit double figures with 12 points, including several transition buckets.

This week the Indians have two games and next week conclude their season with a Monday night home contest. On Wednesday, the Indians travel to Dickinson and on Saturday they host Wilkes. Then, the season finale is Monday against St. Francis.

Men Lose

by Andy Berdy

Snow affected both of the Tribe's scheduled games this week. The Messiah outing scheduled for Saturday was snowed out due to the blizzard. Tuesday's game at York saw the Indians run into another blizzard as the Spartans blew out Juniata by a 71-51 score.

The first half was a seesaw affair as the Indians played good defense and forced York into bad shot selections. The result was a 27-27 halftime deadlock.

In the second half, York got their running game in gear, turning a close game into a 20 point margin.

A 31 percent field goal percentage and bad shot selections hampered JC who scored only 24 second half points, while York rolled up 44 of their own.

Mark Rucinski led the Indians with 16 points while Andy Witmer added 14. Troy Bell and Gary Johnson each netted 16 to lead the York attack.

The Tribe will take on Penn State — Capital Campus before rounding out their season with Wilkes at home on Saturday.

Grapplers Win Two

On February 5th the Juniata Wrestling team defeated Elizabethtown 27-21 and Messiah 42-12, but lost to Lycoming 42-19.

In the match against Elizabethtown, three Indians won by forfeit: Al Kreuzburg (118 lbs.), Dave Sloan (150 lbs.), and Chris Young (167 lbs.). Rick Noll (134 lbs.) won his match 3-1, Frank Biddle (142 lbs.) defeated his opponent 7-2 and Steve Moyer (158 lbs.) shut his opponent out 6-0.

In the Lycoming match only two of the Indian squad were victorious: Moyer pinned his opponent and Young won 5-0.

The Messiah contest was characterized by forfeits and pins. Two Indian grapplers won by forfeit: Charles Schichterly (126 lbs.) and Joel Beach (190 lbs.). Those who pinned their opponents included: Moyer, Young, Rick Schuch (177 lbs.) and Matt Siegal (Hwt.). Also winning were Sloan, 6-0, and Noll, 9-3.

Last week's match against Elizabethtown, Muhlenburg and Altoona was cancelled due to the snow storm. The Grapplers faced Washington and Jefferson on Tuesday. They will be heading into M.A.C. action next week with a winning season behind them.

"The Sports Corner"

by Mark Shaw

Since I am the new Sports Editor I kind of feel obliged to pick up where our former Sports Editor Andy Berdy left off.

Every week, he would come in with his Time Out article, sometimes bizarre, sometimes relevant and generally entertaining. This duty has been relinquished to me. It will be up to me to give the light side of Juniata sports, to give insights, to get down to the heart of the great sports issues of the day (sorry, I guess I'm already getting carried away — but, that kind of comes with the column). I've decided not to name it "Time Out" in honor of its former writer. Instead, I've come up with a name appropriate to the column, but far from imaginative: The Sports Corner. Well, so much for the first time rhetoric, let's get down to the real business.

This past Saturday an event occurred which will long go down as historic in the annals of Juniata sports' history. It was the prolific battle of the sexes. Man vs. Woman: Quintessence vs. Lesher. The battlefield was the varsity basketball court which was momentarily changed to a soccer field. Quintessence, who had a perfect record in the men's soccer league (0-10), faced the Lesher team (The Wall) of the women's soccer league (4-2).

It was a grudge match from the start. The women were challenging the men's pride and besides that, a half-keg was on the line. Just because we were winless didn't mean we would be an easy kill — at least we tried to convince ourselves of that.

From the start, the game was rough. They checked us into the boards, they held us, they did everything to us, but we survived. Our "Dave Shultz": Alan Mateo began to throw bodies around, and the women went flying all over the place. After a tough first half we were in the lead 6-0. We just couldn't get through the mass of girls standing in front of the net.

For halftime entertainment we decided to kick the ball around While shooting on goal, I broke the game clock which had been lying behind the net. Mark Shaw 1, clock — 0.

The second half proved to be the women's downfall. We totally dominated, racking up 12 goals The girls, however, did score a goal on us when they confused soccer with team handball. But, with a 17 point lead we felt safe enough to not contest the goal. The final was 18-1.

All in all we had a great time. It was really a relaxing way to start a Saturday night. Don't worry, the game wasn't as rough as I made it sound. I mean, they only sent a couple of people to the hospital (only kidding). By the way girls, thanks for the beer.

45th Annual All Class Night Tomorrow

This Year's Theme "Prime Time"

by Kathy Novak

The 45th year of All Class Night activities will commence this Friday in Oller Hall with the traditional class play competitions.

The idea behind All Class Night is to provide the four classes with an opportunity of some good-natured competition, while having fun and a sense of class unity. This year's theme was announced as "Prime Time." Any show which is or has been in prime time television is eligible for entry. The choices of each class are as follows: freshmen — "Love Boat;" sophomores — "Fantasy Island;" juniors — "Star Trek;" and seniors — "The Beverly Hillbillys."

This tradition originated in February of 1938, when the sophomores won a silver cup and $5 for their "Land of Cotton" skit, according to Dr. Earl Kaylor, Professor of Religion and History. This year's first-place winner will be awarded with a trophy.

The criteria for judging the student plays are: script — 30%, acting — 30%, costumes and set — 30%, and participation — 10%. There is also a "reasonably good possibility" that the faculty will participate in this year's performances.

Following the plays, there will be a dance in Memorial Gym with "Cairo" providing entertainment. This group consists of two female singers and six additional band members, performing a funk/reggae repertoire. The dance is tentatively scheduled from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m., and tickets will be on sale Thursday and Friday at dinner and on Friday at the Information Desk.

Dress should be no jeans for both the plays and the dance. Bob McDonald will emcee the event, and judges confirmed to date are Dave Kreider, Nancy Law, and Professor Chris Peterson.

Student News Update

All clubs and organizations should obtain a copy of the solicitation policy for the campus, which is available at the Student Government office or from any dorm senator.

The policy states the requirements for licensing and door-to-door solicitation.

Office hours for Student Government have begun and will run every week from 1-4 p.m. Elections for president and vice-president will be held March 22 at lunch and dinner.

Dedication Weekend for the Sports Center will be held April 15, 16 and 17. All students are encouraged to attend. Chuck Knox will be the guest speaker. Seniors are reminded that attendance is mandatory, and this includes full cap and gown in procession.

All eligible students received a note from Larry Bock in Financial Aid before break about registration legislation concerning loans. The problem is not that students have to register to receive aid, but must prove that they have regis-Juniata's Moller Organ Series will conclude Sunday, March 20 with a performance by Teresa Murray. Mrs. Murray, instructional assistant in music, will be performing at 7:30 p.m. in Oller Hall. See story on page 3.

Alumni Association Aids Awareness

by Jason Roberts

A Student Alumni Association is being organized to promote student involvement with the Alumni Association, according to Russ Rupiper, Associate Director of Alumni Affairs.

Rupiper said that the Student Alumni Association hopes to make students aware of the programs and benefits of the Alumni Association before they graduate by promoting student involvement in campus and alumni activities. While the organizational process is not complete, some activities are being planned for Spring term including: —Sponsoring a phone-a-thon team for the Annual Support Fund Phone-a-thon Campaign (Tuition pays only 75% of the college's expenses. The balance is provided through donations and activities such as the Phone-a-thon.). — Involvement in the Sports and Recreation Center dedication scheduled for April 16. — Sponsoring a senior class activity for the period between final exams and commencement.

The Student Alumni Association is composed of 30 students selected by Rupiper and others in Alumni Affairs which is located in the basement of Founder's Hall. The students were selected on the basis of previous involvement in Alumni activities such as Homecoming and Parents Weekend. The association is being kept small during its organizational stages but hopes to enlarge as committees are formed. Some of the committees being considered include a Fund Raising Committee; an On-Campus Committee for events such as Homecoming, Parents, and Reunion Weekends; an Admissions Committee geared to the needs of prospective students; a Career Planning Committee; a Senior Class Committee; and a Social Committee.

Three students from the association will attend a Student Alumni Association Conference at the University of Maryland in order to gather ideas about activity planning and organizational structure. "These associations are being set up in colleges all over the country. We want to get some ideas from the conference in Maryland and mold them to the particular needs of our college," Rupiper said. "We want students to understand why we're existing. We're here to serve them but students don't realize that."

Lesher Ed. Talks

by Cinny Cooper

March is Educational Month at Lesher. Sponsored by Lesher RHA, 30-minute discussions are being offered every Tuesday and Thursday during March at 7:00 p.m. in Lesher's carpeted lounge.

In the past few weeks, Jay Buchanan has spoken on Assertiveness and Dr. Trexler on Environmental Issues. Last Tuesday, a discussion was held by the mother and aunt of Mary Lou Beers, Lesher's Residence Director, on Natural Foods.

Three more discussions are being planned for March. On the 17th, Janet Lewis will speak on Feminism. A discussion of Astrology will be offered by Dr. Hunter on March 22. Summer Job Seeking Strategies will be the topic presented by Bill Martin on the 24th.

NASA on Reagan's Mind

The space shuttle Challenger remains dormant as its engines await repair. What was originally a January 24 lift-off date has become a late March lift-off date. NASA officials blame this problem on insufficient government funds. The government over the past few years has slashed the space budget. The future is just as bleak with the government cutting 615 million dollars out of an already bare minimum budget for 1984.

What effects do these cuts have on the shuttle program? The Juniatian believes that the spending cuts policy followed by the government is short-sighted and illogical. The government is giving up long-run benefits for short-run savings. The cost cutting budgetary measures are already hindering the space shuttle program and could cripple it.

The government's policy has attacked NASA from two ends. First of all, with the budget cuts, NASA has been forced to do some cutting of its own. Their cost-saving measures are the main reason for Challenger's problems. NASA engineers have used reworked components rather than new components to save money. These components often do not work properly. The head of the shuttle program stated that the engine problems of the Challenger can be directly related to cut funds which have affected shuttle assembly work.

Not only has NASA been forced to save costs in the assembly phase, it has also had to cut in the operational phase. The shuttle program had planned about 500 flights through 1992; that number is now around 300. This action has two adverse effects. There will be a possible loss of close to 3 billion dollars in revenues. The losses will be even greater if the Department of Defense (which only pays 12 million dollars per launch while the cost is around 25 million dollars) goes ahead with its plan to more extensively use the space shuttle for military purposes. With the Department of Defense using the shuttle more and NASA cutting flights, the space available for commercial purposes (which are quite profitable) is diminished. While the space for commercial use is decreasing, the demand is expanding. By the mid-1980's, it is expected that the demand will be more than double the reduced flight capacity of the space shuttle.

The U.S. seems ignorant of the fact that the space shuttle could be extremely profitable in the future. There is a great amount of evidence of business profitability in space. The space shuttle can help the U.S. take full advantage of the capabilities of space. If the shuttle is given the funds to become completely established, it will quicken the development of space manufacturing.

The government should recognize fully the potential of the space shuttle. Holding back or decreasing funds will allow foreign competition to command the market. It will also slow the development of high technology in areas where weightless manufacturing would be extremely beneficial.

Relying on one term of Logic and Language three years ago, I drew an obvious conclusion: Seniors do not like to think. S.V.S. makes seniors think. Therefore, seniors do not like S.V.S.

Don't misunderstand me. It's not that I didn't like S.V.S., for I didn't mind the thinking; I was just overwhelmed by the depression of thinking. This column, I dedicate, to Senior Value Studies, the first dosage of reality.

It's amazing to see the change which occurs over four years. Last year I gave a tour of Juniata to five football recruits and somewhere between the ballroom where I picked them up and the stairs one flight below, all of them grunted, "Where-is-the-gym-beer-and-WOMEN?" I could see they had "high school" all over their faces; it was apparent what their values were. Twenty minutes later, as they told me they'd "crash" all our parties as preppies, I told them to go home and splash on some more of their Izod after shave, that they'd never make it in the "big leagues."

The first weekend at Juniata, freshman year, is always a big casualty weekend. That first weekend it seems that many of the chalked-up casualties are freshman guys whose values were shaky at best to begin with and freshman girls who are so "in lust" that they value "the way he drooled after he said my name on the fourth try right after he kicked his roommate out."

One long-since transfer student, my freshman year, described to us her romantic evening that first Friday with the man of her dreams, a guy she had met just twenty minutes before they went for their "walk." As she relayed her story to us the following morning, she happily told of waking up in a field "somewhere around the science building" and not being sure how she had gotten there. She had poison ivy all over her body.

By senior year things have changed. Enthusiastic underclass friends say, "Hey, aren't you ready to get out of this place? Won't it be great?!" The first response is to nod your head frantically and agree — until you realize you haven't got a job. By senior year most kids have sorted through their values like sorting through the Lucky Charms box for the marshmallows. S.V.S. just brings a few more realities to light.

For our first S.V.S. paper we had 4-6 pages to lay out all of our values. Never mind my values of eating fresh snow, smelling the inside of a new car, or a masseur who also feeds me Middleswarth barbecues and plays George Benson. No space for such trivialities in 4-6 pages.

I went straight for the biggies: Security, Creativity. How was I to know it would cause such a controversy within the apartment. "That's really nice," one roommate said sarcastically, "You don't value friends. Boy, that's really nice to know where we stand!"

I tried to explain that friends were part of my basic value of security. My roommate continued, "And family. You don't even value your family. Your parents who raised you . . ." I again went back to my security theory. It didn't work; at lunch the following day as a friend joined us, my roommate offered, "Lisa doesn't value us. We rank down there with her parents." I felt insecure.

The feeling prevailed. So much so, that my roommate decided to help me out. "I want you to get over this insecurity," she said. She took out one of the wax moustaches we had bought at Sheetz'. "Say you're in a room with Tom Selleck, Richard Gere, Paul Newman, George Benson, and Adam Carington, and if you can convince them of your intelligence, personality, good looks, wit, and social graces, you can write their autobiographies. If you do that you'll gain everything you want." She put her moustache on

by Dave Lehmann

By the time that the next Juniatian is released, spring will have officially started. This is the final, and in my opinion, most fun stretch of the year, and students take this opportunity to change a normally academic-minded institution into a country club. After a long somber winter couped up in our rooms, mania becomes a refreshing condition.

Spring celebrations start before spring itself this week. Tonight, Sherwood will host a Saint Patty's Day party to celebrate leprechauns, four leaf clovers, pots of gold at the end of the rainbow, and James Joyce. It doesn't matter that most of the people who will attend aren't Irish because everyone will be in a green spirit anyhow. Green shirts and beverages lift our hopes for a green spring outside after a winter of green food at good old Baker Refectory. To me, Saint Patty's Day is very similar to another traditional Irish celebration, a wake. We are waking Old Man Winter a good riddance and welcoming in a new season of life. In that respect, Saint Patty's Day is a true New Year's: the year reached adolescence in the spring, was in its prime in the summer, mellowed through old age in the fall, and violently died in the winter. Now, it's time for a rebirth of the green, and I'll be at Catharsis to welcome it in tonight.

Tomorrow night one of my two favorite college activities will occur, all-class night (my other favorite is Raft Regatta with storming of the Arch taking a painful third). Students that didn't have time to get involved with the play production proper, should attend these skits at any cost. This year's theme is "Prime-time TV", and I'd guess that J.C. versions of television will be funnier than the original shows. Although we may not have the talent of professional TV people (then again, after watching an episode of "Dallas" on Saturday night, maybe we do), what we lack in talent, we cover with personality. Nothing is sacred tomorrow night; students, professors, and faculty alike are vulnerable to abuse. Of course, because of some portrayals of our professors, some of us may be taking courses over again next year, but there are a few poor sports everywhere. Taking a course twice is a small price to pay to get a few playful digs at professors.

Spring is coming. Soon we'll be fishing, swimming, drinking, and sunbathing during the days and studying, playing IM's, and drinking the nights away. Despite the studying, the country club has opened. Take the time to celebrate tonight and tomorrow night; saying, "I wish I would have," when all is finished leaves one with nothing but unfulfilled expectations.

Band Members Perform

Five Juniata College students will be participating in the 36th Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Band Festival to be held at Clarion State College March 18, 19, 20.

The participating students are Daniel Weyandt of Duncansville, string bass; Richard Mrosky of Armagh, French horn; Kathleen Kalher of Johnstown, clarinet; John Farrugia of Commack, NY, percussion; and Richard Fonda of State College, tuba.

Martin Boundy, president elect of the American Bandmasters Association and conductor of the Symphonic Band at the University of Western Ontario will serve as guest conductor.

A total of 145 students representing 32 colleges and universities throughout Pennsylvania will participate in the festival.

Free Film Classics to Show

by Robert Riefler

An alternative to studying or watching television is the free classic film series, a set of old movie classics shown here at Juniata.

These fine films are shown approximately every other Tuesday night in Alumni or Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m.

The purpose of the series, says committee chairperson Hilaire Veith, is to show "films on the merit of the films themselves, not for profit — that's why they are free." They also provide further campus entertainment.

The schedule for the remainder of the year is as follows:

March 22 — "Woman of the Year" (1942) 114 min. Spencer Tracy plays a sportswriter, and Katharine Hepburn a sophisticated and famous international commentator.

April 12 — "Key Largo" (1948) 101 min. Starring Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall; Bogart meets crass gangster Edward G. Robinson on a Florida Keys island.

April 19 — "Theater of Blood" (1973) 104 min. Vincent Price, as a Shakespearean actor spurned by eight critics, hatches a grisly plot to do them in, turning eight great death scenes into real life murders. "Twice Told Tales" (1956) 120 min. Three stories of gothic horror, also featuring Vincent Price.

May 3 — "Now, Voyager" (1942) 117 min. Bette Davis plays a repressed spinster who breaks out of her shell with the help of doctor Claude Reins.

May 17 — "A Streetcar Named Desire" (1951) 122 min. Starring Vivien Leigh and Marlon Brando. Based on the classic Tennessee Williams play; a woman refuses to come to terms with the death of her southern aristocratic background.

News Briefs

Washington — A Census Bureau study released Sunday said that a bachelor's degree is worth more than $300,000 in extra lifetime earnings for young men and half that amount for women. The study showed that a male college graduate will earn around $1,190,000 in a lifetime, $329,000 more than a man with only a high school diploma who would earn $861,000. A female graduate can expect a lifetime income of $523,000 with a bachelor's degree, $142,000 more than her peers with only a high school education, according to the study.

Men who don't complete high school will earn $601,000 and women, $211,000. Reasons for the difference between men's and women's earnings were calculated in light of time in the work force and the general low pay for women Bureau of Labor statistics estimate that men work for an average 38 years, women 28. Women had 13-19% lower annual income than men.

London — The opposition leader of Zimbabwe, Joshua Nicomo who fled the country 10 days ago, arrived in London Sunday, where he gave a press conference. Nicomo, 65, gave detailed accounts of the raid on his home in the Matabeleland region, his escape from the country, and stated he would return only when he feels sure his life is not in danger. Although his passport was revoked three weeks earlier Nicomo escaped the country after the raid in which his driver and a family friend were shot and killed. He felt his life was threatened seriously, although the Prime Minister, Robert Mugabe said Friday that his government had no reason to kill Nicomo, a former ally in the guerrilla wars for independence.

Ottawa — Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the leaders of the 10 providences negotiate this week to work out a settlement with the Indians and Eskimos and their claims to se ' government, land and natural resources. The leaders will be attempting to define the rights of more than 500,000 Canadian Indians. The national chief of the Assembly of First Nations representing 300,000 Indians, David Ahenakew, said, "We were the first and we have the first claim to this country."

Lancaster, PA — A study of the absence of lung disease in the nonsmoking Amish gives additional evidence to a new medical study that "passive smoking is associated with increased incidents of lung disease." Of 348 lung cancer patients in the Lancaster General Hospital between 1971-77 only one was Amish and that one was related to a cigar smoking man. Lancaster physicians found that Amish are almost free of lung disease. The smokeless environment seems to be the reason for this low incidence of lung cancer in the Amish populations.

China — Karl Marx was hailed as "a most outstanding intellect" Monday in China's observation of the 100th anniversary of his death. Communist party chief Hu Yaobang told a television audience of 10,000 during a national broadcast that working conditions should improve and that the material wealth of the intellectuals should be higher than that of the workers. Marx's teachings along with those of Mao-Tse Tung and Vladimir Lenin are required reading in China.

Organ Series Ends
Murray in concert

Juniata College's Moller Organ Series will conclude Sunday, March 20 with a 7:30 p.m. concert by Teresa Murray, instructional assistant in music.

Mrs. Murray's performance, to be held in Oller Hall, will feature "Prelude and Fugue in A Minor" by Bach, "Messe pour les convents" by Couperin, "Sonate I" by Hindemith, "Le Banquet celeste" by Messiaen, and "Prelude and Fugue upon the name of B.A.C.H." by Liszt.

A graduate of Bridgewater College with a B.S. degree in music education, Mrs. Murray is a candidate for a Master of Music degree in organ performance from Westminister Choir College where she was awarded a teaching assistantship in 1981-82. She has taught piano and organ at Juniata since 1974.

Mrs. Murray has studied with Joan Lippincott, Eugene Roan and Mark Brombaugh of Westminister Choir College; Leonard Raver of the Juilliard School and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra; and Harold Vogel of the North German Organ Academy.

The Moller Organ Series opened Oct. 31 with a concert by Franklin E. Perkins, music department chairman at the John Burroughs School and minister of music at Ladue Chapel, both in St. Louis. Perkins is a 1949 Juniata graduate.

The Series continued on Dec. 14 with the annual Christmas concert by the Juniata College Choral Union under the direction of Bruce A. Hirsch, associate professor of music. Mrs. Murray accompanied the group on the Moller organ.

Juniata's Moller organ has been a source of pride and inspiration for the college since it was installed in Oller Hall in 1940. A gift to the college from Miss Rello Oller of Waynesboro, a 1920 Juniata graduate, the organ was built from specifications prepared by Dr. Carl Weinrich, university organist at Princeton University, and the late Richard O. Whitelegg, vice president and tonal director of M.P. Moller, Inc., Hagerstown, Md.

Because of the distinguished character of the instrument, it was removed from Oller Hall in 1981 and returned to the Moller factory for complete restoration.

Practicing Good Health

by Jane Brown, R.N.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In an effort to make students aware of ever-present health concerns, The Juniatian is presenting the first in a series of articles to help promote a person's own state of physical well-being.

Enjoy life to the fullest by taking the responsibility for your own good health. You can be healthier, look better, feel better, and live longer by starting your own personal wellness program today.

How can you accomplish wellness? By learning how to stay healthy, by practicing good health habits and giving up harmful ones, and by using your body wisdom — responding to warning signals before something serious happens. There are many health factors which are relevant to wellness. Your lifestyle is the key.

Beirut in Good Hall

by Jessie Amidon

Are there times when you'd like to take the Mid-East Crisis into your own hands? What would you do if you were a member of the PLO or the International Peacekeeping Force in Beirut? If these and other questions concerning international affairs seem remote but would be of interest if you were the decision-maker, the Political Science Dept. and the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee will be providing an opportunity this term.

In conjunction with Dr. William Vocke's International Law and Organization class, an Inter-Nation Simulation will take place on the first four Sunday evenings after Easter break. The basic problem to be addressed is the renewed violence in southern Lebanon and northern Israel. Participants will represent the nations involved, the United Nations, and the world press. The countries represented will be Lebanon, Israel, Syria, Jordan, USA, USSR, Egypt, France, and the PLO.

Participants will be encouraged to get involved in their characters, representing their countries authentically with appropriate costumes and dialects. The project should prove to be enjoyable as well as educational.

Monetary awards will be given at the end of the simulation for the "winners" as well as a party for all involved. Professors and students interested in international affairs are invited to participate. No previous experience or knowledge is necessary. Anyone interested should contact Thomas Lubisch (box 681), Susan Mattie (box 133), or Connie Herrera (box 1134.)

Meet Dave Siebert

by Robert Riefler

One of the key persons responsible for the smooth flow of events at Juniata is audio visual specialist Dave Siebert.

Siebert runs the Audio Visual Department as a division of library services. His responsibilities include coordination of all film activities on campus and most video materials. He also oversees the provision of instructional equipment and sources for the campus and most events requiring technical support, such as the artist series, lecture series, theatrical presentations, and parties.

Juniata's A.V. Department, says Siebert, is making great progress. "The staffing of the office and the recent additions to the equipment inventory allows for a more dynamic operation." Their new, larger office is located in the library basement.

Siebert began work at Juniata in August 1980. He graduated from California State College in 1979 with a B.A. degree in communications media. He enjoys fishing, motorcycles, skiing, water sports, and frisbee.

Our audio visual specialist will continue improving Juniata's A.V. services. He wishes to expand video tape production, and develop a stronger relationship with the communications program.

feel you have a problem and try to avoid situations where there is excessive drinking.

Exercise. Walking, jogging, swimming, and bicycling are all excellent choices to help your heart pump more efficiently, improve your muscle tone and endurance, aid digestion and sleep habits, as well as maintaining better oxygenation of your whole body. Be sure to exercise safely. Wait for two hours after eating before exercising strenuously, warm up and cool down by regular stretching. Don't overdo it — increase gradually.

Eat the right foods. Choose daily from milk group (2-3 servings daily), vegetable/fruit group (4 servings daily), meat group (2 servings daily), bread/cereal group (3-4 servings daily). Cut down on sugar, fatty foods, salt. Eat more fiber, fish and poultry, fresh fruits and vegetables.

Manage stress. Pressures, demands and worries that make you feel tense are facts of life. Try to keep them within manageable limits. Be realistic. Take one thing at a time, don't expect the impossible, set practical goals. Plan your work by organization and efficient use of energy. Relax! Take breaks, do something you enjoy. Exercise helps too. Don't make too many changes in your life at one time. Discuss problems with people involved before tension builds up. Don't ignore physical symptoms of stress. Seek advice.

Foreign Language Week V-103 Spotlights

by Beth Stravino

Juniata had the opportunity to experience Foreign Language Week with a flair with a variety of activities throughout the week.

Last Sunday evening, Betsy Lewis ('85) kicked off Foreign Language Days with the V-103 Spotlight featuring "Foreign Music." Contemporary German new wave, French, and Spanish music was entertainingly presented.

Tuesday, a Spanish film, "The Spirit of the Beehive" was presented free of charge in Alumni. The film was moving and praised by the N.Y. Times as the best Spanish film ever made.

Wednesday evening, Baker Refectory joined the celebration of Foreign Language Days by having an international buffet, with dishes from Russia, Spain, Italy, Germany, France, and Sweden.

Next Thursday, March 24 at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall, will be La Tuna, a Spanish singing group. Comprised of six grad students from the University of Madrid, La Tuna is a fun-loving, mischievous, and rowdy bunch of guys. Originally formed in the 12th century to "merrymake, girlwatch, and sing," this set became as much a part of Spanish university life as professors and textbooks.

Professor Evelyn Church stressed the object of Foreign Language Days. Bringing an ". . . awareness of languages and the importance of studying them . . ." and giving "Knowledge about cultural opportunities, the movies, and the foods" of other lands, is the goal of Foreign Language Days. Vive la difference!

Expert to Lecture "The Family Man"

One of the nation's leading experts on marriage and the family, Dr. Jessie Bernard, will deliver the annual Will Judy Lecture at Juniata College Tuesday, March 22 at 8:15 p.m. in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center.

Research Scholar Honoris Causa at The Pennsylvania State University, Dr. Bernard will speak on the topic, "The Family Man." She says that "Society has a vested interest in the family man. From an overall point of view it is good, even essential, for our society that all adult males be at least married and, preferably, parents, but in any event, married."

Dr. Bernard is the author of numerous articles and books including "The Female World," "Self Portrait of a Family," "Women, Wives, Mothers; The Future of Marriage," Women and the Public Interest," and "The Sex Game."

A graduate of the University of Minnesota where she received both her bachelor's and master's degrees, she received her doctorate from Washington University in St. Louis, and has since been awarded several honorary degrees.

During the 1930s, Dr. Bernard served as a social science analyst with the Department of Labor, working on studies of consumer expenditures jointly with the Bureau of Home Economics. Prior to joining the Penn State faculty in 1947, she taught at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo. She has been a Visiting Fellow at the National Institute of Education, and a Scholar in Residence at the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Currently a resident of Washington, D.C., Dr. Bernard is the mother of three children.

The public is invited to attend Dr. Bernard's lecture, which is made possible by an endowment from the late Will Judy, a 1911 Juniata graduate. A valedictorian of the Hamilton School of Law, he practiced briefly in Chicago and served in the Army during World War I, rising to the rank of captain and receiving the Silver Star.

Before retiring in the late 1950s, Capt. Judy operated a Chicago publishing firm for 36 years. He wrote eight books about dogs, edited a dog encyclopedia, and made "Dog World" magazine the most widely read pet periodical in the nation.

Capt. Judy made numerous financial contributions to Juniata and in 1958, 15 years before his death, provided a $20,000 stipend to establish a lecture series "to supplement and enrich the academic program of the college."

and said in a deep voice, "Hello, Lisa. I'm Tom Selleck. Convince us."

"I can't," I replied.

"Why not? Don't be timid; convince us."

"I can't," I laughed. "You look ridiculous. You're not Tom Selleck."

"I am!" my roommate cried, pounding the chair. I was only having problems writing my paper. She was having an identity crisis.

For my "Age 30" paper things did not improve. As I looked to my "idealized" future ten years from now it occurred to me that I would probably not be poised at my typewriter to write my first novel; it would be my computer terminal. That depressed me.

A few paragraphs later I was wondering whether I wanted a boy or girl first, once I had children. I called my boyfriend. "If you had to choose, would you want a boy or girl as your first-born?" I think the phone dropped and then he uttered, "Why?"

"Because I have to know whether to pick a toy truck off the floor or a doll."

"You'll only pick up one or the other?" he asked.

I continued. "Actually it doesn't matter; toys are interchangeable." I hung up.

A week later I once again called him for answers. I was writing my third S.V.S. paper and was distraught. He picked up the phone.

"If we were to get married would you pay to get my first book published?" I hysterically screamed into the receiver.

"If you let me buy the Toyota truck." I hung up.

One evening toasting marshmallows in front of a warm fireplace, my boyfriend and I had a huge argument about nuclear war and a movie I had seen in S.V.S. I thought it could not get worse — until my mother called and told me, "Get sick now because as soon as you graduate you won't be covered by our insurance."

I hung up. I felt insecure.

I.M. V-Ball Championships

Women's

Ron's Women defeated the Sluggs 3-15, 15-5, 15-3 for the Women's Intramural Volleyball Championship.

The first game was completely controlled by the Sluggs. After a long volley, Ron's Women won first serve and then took an early 3-0 lead. There were numerous service exchanges between the two teams early in the game. Then, Colleen Irelan took control with the score at 6-3, Sluggs. Her hard serve seemed to cause Ron's Women to fall apart. She lead her team to victory 15-3.

The second game was a much tougher fight. Irelan served first, but Ron's Women regained their composure and allowed her only one point. Ron's Women then took control, but the Sluggs were not going to make it easy. Service was exchanged numerous times, but Ron's Women were getting the points while the Sluggs couldn't regain their magic touch. Ron's Women had a 5-2 lead when Sue Silvestri began serving; she started off with an ace, then won two more points as the "Women" took a commanding 8-2 lead. Ron's Women continued to get one point at a time while holding the Sluggs scoring to a bare minimum. Tracey DeBlase controlled the serve at 12-5 and proceeded to put the game away for the the Women 15-5.

The third and deciding game was completely controlled by Ron's Women. The "Women" jumped out to a 5-0 lead and a good serve by DeBlase and four excellent serves by Jenny Kaufman. Ruth McKeither, of Sluggs, tried to initiate a comeback but the "Women" were too determined and stopped the Sluggs with a 6-2 lead. Jill Loomis and Captain Edie Marsters then combined for three "Women's" scores and the lead was 9-2. After an exchange of serves Marie Craig served the "Women" to a 13-2 lead. Joan Barret served for a point to make it 13-3, but Ron's Women were too tough. They put the game away on a perfect set by Kaufman to Silvestri for the spike. Ron's Women won 15-3.

All the Way swept two straight games from Entropy 15-2, 15-10 to become co-rec volleyball champions.

The first game was totally commanded by All the Way. They won the volley but failed to capitalize immediately. After an exchange of serves, Rodney Hess, of All the Way, led his team to a 2-0 lead. Next Didi Pinkstone took over for All the Way giving them a 5-0 lead. Both teams were setting very well. Entropy got on the scoreboard as Carol Johnson served for a point, but All the Way was too strong. After Scott Perroty served for two points, Barb Bewley served for four giving All the Way an impressive 12-1 lead.

Cheryl Hurst put the game away for All the Way with a score of 15-2.

The second game was not as easy as the first. Entropy started with a 2-0 lead on serves by Joah and Jeanne Kolonich. Eric Ober closed the gap to one because during his serve an Entropy player committed a net violation (a problem that plagued Entropy throughout the game). Losing 2-1, All the Way's Hess controlled serve for three points, one point being an ace, and All the Way led 4-2. Entropy would not die however and regained the lead 7-4 on excellent plays by Mike Santoro. Then, All the Way got down to business as Sonny Varner and Bewley combined to give them an 11-7 lead. After losing their lead, Entropy just could not get back. Both teams exchanged points until Eric Ober put the Championship away, 15-10.

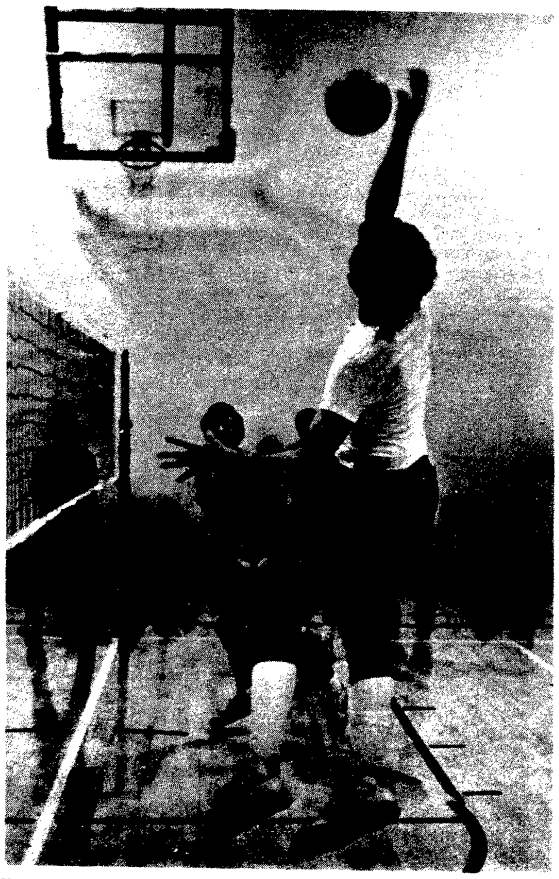
In the Men's Volleyball Championship, the Defenders continued their tradition of league dominance by defeating the Super Spikers 15-9, 15-3.

With only five players, the Defenders struggled through the first game until they began communicating. The Defenders took an early 1-0 lead on a serve by Carl Fekula. The Super Spikers came right at the Defenders trying to take advantage of the Defenders' handicap. The game was an exchange of points as Steve DePerrot stood out for the Super Spikers, while Bob Adamack ignited the Defenders spirit. The Super Spikers had an 8-6 lead thanks to DePerrot when the Defenders found their timing. Randy Ketchum pulled them within one, 8-7; then Tim Zeller took control as the Super Spikers fell apart. Zeller served eight consecutive points giving the Defenders a 15-9 victory.

The second game appeared like it was going to be like the first as both teams started slowly. The Super Spikers were only down by one when the Defenders took control. Ketchum served for six points with the help of spikes by Fekula and Zeller as the Defenders took the lead 9-2. Captain Bob Wazalis made it 11-2 as he served an ace. Both teams traded serves a few times until Zeller again put the game away, 15-3.



Kerry Hendershot goes for the spike as Eric Ober looks on in the Men's Volleyball Championship game. The Defenders defeated the Super Spikers 15-9, 15-3.

Rodney Hess goes for the set as teammates Didi Pinkstone and Jean Moulder look on. All the Way defeated Entropy in this championship game 15-2, 15-10.

Quad Boys Stun

by App

In the Handball Championship game, the Quad Boys upset the previously undefeated Black Knights by the score of 33-25.

The Quad Boys were sparked by the excellent goaltending of James Whittingdon (Witt) who made several diving stops of Black Knights' shots headed toward the net. Meanwhile, offensively the Quad Boys moved the ball around well, giving themselves many point blank shots.

In the first half, the Quad Boys jumped out in front early, sparked by the scoring of Rick Eberly and Bobby McDonald. However, the Black Knights recovered and the game remained close with the Quad Boys maintaining a slim lead. At the half, the Quad Boys led 14-11. For the half, the Quad Boys converted 14 of 24 shots, while the Black Knights connected on only 11 of 35 shots.

In the second half, the Quad Boys slowly increased their lead as the Black Knights could get no closer than 3. The Quad Boys spurted at the end to push the final margin of victory to eight. In the second half, the Quad Boys shot 19 for 29, while the Black Knights scored on only 14 of 32 shots. The key statistic for the game was that the Quad Boys shot 63% while the Black Knights shot only 38%. McDonald and Eberly led the Quad Boys in scoring with 8 goals a piece, while Bobby Wazalis led the Black Knights with 10 goals. Congratulations to the Quad Boys for winning the Intramural Handball Championship at Juniata this year.

M & M's Champs

M&M's defeated Generations for the intramural soccer championships, 4-2.

The first half was characterized by a lot of hard play by both teams. M&M's were given first possession and were first to capitalize when Ed Trowbridge scored at the 2:00 mark making it 1-0 M&M's. M&M's played well defensively and both goalies played extremely well. Generations had the benefit of two penalty shots but failed to score. The first half was a mid-field struggle with the action going back and forth. With five minutes left, Pierre Verroye made a hard shot, but M&M goalie Rob Yelnosky made an excellent save. With four minutes left in the half, M&M's scored again as Sean Ruth pounded one home to make it 2-0.

The second half was much like the first with both teams going at it hard. The teams passed well and played skillfully. Generations put on the pressure at the start but couldn't seem to get a goal. M&M's Ruth scored again with an assist from Mike D'Olio at the 15-minute mark. M&M lead 3-0. Generations finally got on the scoreboard as they scored with 12 minutes left. The goal was hotly contended by M&M's who claimed the ball didn't go over the goal mouth, but the referee stuck to his decision and the score advanced 3-1. Generations then pulled within one as Keith Fox blasted one home with eight minutes left. M&M's still lead by a margin of 3-2. Then in the most spectacular play of the game, Ruth completed a hat trick by intercepting a crossing pass, leaping, and heading it in for the goal. M&M's took a 4-2 lead. Generations did not give up though and play intensified as the game neared the finish. Generations again came within one as Barry Keish scored to make it 4-3. Both teams fought hard as time was running out; but M&M's held on to their lead and became the champs.

Girls Finish 7-9

by App

The girls' basketball team finished their season with a 7-9 record. The Lady Indians had a chance for a .500 record or better, but dropped 2 of their last 3 regular season games. The Indians dropped a 54-43 decision at Dickinson then finished the season with 2 home games dropping the first to Wilkes by the score of 84-77 and winning the second by demolishing St. Francis 81-50.

Against Dickinson, the Indians lost the game on the boards and at the foul line. Dickinson outrebounded the Indians 45-34 and 26 foul shots as compared to 12 for Juniata. Dickinson made only 1 field goal more, but outscored the Indians by 9 from the line. Dickinson led 25-18 at the half, despite being outshot from the field. In the second half, Dickinson maintained their lead and slowly increased it outscoring the Indians by 4. Patty Ryan led the Indians with 13 points and hauled in 9 rebounds. Nancy Roach chipped in with 10 points and Marie Glendenning pulled down a team high of 10 rebounds.

In perhaps the most exciting game of the year, the Lady Indians battled back from a 25 point first half deficit and closed it to within 4 points before finally losing to Wilkes. In the first half, the Indians spurted to a quick 10-4 lead as it looked like a Juniata blowout in the making. However, Wilkes reeled off 10 straight points to take the lead. A Juniata scoring drought late in the half allowed Wilkes to run off 13 unanswered points to open up a 21 point lead. At halftime, Wilkes had a commanding 50-27 lead.

At the start of the second half, Wilkes appeared to have the game under control as their lead remained at 20. The Indians then ran off 2 streaks of 10-2 to reduce Wilkes' lead to 4, 73-69, late in the game. However, Wilkes ran off an 8-2 streak of their own to reestablish their double digit lead and put the game out of reach. The loss overshadowed a fine individual performance by senior tri-captain Nancy Roach. Roach scored a career high 32 points on 14-20 shooting from the field and 4 for 8 from the foul line. Ryan added 17 points and Ellen Fasnacht chipped in with 12. Peggy Evans and Marie Glendenning led the Indians' board effort with 14 and 11 caroms respectively.

The Indians closed out their season victoriously at home defeating St. Francis for the second time in as many outings. The Indians domination of the boards keyed the victory. Juniata outrebounded St. Francis 52-26 which allowed their running game to hit high gear. St. Francis remained within striking distance of Juniata until midway through the second half when the Indians streaked to a very comfortable lead and cruised to victory. Evans led the Indians with a team high 18 points and 14 rebounds. Holly Crable added 14 points and Ryan also hit double figures with 11 points. Ryan and Glendenning helped with the board assault as each pulled down 9 rebounds.

For the year, Becky Rhodes and Ryan were the big guns for the Lady Indians. Rhodes led the team in both scoring and rebounding averaging 13.5 points and 10.6 rebounds a game. Ryan was second in both categories averaging 13.5 points and 9.4 rebounds per game. Fasnacht was third in scoring averaging 9.5 a game and Roach was fourth averaging 8.9 points a game. Glendenning was third on the team in rebounding averaging 6.1 a game. As a team, the Indians shot 39% from the field and held their opponents to an identical 39%. Juniata had a slight advantage on the boards, outrebounding their opponents by 2 a game. However, the Indians scored an average of 64 points a game while their opponents scored an average of 68 points a game.

Rob Yelnosky, of Sherwood, goes up for the jumper as Keith Fox and Doug Wallace, of Numbnuts, defend.

Numbnuts Win

by Michelle Bartol

Excellent play by both teams in the finals in A league provided the fans with an exciting game.

Doug Wallace and Paul "Pope" Miller came out strong for the Numbnuts. They were high scorers for the evening, pumping in 13 and 19 respectively. Dave Musser and John Brogan were the scoring machines for Sherwood collecting 12 and 11 points respectively.

Unlike most championship games, where the first half is played rather conservative, Numbnuts and Sherwood began to play "fired up" and continued until the final seconds expired. The game was quick paced with foul trouble being a constant threat to both teams. Doug Wallace, an important rebounding and scoring factor for the Numbnuts, collected three fouls before the half was up. One of the leading scorers for Sherwood, John Brogan and teammate Mike Lesh were also plagued with fouls.

Second half action was intense with Numbnuts coming onto the floor with only a two point lead of 25-23. Sherwood surprised the Numbnuts with a more balanced scoring attack. Rod Yelnosky and Eric Cutting exploded to combine for a total of 16 points and 12 rebounds. With several Numbnuts' starters in foul trouble, it was safer for Sherwood to muscle in for the rebounds; however, they only brought down 31 as compared to the Numbnuts total of 27.

The lead exchanged hands during the final minutes of the game. Eric Dezii poured in 6 points out of his game total of eleven during the final seconds to boost the Numbnuts to the victory and the 1983 A League Basketball Championship.

Numbnuts (55), Sherwood (53)

Numbnuts — Wallace 6 1-2 13, Dezii 5 1-2 11, Miller 7 5-9 19, Deike 1 0-0 2, Surbeck 1 0-0 2, Fox 3 2-2 8

Sherwood — Brogan 5 1-2 11, Musser 6 0-0 12, Yelnoski 4 2-2 10, Cutting 3 0-0 6, Lesh 2 2-5 6, Michelone 3 0-0 6, Smale 1 0-0 2.

John Brogan, of Sherwood, takes a jumpshot while he is being closely guarded by Numbnut's Keith Fox. The Numbnuts defeated Sherwood in the A league championship game, 55-53.

Time Out

by Andy Berdy

Time flies when you're having fun, so the saying goes. I remember the day when I asked the sports' editor before me to write one last column as a way to sort of say goodbye to all the time he spent in this position.

His name was Mark Infanti, a guy probably only few of us remember as Shep, and his column was Shep Speaks. At the time, I didn't know how I could ever come up with a name that would ever have as much significance as his. Out of haste I chose Time Out.

At first I didn't think much of it, but as I went through two years of filling this space it came to have more meaning to me. I kind of related it to the value a Time Out has to a coach. It gives him a chance to pull his team to the side and show them what they are doing right and what they need to work on.

I know some of the "Time Outs" I've called have had all of the influence of a TV intermission, but I hope at least a few have had the impact that they were intended to have, that being to look into different sports' issues and provide some entertainment.

When you turn that opening saying around and think about it, using a little Logic and Language expertise that we all have, it seems to apply to sports at Juniata, at least in my four years here. Since you're having fun, therefore, time flies.

Even though Juniata doesn't put a lot of emphasis on athletics, they still should be an important part of a person's life. I think I've learned more about getting along with people and have started more valuable friendships through sports here than any classroom could have accomplished.

And I had fun doing it. The L & L theory held true, too. Time did fly, and I am just now beginning to realize what I will be missing come May. I've taken for granted all that Juniata has had to offer in four years. I've taken for granted all the pick-up hoop games I've played or all the intramural championships I was sure we'd win. And even though it's still new, I've taken for granted all the racquetballs I've hit or all the cannonballs I've tried in the Sports Rec Center.

I've just started to realize that once I'm out of here, it won't be that easy to find nine guys to play basketball or a pool to swim in.

If I could say one thing it would be this. Sure, we are all here at Juniata to learn, get a degree and go on, but who's to say that you can't have a little fun doing it. Sports have provided more good times here than I'll ever be able to forget. Don't take athletics for granted. One day you may look back at the opportunities offered here and say, "I wish I would have . . ."

Maybe Logic and Language isn't always right. I think time is always going to fly. So why not have fun before its too late.

Thanks, Juniata College.

All Class Night Plays Well Received Juniors Win with "Star Trek"

by Ron Renzini

The class of '84 continued its recent dominance of All Class Night by virtue of last Friday's win at the 45th annual All Class Night event.

The competition, which gave the four classes a chance to work as teams, had a theme of "Prime Time." This allowed any television series which is or had been in prime time television eligible for entry. The competition was emceed by Bob McDonald.

The juniors chose "Star Trek" and received fine performances from the entire cast. Dave Merwine, in the role of Captain Kirk, and Chris "Corky" Collins as Mr. Spock, performed especially well.

The scenery for the stage scenes were well thought out and added realism to many of the scenes. Commercials in between scenes added to the "Prime Time" effect and kept the audience laughing. Especially funny was the "Crazy Freddie" commercial performed by Henry Coyne.

The play had placed the Star Trek clan in Huntingdon searching for a lost fuel formula. The crew then experienced the "red tape" of the new Sports & Recreation Center, poor library construction, and the administration before successfully completing their mission.

In second place this year was the sophomore class with their theme "Fantasy Island". For the most part, the play was well received by the audience. Fine performances were turned in by Tim Grove as Mr. Roarke and Jack Makdad as Jack-U.

Their plot centered around a student whose fantasy was to experience college life. Of course, the setting chosen was Juniata College. Finely-danced routines and outstanding singing performances by Laura Keat and Lori Swivel highlighted the play.

Third place this year went to the senior class who performed "The Beverly Hillbillies". Even the theme song was a take off of the popular series in the early 1970's.

Fine acting performances were turned in by Tom McDonald as "Uncle Jed" and Andy Pearson as "Grandma". The plot saw Uncle Jed become rich and move to Huntingdon with his family: Jethro (Mike Justice) and Ellie Mae (Lisa Elleck).

Jethro decided to go to college and picked Juniata. The rest of the play takes Jethro and his family through different class scenes and the reactions towards him and his money by various school officials.

The joy of the seniors on their third place finish was echoed throughout the auditorium as they chanted "We're not last, We're not last."

The freshman class rounded off the competition with a fourth place finish using "Love Boat" as their skit. The entire cast made a good effort in putting together their skit considering this was their first exposure to All Class Night. The crowd was really entertained with Jake "The Snake"

In the junior's version of "Star Trek," Dr. Spock, (Chris Collins), explains to Captain Kirk, (Dave Merwine), the importance of finding the Pathfinder. For more pictures of All Class Night, see pages 4 and 5.

Social Service Month

by Robert Riefler

A guest speaking on relationships in the 80's will be presented by the Social Services club Monday.

Robin Menin, the executive director of women's health services in Lewistown, will speak in South's carpeted lounge at 7:00 p.m.

March is "National Social Service Month." The club is attempting to enhance campus and community awareness of social concerns. Menin will be the first in a series of monthly speakers discussing social issues. Other activities planned for this term are the Springfest, Big Brother-Big Sister program, and the Special Olympics.

New officers were elected this month, including Nancy Fieldman, president; Jay Jones, vice president; Marie Olver, secretary; and Kay Rockafellow, treasurer.

New members are invited to attend tonight's Social Services club meeting at 7 p.m. in Ellis' Gold Room.

Trees Tapped at Field Station

by Cinny Cooper

It's tree tapping time again at the field station. Dr. Robert Fisher, with the aid of JC student volunteers, has begun his annual avocation of making maple syrup.

The tapping began right after spring break during the first weekend back. According to JC senior Dave Blair, one of Dr. Fisher's regular volunteers, the number of student volunteers has been good this year with approximately 25 offering to help. He is still hoping more people will get involved and reminds the students that everyone is welcome. Dates for future outings will be posted in Ellis along with a display to familiarize the students with the actual process of making maple syrup.

The weather plays an important part in making maple syrup. Cool nights close to freezing and warm days near 50 degrees F. are ideal conditions to make the sap run. Many people believe that maple syrup is made from the sap of the tree when in actuality it is made from the sugar water in the tree; the sap being too bitter.

Dr. Fisher and his volunteers use a hose system to tap their trees. That is, after the hole is drilled in the tree, a hose is attached which empties into a barrel serving many different trees. They then collect the sugar water in the barrels and take it to the sugar shed to make into syrup.

At the sugar shed, they empty the sugar water into a 1000 gallon tank. From the tank, the sugar water travels through a hose into the channels of the boiler. As the water boils around it and the maple syrup passes through the channels, it becomes thicker and thicker until it is thick enough to be called maple syrup.

So far this year only about 12 gallons of syrup have been made.

Sports & Rec Dedication

Juniata's new $4.5 million Sports & Recreation Center, which opened in January, will be dedicated in ceremonies scheduled for Founders Day, April 17. The ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. with a full academic procession featuring an address by Charles R. Knox, head coach of the Seattle Seahawks and a 1954 Juniata graduate.

A member of the college's Board of Trustees since 1978, Knox recently served as the Alumni Gifts Chairman of the Sports & Recreation Center phase of the Century II Campaign.

ALL — NIGHT

Last Friday night was the annual All Class Night. Although for the most part the plays were good, in a few instances, it appeared that the "class" had been taken out of the evening.

A part of the purpose of All Class Night is to poke fun at the school and its professors, but it was carried to an extreme on more than one occasion. Last Friday appeared to be personal vendetta night; whether it was meant to be or not. All Class Night is supposed to be a night of friendly competition between the four classes, not an opportunity to slander the professors.

Why should the professors have to stand by when they are maliciously attacked on stage? Is it necessary? Is it really funny?

The Juniatian understands that it is tough to write a play that will be successful. Humor is generally a part of that success; and people generally laugh at things that they recognize. The nature of the evening makes it tough to resist over-exploiting a well-known professor for a laugh.

However tough it is to get a laugh though, The Juniatian feels that it is time to reevaluate whether getting a laugh is worth the hurt it may inflict upon a professor. Many of the things in the plays appeared to have been done without any thought to the possible consequences.

Much of what was said Friday night was not maliciously intended but few will get the chance to explain that to the audience. Once the damage is done, it is irreversible. The only thing that can be done is to say, "I'm sorry." But, somehow that would appear to be of little comfort.

The Juniatian feels that those involved with All Class Night should be more conscientious of what is said. All Class Night is to be done in good fun; this year, however, it came a little off track. Next year, hopefully, the "class" will return to All Class Night.

"BE ALL THAT YOU CAN BE."

"EARN $570 A MONTH AND ALL THE RESPONSIBILITY YOU CAN HANDLE . . . and you'll find that many of our specialties (like data processing or surveying) are equally valuable in civilian life . . ."

Life. Nowhere, never, do the ads that promise a chance to "Be all that you can be" mention the fact that the taking of life will be your main responsibility. Killing, and the facilitation of that act, is the real specialty of the Army, Air Force, Navy, and Marines. Killing: it's a lot of responsibility to handle.

Murder is usually illegal. But it's ok when a large group of young men all put on the same clothes and are trained to act the same and told they're not allowed to say no — a right that most law-abiding folks in a democratic nation assume to be unalterable. Murder is illegal; except when young men do it to other young men from another nation. Then it's ok. Or is it?

Last week a precedent was set. Some of the $400 million-plus of taxpayer's money the Pentagon is spending on advertising and recruitment trickled down into the coffers of The Juniatian. Granted, we are in lean times; the demise of Binder's Native American Grinders has left a hole in our revenues. But must our extra-curricular exercise of the first amendment depend on accepting money from an organization that lures in young people — our peers — with promises of security, career training, and adventure, only to strip them of their rights and control of their lives? Is learning to kill on command something our group condones? Does it jibe with the purpose of our paper to be in league with an outfit which is overtly sexist in its hiring practices and discriminates on the basis of one's sexual preference?

I think The Juniatian, a publication to which I'm proud to contribute, has made a mistake. I cannot see that it is in the best interest of our readership to allow any military organization to advertise on the pages of our paper. It may seem a small thing to some; the ad was 4" x 5" to be exact. But wars have started over smaller things (Jenkin's Ear to mention one). I believe that our paper should always advocate the preservation of human life, which ads against smoking and drunk driving accomplish, rather than advancing the cause of an organization which has the singular function of spreading death. I believe that we must draw the line.

I realize that many of our classmates are able to complete their education at Juniata only because of military scholarships. When I was a freshman, I knew a senior in such a situation. My friend was brilliant and a dashing campus character. He was always striving to be all he could be. Upon graduation he was obligated to enter the Marines. He did not regret his decision because of any moral aversion to war; he thought that there were situations when war and killing could be justified. Yet he felt trepidation about his future in the military and the psychological impact it might have on him. He told me that he felt like he had sold his soul.

During the winter break I met another young man who left a similar but more uplifting impression on me. I was at Manchester College in the boondocks of Indiana, attending the collegiate New Call to Peacemaking conference. After having driven all day Friday after finals, I spent the night attempting to get some sleep on the chapel floor. I awoke unrefreshed. Bleary-eyed, I wandered into the men's room to prepare myself for a full day of peace stuff. As I was scrubbing the crud from my face, another person entered the small room. He was already smiling and wide awake, enough so that he gave me directions to the gym where I could shower. He spoke in a mild and helpful manner, unconsciously aiding others even at 6:30 a.m. His name is Enten Eller.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I realize that good taste is a little too much to expect of All Class Night, and personal digs are the event's traditional hallmark, but this year it was too much. The assassination of Prof. Lewis was not only vindictive, crude, and repetitious, but also indicative of a growing and insidious intolerance of nonconformity.

Juniata's size and closeness make possible rituals such as ACN; it also fosters a powerful overemphasis on conformity because anyone who does not "fit" is highly visible. The danger of small communities is that those who are disruptive; who don't hold "normal" values, who don't espouse eternally non-committal political views, who don't strive to look as much like a clone as possible, will eventually be made to feel so uncomfortable that they will leave. It is a tendency that should be resisted if we, as an institution — and ultimately, as a nation — are not to slide placidly down the river of conformity into the dead sea of mediocrity.

The attacks made upon Prof. Lewis Friday night went beyond playful humor; they were the reaction of the complacent against anyone who challenges their assumptions (unmarried women over 30 are all frustrated, popularity is the highest good, God loves the well-dressed, those who don't agree with the majority should at least shut-up, etc . . .).

Especially in an academic institution, the supposed strong hold of free thought, we need those who disagree, who will shake us from the cozy delirium of homogeneity.

Sincerely,
Chris Corry

Dave's Dribble

by Dave Lehmann

This college has produced a lot of famous people that it loves to brag about, but one name that will never be mentioned at Founder's Hall is Tom Lawson. The mention of Tom's name causes professors' hair to turn white and Mr. Linetty to run to his closet for a shotgun. Tom flunked out this fall, but he remains a legend to the people who lived with him in Sherwood and South. I have never met anyone as skilled at breaking rules in a creative way as Tom was. Even his RA's had to acknowledge Lawson's expertise.

Tom was one of those rare individuals that, no matter how he dressed or groomed himself, looked like he was two days from the grave. Standing five-ten, he weighed close to a hundred and sixty, most of which was centered around his mid-section. He was half bald and would proudly polish his dome at parties to show how brightly it shone. Lawson claimed that tapping on his bald spot would give one good luck. Perched on the end of his nose was a pair of glasses thick enough to insulate his entire face during the winter.

Yet, Tom was a walking contradiction. Despite his appearance, Lawson proved to have athletic prowess. In high school, he had excelled in track and had been selected all-county in basketball. Although he played intramural basketball here, it was in swimming that Tom gained fame. There was no pool when Tom was here, but this didn't stop him from taking an occasional dip in Muddy Run. Regardless of the season, Tom could often be found on Saturday evenings diving off the East Houses' bridges into the creek. On the bank would rest a pile of clothes as Tom swam up and down the creek in his underpants.

Tom's specialty however was practical jokes. Whenever a door on the hall had been pennyed or a leaning bucket of water had been set against the door, Tom was involved. The RA's knew it also, but they could never catch him. Lawson would always be just coming back from the library or in a room with five or six friends who would swear that they'd been playing Pigmania (Lawson's favorite game) all night. It wasn't just that Tom got away with stunts, the important aspect was his unique flair. I once saw Tom pick up a Boy Scout book and give a monologue that would have made Johnny Carson look like a straight man as he calmly defaced the book with a marking pen. The book's owner enjoyed the routine so much that he saved the defaced book.

I'm sure a lot of people breathed a sigh of relief when Tom got the boot, but just as many remember Lawson as a legend. This fellow had the unique skill of turning everything in life into a joke. And, by the way, Tom got the last laugh on the school; not more than a month after being academically dismissed, he was hired as a chemist for the Hershey Chocolate Company for a salary of over twenty thousand dollars a year. Only Lawson.

Lesher Lounge Renovation

by Cinny Cooper

The women of Lesher will be seeing some changes this term in their home away from home. Lesher's carpeted lounge is scheduled to be redecorated with money from Juniata's Housing Department.

According to Kay Rockafellow, Lesher RHA President, the lounge will be decorated with a symmetrical pattern "to promote a comfortable living environment." The style chosen will be suitable for studying and social functions.

The old furniture, soon to be moved to the TV lounge, will be replaced by new pieces similar to the furniture in South's carpeted lounge. In approximately 6 or 8 weeks, the time allotted for delivery, Lesher will have 2 new sofas, 4 love seats, 8 chairs, 8 tables, and 6 lamps.

A circular table will be built around the center pole in the lounge. The lounge will also be totally enclosed by a wall separating it from the hallway of first floor Lesher. This will hopefully decrease the amount of noise car-

Off-Off Broadway

For those students who have always thought of the organ in Oller Hall as nothing more than a nuisance during All Class Night, the Moller Organ Series presentation of "An Evening with Teresa Murray" on Sunday night may well have given them good reason to change their minds.

The great versatility of the Oller organ was put to good use in pieces ranging from the eighteenth to the twentieth century. The sounds produced cannot be described except in saying that the combination of room-shaking low notes and delicate high tones is amazing to experience.

The compositions performed included the prelude and Fugue in A minor by Bach, music by Francois Couperin, Paul Hindemith, Olivier Messiaen, and a Prelude and Fugue by Liszt whose melody is based on using the notes represented by the word BACH. The Messiaen piece was especially interesting with shifting chords supposedly representing light streaming through a stained glass window. Also intriguing was the Liszt piece because of its highly dramatic sections and frequent trilling.

As usual, the performance was well attended, but once again the student representation was poor. This is regrettable since the music performed was probably more enjoyable to the student body than most other Artist Series performances.

Juniata Passes Test

The Commission of Higher Education of the Middle States Association of College and Schools has reaffirmed Juniata College's accreditation for a 10-year period, with a periodic review report to be submitted in 1987.

In its final report, the evaluation team directed by Dr. Richard L. Green, vice president and academic dean at Augsburg College in Minneapolis, said "Juniata College is academically strong and fiscally sound." The team went on to praise the administration, faculty and trustees for their dedication and commitment to Juniata and its goals.

"There is a strong indication that Juniata College is addressing immediate student needs and interests and is continuing to 'prepare students for the useful occupations of life.' There is every indication that the college is meeting the current challenges of higher education and will continue to do so in the decades of the 1980-1990's," the report concluded.

Juniata's reaccreditation process began in the fall of 1980 when Dr. Donald T. Hartman, dean of academic affairs, and Kevin G. McCullen, director of institutional planning and research, attended a Middle States workshop at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

In the spring of 1981, Juniata's self-study process got underway with the appointment of a Steering Committee. Individual teams of faculty, administration and students were then organized and assigned to study and evaluate specific areas within the college's academic and administrative structure.

The self-study was completed in March, 1982, and by the summer, it had been reviewed and revised into final form for submission to Middle States.

The nine-member evaluation team visited Juniata Oct. 10-13, conducting interviews with students, trustees, faculty and administrative staff. The team then prepared a formal report for Middle States which was reviewed by the Juniata Steering Committee for official response. All of this information was then presented to the accreditation board of the Middle States Association.

News Briefs

Brussels — France threatened Saturday to withdraw from the Common Market monetary system unless European finance ministers agreed to redefine the value of their currencies to France's satisfaction. French Finance Minister, Jacques Delors, made this statement as he arrived in Brussels for talks. Such a move by France would have serious repercussions for world trade. The French franc has been devalued twice since the socialists came into power nearly two years ago. The leaders are striving to avoid a third devaluation and are pressing West Germany to re-evaluate the mark.

Washington — To ease the Environmental Protection Agency crisis the original administrator, William D. Ruckelshaus, has been asked to return to the post, White House officials said Saturday. Mr. Ruckelshaus is now Senior Vice-President of the Weyerhaeuser Company in Tacoma, Washington. He would replace Anne McGill Burford who resigned March 9 after being charged with mismanagement and favoritism to polluters. John W. Hernandez, Jr. is now Acting Administrator. In addition to Ruckelshaus, three or four others are being considered for the job.

Moscow — Soviet-Chinese relations have reached a "substantial detente" according to Soviet officials during the latest round of talks in Moscow on normalizing relations between the two countries.

Warsaw — In an atmosphere of secrecy, Lech Walesa held the first private meeting with the leaders of Solidarity on Saturday. Solidarity's actions have been halted since the imposition of martial law in December 1981. The meeting lasted five hours after which Walesa declared he was ready to use stronger, but peaceful, protest tactics, such as strikes and hunger strikes.

Providence, R.I. — Brown University is seen as the most popular school on the East Coast. Brown has received more applications this year than any Ivy League School: 13,250 for a class of 1,375. This figure is up 13 percent from last year. The figure is higher than Harvard, Yale or Princeton; all of which had a drop in applicants this year. The drop reflects the nationwide decline in the number of college-aged students and cuts in financial aid. Brown's flexible curriculum is one feature making it more popular. Students are encouraged to create their own liberal arts education. There are no requirements for languages, science, or math. The grading program also attracts students. Students have the choice of taking a course for a letter grade A, B, C or no credit — no credit means failing but is not recorded on the transcript, or taking a course on the Pass/Fail basis, with no grade and no record of failure. Twenty-eight courses are needed to graduate. The system has been criticized but the dean of the college says, "Students learn best when they are motivated, and they are motivated when they make their own choices."

Finally, the faculty ended the performance with a skit of their own. "Genital Hospital" was their theme, and while it was not judged for competition with the classes, it was well received by the audience.

The Jewish Students Association in conjunction with the Campus Ministry Board will present on Fri., March 25 at 5 p.m. in the faculty lounge a model Passover Seder. This is a ceremonial meal open for all to come and observe and participate in. Tickets are on sale until Friday at the Ellis Information Desk at $2 for those on meal plan and $3.65 for others.

Outdoor Issues Discussed

by Sherri Wescott

Perhaps on your way into Baker Refectory on Monday nights, you've noticed a sign that said, "Conservation Club meeting tonight." Maybe you even thought that club was just something for a few environmental science majors. Well, it's not!

The club is open to anyone with a sincere interest in environmental issues. Meetings are every Monday night at 7:30 in the Laughing Bush office. Any interested person is invited to attend these meetings.

A relatively young organization, the club was started in the fall of 1981 and has since been under the direction of founding member, Chuck Yohn. The first elections for officers were held last week; Wendy Greengrove now holds the position of chairperson, and Sherri Wescott is the secretary/treasurer.

The club is planning a whale watching trip, April 22-25. To raise money for this trip, they will sponsor a Racquetball Raffle. First prize is a racquet; second prize, a glove; third prize, a can of balls. Tickets will be on sale for fifty cents each or three for a dollar.

About Stress

What is stress? Stress is an unavoidable fact of life which if allowed to build up can sometimes produce tensions serious enough to interfere with your normal daily activities. Moderate tension, mild anxiety — these have always been with us and are necessary if we are to become properly motivated to succeed. But too much stress on your mind and body can make you miserable, worried, sad, and ill. How you manage stress keeps minor problems from becoming major troubles.

One of the main causes of stress is change, especially sudden or disagreeable change. Too many or too drastic changes often result in harmful tension, which in turn can cause anxiety and depression. Seniors, the instability of the job market and insecurities which this imposes, interviews, changes in relationships and responsibilities, the mere fact of knowing you soon will be on your own, are all feelings which make you feel anxious. Holding back feelings we feel we can't cope with or feelings of conflict between what we'd like to do and what we think we ought to do are all results of tension. Depression can also be attributed to stress and may result from frustration. Sometimes, realistically, what is often true falls short of what is hoped for. People who expect too much of themselves can get tense if things don't work out. We must set practical goals and expect to be successful.

A lot can be done to keep tension and stress within reasonable limits. When tensions build up, discuss the problem with a close friend or with the people involved. Let off steam and work out stress by exercise. A change of pace or place, no matter how short, gives you a new outlook. Learn to relax. Plan to avoid too many big changes coming at once. Plan your work to use time and energy more efficiently. A hopeful and optimistic attitude goes a long way towards helping you over the rough spots.

If stress and its effects do get out of hand, get help. It is not a sign of weakness or self-indulgence to get professional advice; it's smart. Drug and alcohol abuse have been called self-medication for stress. Drugs should be taken only as prescribed by a doctor and alcohol is no cure; possibly a temporary relief, but one that can lead to dependence.

To help yourself and others understand the causes of stress, the depression and anxiety to which they can lead, talk things over, try to keep things in perspective. Stress and tension can't be eliminated, but we can learn to cope with them better.

Students Testify at U.N.

The need for graduate level programs in peace and conflict studies was the topic under consideration as four Juniata College students testified before the United Nations Commission for the University for Peace.

The testimony, presented at U.N. headquarters in New York on Feb. 10, covered topics the students felt should be included in a graduate level peace studies program. Areas discussed included the need for comprehensive foreign language programs, better understanding of different political and economic philosophies, proper use of analysis, and the responsible and practical application of theories.

The four students — Jeffrey Brubaker, a sophomore from Enola; Julianna Canfield, a junior from Succasunna, N.J.; Timothy Hoch, a freshman from Harrisburg; and Judith Vachon, a freshman from Pittsburgh — also responded to questions from the 30-member Commission.

The students were all members of Juniata's Introduction to Peace and Conflict Studies course, taught by the Rev. M. Andrew Murray, campus minister, who accompanied the group to New York. Murray also addressed the Commission, outlining Juniata's extensive Peace and Conflict Studies program.

for the draft. Some of you may think that he forsook his responsibilities as a citizen and should go to prison. But when I compare my contact with Enten and my conversations with my Marine friend, there is no doubt in my mind who made the right choice, and who's conscience is at ease.

Whenever I see a commercial or ad promising that "It's not just a job, it's an adventure!," I'm intrigued by the young men that are shown clapping and running and working as a team. That spirit and togetherness appears to be a good thing, but I know that I'm not getting the whole story. The positive, but fraudulant, nature of such advertising makes me think about another, different type of team work that my father's uncle once described to me.

You see, he was a conscientious objector during World War II, and did his alternative service in several Civilian Public Service camps. One of his assignments was in Montana, where he was involved with road construction at what is now Glacier International Peace Park. Having withstood harassment from military personnel and civilians alike, my great uncle and his fellow C.O.s learned to maintain their personhood knowing that many thought them to be cowards.

I don't know if The Juniatian will stop accepting Army advertising or not. I think it should. It seems to me that it would represent a small sacrifice for principle, a real rarity today. The efforts of people like Enten and my great uncle were small too, yet they stand as examples to all.

By the way, that road that my great uncle helped build is still around. It's called the Highway to the Sun. I once had the opportunity to drive that road; the view from the tops of those Montana peaks, after ascending the railless highway, was spectacular. I think that the people who built that road really knew how to be all they could be.

A.M. Party Shakes Cloister

by Robert Riefler

A change of pace from the usual nighttime parties was the early morning party held last Friday in the quad in Cloister's Arch.

The party, hosted by seniors Cindie Morgan, Kate Welch, Dee Zimnock, and Jan Zuma, began at 5:30 a.m. Held for seniors in honor of All Class Night and the coming of spring, the theme was "The Beach Party." Guests were dressed in beach attire from Hawaiian shirts to bathing suits.

About fifty people attended the party. Before entering, each guest was required to read a sign listing the following "Beach Rules":

- No swimming in the punch bowl.
- No barbeque pits allowed.
- Absolutely no dune buggies.
- Beware of tidal waves and low flying seagulls.
- Don't drag the lawn chairs.
- Nudist hours 6:30-7:30; parental discretion advised.
- No kicking sand on 98-pound weaklings.
- Mgmt. of this beach is not responsible for lost or misplaced bathing suits.
- All piranhas and crabs must be leashed at all times.

Refreshments included coffeecake and Sea Breeze punch. Appropriate background music was provided by Beach Boys records. And in true summer spirit, the four quad residents even entertained their guests by throwing an unsuspecting freshman in the shower.

The party broke up when students had to leave to go to their classes.

Baxter Addresses Conflict

Lebanon — Small Palestinian units have infiltrated into the area near the Lebanese/Israeli border. Rocket attacks have been launched against a number of Israeli settlements, involving the deaths and injuries of some of the Israelis living within the settlements. There have also been guerrilla raids along with reports of isolated stone-throwing incidents on the West Bank, as well as two major bomb explosions. Since the "withdrawal" of foreign forces from Lebanon, Israeli casualties have increased and the Begin government has threatened retaliation. The left wing of the PLO has refused to halt attempts to "liberate" Palestine.

A multi-national conference is to be held on March 23, 1983. Dr. Craig Baxter will address the conference on the Middle East situation. Eight nations — Israel, Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, the United States, the Soviet Union, Egypt and France — will attend as well as representatives from the PLO and the United Nations. There is hope in international Captured in a rare concert performance, Roxy Music extends an invitation to nearly 30 minutes of excitement on their new EP, The High Road.

Roxy Music — The High Road

Although the EP contains only four songs, they are four songs well worth having on record. "Can't Let Go" and "My Only Love" tear through side one with the tight assurance that is Roxy Music. Bryan Ferry's vocals are simply outstanding as he sings "Let me tell you something more than words can say but they're all I have, no other way." Ferry never uses two words when one will suffice. It is Ferry's modest brevity that makes the band so powerful, yet affectionate.

Roxy Music sounds particularly well-rehearsed on side two with two covers. Neil Young's "Like a Hurricane" is so in step with the Roxy attitude that it really sounds as if Ferry had written it himself. Phil Manzanera's guitar is blazing in "Hurricane" as he battles with Andy Mackay's sax for the lead. The recording quality of the album is excellent so one can clearly hear how precisely Mackay holds each note before firing away with another fury of staccato notes, driving the band into a whirlwind of music.

The album closes with a cover of Lennon's "Jealous Guy," a song he wrote for Yoko on the Imagine album. What Roxy Music does is to turn the song around into a tribute to John. Classically professional, Ferry's keyboards match only his vocal performance in their sincerity. To one who has never heard the song, its emotional quality is the result of respect for another's work, devotion and the affect that Lennon had on Roxy's music. I truly cannot say enough about this EP. If you're not a Roxy Music fan already it might just make you one; if you're into the band, this is a collection well worth picking up.

Modern English — After The Snow

Indeed it is. After a cold winter of the neo-romantic claptrap of repetitive and insincere sentiment that escaped in the form of the new, "new wave", Modern English's new album is the light at the end of the tunnel. After The Snow exemplifies the gap between the listenable and unlistenable. On the one end of the spectrum there is the ridiculous: Missing Persons, Culture Club, Musical Youth, Adam Ant, et al. and on the other there is the hard core: Talking Heads, Tom Verlaine, Eno, Fripp, PIL, and Patty Smith, somewhere in between, but near the top falls Modern English.

After the Snow is not hard rock, although at times does raise a few blisters, but is also not pop, despite an obvious penchant for a hit song. "I Meld With You" is an excellent example. The song has a brilliant pop hook, but is supported by a strong guitar and percussion rhythm. This song has the potential to be as big as its exposure allows it to be.

Modern English's effectiveness is due to the group's philosophical nature which is nicely detailed on the song "After the Snow." The songs require a greater observational input on the part of the listener than something more concrete such as, "don't drink, don't smoke, what do you do?" Modern English supports a philosophy that is coated with realism that is both sociological and natural, but does not fall into the trap of nihilism set by the Sex Pistols.

Modern English's new album, After the Snow is really good. If you find yourself admitting that a great deal of the new, syth. music sounds the same, try Modern English. It has evolved.

Eric Clapton — Money and Cigarettes

Eric Clapton sounds so much better when he has someone around to push him. John Mayall did it best, Duane Allman was a great inspiration, Cream, Townshend, J.J. Cale, Howlin' Wolf, Elmore James, B.B. King, the list could continue down the page, except for the fact that no one has pushed Eric Clapton to greatness over the last five years.

Somehow, however, Clapton came to join forces with Ry Cooder, or John Mayall part II. Cooder and his friends Duck Dunn, Albert Lee, and Roger Hawkins has succeeded in giving Clapton that push. The guitar is once again wailing with authority as it sprays notes like graffiti on a new subway train. the band really makes Clapton fight to make his guitar stand out. The duets with Cooder on slide guitar draw from Clapton some reminders of what he can do all the time, if he is so inspired.

If anything the album suffers from song selection. Clapton wrote six songs of which three or four are good. "The Shape You're In" and "Ain't Going Down" are the standouts. Some of the covers are poorly chosen, however. The song, "Crazy Country Hop" is just silly. I see no reason for its appearance on this album, unless perhaps Eric's doctor prescribed a minimum dosage of ya-ya music to treat his ulcer.

All things considered, Money and Cigarettes is a pleasant surprise. If Clapton sticks with the same band and comes up with some better material, the next Clapton album could be the one.

Movie Review

Ragtime

by Robert Riefler

One of the more intense films seen on campus this year was "Ragtime," shown last Saturday night by the Film Committee.

The 1981 drama concerned the interwoven lives of several characters in 1906 America. The earlier part of the film focused on a young man's relentless pursual of a chorus girl. The latter part of the film showed how a black man is aided by the young man's white family in his fanatical pursuit of racial justice.

"Ragtime" is extremely unbalanced in its development. The two parts of the film seem scarcely to relate. What holds the film together is one common theme — social injustice and its effect on the movie's characters. The young man is treated unfairly by the chorus girl in that she leads him on; the chorus girl is treated unfairly by her mother-in-law when she doesn't receive the money she was promised; the chorus girl's husband is treated unjustly because he is sent to a sanitarium and eventually released when he actually should be imprisoned; the black man is treated as sub-human by the white man; society is treated unjustly by the black man when he goes overboard in getting vengeance.

The movie is longer than average: 156 minutes. However, it maintained interest throughout due to its sensitive treatment and suspenseful build-up. Outstanding performances are rendered by the entire cast, including Elizabeth McGovern, Howard E. Rollins, Mary Steenburgen, James Olson, Brad Dourif, and, following a twenty year hiatus, James Cagney. The film was directed by Milos Forman and the entertaining musical score was composed by Randy Newman. Overall, "Ragtime" is a worthwhile film for any audience.

Brethren Supper Held

A buffet supper and tobogganing party was held Feb. 13 at the Martinsburg home of Dorothy L. Hershberger, director of church relations at Juniata College. Brethren students and faculty, as well as area pastors gathered at the Hershberger home for the festive event. Mrs. Hershberger notes that there are 72 Brethren students enrolled at Juniata, an increase over last year.

Brethren enrollment is not the only thing that has increased. Contributions to the college from Brethren congregations and church members have also increased. Especially important are gifts to the Annual Support Fund, providing scholarship assistance to Brethren students.

Award-Winning Poet to Visit J.C.

Award-winning poet Chad Walsh will visit Juniata College Sunday, March 27 for the premiere reading of his latest work, a sonnet sequence entitled "In Praise of God and Her Love."

The reading, which will be given in the Stone Church of the Brethren at 8:15 p.m., will be presented by Dr. Esther M. Doyle, Charles A. Dana Professor of English, emerita at Juniata, and Dr. Richard A. Livingston, a 1957 Juniata graduate and a high school English teacher in Skokie, Ill.

Also participating in the reading will be Walsh, who will introduce the piece, and Ibrook Tower, assistant professor of music, who will perform compositions by Olivier Messiaen to accompany the reading.

An Episcopal priest, Walsh is the author of numerous books, and recently retired as a professor of English and writer-in-residence at Beloit College in Wisconsin. In 1977-78, Walsh was the J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professor of Evangelical Christianity at Juniata, and has lectured at Northwestern University, Abo Akademic in Finland and Shenandoah College.

A summa cum laude graduate of Juniata, Livingston holds advanced degrees from Bethany Theological Seminary and Northwestern University. He also spent a year in Brethren Volunteer Service and did graduate work at Johns Hopkins University. Livingston is a professional singer with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Choir.

In addition to her teaching, Doyle has co-edited two volumes of "Studies in Interpretation" with Virginia Hastings Floyd. She has been a visiting professor at the University of Arizona, and has traveled to other college campuses presenting programs for the Association of American Colleges. Doyle has also done programming for The National Humanities Series of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

Tower, who also serves as director of instrumental ensembles at Juniata, has a diverse musical background ranging from nightclubs, jazz and Broadway shows, to appearances with the Orchestral Society of Philadelphia, the Wilmington Chamber Orchestra, the U.S. Navy Band and the New York Woodwind Quintet. He currently plays with the Juniata Woodwind Quintet and the Nittany Valley Symphony Orchestra.

Raft Regatta Underway

by Ellen Zaleskie

As the weather breaks, it is not unusual to hear Juniata students speculate how high the Juniata River will be for the long-awaited event. This can only mean that the Raft Regatta is not too far away. In preparation for this annual event, several suggestions about the safety of the participants have been made:

(1) Once again, the Raft Regatta Committee will enforce the policy of wearing life preservers. This means that every person on the raft will be equipped with life jackets. As many life preservers as possible will be provided by the committee. However, participants are strongly encouraged to provide their own preservers.

(2) The Raft Regatta Committee will attempt to provide as many inner tubes and skids as possible to construct rafts. Again, students are reminded to bring back the needed materials after Easter break.

(3) Rafts are limited to a maximum 9'x12' size.

(4) If the raft is to be transported, the owners must be present for the loading.

(5) Use of glass containers are discouraged.

(6) There will be no parking at the loading or landing sites. Transportation will be provided to and from the sites.

The tentative date is April 30, and the Raft Regatta Committee is anticipating an enjoyable event.

Softball — Contenders

by Tracey DeBlase

With everyone back from last year, the Juniata Women's Softball Team is looking forward to the 1983 season. Coach Bill Latimore feels that his team has the experience needed to be competitive in their division of the Middle Atlantic Conference which includes last year's M.A.C. champion — Wilkes College.

Coach Latimore says, "We have had a small turnout, but our people are very talented." The team has three skilled freshmen players that add depth, and may be pushing for starting positions. Latimore speaks highly of Cindy Bowman, Karrie Bercik and Mary Ellen Sullivan.

When the Indian Women start their season, against Bucknell today, Carol Krisulevicz and Sullivan will be behind the plate with Michele Wengryn and Jean Moulder on the mound. The talented outfield consists of last year's most valuable player — Renee Krause, with Jessica Gould, Terry Mulvhill, Bowman, and Debbie Beran who had a .625 batting average last year. Colleen Irelan, Sue Silvestri, Gwen Heidecker, Karen Sill, Lori Haag, Patty Ryan and Bercik will all be seeing playing time in the infield. Coach Latimore says the girls are "tough, enthusiastic workers" and he believes the key to a successful season will be "the execution of basic fundamentals." He added, "If we do that, we can play with anyone!"

Track Looks Strong

by Paul Bomberger

On Wednesday, March 30, the Men and Women will take to the new track in their first dual meet versus Lycoming. Both coaches have optimistic views on the 1983 season.

Rosalyn Hall and Ben Reichley are coaching the women in their very first varsity season. The team is few in numbers but does have a few excellent individuals who will have to carry the team.

Peggy Evans and Nancy Roach (returning letter winners), along with freshman Sue Occiano are ones to match in the sprints.

If they stay healthy, the distance crew may turn out to be the strongest area of the team. Chris Schleiden, Jeanne McLaughlin, Robin Jervis and Carolyn Andre are returning. Freshman Carol Tendall (National qualifier in Cross Country), Kathy Duffy and Colleen Wright have the potential to score points in 1500 meters and 5,000 meters.

Tammi Seitzinger and Sue Kidder are strong throwers in the shot, discus and javelin.

Returning MAC triple jump champion, Peggy Evans, will be the best in the jumps. Peggy will key the long and triple jumps.

Coach Rosalyn Hall gave these remarks on the upcoming season: "I am not as concerned with winning dual meets as I am in gearing this young team toward MAC's."

Dave Turnball and Dr. Mitchell are coaching a Men's team which they believe has the most depth in all events that we have had at Juniata in several years. "It is difficult to predict where we stand in the MAC, but we are very deep and will score points in most events this season," remarked Coach Turnball.

Despite the loss of star runners, Eric Biddle and Tommy Bell, the sprints may prove to be the strongest area of this team. Freshman Kevin Burkett, Tom Trent, Tom Hudlow, Pete Hauer and returnee Tom Shaw will be counted on in the sprints.

The distance team might be equally strong with returning lettermen: John Weiner, Tom Hoffman, Mike Murray, Mark Royer, Andy Pearson and freshman sensation, Bill Ciesla. The only weak event in the distance right now is the 800 meters.

In the jumps, Tom Cable (freshman) should excel. Pete Hauer, another freshman, has leaped 6'2". The triple jump will be the weakest event in the jumps.

The field events are loaded with quality performers. Bob Yankcello and Gino Perri (both freshmen) have shown promise in the shot. Letterman Jeff Lynne and freshmen Dave Hornberger and Jeff Johnson look very good in the discus. Tom Weiner, Roger Spatz, Jeff Lynne, Josh First and Steve Moyer will throw the javelin.

In the pole vault, Bob Newmar (letterman) along with Dave Heck and Chris Stutz have all vaulted over the 12' barrier.

"All colleges go through this process every 10 years," noted President Frederick M. Binder, "and we are very pleased with the final report." The president added that "the Middle States report confirms the fact that Juniata is a strong institution, meeting the academic needs and interests of its students."

Coach Mitchell starts the clock during track practice last week. Shown here are the distance runners which include Andy Pearson, Mark Royer, Bill Ciesla, Mike Murray, Tom Hoffman and John Weiner.

Baseball, A Repeat?

by Jay E. Jones

The Juniata College Indian baseball team returns to action this season tonight at home against Indiana University of PA. The Indians, 20-10 a year ago, are out to successfully defend their Middle Atlantic Conference North Division title for the fourth straight year.

Coach Bill Berrier, now in his fifteenth year as head baseball coach at Juniata, expressed much optimism for the coming season. "With the talent I have on the club, one could get very excited." Yet Coach Berrier pointed out that inexperience could be a problem. Nine seniors graduated from last year's club. Included in those nine was the Most Valuable Player of the MAC's last year, Jeff Miles, along with a number of other pitchers and infielders.

Currently, Berrier finds himself with a very young ballclub. Of the 29 candidates, only six of them are juniors or seniors. "Inexperience will hurt us early," said Berrier. "However, some of our freshmen are very advanced at this stage and should adjust quickly. We will just have to overcome our inexperience with some good, sound, fundamental play."

In reference to the freshmen, Berrier is quite pleased with their progress. He pointed out Jamie Shaul and Rich Howey as possible candidates for the four-man starting pitching rotation. In addition, freshmen Dave Crane, Steve Poska, and Scott Cole were also cited as candidates for starting positions at catcher, third base, and second base, respectively. Besides these, other leading candidates include Grady Paul at catcher, Carl Pavolic at first base, Glenn Hineman at shortstop, Dave Murphy, John Widener, Jeff Meeker, and Kevin Smith in the outfield, and Tom Shawley at designated hitter. Bob McDonald and Dave Lesser appear to be the top two pitchers on the club.

"This year's team is a better fielding ballclub and has the potential for a more solid hitting attack than last year's," said Berrier. "If our pitchers can hang in there, we should be a contender for the championship again."

Indian notes: A grueling first week of games awaits the Indians. After their opener against I.U.P., Juniata has three straight MAC doubleheaders, March 26, 28, and 30 . . . Berrier commends the college groundspeople who, because of the good work and good weather, have the field in the best shape ever to start a season. . . . George Kensinger, retired school administrator from the Martinsburg area and a 1950 Juniata graduate, has volunteered his service to help Berrier and the Indian ballclub out this year.

Sports Corner

by Mark Shaw

Spring term has begun. People have been busily milling about during these first three weeks with All Class Night, elections and RA selections. Sneaking up in the background has been the Spring IM sports. IM sports are one of my favorite pasttimes in the Spring, along with going to Lake Raystown (but that's another story).

My favorite IM sport over the last three years has been co-rec softball. Why? Well, one of the reasons is that I'm on a good team. Last year we made it to the finals; but, unfortunately we were beaten. This year, however, we've returned in full strength and are ready to win. Another reason why I enjoy co-rec softball is that it offers great competition and great fun. The sport is rarely taken seriously enough to get angry when a fellow player fouls up; generally, we all laugh about it cause we know we could be the next one to mess up. So, I'm looking forward to another successful season and, hopefully, this year we'll get our T-shirts.

Chuck Knox, a 1954 graduate of Juniata and head coach of the Seattle Seahawks, addressed a crowd of over 1,000 in Memorial Gymnasium at the dedication of the new Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center this past Sunday. Knox also received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree at the ceremony.

Knox Earns Honorary Degree

Knox, a 1954 Juniata graduate and member of the college's Board of Trustees, delivered the Dedicatory Address before a crowd of more than 1,000.

In his address, Knox called Juniata's new facility "a tribute to all who helped make it a reality." He added that the building will "help insure the future success of Juniata College, and serve as a place where students, faculty and administrators can come together for a one-on-one dialogue." Knox also commended his fellow trustees for their drive and dedication in completing the complex.

In presenting Knox for his honorary degree, Klare S. Sunderland, also a member of the Board of Trustees, praised his many accomplishments in sports, including his selection as NFL Coach of the Year in both 1973 and 1980.

Knox began his coaching career at Juniata in 1954, serving as the college's lone assistant coach while teaching at Huntingdon High School. After coaching at both the high school and college level, Knox held assistant coaching positions with the New York Jets and the Detroit Lions. His first NFL head coaching position came in 1973 with the Los Angeles Rams. In 1978, Knox moved on to the Buffalo Bills, and was named head coach of the Seahawks in January.

Knox was accompanied to Juniata by his wife Shirley, a Huntingdon native, and two of their four children, Kathleen and Colleen.

J.C. Dedicates Kennedy Sports & Rec Center

Natatorium named in honor of President Binder

Juniata College marked its 107th Founders Day Sunday with the dedication and naming of the new $4.5 million Sports+Recreation Center.

The new complex has been officially named the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center, in honor of Dr. Edwin L. and the late Ruth E. Kennedy. The Kennedys' involvement in Juniata affairs dates back to 1969 when Dr. Kennedy was elected to the college's Board of Trustees. Both are graduates of Ohio University and have been active in the affairs of seven colleges and universities. Dr. Kennedy still serves on the boards of three institutions.

A resident of New Vernon, N.J., Dr. Kennedy is advisory director of Lehman Brothers, Kuhn, Loeb, Inc. in New York. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Kerr-McGee Corporation, and a former director of the Ingram Corporation, Oil Shale Corporation, Sunlite Oil Company Limited, Tosco, Republic National Gas, Murphy Corporation and Southern Production.

Dr. Kennedy was Juniata's commencement speaker in 1977, and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree at that time. He also holds honorary degrees from three other colleges and universities. For more than 25 years, the Kennedys have played an active role in helping students attend school.

"Dr. Kennedy was a motivating force when plans for the new Sports+Recreation Center were in the initial stages," said President Frederick M. Binder. "When the Board of Trustees made the decision to build the Center, Dr. Kennedy was one of the first to commit his own resources to the project, and agreed to serve as Honorary Chairman of the Sports+Recreation Center phase of the Century II Campaign. As the donor of the largest single gift, Dr. Kennedy moved the campaign ahead quickly, and his support served to motivate others," the president added.

Natatorium Named for Binder

Another major announcement made at the dedication was the naming of the Binder Natatorium, in recognition of Dr. Binder's dedicated service as Juniata's eighth president.

Dr. Binder became president of Juniata on Sept. 1, 1975, after serving five years as president of Whittier College in Whittier, Calif. Prior to that, he was president of Hartwick College, Oneonta, N.Y. for 10 years. In 1969-70, Dr. Binder was Associate Commissioner for Higher Education in the New York State Education Department.

A native of southern New Jersey, Dr. Binder is a 1942 graduate of Ursinus College, and received both his masters and Ph.D. degrees in American history from the University of Pennsylvania. He also holds four honorary doctorate degrees.

While on leave from Hartwick in 1967-68, Dr. Binder was the first Fulbright lecturer in American history assigned to Yugoslavia. He has published two books, and is the author of numerous educational and historical articles and reviews. Dr. Binder has served on several educational and civic committees and boards.

"It was his own vision when he assumed the presidency that this institution desperately needed the Sports+Recreation Center we are dedicating today," said Dr. Charles C. Ellis, chairman of Juniata's Board of Trustees, in making the announcement. "He knew that we needed it both as an attraction for future students, and to provide them an appropriate facility for fulfilling their demonstrated desire for recreational activity while living on campus," Dr. Ellis added.

Other Donors Honored

In addition to the natatorium, other sections of the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center have been named in honor of individuals who played major roles in the campaign.

The varsity gymnasium continues to be called Memorial Gymnasium, in honor of the Juniata men and women who served in World War II. The basketball court in Memorial Gymnasium has been named the Burkholder Varsity Court, honoring W. Clay and Kathryn A. Burkholder of Milroy. Burkholder is a 1935 Juniata graduate and a member of the Board of Trustees.

The west mezzanine above the basketball court will be known as the Sunderland Mezzanine after Klare S. and Doris M. Sunderland of Camp Hill, both Juniata graduates. Sunderland is also a member of the Board of Trustees. The east mezzanine bears the name of George G. and Doris W. Pote of Camp Hill, both Juniata graduates.

The new Ellis Intramural Gymnasium pays tribute to Dr. Charles C. and Jean G. Ellis of Washington, D.C. Both are Juniata graduates and Dr. Ellis is currently chairman of the Board of Trustees.

In honor of Edwin A. and Susan Rabinowitz Malloy of Westport, Conn., the east entrance to the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center has been named the Malloy Lobby. Malloy is a member of the Board of Trustees.

The Croner Multipurpose Room pays tribute to the contributions of Earl D. and Barbara M. Croner of Berlin. Croner is a 1938 graduate and a member of the Board of Trustees.

The Pote Wrestling and Martial Arts Room honors Gary L. and Jo-Anne B. Pote of New Canaan, Conn. Also a member of the Board of Trustees, Pote is a 1968 Juniata graduate.

Housing the offices of the coaches, The Good Office Suite honors Dr. Joseph R. and Jane S. Good of Hollidaysburg. Good, a "Weekend Destruction Unwarranted"

Willful destruction has always been one of the most severe rule infractions here at Juniata College. It is the direct destruction of college property with full intent and knowledge of what you are doing.

This past weekend, along the path going from East Houses to Ellis, there were two incidents of willful destruction. What is sad about this is that there can be no other explanation: they weren't windows that may have been accidentally broken or chairs that broke while people were horsing around. These two incidents were the same: one happening Friday night, the other Saturday night.

The incident: the willful destruction of two of the trees along the pathway. It was shocking enough to see the one tree, with its branches spewed all over the ground, and only a 3-foot stump remaining; but, the second tree was too much. Either the same "brilliant" person (or persons) destroyed both trees or worse yet, someone thought that the first incident was such a great idea that they decided to replicate it.

What was the purpose of this destruction? It was definitely not warranted; unless, of course, the trees were giving them a hard time at a party or worse yet, spilled a beer on them. These sort of actions are not needed at Juniata College. They have a damaging effect on the beauty and spirit of this campus.

The spirit of the campus is negatively affected when occurrences such as those of this past weekend occur. The incident forces us to realize that there are people on this campus who really would stoop low enough to vent their frustrations and angers out on a tree. This has a disillusioning effect on us which will make us more skeptical of our fellow students.

Actions like what happened this past weekend directly affect the beauty of the college. Springtime is a time when the trees should be blooming, not dying. To be blunt, the pathway looks like hell. Picture it: all these nicely blooming trees in a row, suddenly there is nothing, you look down. What do you see? A three-foot stump with bare wood where the branches used to be. Where are the branches? In the trash.

The incident also has economic repercussions. Trees cost money. It also costs money to dig the destroyed ones out and put new ones in; that is, if it is decided to plant new trees.

In conclusion, the Juniatian feels that the willful destruction of these trees was completely and utterly disgraceful. There can be no reasonable explanation.

ALONG MUDDY RUN

by Lisa Ellek

Structural problems aside, libraries always seem to cause difficulties for me. I never quite understood those hearty souls who just about went as far as to bring hot chocolate and blankets to their nook of Beeghly without once ever giving thought to lighting a match to the desk legs for entertainment and warmth after hours of studying. I've done my share of time in the library, but despite my being an English major, it's not one of the hotter spots on campus for me. Part of this may be due to my discovery last Thursday: the library is not for "normal" people.

Every so often you have one of those days. A paper is due for a class, and you really don't have a wide-ranging selection of ideas. You're pulled between such-and-such and such-and-such, both of which are mediocre, but you know if you could use a little poetic license and no references, your paper would be excellent. It was one of those days. I skipped dinner and headed for Beeghly, gritting my teeth in determination.

I decided my paper would be on exercise, and thumbing through the Reader's Guide, I was surprised to see how many articles there were on the subject. Excitedly, I copied down the titles until there was a list of nearly 20 . . . exciting titles like "What Is A Calorie?", "Do You Hate To Exercise?", "Gardening Without Pain." I am a pro at using microfilm, so with my list, I trudged to Beeghly's innards.

It was then that I discovered there was no McCall's, no Good Housekeeping, no Mademoiselle, no Seventeen, no Current Health, no Vogue, no Glamour.

No Changing Times, no Better Homes and Gardens, no Woman's Day, no Redbook, no House and Garden, no Harper's Bazaar, and, horror of horrors, no Reader's

Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Dear Editor,

In response to Dave Hostetter's column, "Along Muddy Run," I feel he is right in saying that the pages of the Juniatian should be void of advertisements which do not advocate the "preservation of human life." In his article, Mr. Hostetter states that the Army does not meet his advertisement specifications.

I propose that the Juniatian establish a censorship board immediately to confront the "sacrifice of our principals." I would suggest that the person best suited to preside over this board would be Mr. Hostetter. As the chairman of the censorship board, Mr. Hostetter would be able to insure that our principals are not sacrificed.

Once the censorship board is formed, Mr. Hostetter and his board could insure that Juniata students are no longer subjected to these abhorrent advertisements. Maybe, if they have time, Mr. Hostetter and the board could really clean up this campus. Perhaps Mr. Hostetter would like to go through the library and burn, in true Nazi fashion, any books which he finds that "sacrifice our principals."

Sincerely,
Patrick Hepner

Dear Editor,

We, the Juniata College Campus Ministry Board, would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those persons who helped in this, the Seventh Annual Meal for Crop. Once again, this year's meal was a great success!

So far, over $2500 has been collected with money still to be received. This year, half of the money collected will go to the recently established Huntingdon Area Food Bank which gives emergency relief to the unemployed people in the area whose benefits have ceased. The other half will go to the organization CROP which funds hunger relief and self-help projects on a worldwide basis.

Much time and effort was spent planning and organizing this worthwhile project. Many persons (too numerous to mention) helped out by calling on the phone, taking time out to sell the tickets, working on the night of the meal and even preparing the meal itself. A thanks from us goes out to these persons. Also a special thanks goes to the Resident Directors, Resident Assistants, and the R.H.A. members for handling the student sign-ups this year. A thanks also goes to the students themselves for signing to give up their place in line for the evening. This year a record 898 students signed up, with South and Off-Campus Halls winning the sign-up competition with 100% participation from each.

Once Again, Thanks!
Campus Ministry Board

Dear Editor,

The second oldest building on the entire campus is now just history. I am referring to the empty lot between Lesher Dorm and Founders Hall, where the Old Gymnasium once stood.

On March 28, 1901, groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the Old Gymnasium. This building, when completed, was sufficient for the needs of the campus. As time passed, a larger facility was needed, thus, in 1951, the Memorial Gymnasium was opened. With the new facility opened, the Old Gymnasium was renamed Women's Gymnasium. It

by Dave Lehmann

Before break, there was talk of making an April Fools edition of the Juniatian. All the articles were to be bogus, and the idea was for them to just border on the fringe of believability. Well, this idea was canned but not before I wrote three short pieces. Not one to work for nothing, I'm using these for this week's column.

Editor attacked by Mugambo:

Juniatian editor, Ron Rigatoni, was attacked Saturday at dinner by Sid Mugambo. The 372-pound Mugambo apparently was outraged by Rigatoni's editorial about football recruits. Mugambo, who plays the entire offensive line on the football team, explains, "He (Rigatoni) said nasty untrue things about football players. The truth is football players are here to study just like everyone else. In fact, football players are the friendliest, gentlest people that I know. We're real softies. Ron didn't realize this, so I busted him up."

Rigatoni was sitting in the cafeteria eating his dinner when Mugambo grabbed him by the collar and lifted him out of his seat. Mugambo is reported to have yelled, "I'm not intimidating!" right before he tossed Rigatoni through the glass window into Tote twenty feet above. Rigatoni ended his flight as he came to rest on the pool table. Although Ron was not hurt by the throw, he did suffer a minor concussion when a student playing pool mistook him for the eight-ball and shot him into the corner pocket.

Rigatoni has been good natured about the whole episode. "I talked to Sid after the accident," said Rigatoni, "and I realize that he's right; I was way out of line. Football players are swell guys. I'd like to see more of them on campus."

Also of note: Rigatoni's family was abducted the day after the throwing incident. As of Monday, there were no clues.

Acclaimed Student to Study at J.C.:

The Admissions Officer has announced that the renowned high school senior, H.E. Snodummy, plans to study at Juniata next year. Snodummy astounded the academic world earlier this year when he scored 1590 out of 1600 on his SAT's. According to the ETS (Educational Testing Board), the only question that Snodummy missed was the spelling of his own name. If Snodummy had spelled his own name correctly, he would have scored a perfect 1600.

When he attends Juniata in the fall, Snodummy plans to study the universal meaning of life. According to Hubert (Snodummy's first name), this study includes many important issues and problems. Among the problems that Snodummy wishes to solve while at J.C. include finding a cure for cancer, creating a nuclear fusion reaction, and finding the secret recipe of Sugar Frosted Flakes, although he admits that the secret recipe problem may have to be put on hold until he's developed the proper skills in grad school.

Yet, Snodummy is not merely a bookworm. "Sure, I enjoy studying," says Hubert, "but just like everyone else, I like to relax and enjoy my hobbies. When I'm not studying, I can often be found wandering around in caves observing the mating habits of bats or in the physics lab playing ping pong using a helium electron as a ball and deflecting lasers as paddles."

Raft Regatta

by Cinny Cooper

Juniata's annual Raft Regatta will be held April 30 at 12:00. The rafts will enter the water at Smithfield Bridge and come out at Mill Creek, a distance of approximately 6 miles.

To encourage safety, the following rules were made:

1) Everyone participating in the Regatta must have a life preserver. Centerboard will provide as many as possible.
2) All participants are encouraged to wear tennis shoes.
3) No rafts over 9' x 12' will be transported. Raft owners must be present during the loading.
4) Parking is prohibited at the start and finish sites of Raft Regatta. Vans and buses will be providing transportation to the starting site and from the finishing site.
5) All participants are encouraged to avoid using glass containers.
6) All rafts must be registered to participate in Raft Regatta. A $5 registration fee is required.
7) Each participant must sign a waiver form. A student cannot participate if he does not sign this form.
8) The registration and waiver forms must be turned in to the Ellis Information Desk by 5:00 Friday, April 22.
9) No canoes, kayaks, etc. are permitted in Raft Regatta.

A meeting of all raft captains will be held April 27 (time and place to be announced). At this meeting all rafts will be assigned a time and place to be loaded. Each raft will also be assigned a number to be put in a visible place on the raft.

Centerboard will be trying to provide materials to build rafts. All materials will be placed in South's parking lot and distributed on a first come, first served basis.

Clean-up will be held immediately after the Regatta. Rafts will be disassembled at the finish line and all participants are responsible for any materials they wish to keep.

Unlike last year's Regatta, no prizes will be awarded.

The rain date for this year's Raft Regatta is May 14.

News Briefs

WARSAW — In a crackdown against underground activities in Warsaw and eight other cities, 26 Solidarity supporters, radio transmitters, and printing presses were seized by Polish police Saturday. In related actions, Lech Walesa's driver was released from 25 hours of interrogation in Gdansk. Mr. Walesa was questioned for five hours last week and his wife Danuta for three. Neither they nor the driver revealed anything to police. Walesa's spokesman, Adam Kinaszewski, was to be questioned Monday. The underground issued a statement calling for May Day protest marches last Thursday. Walesa had declined to endorse the protest publically but agreed to coordinate policies with the underground.

PEKING — China retaliated against Vietnamese bombardments by shelling Vietnam's northern border barricades Saturday. This first artillary retaliation by China since the one-month border war of Feb. 1979 was to answer Vietnamese bombardments which killed or wounded at least 15 soldiers and peasants planting spring crops, Peking reports. The press agency's report Saturday stated that Vietnamese provocations and continued "in disregard of China's repeated warnings and protests."

SANTIAGO, CHILE — The US rights policy in South American military-led countries of Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay, and Argentina has been weakened according to US diplomats and opposition leaders in the countries. There has been a decline in contacts between the US embassies and the South American leaders since President Reagan took office. Opposition political, church and human rights leaders in the four countries agreed they have seen a decline in meetings, social invitations, and sharing of information as a shift from the Carter human rights policies. US embassy officials in each country defend US policy as still committed to human rights. However, Reagan tactics have been changed to a "silent diplomacy" as compared to the Carter administration activism.

AMSTERDAM — Swelling unemployment in Western Europe is creating a new generation under the age of 25 that feels increasingly powerless in respect to their future. Unemployment among the nine-member nations of the Common Market is in excess of 11 percent and affects 12.3 million people, 42 percent of whom are in the under-25 age group and the figure doesn't include hundreds of thousands of 16-18 year-olds in government subsidized training or universities.

Residence Hall Staff Selected

by Cinny Cooper

The selections for Resident Assistant and Resident Director for 1983-1984 were made before Easter break.

Of the 79 people who applied for positions only 40 of them were selected: 31 RA's and 9 RD's. Twenty-one RA's will be new to the job; the other 10 renewing their positions. Seven RD's will be returning to their jobs; the other 2 having been RA's in '82-'83.

To be considered for an RA or RD position each applicant underwent the same procedure. After filing an application, each attended an information session to become familiar with the responsibilities and qualifications of an RA or RD. They then underwent a group interaction exercise observed by all of the RD's and non-returning RA's. A group interview was held along with a personal interview with either Jack Linetty or Julie Keehner.

Responsibilities of an RA or RD include programming social and educational functions, disciplining, and counseling. They also perform administrative tasks and act as a resource for the people in their environment.

The RA's and RD's for 1983-1984 are:

Residence Directors:

Mary Lou Beers
Randy Deike
Nancy Fieldman
Janice Hudack
Jim Hudack
Tom McDonald
Mark Shaw
Steve Silverman
Tammy Walter

Resident Assistants:

Bob Adamek
Joan Barrett
Roxann Binner
Carl Brango
John Brogan
Chris Coller
Robin Crust
Steve de Perrot
David Deischer
Nancy Dodge
Doug Fleming
Marie Glendenning
Steve Hendricks
Tom Hildebrandt
Laura Keat
Pam Keeney
Jordan Klemow
Rory McAvoy
John McDermott
Ken Opipery
Beth Pierie
Missy Pluta
Jeff Rush
Mike Sachais
Chris Schleiden
Dave Sloan
Dave Stoll
John Summers
Bettina Tweardy
Kevin Welch
Beth Wertz

Each RA and RD will be assigned to a floor or general environment after indicating their preference.

J.C. Students Hit Florida

by Kathy Novak

Current and former vertebrate zoology students spent their Easter break in Florida observing the plants and animals of the eastern United States.

The excursion, under the supervision of Dr. Robert Fisher, left Huntingdon on Thurs., April 31 and arrived in southern Georgia early in the afternoon of the following day. The 24 group members spent a few hours at the Suwanee Canal Recreation Area walking trails and birdwatching, then once again were on the road, headed for Florida.

A primitive campsite in Highland Hammock State Park in Sebring, Fla. served as "home" for the next few days. Various nature trails were available for thorough exploration, and the student "units" also got an opportunity to visit nearby Archbold Biological Station. Director Jim Layne gave a short history of the field station, then gave a tour of the facility.

The class celebrated Easter by coloring eggs by the campfire and then embarking on an egg hunt the next morning. Homer Will, a former Juniata biology professor and chairman of the Biology Department from 1931-62, joined the students for dinner and shared some of the experiences of his ten years in Florida. One of the highlights of this trip for the students was bagging a Diamondback rattlesnake, which was brought back to Juniata.

The group also spent one morning going through Corkscrew Bird Sanctuary, an 11,000 acre swamp preserve. This is known for its nesting woodstorks, as well as a medley of other plant and animal life. The rest of the day was spent relaxing at a nearby beach, then it was time to tear down the camp and head for the Everglades.

One night was spent at a canal area near Copeland, and the rest of the break was spent at the Everglades National Park. The park affords visitors with several trails, and has activities and lectures planned throughout the day. Nearby Flamingo proved to be a good spot for an afternoon of sightseeing and more bird life.

On Fri., April 8, the students spent what was ranked as one of the best days of the trip. They went to Key Largo on a snorkeling expedition to one of the coral reefs found there, and observed the variety of fish life in the underwater community. The remainder of the day was spent at the beach, and the last night was spent around the campfire in the park.

A total of 105 bird species was

Pete Townshend — Scoop

I suppose that if one were a die-hard Townshend fan that they would buy an album of Pete singing in the shower. Actually, that's Scoop.

Townshend's "new" album is really nothing of the sort. There is no new material, in fact, there is very little good material. Scoop is a double album set of songs that Townshend either recorded or wrote for himself. Wonderful, but they mean virtually nothing to me. Everything is recorded in his own personal studios, with less instrumentation, more dubs and more feedback than on the originals. The previously unreleased material is interesting, but at the same time not very moving either. There is a full song, "Zelda," writen about Townshend's niece waving out the back of a car.

I don't doubt that the album means a great deal to Townshend, but I have no idea about what makes them special to him. A few linear notes don't retrace the emotional importance that Townshend felt while making the recordings.

I find myself very skeptical of an artist who just recently completed a tour that was sponsored and promoted by Schlitz beer and then releases an album of previously unreleased material. The public is bound to have very sentimental feelings toward a band such as The Who on their last tour. To play on that sentiment at this point in time is not an ethical thing to do. I could see the reason for releasing this set if the music was especially noteworthy, but it's not. The songs don't mean anything to me without their original urgency, or Townshend's. Let Atco eat this one.

Todd Rundgren — The Ever Popular Tortured Artist Effect

This man makes a lot of music and The Tortured Artist Effect comes only a few months since his album with Utopia. Doesn't really matter though because the new Todd album sounds excellent.

Although Todd's voice hasn't had quite the range that Something/Anything boasted, the vocals still ring with the same youthful enthusiasm that makes Todd eternally cool. Rundgren is a hopeless romantic; his ballads prove this. The songs "Influenza" and "Don't Hurt Yourself" are excellent examples of how Rundgren can captivate a listener with the gentle soulfulness that plays like an instrument.

As much as he is a romantic, however, Todd also thrives on his technological artistry. In the past

Prints Displayed

Prints from the county print collection of the Huntingdon County Arts Council, are currently on display in Juniata College's L.A. Beeghly Library.

The collection of 21 original prints includes works by James Shell, Edward Mulaney, Richard Volpe, Nadia Boulanger, Jean Jansem, Anne Walker, Leticia Tarrago and other contemporary printmakers.

For the most part, the subjects of the prints are static, and the movement comes from the treatment of the print medium itself. The treatments range from lithograph and silk screen to etchings, and several include intaglio work. Many make their impact from the use of lines and shaded shapes, presenting their message in blacks and grays and white. Others employ color, some in modern hardedge vein and others with soft, subtile shadings that blend spaces and distances skillfully into one another.

The Huntingdon County Arts Council has been circulating the print collection throughout the county since 1975. Thousands of county residents have viewed the exhibit since that time.

Editorial:

It has come to our attention that many readers believe that the Juniatian editorials cover unimportant issues and are often vague. We believe this is a serious accusation that affects every student at J.C. and maybe throughout the whole country. While our parents' generation looked to Ann Landers for advice, we don't. We have something much more important (and we all know what that is). Suppose it were to rain during the raft regatta. This is nothing like knowing proper bathroom etiquette. Yet, bathroom etiquette can't be ignored; if manners can't be observed when we are sitting, when can they? Speaking of manners we wish to address manners of speaking. These can influence how our messages are interpreted. If a young man tells a woman that she is beautiful while his eyes are closed, his vocalization lacks sincerity. Yet, if he were to say the same thing with his eyes open, depending on the woman, his vocalization could be quite stupid and untrue.

Back to stupid and untrue: we would like to address the accusation of vagueness and unimportance of our you know what. Now, we're not offended, well, perhaps just a little, as we spent much thought and precious little time devising these tidbits. If anyone thinks that he or she could do a better job, the Juniatian happily invites this person to try (at another college). So remember, if we are unimportant and vague — which I doubt, sort of — we are unimportant and vague to you, and that is what is truly important.

served not only for the women's physical education classes and sports teams, but also doubled as the campus auditorium.

Once again time passed and an even larger facility was needed. In 1981, groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the new Sports + Recreation Center (S+RC). Fundraising began prior to these ceremonies and a December 15, 1982 deadline was set for raising $4.5 million. If this deadline was met, the Kresge Corporation would donate an additional $250,000 to the project. Thus the stage was set, and on December 15, President Binder announced that not only had the goal been reached but surpassed by about $400,000 thus meeting the Kresge Challenge.

Not many students knew much about the Women's Gymnasium, except it was the old, dilapidated building between Lesher and Founders. Well, believe it or not, there was more to it than that.

When I came here in 1979, the building needed repairs — immediately. Nothing was done. Instead, Founders Hall, built in 1879, was restored. One reason given for the restoration, other than for housing the administrative offices, was the fact that it is the oldest building on campus. Though not as old and serving no administrative purposes, at the time, the Old Gymnasium, if fixed up could have been used for many things.

The Old Gymnasium had some historical value, both to the campus and the world. In 1953, a group of students got together and gutted the basement of the building, making it ready for professional builders. Once the rebuilding was complete, the basement was used for a campus social hall. That's right, the basement of Women's Gymnasium was the predecessor of Ellis Hall. Totem Inn, the snack bar, was the first new addition in the social hall. The social hall later contained a sub-station of the Huntingdon Post Office, a book store, and a TV lounge. But the major attraction was the 100 record jukebox, which played continuously from open to close. (A dispute arose when some students felt women should be allowed to smoke in the hall. President Ellis refused to allow it, as long as he was president.)

Besides sports events, the gym floor was used for musical performances. In its final year as the auditorium, since Oller Hall was about to open, two very famous performers "strutted their stuff." Lead soprano for the Metropolitan Opera, Rose Bampton, sang to a "packed auditorium." In April of 1940, Bela Bartok, on his second tour of the United States, played to the same size crowd. Bartok is now considered one of the greatest composers-pianists of the contemporary period, and having played some of his pieces myself, I must agree with the critics.

As of late, the building served the following purposes: Professor Heberling's Archeology lab, Campus Security, maintenance storage, athletic practice area, and last year, as the Second Time Around thrift shop.

Thus I pose the question, Why was a landmark on campus destroyed, without mention to anyone? Restoring the structure would have cost around $350,000 (Remember the figures from the S+RC?). Instead, the school spent roughly $30,000 to demolish the structure. (Again the cheaper alternative is chosen.) Total destruction has left a scar on the campus that will never heal.

The Old Gymnasium, or Women's Gymnasium, was a campus landmark as well as a town landmark, county landmark, and possibly even a state landmark. If that's the way Juniata treats its heritage, can one be proud to admit that he/she graduated from Juniata College?

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the prior week's article "Along Muddy Run." The things which were said scared me. It's sad to see that some Americans have forgotten the price of freedom. I am not one to deny a person the right to be a conscientious objector, but I only wish that they would not try to deny me of my right to be free. The armed services do not make everyone who enters become a specialist in killing. During a war, only a small fraction of the people in the armed forces see action. Most of the people in the military specialize in helping to maintain and manage the supplies and equipment used by the military.

If it were not for our parents and their parents' willingness to make a sacrifice, we would be in a country ruled by a dictator — possibly Hitler! The money which the author wished the Juniatian to refuse is spent trying to get intelligent, well-educated people to join the military so that the country may benefit from their knowledge and skill in case of an emergency. I know that many of the students here would disagree with me, but if it were not for the money that is spent, they would not have the rights guaranteed in the Constitution. If you do not believe me, go to a country where free speech is prohibited. Speak out against the government there and see what happens. I hope that you would be willing to be persecuted or killed for what you said because that is what happens in countries without such basic rights.

Thank You,
Kevin Hurley

Dear Editor:

I just received my latest edition of the Juniatian; it's great, being kept up-to-date on what's happening on campus. And it's good to know that J.C. can survive a year without me. But better yet, it's good to discover that I can survive a year away from J.C.

I had my doubts last spring semester, as the plans for my year abroad with the BCA program (Brethren Colleges Abroad) started taking form and the daydreaming about travelling through the German countryside started becoming reality. I was one of the few not searching frantically for next year's dorm room (and in many cases, for a roommate); unlike my sophomore classmates, I didn't have to decide which G.E. to take. But along with these advantages came a not-so-joyful realization: I would be leaving all my friends back at J.C. I think that was the only qualm I had about spending a fantastic, exciting, educational year in Europe. I had parted with friends before and knew that true friends will stay in touch. And staying at J.C. would only prolong the inevitable for a year.

So, the decision was made. With only two terms of German and the instruction of Professor Jaeger behind me, I started making plans to go BCA to Marburg in September 1982. My biggest concern had been cost. You don't get anything for nothing, my mother had always told me. So I spoke to Professor George Dolnikowski, Director of BCA at Juniata, about my financial concerns. He put me at ease by assuring me that a year with BCA costs no more than a year spent on the Juniata campus, and all financial aid (from JC and State and Federal sources) is applicable. Hard to believe, that air fare included, one can study a year on a European campus with room and monthly food allowance, have a four-week intensive language course before classes start, take trips to West Berlin, to nearby century-old towns, a weekend in the Rhine Valley, and to East Germany; all for the price of three terms at Juniata College in Huntingdon, Pa.

My next concern was communication with the natives. How can anyone who had trouble in Intro to German with such sentences as "If I were a good student, I would study my German vocabulary more" ever get by at a university where all lectures are taught by professors trying to cram as much as possible in an hour? That's when Prof. Jaeger assured me that the intensive language course was taught by competent native instructors.

And what about problems with the overwhelming amount of German bureaucracy — Surely I can't be expected to handle all the form-filling, health exams, university registration by myself only one short week after my arrival! That's when Prof. Dolnikowski explained to me the function of the BCA director in Marburg, an American professor (this year Dr. W. Steve Watson from Bridgewater College in Virginia), whose official duties include preparing rooms for the BCA students, setting up bank accounts and filling them with the monthly allowance, preparing the students' transcripts for the year and sending them to the students' home colleges. His unofficial duties include being an information center (i.e. giving names of dentists, suggestions for good places to visit for the weekend), having all twelve of us (from Brethren and non-Brethren colleges and universities in the U.S.) over for coffee and cake, and being available to just chat or to listen to our concerns.

was still a bit nervous about this trek into the unknown. It's too bad that I hadn't been better informed about some of the characteristics of the BCA program, including the personal and individualized treatment of each student by the BCA staff, the warm acceptance of "foreigners" by fellow German dorm residents (although they've heard most of the stereotypes about Americans and tend to pose a lot of questions), and all the varied activities and clubs at the university, through which one can meet other foreign students and Germans alike.

I must admit, there are some things here that don't agree with me, such as having 30 political activists forcing their pamphlets on me every afternoon on my way to lunch; or having people say, "Your family must be pretty wealthy, if you can study over here and all" (one of the usual American stereotypes). But every living situation has its pros and cons. Overall though, I feel that the pros of studying — and more importantly, living — abroad outweigh the cons many times over. I wish I could clarify it all better, but I guess you'd have to be here!

Editor:

How often have you heard people complain about Juniata's secluded, narrowing atmosphere or of its boring social life? Far from being present only at Juniata, all small schools run the risk of only offering a limited scope of fresh and stimulating potentials. However, the location of Juniata creates even more limits because of its lack of culture. One of lesser known or at least less considered ways out of this stagnation is a year abroad. Many students fail to realize the benefits of such a year, and of exchange programs in general. The excitement of new and exotic places to live and visit, and the unique, challenging ideas and experiences one has does much to stimulate personal growth and maturity. However, an exchange program also supports an idea that goes beyond the individual participant. It also does much to help further world understanding.

The personal gains that you acquire from living in another culture are numerous. Initially there is the excitement of the newness that is all around you. Every country has its own unique cultural qualities that are reflected through the lifestyles and the day to day interactions of its inhabitants. Learning to understand and appreciate other ways of life enables you, as a visitor, to become a participant within the culture. No matter where you decide to travel, there are always people open to conversation and exchanging ideas, which makes it very easy to make new friends. Perhaps the most important benefit that is involved in assimilating new ideas and ways of life is that you begin to question and evaluate your own values.

At first you may feel frustrated with your life abroad, the language might seem an unsurmountable barrier or the customs of the country don't make any sense to you. Within time, however, these problems begin to work themselves out. Throughout this period of adjustment and as you begin to solve these problems, you will gain a sense of accomplishment on the progress you have made.

One concern we must all face and which has increasing relevance in our everyday lives is the rising conflict and struggle between nations. One aspect of this which has gained considerable notice lately is the threat of nuclear war. Concerned citizens and politicians have had the tendency to work on a short term basis when dealing with these problems, an example being the "nuclear freeze" movement. Far from condemning this way of dealing with problems, we feel that we need more long term thinking such as striving for greater world consciousness or understanding between nations. One way to do this, which would work on a powerfully human level, is an active exchange program. The exchange student learns to view international problems from another country's perspective. He/She, through their stay abroad, comes to recognize the similarities (that they have the same human fears and concerns as we) and some of the reasons for the differences. Also important, they come to question the values of their own society. When the exchange student returns, they then help to spread understanding which does much to help alleviate harmful narrow-mindedness in world issues. In the world of politics, in which perceptions of others is so important to subsequent actions, world consciousness and understanding is of tremendous importance. If enough could realize that both we and the Russian people have the same fears of war and hopes for peaceful understanding, the need for nuclear arms would diminish.

Our object of this letter is not to convince everyone at Juniata to spend a year abroad, but that everyone realize the benefits of this program on both levels, to realize that it may be a viable and fun option for your junior year.

Dear Editor:

I am writing in reference to the Sophomore production in this year's All Class Night activities. I wish to extend a public apology to Professors Lewis, Wright, Wagner, Donaldson, and others for our portrayal of them. I am not claiming full responsibility for our degradations on these professors, but I do feel an apology needs to be made.

Although I was involved with our play, and am therefore partially responsible for it, I do feel that some of our references were rude and unnecessary. The profs. portrayed no degrading characters based on the students and I see no reason to do this to them on the level which we did.

I cannot speak for others who were involved with this production, because this is my personal opinion. But I have observed many negative feelings toward these characters, and I feel these feelings should be acknowledged. I hope that those who may agree with this and/or see some truth in it will keep this in mind for next year's All Class Night production.

Thank you,

Katherine J. Bell

Concert Band to Perform

A "Potpourri of Band Music," performed by the Juniata College Concert Band, will be presented Friday, April 22 at 8:15 p.m. in Oller Hall.

Under the direction of Ibrook Tower, assistant professor of music, the band will perform several popular compositions including "Lasciatemi Morire" by Monteverdi, "Somber Mists" by Respighi, "Second Suite for Military Band" by Holst and other marches.

Also featured will be Scott Joplin's "The Entertainer," Duke Ellington's "Caravan," the traditional "Greensleeves" and the fusion rock "Birdland."

Juniata senior John Farrugia of Commack, N.Y., will be a featured soloist on the xylophone, performing Norman Leyden's "Serenade for a Picket Fence."

The public is cordially invited to the April 22 concert. There is no admission charge.

Hair Style Happenings

On Sunday, May 1, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., the Hair Happening Family Styling Salon in the Route 22 Plaza will hold a Style-A-Thon, from which all proceeds will go to the American Diabetes Association.

Darlene Rodkey, Manager of the Salon, lists the following beauticians who will participate: Wendy McCarty, Kathy Barrick, Patti Nead, Kathy Mitchell, Michelle Sollers, and Arlene Aurant. These girls are all donating their time and efforts on May 1 to benefit the American Diabetes Association. They are offering a shampoo, haircut and blow dry for a donation of $5. There will be free refreshments and door prizes as well.

Paul Chandler, Executive Director of the Western Pennsylvania Affiliate of the ADA will be a guest during the Style-A-Thon, along with Miss Suzanne Evans, the 1982 Huntingdon Fire Queen.

The local unit of the American Diabetes Association invites anyone interested to attend their meetings which are held on the 2nd Tuesday of the month. Watch for notices in the Daily News.

Any questions regarding this, call Pat Kann (420-Good Hall), Extension 631.

Juniata Rafters Have Whitewater Weekend of Fun

by Ron Renzini

Whitewater river rafting on the Cheat River in West Virginia was the culmination of a weekend of fun time for 58 students from Juniata.

The weekend trip, sponsored by Laughing Bush, along with the financial support of Center Board, was filled with activities from the moment we got to the lodge.

On Saturday night, the group of Juniata rafters decided to show the other guests at the Alpine Lake Lodge how to have a good time, as they would say, "Yankee style."

After sinking a few at the bar (just trying to fit in with the others at the lodge) the would-be rafters turned it loose on the dance floor. Music was being played by a local D.J. and the rafters noticed he was playing songs that he had played only moments before.

With the rumor started that he left his memory on a trip down the Cheat River, the would-be rafters decided to talk to the bartender again.

Housing for Saturday night was split between cabins of 8-12 persons and apartments of 10-12 persons. They were furnished with blankets, a refrigerator to keep "beverages" cold, and plenty of heat.

With an early wake-up call on Sunday morning (7:30 a.m.) the rafters were all up and ready to leave for the river on time. Not even the light snow flurries that were falling or the fact that the river was at its highest level in the last six years put a deterrent on this group.

There was one last stop before we got on the river. That was downtown Albright, West Virginia (a gas station, general store/bar, and Cheat River Outfitters), where we were to pick up our wet suits for the river.

With everyone dressed and looking like young Jacques Cousteaus, we fastened our life jackets, took out paddle in hand, and loaded the bus with shouts of enthusiasm.

Once at the starting point of our trip, groups were separated so that between 6-8 persons would be on a raft. All rafts had guides from Cheat River Outfitters (C.R.O.) on them and we were given a 15-minute briefing on raft handling and water safety.

Once on the river, the five rafts (a group of rafts from Juniata had gone down earlier to avoid crowding the river) traveled in sight of one another. The guides seemed to take you under their wings (telling stories, asking names) and everyone soon felt like a family on the river.

The C.R.O. pamphlets promise "everyone gets wet, whether it's raining or not" was true for some rafters more than others. Unfortunately, our raft and guide was one of those who found it to be very true.

Even before we went into the different rapids, the guides would inform us of what lay ahead and what alternatives were available.

Being college students, though, how, why, who would believe a guide that told us "if we went straight for the hole, we'd have a very good chance of turning our raft over." After all, the guide leader had his bare toes exposed to the 40-degree water and had

Banking Seminar

The fifth annual J.B. Kunz Banking Seminar was held at Juniata College Wednesday, April 20, and featured an address by Dr. Paul M. Horvitz, professor of finance at the University of Houston.

The seminar, which was held in the Brumbaugh Science Center, was sponsored by the J.B. Kunz Company of Huntingdon, with additional financial support from Penn Central National Bank, Union National Bank and Trust Company and the First National Bank of Mapleton.

Horvitz, who is the author of numerous books and articles on banking, finance and deregulation, discussed "Can Small Institutions Compete in a Deregulated Environment?" In the Sept. 24 issue of "American Banker," Horvitz characterized deregulation as a two-edged sword. He claimed that deregulation ". . . will reward efficiency and benefit those institutions that are most creative and most efficient." He also stated however, that ". . . deregulation will make the business a tougher one. Banks and thrifts must give thought to the marketing of their products and to their pricing."

A graduate of the University of Chicago, Horvitz holds an M.B.A. degree from Boston University and a Ph.D. from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Before joining the University of Houston faculty in 1977, Horvitz worked for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. for 10 years and for the Comptroller of the Currency for four years. In addition, he has been a financial economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston, and taught finance at Boston University.

Responding to Horvitz's comments at the seminar was John D. Wickert, chairman and chief executive officer of the Dauphin Deposit Corp. and Dauphin Deposit Bank and Trust, Harrisburg. Wickert was president of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association from 1980-81 and is active in numerous civic organizations.

Also participating was Dr. Ronald L. Cherry, professor of economics and business administration and chairman of Juniata's department of economics and business administration. A member of the Juniata faculty since 1958, Cherry is a Juniata graduate, and received his A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Princeton University.

Off Off Broadway

by Rod Keller
and Dave Merwine

The final performance in this year's Juniata College Artist Series, "The Mikado," was presented Sunday night in Oller Hall Auditorium. This operetta was first staged in 1884 and is one of the most loved of all the Gilbert and Sullivan comedies. Its beautiful costuming and comic representation of the Japanese nobility and laws have made it a classic example of the Gilbert and Sullivan style, one which the Manhattan Savoyards brought out quite beautifully.

The plot of "The Mikado" hinges on a decree made by the Mikado himself that, in order to steady young men and do away with flirting, anyone caught in the action of flirting would be beheaded. Before the action begins, the Mikado's Son, Nanki-Poo, has been forced to disguise himself as a wandering minstrel and flee the court because Katisha, an elderly lady, has accused him of flirting and demands either his head on a plate or his hand in marriage. The plot is further complicated by Nanki-Poo falling in love with a young woman named Yum-Yum, who just happens to be engaged to the Lord High Executioner. But, as in all Gilbert and Sullivan musicals, the conflict is resolved in a ridiculous manner, and everyone lives happy every after.

All the actors in the Savoyard company were highly trained in the Gilbert and Sullivan tradition and their performances were well received by the fairly large crowd in Oller Hall. If there is anything that the actors could be criticized it would be their diction while singing. Much of the comedy and plot of the show was lost with the music in the large spaces in Oller Hall. This made the plot difficult to follow, but a plot is not essential to enjoying Gilbert and Sullivan works.

Overall, the Mikado was an excellent finale to end the Artist Series for this year.

Digest. I was certain there were others in absentia. My remaining list contained two articles that appeared in Family Health. Family Health was in the science library.

Angrily, I wondered what the library did have. Since we didn't have the everyday, "normal" people subscriptions I was used to, I was wondering what was left. Still clutching my heart over Reader's Digest, I rethumbed through the binder listing all of Juniata's subscriptions.

Breathing a sigh of relief after learning that the science library subscribed to Theoretica Chemica Acta, it was no wonder that we didn't have trivial subscriptions like Good Housekeeping. I personally was unaware that we held subscriptions to such informative journals as Psychonomic Science and Transactions of the American Geophysical Union. Had I known, I would have had something better to do on a Wednesday night than watch "Dynasty."

For all those prospective visitors to China, Juniata subscribes to China Pictorial, and if you find yourself kneeling three times a day to Mecca, The Moslem World is another Beeghly offering.

How, on many cold evenings, I've wanted to curl up in front of a fireplace with an afghan and the Journal of Virology. Now I know it's possible; if only I could have the fireplace! Turning the pages of the library's listings, I was ecstatic to find that while we don't have Vogue or Glamour at Juniata, we do have Footwear News.

As for Juniata's subscription to Angewandte Chemie, well, I wasn't certain what it meant, but I knew it was surely prestigious, and I was proud to be associated with such a conscientious subscribing school.

Magazines for "normal", everyday, gossipy people (who like the latest dirt on Princess Di) who have to do reports on exercise or, as my roommate, women's fashions, have little value next to Footwear News or China Pictorial. Perhaps the target audience is a bit more select a group, but at least one person must be deriving pleasure.

The library selection of Juniata does have one benefit over Penn State's. At the end of last term I had two hours to spend in the Altoona campus library waiting out someone else's final. I went to the magazine shelves to pick up Newsweek or Time or McCall's or Cosmo, or something recognizable, and found little index cards reading, "Due to theft, this magazine is now kept behind the circulation desk."

Instead of flustering the librarian, I grabbed the only salvagable magazine which was not chained to the desk, Life. By the end of the first hour I had read all of the articles I would not normally have read including those dealing with different plastic varieties of artificial hearts and the priest who single-handedly fights the mafia in Italy (complete with blood and gore photos). I was about to reread the ads.

I suppose there is a lesson to be drawn from this, a lesson which places Juniata a caliber above the rest. If Juniata does not subscribe to "normal" blah magazines like McCall's or Reader's Digest, the normal and blah among us would never be tempted to take them home . . . Of course, some scenic prints of China would have looked good on our living room walls . . .

Don't Drive Drunk

by Cindy Duick

"Don't Drive Drunk" week, presented by the Committee on Alcoholic Study and Education (CASE) April 11-15, offered a variety of programs in an attempt to make Juniata students aware of new Pennsylvania drinking and driving regulations.

The new law, "The Driving Under the Influence Law," became effective January 14, 1983. It states that a first time conviction for drunk driving requires a minimum 48 hour jail term and a $300 fine — penalties which could go as high as two years in jail and a $5,000 fine. Convictions automatically suspend the driver's license for one year and require attendance at an Alcohol Highway Safety School at the driver's expense. Any suspected drunk driver can be required to take any or all of the three blood alcohol tests. Refusal to take the test will result in one year license suspension and can be used as evidence in trial. A test showing blood alcohol content of .10 or greater while driving is sufficient evidence for drunk driving.

Information on the new law and related topics was made available during 3-D week by CASE at Information Disseminations during meal hours at Ellis and in a program presented by District Attorney Stuart Kurtz Thursday evening.

Highlights of Juniata's 3-D week were presentations by Mrs. Neiman, President of the Lower Bucks County Chapter of MADD, and performances of "People's Court" by the acting class. Talks by Mrs. Neiman, Wednesday and Thursday, entitled "Mothers against Drunk Drivers," were "very effective" and revealed some "startling statistics," according to Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services and member of CASE. The drama performance Thursday night was also "excellent."

"The different speakers were the most well received of all the activities," said Keehner, and overall, "the week was a success."

CASE, which is in its 5th year, sponsored and organized the program. Members of CASE are students, faculty and administrators. Special duties were required of each member from publicity, organizing speakers and films, to overseeing the total operation. Each member worked at the Information Dissemination services provided each night before dinner. "It was a full load for all, and it was nice to see it ended so successfully," Julie commented.

CASE encourages more student participation in their organization which attempts to evaluate the total campus needs as far as information, alcohol policies and drinking values. CASE is concerned with promoting responses between drinking and decisions helping to determine the fine line be-

by Robert Riefler

The best movie presented by the Film Committee this year was shown at Oller Hall Friday night.

"Reds" concerns the true story of journalist John Reed's simultaneous involvement with communism, revolutions, and fellow writer Louise Bryant. Beginning in 1916, the film traces the initial meeting of Reed and Bryant, Bryant's affair with Reed's friend Eugene O'Neill, Bryant's marriage to Reed, and their post-marriage separations and reunions.

At the same time, we see the rise of the socialist party, the Russian Revolution, and Reed's transition from journalist to political leader. The film takes us to Russia, Paris, and the Middle East, as well as New York and Chicago.

The most outstanding quality of "Reds" is its performances. Warren Beatty and Diane Keaton, intense and believable as Reed and Bryant, were both deservedly nominated for Oscars (they lost to Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn in "On Golden Pond"). Jack Nicholson, as O'Neill, was nominated for supporting actor, and Maureen Stapleton, as Reed's revolutionary contemporary, won an Oscar for supporting actress.

"Reds" is an exceptionally long film: 200 minutes. But it holds interest throughout, each scene giving the audience further insight to the characters and the politics which so profoundly affect their lives. Particularly moving is the scene in which Bryant waits at the station for Reed to get off the train, hoping he's alive. An interesting addition to the story is the brief interviews, laced throughout the film, featuring real witnesses from the time period discussing their recollections of Reed, Bryant, and communism.

Special credit goes to Warren Beatty, who, in addition to performing the starring role, produced, co-scripted, and won an Oscar for directing "Reds." An effective combination of love story and political saga, "Reds" is bound to become a film classic.

Amoco Grant

A $15,000 grant from the Amoco Foundation of Chicago has been awarded to Juniata College to support the academic areas of mathematics and science.

In announcing the grant, Juniata President Frederick M. Binder said the funds will be used for scholarships for mathematics and science students. This comes at a time when the nation's economy makes it difficult for many students to afford a private education.

"This grant is another example of the strong support Juniata receives from foundations, corporations and businesses. The Amoco Foundation's support for Juniata's high academic standards is deeply appreciated by the faculty, trustees, students and administration," Dr. Binder said.

The Amoco Foundation maintains a private college giving program, the criteria for which includes academic excellence, sound operational management and strong science and mathematics programs.

This is Juniata's second grant from the Foundation. In 1982, Amoco awarded an unrestricted grant of $10,000 which was applied to the new Sports + Recreation Center.

J.C. Prof Speaks

Dr. Jose C. Nieto, Mary S. Geiger Professor of Religion and Professor of History at Juniata College, was invited to address an international symposium on "The Spanish Inquisition and the Inquisitorial Mind", held April 18-23 at Brooklyn College, New York.

Scholars from the United States, England, France and Spain participated in the symposium, part of Brooklyn College's 12th conference on Society in Change. The papers were presented in English, French and Spanish, and cover topics in literature, history, political science, religion and sociology. The conference was held in conjunction with the fifth centennial of the founding of the Spanish Inquisition.

Neito's presentation was entitled "On the Non-Mystical Nature of the 'Alumbrados' Movement." According to Nieto, "The issue whether or not the Alumbrados dexados were mystics is not a simple academic quibble confined only to esoteric theological subleties rather removed from the sociological and historical studies and their input. On the contrary, the claim here is that unless one understands clearly these distinctions and properly evaluates them, it will be impossible to determine the Alumbrados' contribution to the modern world of the Renaissance Reformation."

A native of Spain, Nieto is a graduate of the University of Santiago de Compostela and the United Evangelical Seminary, both in Spain. He received his Th.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Princeton Theological Seminary, and has studied at Presbyterian College in Northern Ireland, and Pontifical University in Spain. In 1981, he served as resident scholar at the University of Marburg, West Germany.

Prior to joining the Juniata faculty in 1957, Nieto taught at Moravian Seminary in Bethlehem. He also taught at Princeton Theological Seminary, and has been a pastor of churches in both Spain and the United States.

Nieto is the author of the books "Mystic, Rebel, Saint: A Study of St. John of the Cross" in English and Spanish, "Juan de Valdes and the Origins of the Spanish and Italian Reformation," also in English and Spanish, and "Valdes' Two Catechisms: The Dialogue on Christian Doctrine and The Christian Instruction for Children."

Spring visitor's day Aids H.S. juniors

An open house for high school juniors interested in learning more about college life will be held at Juniata College Saturday, April 23.

Sponsored by the college admissions' office, the day is designed to help high school juniors and their parents become more familiar with higher education and the college experience.

"We would like to stimulate students to begin thinking in more concrete terms about college and their futures. That is the point of our special Junior Open House," said Gayle W. Kreider, Juniata's director of admissions.

The Spring Visitation Day will begin at 9:30 a.m. with registration, followed by a welcome from Mrs. Kreider to be given at 10 a.m. The day's schedule includes a student panel discussion made up of three current students who will discuss their experiences and answer questions. Following this, student guides will conduct campus tours.

The final event is department fairs beginning at 12:45 p.m. Professors from academic departments, along with students, will be on hand to discuss careers and specific areas of interest. Personnel will also be available to answer questions on admissions procedures, financial aid and scholarships, career planning and placement, and athletics.

High school juniors and parents interested in attending the Visitors Day open house should contact the admissions office at Juniata by telephoning 814-643-4310, extension 420.

Raystown Topic of Workshop

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' rangers and Juniata College faculty have been working together in an exchange of ideas concerning Raystown Lake and its environment.

At a recent workshop held at Juniata, the two groups discussed limnology, the study of fresh water lakes, and how it applies to Raystown Lake. Under the leadership of Dr. Todd D. Gustafson, associate professor of biology, and Dr. Robert L. Fisher, professor of biology, six rangers from the Corps of Engineers, most stationed at Raystown Lake, had an opportunity to expand their scientific knowledge of the lake.

"We discussed a wide range of issues, such as lake classification, how lakes change and what causes those changes, thermal stratification in the summer and winter ice cover, and how dammed lakes differ from natural lakes," Gustafson said.

"One thing that makes Raystown Lake special is its shape," Gustafson said. "In addition, the lake is a habitat for a diverse variety of fish. The top warm water, deep cold water, shore water and open water all support different kinds of fish," he added.

The workshop also served to assist the rangers with the management of Raystown Lake, and explored how the college's research projects on the lake can be of help to the Corps. Juniata maintains a 365-acre Environmental Studies Field Station at the lake.

"We learned a great deal about their needs and how Juniata College can provide the Corps with information that will assist them in interpreting the lake to the general public," Gustafson said.

Juniata Rafters

DEVO printed down the side of his wet suit.

Needless to say, with a river yell of "YA-HOO," our raft and guide leader went for the heart of the hole. In a few seconds time, we were turned over, our group floating in different parts of the river.

During this time is when one appreciates the fine job C.R.O. do for their rafters. Mark Alexander, our guide, was yelling instructions while still in the water, and other rafts came down the river to throw us lines and pull us into their rafts.

Once on shore, a fire was built for the wet rafters and lunch was served. After a short rest, we went down another mile of the river before getting off on the shore where buses were waiting to take us back to Albright or back to ride the rapids again.

Four more rafts were filled with students for the second trip down while the others went back and dried out at a local "hot spot" with food, drink, and live entertainment.

Over all, everyone seemed to have an enjoyable time on the trip. It seemed that people got a chance to be closer after the weekend.

Juniata Students Volunteer Services

Juniata College and its students provide many things to Huntingdon residents and organizations, but an extraordinary group of students provide a very special and commendable service to the community. They are volunteer members of the Huntingdon Hook and Ladder Fire Company.

These eight students — William Hallman of Norristown, David Johnson of Pittsburgh, David Lacomis of Dupont, David Gilbert of Pittsfield, Mass., Corey Pote of Penns Grove, N.J., Scott Perrotty of Mountain Lakes, N.J., Robin Crust of Bellefonte, and Robert Ryder of Caldwell, N.J. — are full-fledged members of the company and most are active in the company's ambulance crew as well.

The students came to the company in October, 1980 with little or no experience in fire or ambulance work. They were first instructed in the use of fire apparatus, and were later trained for participation on the ambulance crew in the required areas of cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and advanced first aid.

Hallman, Johnson, Lacomis, Gilbert, Perrotty, Miss Crust and Ryder all completed further training and are certified emergency medical technicians. Johnson went on to become certified as a paramedic 1.

Fire Chief Bob Jessell states that the company has been accepting student memberships for the last 10 to 12 years. "These guys and girls here now are the most experienced, most active, and best qualified of all the students we've had." Jessell also comments on the group's participation by saying, "They give 100 percent of the time."

The individuals joined the company for various reasons. A senior biology major, Gilbert says, "I got interested because I had worked in an emergency room. I saw what an ambulance crew did and I decided to join." Another student expresses a desire to gain more medical experience in keeping with his pre-medical studies. Seniors Pote and Johnson want to maintain the skills they have acquired previously in their hometown companies.

A junior social work major, Miss Crust describes her treatment in the company as being different at first but not anymore. She is the only female student active in the company, although the company does have other female members.

The volunteers receive ambulance calls over a pager or by telephone. As for fire calls, they say, "You go when the whistle blows." A few of the students even moved to an off-campus apartment near the station in order to be closer when an emergency arises.

Members of the group participated in approximately 70 percent of all fire calls last year, including the Seventh Street fire which destroyed several Huntingdon businesses, and the fire emergency that closed J.C. Blair Memorial Hospital for a week. Fire Captain Tim Watts, a 1980 Juniata graduate, says, "They have gone beyond what the ordinary college student does for the community. They participated in athletics and clubs also, but still have time to give to the community. They are people you can count on."

Their work on the ambulance crew includes routine calls as well as transporting patients to the Hershey Medical Center in cases of serious illness or injury. The emergency calls leave the biggest impressions on them. Hallman, a senior psychology major says, "There's a lot of emotion. You don't realize it when you're performing your duty. All you think about is 'What should I be doing? How can I help?' It's only afterwards that you realize how ill the person was and what you did for him."

The students all receive great satisfaction from their work with the company. The appreciation they receive from the townspeople seems to be the most cherished reward.

Another positive outcome of the situation is the increased communication between the college

President Returns From Britain Tour

Juniata College President Frederick M. Binder recently returned from a two and a half week study tour of several British universities, learning about higher education administration in the United Kingdom.

Dr. Binder, who was representing the American Association of University Administrators, made the trip through a grant from the British Council, a government office which sponsors and encourages cultural exchanges between Great Britain and other foreign countries. Council programs are aimed at informing academic leaders about trends in higher education in Britain, and stimulating discussions among educators.

While in Britain, Dr. Binder visited Bedford College of the University of London, and the Universities of Sussex, Edinburgh, Leeds and Cambridge. He was interviewed and briefed by members of the British Council, and the General Secretary of the Vice Chancellors and Principals of Great Britain. At Edinburgh, the president gave administrators a briefing on the structure of American higher education.

In addition to his tour, Dr. Binder attended meetings of the Council of University Administrators (CUA) held at the University of Cardiff, Wales, and the Council of University Registrars and Secretaries at the University of Surrey, England.

At the CUA meeting, the president participated in a general panel discussion and question and answer session. He also spoke on the philosophy of administration and was a member of a panel discussing college and university housing.

"The higher education structure in Great Britain and the United States are quite different," Dr. Binder remarked. "This tour has provided British and American university administrators with a better understanding of the higher education system in each country," the president said.

students and the borough residents. Lacomis, a senior biology major, observes that the volunteer students have helped to improve relationships between the two groups.

The students participate in all company fund-raising activities and assist with station and equipment maintenance.

This experience provides a needed outlet for many of the students, as well as a unique opportunity to acquire important skills. In their encounters with the people of Huntingdon, they bring the college and town closer. Along with this comes the satisfaction of serving others.

tween the use and abuse of alcohol.

The organization counts on student support. Julie emphasized that "Students we've had have been invaluable this year." This was the first 3-D week, but CASE plans other programs next year. If you are interested in joining, see a member or attend the J.C. activity fair.

Trustee Receives Award

Dale W. Detwiler of Huntingdon, chairman of the board of New Enterprise Stone and Lime Co., Inc., was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Juniata College at Sunday's dedication of the new Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center.

A native of New Enterprise, Detwiler has been a member of Juniata's Board of Trustees since 1949. He was awarded the degree as "a man of commerce and compassion who has worked unremittingly to provide facilities and programs for the nurture of body, mind and spirit." Henry H. Gibbel, a 1957 Juniata graduate and member of the Board of Trustees, presented the degree to Detwiler.

In addition to his current position at New Enterprise Stone and Lime, Detwiler has served the company as vice president and president. He has been a school director for 20 years including four as president, director of Central Counties Bank for 40 years, director of Nason Hospital for 26 years including 24 as president, director and past president of Associated Pennsylvania Constructors, past president of the Roaring Spring Rotary Club, and a member of the General Board of the Church of the Brethren for 18 years.

Last October, Detwiler's service and dedication to the college was recognized at the annual dinner of Juniata's Founders Club. Detwiler was presented with a painting of Founders Hall, the college's oldest building.

"Dale Detwiler has generously given Juniata his time, resources and professional expertise for more than 30 years," said President Frederick M. Binder. "His leadership has helped the college grow and prosper. With this honorary degree, the trustees, faculty, students and staff have expressed their gratitude to Dale Detwiler."

the dichotomy between the two Todds has produced albums that sound as if two different artists recorded them. The Tortured Artist Effect does not suffer from such a flaw. Some of the songs are decidedly weird; "Emperor of the Highway" is the obvious notation here, but as a whole the album has a good continuity which comes to a head with "Bang the Drum All Day."

Todd has the habit of writing great songs just when you need to hear them. "Bang the Drum" is so much of a good time it's hard to believe it's only a song. It's exciting, fresh, and says more about being carefree than a month of Sundays.

It is really encouraging to hear an album that sounds as if the musician had fun making it and not just a chore used to fill the time gaps in between tours.

Zoo Field Trip

observed during the ten days, and a variety of other animals and plants. One lab assistant, Chuck Yohn, thought that everything went very well, and that it was a good chance for students to experience a "large, cooperative camping group." He also stated, "The food was great," and lab assistant Duane Silvestri added, "Even the bologna tasted better."

Opinions on what was the best part of the trip varied, but among those mentioned were the snorkeling expedition, catching armadillos, and walking the trails in Highland Hammock State Park at night. It was generally agreed, however, that the worst part of the ten days was the 36-hour drive home, during which about one-third of the group were sick from ptomaine poisoning contracted when they stopped for dinner Saturday night.

Several of the field trip participants also became candidates for the infamous "Duart Award." A duart, as defined by King Duart Robert Fisher, is "an unrehearsed fiasco-like event." Some of the nominated events included walking into doors, "losing" the van keys in one's pocket, and almost half of the group getting lost for several hours in the "Blue Dinosaur" on the way down.

Dr. Fisher remarked that the biggest problem of the trip was the high water levels from previous rains, which dispersed the animals so they were not as easily accessible, compared to last year's trip Georgia. He did comment, however, that this year's students were "a very good group, fun, and cooperative."

Spiritual Lecture

"Education for the Spiritual Life" is the topic of Juniata College's April 24 J. Omar Good Lecture to be presented by Iris V. Cully, Alexander Campbell Hopkins professor of religious education at Lexington Theological Seminary in Kentucky. The 8:15 p.m. lecture will be held in the faculty lounge, Ellis College Center.

A graduate of Adelphi University, Cully also holds a M.A. degree from Hartford Seminary Foundation, a B.D. degree from Garrett Theological Seminary, and a Ph.D. from Northwestern University.

Cully is the author of several books including, "Christian Child Development," "Children in the Church" and "Imparting the Word: The Bible in Christian Education." She has also co-authored works with her husband, the Rev. Kendig Brubaker Cully, and published articles in numerous journals such as "Journal of Bible and Religion" and "The International Journal of Religious Education."

Men's Softball Review

by Paul Kardish

You can tell it's spring at Juniata; it's raining and softball games are being cancelled. Despite all of this, men's softball could be in for one of its most competitive seasons ever.

The characteristic of the men's softball league could be described as evenly matched with no team having an obvious edge talent wise.

The Blue Flight appears to be extremely competitive with four or five quality teams. Leading the way is the Pigeons II, captained by Jack Sturgeon. Sturgeon's team is the defending champs from fall term and Sturgeon hopes his team will repeat with the addition of entirely new personnel in the outfield. King A and the Ex's, captained by Eric Dezii, were fall team's runners-up. Dezii hopes that consistent play and avoiding extracurricular activities, such as studying, will turn the tide in their favor. Way-Way Off Campus captained by Greg Lomax, is characterized by a lot of power and should be a front runner. Andy Berdy's team, Pat's Snatchers II, is always a perennial power and also looks to capture the coveted championship.

The Gold Flight, not as strong as the Blue, has a few powerful teams. Look for the Mess Express, captained by Mike Appleby to take the division. The addition of key people should help this team in their quest for the title. Two teams not to be overlooked, include Last Chance, captained by Mark Repole and Joe Mama, captained by Derek Flaig. Look for them to give the Mess Express all it can handle.

The playoff format will include the top four teams from each flight with the championship game tentatively scheduled for May 19. Watch for this column as the season progresses and the race for the championship heats up.

I.M. V-Ball Begins

by Mark Royer

My first choice for the game of the week, which was to have featured Pigs in Bondage vs. Off the Wall, was not played due to a lack of lady hoggers. Instead, another Red Flight game will be this week's feature. Bad to the Bone met The Grog Shop Clientele on Monday night and came away an easy winner in two games. In the first game the Grogs took a quick 3-0 lead on the serving of Linda Bucholz. After that, though, the game was dominated by the Bones as they went on to a 15-4 victory with Scott Perotti wrapping up the serving. Solid play by all the Bones' members along with their steady serving was too much for the Grogs to handle. Game two took a bit longer to finish as the Grogs, behind Thomas Lubisch and Heidi Hess, stayed close until the mid-way point. Eventually the Bones got their act together and pulled away to another victory, 15-7 behind good playing by Les Burgen and Patty Renwick. I thought the Bones played very well as a team and showed no glaring weak spots. Despite their 1-2 record, I expect to see them in the play-offs.

In Women's Intramural volleyball action last week, the Tac Volley Girls defeated U-ho in two straight games 15-11, 15-13.

The Tac Volley Girls won the service volley and had Tina Snowberger as first server. Tac Volley Girls took a 1-0 lead but then Nancy Hawk gained serve for U-ho. She served for 4 points while the Volley Girls had initial problems returning her serve. The game slowed down as the teams exchanged serve and points. Jenny Grigson, gave U-ho an 8-5 lead with good serves coupled with excellent play by teammate Heather Roche. The Volley Girls, however, did not die. Snowberger once again served; this time she brought her team from an 8-5 deficit to a 10-8 lead — a lead which they never gave up. The Volley Girls extended the lead to 13-8 when Paula Tonsetic sparked a momentary comeback for U-ho at 13-11. But then Laura Hill put the game away for the Volley Girls with a pair of nice serves to win 15-11.

The second game began slowly. U-ho served first and took a 1-0 lead. Both teams then proceeded to exchange serves and points. Roche made a couple of outstanding plays for U-ho. U-ho was losing 5-4 when Tonsetic made a great save of a ball that was going out of bounds and turned it into a point to tie the game at 5. The game continued to be close until Leslie Dougherty and Hill combined for 4 points to give the Volley Girls a 12-8 lead. After a point exchange Grigson started a U-ho comeback to tie the score at 13. The Volley Girls did not fold however and won on the next two serves by Snowberger, 15-13.

In volleyball action on Sunday: Aphraxia defeated the T&A team 15-11, 15-9; U-ho defeated the Tussey Terrors 15-10, 15-8; the French Curves defeated the Bop and Grooves 8-15, 15-13, 15-7; and Last Chance defeated Awesome Forces II, 11-15, 15-13, 15-7.

Mark Shaw, of Submarines, displays his swing during a co-rec softball game against the Psycho-Killers. The Submarines won 7-1.

Jockettes Romp

by Cindy Duick

Women's Intramural Softball began heated competition March 29. Competition centers around four teams: The Jockettes, The Last Resort, "Some Girls," and The Zipster Wenches, captained by Peggy Evans, Sally Gurekovich, Aleta Yaskovitch and Jessie Amidon respectively.

The Jockettes trampled their first two opponents. They defeated The Last Resort March 29 in four innings 24-0. They dished out another travesty April 12 defeating the Zipster Wenches 21-0.

On April 12, the Last Resort faced Some Girls. Some Girls took defensive field positions first and led by pitcher Terry Smaltz, kept Last Resort from scoring in the first inning.

Some Girls took the initiative and scored two in the bottom half of the first inning. Last Resort pulled together to put down Some Girls' rally and in key defensive plays retired the side.

At the plate, Last Resort regained strength and was able to run in a score before the third out. The score of 2-1, Some Girls winning, remained through the 4th inning as Last Resort worked hard to keep Some Girls' lead from advancing. Good pitching by Last Resort's captain Sally Gurekovich, and key fielding plays by Shortstop Sue Simpson and Center Fielder Lib Rood kept Some Girls at bay.

However, in the 5th inning, a bunt by Some Girls caught Last Resort off guard. Some Girls loaded the bases but Last Resort kept their scoring to a minimum of one.

Last Resort's last chance came in the 6th inning with two out and two women on, a line drive seemed like it would enable them to tie but Some Girls infielder made a spectacular catch to save the game 3-2 Some Girls.

The Juniata Wrestling team would like to announce that it is conducting a spring wrestling program for all interested. The sessions will be on Mondays and Thursdays 3:30-5:00 starting on April 25 in the wrestling room. Basic techniques will be reviewed along with drilling and periods of live wrestling. Discussion of next year's team will also take place. Individuals with any wrestling background are encouraged to attend.

Tennis Splits

Men's Tennis

by Tracy Catanese

The Juniata Men's Tennis team faced the strong winds in addition to a strong Susquehanna team last Thursday, but managed to fall short, 5-4.

In the singles matches, JC's Tom Tracy, Dave John, and Chris Savage were victors 2-1, 2-0, and 2-1, respectively. Keith Fox, Scott McNeal and Tom Lancaster were each defeated.

In the doubles, Fox and Tracy defeated Susquehanna's number one and 3 men 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. The other doubles teams, McNeal and John, and Savage and Brad Horton each lost in two sets.

The team's record now stands at 1-2. On Monday the team travelled to Dickinson and they hosted Altoona on Wednesday.

The men will play at Lycoming on Saturday.

Women's Tennis

The JC Women's Tennis team upped their record to 2-2 with a victory over Albright on Saturday.

During the match, senior Sharon Ammarell and freshman Leane Egolf maintained their perfect records in singles.

The singles matches produced five victories for the JC team as Ammarell, Ginny Krall, Kim Detwiler, Egolf and Liane Burns won 1-2, 1-2, 2-0, 2-0, and 2-0, respectively. Amy Powless was defeated.

In the doubles, Ammarell and Egolf defeated Albright's Beckie Yoder and Lori Freeland, 6-1, 6-3. The teams of Pam Baughman and Tracy Benson (0-2), and Yvette Rotundo and Janey Povey (1-2) were defeated. The overall match score was JC 6 — Albright 3.

Harriers Impressive

by Paul Bomberger

The Men and Women Harriers opened the 1983 track season against Lycoming on Wednesday, March 30 on a new all-weather track. Both teams cruised to easy victories over an inexperienced but courageous Lycoming squad. The women won 116-12 and the men won 121-24.

The women were led in the field events by Sue Kidder, who tallied 13 points while winning the discus, the javelin and taking second place in the shot. Senior, Nancy Roach showed blazing speed in the sprints, scoring victories in the 100, 200 and anchored the winning 400 and 1600 meter relays. Freshman, Carol Tendall dominated the distance events with firsts in the 3,000 and 5,000 meters and a leg in the winning 1600 meter relay. Experienced jumper, Peggy Evans, won the long and triple jumps and ran a leg in the 400 relay. The dependable Jeanne McLaughlin scored victories in the 110 hurdles and the 400 meter run.

The big guns for the men were the versatile John Voler, who notched victories in the 110 hurdles, the triple jump and ran a leg on the winning 400 relay and freshman Kevin Burket, who sped to wins in the 100, 200 and anchored the 400 relay. The distance team showed their depth sweeping all the points in the 800, 1500 and 5000 meter runs. Gino Perri flexed his muscles for second place in the shot and javelin and a third place in the discus.

With a victory under their belts the men and women travelled to the Western Maryland Relays on a cold Saturday, April 2. The men would surely be tested by the likes of returning MAC champs, Susquehanna, and Delaware Valley. The women would face a tough Messiah challenge along with a determined Dickinson team.

Despite the cool temperatures and gusting winds the women finished third out of eight teams behind Messiah and Dickinson. Meet records were set by the combined efforts of Peggy Evans and Tammi Seitzinger in the triple jump and Sue Kidder and Tammi Seitzinger in the shot. The spring medley relay team of Sue Occiano, Maria Dolson, Peggy Evans and Nancy Roach took a second place.

The Men also finished third behind MAC powerhouses Susquehanna and Delaware Valley. The weightmen were awesome setting a meet record in the javelin and placed second in the shot and the discus. Other impressive performances were turned in by the sprint medley relay team, the shuttle hurdle relay team, which took second places and Doug Brown, who picked up a third place in the 400 hurdles.

Following a strong performance at the Western Maryland Relays, the Men and Women went to Gettysburg to face Susquehanna, Gettysburg and Lycoming.

The Ladies retained an undefeated record by defeating Gettysburg 95½-16½. Peggy Evans took things into her own hands, scoring 18 points with victories in the long and triple jumps, the 110 hurdles and a second place in the 100 meter dash. The consistent duo of Jeanne McLaughlin and Nancy Roach tallied 11 points and 10 points respectively.

Susquehanna rode the shoulders of distance runners, Greg Pealer and Dave German, to an easy 90-53 triumph over the Indians. However, stellar performances were turned in by Indian, Tom Cable, who totaled 11 points in the jumps and by John Voler, who also scored 11 points, winning the triple jump and placing second in the 110 and 400 meter hurdles. Depth allowed the Indians to outdistance Gettysburg and Lycoming.

Tuesday April 19, the Women will carry a 3-0 record down to Lancaster to face MAC powerhouses: F&M, Swarthmore, and Messiah. This quadrangular meet will certainly test the ladies.

The Men travel to Lebanan Valley on Wednesday April 20, to face York, Moravian, Baptist Bible, and Messiah. Coach Turnball is confident his team will return with five more victories.

Indians Sweep York

by Jay E. Jones

Despite playing just one game in nine days due to bad weather, the Juniata College Indian baseball team pulled together for its "best performance to date" in sweeping York College on Saturday, April 16. The Indians, with good pitching, sound defense and clutch hitting beat York by scores of 6-2 and 7-1, respectively.

In the opener, Bob McDonald started and pitched six scoreless innings before York threatened with two runs in the seventh. Coach Bill Berrier then called upon John Summers to record the last two outs and ice the victory.

Juniata held the lead throughout the game. Grady Paul drove in the first run with a two-out double in the third inning, scoring Scott Cole. Then, in the fourth inning, John Widener blasted a two-run homerun over the 405 foot mark in centerfield to keep the momentum rolling. The Indians continued to add three more runs in the inning with another big hit by Glenn Hineman (an opposite field triple) to drive in two of the other three runs.

In the second game, Scott Cole drove in the first run of the game with a triple in the bottom of the third inning. York College answered this with a run of its own in the fifth inning. Then, once again, the Indians put together a number of hits to produce another big inning to clinch the win. With the bases loaded and one out, Dave Crane singled up the middle to drive in the first two runs of the inning. Glenn Hineman and Carl Pavovic also contributed to the Indian cause with bases-loaded singles, each driving in two runs. Freshman Rich Howey started and finished the game, recording his third win of the young season. Howey found some control problems midway through the contest but settled down in the latter innings to allow Berrier to save the remainder of his depleted hill staff for later games.

Earlier in the week, Juniata traveled to Messiah for a single game. Dave Musser started on the mound for the Indians but needed relief from Dave Lesser in the fifth inning. With the score knotted at three, Lesser "shut the door the rest of the way." Coach Berrier stated that Tom Shawley and Jeff Meeker "came through for the Indians with a couple of hits" to pace the ball club. Again, it was the big inning that did it for Juniata! Juniata scored four times in the sixth to make the final reading 7-3.

Juniata College (3-3 in the MACs and 8-4 overall) remains in contention for its fourth consecutive MAC North Division title. However, with its early season doubleheader loss to Dickinson, the ballclub is not in first place. "We've got to hope that the remaining three clubs (Susquehanna, Elizabethtown, and Dickinson) all split and that we sweep," said Berrier. "I believe that only three losses out of ten will give us a tie for first place in the division." According to Berrier, this week is the key for the Indians as they complete MAC divisional play with a doubleheader on Thursday at Albright and a doubleheader at home against Wilkes on Saturday.

Indian Notes:

According to Berrier, Juniata's sweep of York was most impressive being that York was the regional representative in the NCAA playoffs last spring. . . . In the opening game of that doubleheader, starting pitcher Bob McDonald performed a feat few, if any, college pitchers have done: McDonald erased five potential York baserunners with his slick, lefthanded pick-off move to first and second bases. . . . With an arm injury to freshman pitcher Jamie Shaul, the pitching staff (starters and relievers) now consists of six pitchers. . . . The Albright doubleheader is a change on the schedule, replacing the regularly scheduled Penn State contest. The game against PSU has been postponed until a later date. . . . Berrier hopes that the weather will clear up and allow the Indians more time out on the field. With each game, Berrier has been more impressed with the overall ability of the club.

Juniata's Tom Shawley awaits a pitch from a York hurler as the York 1st baseman tries to hold an Indian on first.

The Sports Corner

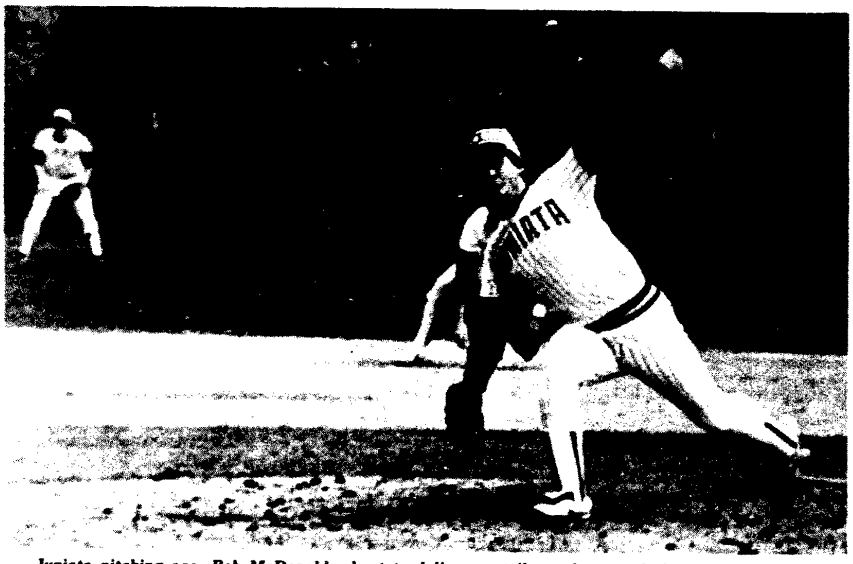
by Mark Shaw

Yes, folks, it's the playoff time of the year. The N.B.A. playoffs are beginning, and the N.H.L. playoffs began last week. And, as a native Philadelphian suburbanite, I am naturally interested in how the "home" teams are doing. Being the typical Philadelphia fan that I am, I generally cheer them when they are winning and boo them when they are losing. The problem is that the Philadelphia teams always seem to get the boos in the end (i.e. they like to lose in the playoffs).

Take the Philadelphia Flyers for instance (wait — don't boo yet). They had the second best record in the league! Yet, what happens? They lose!!! And to make matters worse, they lose in three straight games. I mean, it wasn't even close!! However, they can't be completely blamed. There were key players who were injured, and the Rangers had given the Flyers problems all year. I guess I can hold off the boos for a little while.

Next, the Philadelphia 76ers; the best team in basketball with a 65-17 record. A cinch to win the N.B.A. title, right? Well, let's take a closer look: the Sixers started out with a 50-7 record, but they are only 15-10 in the last part of the season; they've lost 3 of their last 4 games; Moses Malone, their star center, has tendonitis in his knee; and finally, the Sixers have a poor past record. Let's face it, the Sixers have not been playing well lately and, coupled with their past history: don't get your hopes up. But, I have to admit that I am being a little one-sided: the Sixers have had no motivating factors for the last three weeks of the season since they clinched the divisional and conference titles, which became even less when they clinched the best record in the league last week; also, many of the starters have been given plenty of resting time, so most of the Sixers' opponents have been facing reserves. Well, this leaves us about where we started: if the Sixers stay healthy, they should easily win. But, I've become accustomed to not counting my chickens before they've hatched. For the Sixers sake, I hope the number of chickens equals the number of eggs.

I think I'll take a minute here to analyze how often fans do not appreciate the efforts of their teams. A lot of people do it. I know I do it myself. Everybody loves a winner. Unfortunately, however, there is generally only one winner (whether it be in pro football, college football, etc.). Many fans never realize this. I know that there are many who criticize the Flyers for losing and if the Sixers lose, many will criticize them. But, both teams had successful seasons: they were at the top of their divisions, both had great records. Personally, I really was surprised that the Flyers did as well as they did. So, why complain and call the season a failure because they lost in the playoffs. I think the fan needs to be reminded of the good things that happened during the year, rather than become obsessed with the fact that they didn't finish number one.



Juniata pitching ace, Bob McDonald, about to deliver a strike as he tossed six scoreless innings against York College. Juniata swept the doubleheader, 6-2, 7-1.

Softball Shines

by Tracy DeBlase

The Juniata Women's Softball team started their 1983 season on a winning note with two victories over Elizabethtown. Their next match up was a doubleheader against Franklin and Marshall on the Juniata field. They won the first game 6-5, but unfortunately dropped the second game 7-11.

The women have had several game cancellations due to the recent poor weather conditions. The lack of playing time did not hinder the Lady Indians. On Monday, they got back on the playing field and defeated Bucknell 7-3. The Indian victory came behind the strong pitching arm of Juniata's ace, Michelle Wengryn. Wengryn allowed Bucknell only five hits.

Juniata's offense was led by Colleen Irelan, who went 4 for 4 at the plate, and Mary Ellen Sullivan, who went 3 for 3 at the plate with two R.B.I.'s. Coach Latimore is very happy with his teams success thus far. After the Bucknell victory he said, "These girls are the most talented and disciplined group of individuals I've ever had. They are continually improving."

Trustees Approve New Computers

Science Library to be Computer Center

by Ron Renzini

The purchase of new academic and administrative computer systems has been approved by Juniata College's Board of Trustees.

In a move to update the computer facilities here at the college, the Board members accepted a recommendation made by Juniata President Frederick M. Binder to replace the college's current systems with new state-of-the-art equipment.

According to Kevin McCullen, Director of Institutional Planning & Research, "The students are getting a more powerful machine. What you can now do with the machine will be greater."

The machine referred to is both the hardware and software tentatively scheduled to be purchased from the Digital Equipment Company. These are the same manufacturers of the equipment presently used here at Juniata.

The new administrative system will consist of Axxess Information Systems software and Prime Computer, Inc. hardware.

"Juniata will continue to maintain two distinct computer systems for academic and administrative purposes," Dr. Binder said. "The specific needs in these two areas are quite different, and are best met by products from different vendors," he added.

In addition, the Board approved the proposal to transform the current Science library in the Brumbaugh Science Center into the new academic computer center. The library will be relocated to the college's main L.A. Beeghly Library, and eventually to a new science library established in the present computer science center.

The move of books from the science library to Beeghly will not occur until the end of spring term. According to McCullen, "The library needs to be renovated before the new system can be put in." Such renovations will include raising the floors, building petitions, and installing a new air conditioning unit.

The construction should be a 60-90 day project with machine delivery hopeful for October. If all goes well, students may be able to use the computer center by the middle of fall term.

The total cost for the equipment and renovation work will be approximately $1 million. According to McCullen, the money is "to be raised much like the Sports + Recreation was," with the major effort coming from the Development Office over the next five years.

The Peace and Conflict Studies Committee has available, through its Baker Scholarship Fund, several renewable $500.00 merit scholarships for current sophomores and juniors.

To be considered, students must have evidenced interest in PACS through the taking of one or more PACS courses, and must have a cumulative GPA of 3.0. To keep the scholarship, students must take the equivalent of one PACS course per year, participate in PACS programs, and maintain a 3.0 GPA.

To apply, students should submit a statement to Prof. Mulvaney by Friday, April 29, 1983, outlining why they feel they are qualified for the award.

Foreign Policy to be Discussed

U.S. foreign policy in the 1980s will be discussed Monday, May 2 as U.S. Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr. (D-Del.) speaks at Juniata College.

The 8:15 p.m. program will be held in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center, and is part of the college's Baker Lecture Series sponsored by the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee and the political science department.

A member of the Senate since 1972, Biden is the second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and the only Democrat to also serve on the Senate Intelligence Committee. In addition, Biden serves on the Budget Committee and is the ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee.

The Senator has been particularly active in the areas of NATO policy, arms control and Middle East policy. He currently serves as chairman of the North Atlantic Assembly's Special Committee on Nuclear Weapons in Europe. The Assembly is the parlimentary arm of NATO, and this chairmanship puts Biden in the forefront of the current discussions of European Theatre Nuclear Force Modernization.

A strong advocate of arms control, Biden was a leader in the effort to win Senate ratification of the SALT II agreement. He also played a leading role in opposing the sale of AWACS aircraft and other sophisticated military technology to Saudi Arabia.

A graduate of the University of Delaware and Syracuse University School of Law, Biden was a trial lawyer in Wilmington prior to his election to the Senate.

He also served two years as a member of the New Castle County (Del.) Council. Biden, his wife and three children reside in Wilmington.

The public is cordially invited to attend Sen. Biden's May 2 lecture. There is no admission charge.

Juniata Profs Promoted

Six Juniata College faculty members were promoted by the college's Board of Trustees during its annual spring meeting held on campus April 16.

President Frederick M. Binder announced the Board's action, naming the six involved. Promoted to professor is: Dr. Dale E. Wright, associate professor of psychology. Those named associate professor are: Karen K. Lee, assistant professor of sociology; Ibrook Tower, assistant professor of music; and Dr. William C. Vocke, assistant professor of political science. Two individuals, Harriet E. Darling, instructor in education, and Loren K. Rhodes, instructor in mathematics and computer science, were promoted to assistant professor.

A native of California, Wright came to Juniata in 1969 as an assistant professor of psychology and was promoted to associate professor in 1978.

Wright holds bachelor degrees from Chico State College and Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, and received his Ph.D. in experimental psychology from the University of Vermont. While studying at Vermont, he worked at the Clinical Research Center at Mary Fletcher Hospital, Burlington.

Mrs. Lee joined the Juniata faculty in 1979 as an assistant professor. She received her B.A. degree from Marietta College and M.S.W. degree from Boston College. Prior to coming to Juniata, Mrs. Lee worked as a counselor at the Overlook Mental Health Center, Madisonville, Tenn. She has also taught at Virginia Intermont College, was a social worker at the Southwest Virginia Child Development Clinic, and a caseworker at Connecticut Valley Hospital.

A member of several professional organizations, including the Huntingdon County Human Service Council, Mrs. Lee has been a consultant to Mifflin County Child Development, Inc., and a book reviewer for Wadsworth Publishing Company.

Tower, an accomplished musician, joined the Juniata faculty in 1974 as an instructor in music, and was promoted to assistant professor in 1978. He has performed with a variety of orchestras and orchestral organizations, and currently appears with the Juniata Woodwind Quintet and

Another Step In the Right Direction

At the recent meeting of Juniata College's Board of Trustees, President Binder made yet another step forward for both the present and future student body here at Juniata College.

In an effort to renovate the outdated computer systems presently located on Juniata's campus, the President made special note to the Board members concerning the rapid growth and need for computer science and computer technology at a higher education institution such as Juniata. "Within the next five years, we can expect to have nearly 1000 students interested in developing computer skills," Dr. Binder said.

The Juniatian also believes that if Juniata expects to maintain its high academic standards among colleges our size, then the college must see into the future and develop programs that will meet with the growth and demand of students nationally. The computer system is one such foresight into the future.

It should also be noted that since 1976-77, the college has spent $6.5 million on new construction or renovation of college buildings and facilities. During that same period, more than $2 million has been spent by the college on special projects and capital equipment. These are all expenditures aimed at increasing the efficiency and effectiveness of instructional equipment and student involvement on campus.

If an institution such as Juniata is to remain competitive with others of similar size, they should and must keep moving forward. Such a move has been present in the past and is continuing today, as shown by the acceptance of the new $1 million computer center.

With this kind of support for both academic and recreational growth of Juniata students from Board members and administration, Juniata should continue to function as one of the finest educational institutions available for students today.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to Lisa Ellek's column, "Along Muddy Run," appearing in last week's Juniatian. Miss Ellek sarcastically criticized the library for not having subscriptions to what she referred to as the everyday, "normal" people subscriptions. Apparently, she was very disappointed to find that a person can't go over to Beeghly and thumb through the latest issue of Seventeen magazine, getting tips on the latest fashions for high school girls, for example.

I agree that it is aggravating to find that the library doesn't have a book, newspaper, or magazine that you need to write a paper. However, I think Lisa has unrealistically evaluated the needs and functions of a college library. She made sarcastic references to some of the subscriptions the libraries do receive, such as The Moslem World and the Journal of Virology, without realizing that it is precisely those types of specialized or technical periodicals that a college library is expected to have. Most research requires the use of detailed, reliable information sources. I don't see how Redbook or even the ever-popular Reader's Digest fits into that category.

The library does subscribe to magazines such as Life and Newsweek, which are considered normal, everyday reading, yet at the same time are informative and at least somewhat reliable sources of information. "Gossipy" people like Miss Ellek can go to the library to read those magazines, although, sad to say, they won't find the "latest dirt on Princess Di." I might suggest that Miss Ellek go as far as to read a copy of U.S. News and World Report sometime, unless, of course, she is afraid to transcend from the blah, everyday area into a slightly intellectual realm.

Maybe Beeghly Library could stand to broaden its subscription topics with, say, a stack of Playboy in the men's restroom. But for the moment, my advice to Lisa, if she is still looking for McCall's, is to check the waiting room of the nearest dentist's office.

Sincerely,
Bob Schwartz

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the April 21 criticisms of David Hostetter's "Along Muddy Run." Personally, I was very pleased to see someone take a stand somewhat different from the conservative Juniata norm. In the criticisms voiced, I feel perhaps some points were missed.

Firstly, in response to Patrick Hepner, nowhere in Hostetter's article was there a reference to a "sacrifice of our principles." I don't believe Hostetter tried to speak anywhere in the article for anyone but himself. In voicing that he would like to see the Juniatian stop accepting army advertising, he said "It seems to me that it would represent a small sacrifice for principle, a real rarity today."

I suppose that statement could be interpreted a number of ways. What I see Hostetter driving at is not a matter of censorship, but rather one of taste. Different publications, though not condemning certain institutions, do not necessarily feel a need to advertise them either. I have not recently noticed ads for condoms or feminine protection in any religious journals, nor ads for the armed services for that matter. Yet most western religions don't seem to condemn birth control, sanitation, or defense of the country. College students are as aware of the armed services and their opportunities as religious groups are aware of birth control. What I am driving at is that every publication makes endorsement choices. Hostetter is expressing his viewpoint that perhaps the Juniatian should not endorse institutions that train people to kill.

It is more difficult for me to respond to Kevin Hurley. I would first like to dispute his remark that the armed services do not make everyone "specialists in killing." This may hold true for the actual individual act of murder. But how far is Hurley willing to extend the definition? Those who "specialize in helping to maintain and manage the supplies and equipment used by the military" are an active part of the war machinery. Without this maintenance and management, how could the "specialists in killing" kill?

My difficulty in responding to Hurley comes in the mention of those who died for our freedom. I am appreciative of that. I realize that I am lucky to be in a country that does allow for as much personal freedom as it does. Admittedly I am spoiled by it, but I do have a sense of what earlier generations have done so that I am able to take it for granted. On the other hand, I am also grateful to those people within our "free" country who were persecuted to gain others the right to call themselves conscientious objectors. Those rights were not handed down on a silver platter from the government — they too were paid for through the lives of individuals. To this day our government does not make the "freedom" to be a conscientious objector easy. Yet the freedom to subscribe to their conscientious position (support for the armed services, the willingness to kill other human beings in the name of our capitalistic god) is as easy as signing one's name to a piece of paper — they'll take it from there. The irony of the US position became especially clear when Enten Eller said to me, "They want to put me in prison with rapists and killers

by Dave Lehmann

Fishermen are a funny breed. Don't get me wrong — I'm a fishing fanatic myself, but I believe this is due to some mental deficiency. Maybe my parents dropped me on my head once too often when I was young, and I started seeing fish instead of stars. I really can't say; I was much too young to remember. What I'm sure of, however, is that fishing, to a fishaholic is chronic; once the love for the sport gets in your blood, you're hooked so to speak. On his dying day a fisherman doesn't want to see an angel. No, he's hoping to meet Izaak Walton carrying an extra split bamboo rod while heading for a trout stream.

Just how insanely will a fishing fanatic behave? Pretty damned nutty. I remember one June morning five years ago when my buddy Jim (who is now a starting guard on the Rochester U. basketball team and also a Dean's List scholar) and I were fishing for smallmouth bass on the Potomac River. The bass were splashing at thin silver-colored minnows near the surface, and Jim and I had imitated the minnows' color and movement with our lures. We were having the kind of day fishermen dream about; we had each caught over ten fish in the first couple of hours on the river. I was sitting at the front of the jon-boat when I saw a nice smallmouth break water while chasing a minnow. Well, Jim saw it too, and he excitedly tried to cast his lure to the fish. Somehow, in his anxious state, he cast his lure into his own skull instead of the water. A treble hook imbedded itself deeply behind Jim's right ear. We tried cutting the barb off the hook so that I could push the hook back out, but the hook was too strong for my pliers. When all attempts of getting the lure out failed, I suggested that we go to a doctor. Jim looked at me like I had just insulted his mother. "Are you crazy," he yelled at me. "I can get this lure removed anytime, but we don't always have fishing this good!"

So I cut his line above the lure; Jim tied on another lure, and he fished till dark with a four-inch long wooden minnow imitation hanging from his head. Later that evening he went to a hospital and had the lure surgically removed.

The terrifying fact about fishaholism is that is strikes quickly and without warning. I convinced Tim Grove, who by his own admission had done little fishing in the past, to go out Saturday morning with Jim Hudack and me to chase trout. Tim caught two fish, and he was hooked on the sport. We came back to campus, ate lunch, and Tim was ready to go fishing again. We ended up fishing for ten hours Saturday despite none of us getting more than five hours sleep the night before. Nine o'clock Sunday morning, I called Tim to see if he still had the fishing fever. He did, and despite a hangover and extreme exhaustion, he was ready in fifteen minutes. It didn't matter that the temperature hovered around forty while rain was falling like seniors' grades or that the streams were so muddy that we couldn't see the bottom in more than six inches of water; we had to try. There's always a chance that a trophy fish might get lost in the mud and run into a lure. There's a chance, but Sunday it didn't happen. Between the two of us we caught one small brown trout. Just the same, neither of us held any regrets about having tried for that trophy. When you're a fishaholic, you look at tough days as just something to help appreciate those days when you catch fish until your arm is sore from reeling them in.

Yearbook Editor Selected

Kristine Van Horn, a sophomore business administration major, has been selected as editor-in-chief of the 1984 Alfarata. She succeeds Janet Zuna who served as editor for the 1981, 1982, and 1983 editions.

Miss Van Horn of Phoenixville was selected by a five-member editorial board. Her past yearbook experience consists of serving as editor-in-chief of the 1981 Phoenixville High School yearbook and as a staff member of the 1982 and 1983 Alfarata.

"We feel most confident in passing this responsibility on to Kristine," remarked Janet Zuna, "She had all the qualifications and expressed a number of very good ideas for the new book."

Her duties officially began in early April and she will soon be assembling the editorial board and staff. Anyone interested in staff or photography positions should contact her at Box 232.

Cheering Tryouts

Cheerleading tryouts are finally here! Starting May 2-May 6 Juniata College will be once again seeking young, dedicated women to represent the college as Varsity Football Cheerleaders. With the hopes of another exciting football season, an expanded budget, and increased interest, the college will need an enthusiastic cheerleading squad to lead J.C. spirit! With the loss of many senior cheerleaders, positions are open and new faces and athletic abilities will be vigorously sought. Freshmen and interested individuals who might not have been involved before, now is the chance. Please take the terrific opportunity to enjoy a fun-filled fall season dedicated to cheering our football team and other fall sports on to victory. Watch for public announcements of the tryout schedule coming up soon!

An Officer & A Gentleman

by Robert Riefler

"An Officer and a Gentleman," one of the best attended movies presented by the Film Committee this year, was shown Saturday in Oller Hall.

The 1982 film concerns the trials of several characters during a 13 week Naval training program. The focus is on two officers, Zack Mayo (Richard Gere) and Sid Worley (David Keith), dividing their attention between the rigors of training and their relationships with two young women from town.

Zack becomes involved with Paula. She falls in love with him, but is willing to accept the termination of their relationship after his training if that is what he wants. Zack's buddy, Sid, gets involved with Paula's friend, Lynette. Lynette wishes to marry Sid because he is an officer, so she pretends to be pregnant.

Paula and Lynette provide great contrast in their approaches to winning their men, and their reasons for wanting their men. Paula is honest and sincere, while Lynette is devious and gold-digging. Paula's virtues pay off in the final scene, when Zack rescues her from her lonely life working in the factory. Perhaps the film would have been more realistic without this final scene, but it is so uplifting for the viewer that it is worth including.

Also worth noting are the scenes devoted to the training of the officers. The strong point of these scenes is the realism of the officers' struggle for accomplishment, under the command of the vicious Sgt. Foley.

The performances in "Officer" were all memorable. Debra Winger, as Paula, was nominated for the Best Actress Oscar. Lou Gossett, as Sgt. Foley, won the Oscar for supporting actor. "Up Where We Belong," the popular hit from the movie sung by Joe Cocker and Jennifer Warnes, won an Oscar for Best Original Song.

"An Officer and a Gentleman" is a fine film. It has appeal for all audiences, and will therefore undoubtedly be long remembered.

Student Flute Recital

A flute recital by Juniata senior Margaret L. Donohue of Hershey, will be presented Tuesday, May 3 in the Stone Church of the Brethren.

A Dean's List student, Miss Donohue has studied the flute under the direction of Diane Gold, instructional assistant in music. The May 3 recital represents four years of dedicated work.

The 8:15 p.m. concert is free and open to the public. Miss Donohue is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Donohue of 151 Laurel Dr., Hershey.

News Briefs

Washington — "Isolationist" reactions could be forthcoming by the US if European nations are not more cooperative in restricting high technology exports to the Soviet Union, according to a US official. The Reagan Administration official, Laurance J. Brady, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Trade Administration, warned Western European diplomats of this possibility during a private meeting last Thursday. He addressed commercial counselors and ministers from embassies of the 10 countries in the European Economic Community.

Paris — Declining oil prices are resulting in the diminishing of OPEC power. According to economic, diplomatic, business, and financial sources throughout the world, 1983's oil price decrease has damaged OPEC's position as the world's fastest growing market for Western goods and as a major source of investment money. The falling oil prices, despite helping stimulate world economy, are bringing oil prices near bankruptcy and challenging the international banking system.

Last month OPEC cut $5 per barrel off official prices to make it now $29 per barrel. This decrease prompted many Western Nations to alter their attitudes towards OPEC.

London — Sixty volumes of handwritten diaries belonging to Adolf Hitler have been found and in part published, according to an account in the Sunday London Times. Rigorous examinations established the authenticity of the documents. The discovery is credited to a 51-year-old West German journalist, Gert Heidemann, whose three years of search led him to a hayloft cache in East Germany where the diaries were found. According to Heidemann, the diaries had been lost in a plane crash between Berlin and a stronghold in the Bavarian Alps during the last days of World War II. A local German officer who led a patrol to investigate the crash found the papers and hid them, where they remained for over three decades.

The discovery was announced Friday by the West German magazine, "Stern."

Beirut — The bodies of 16 Americans killed in last Monday's explosion at the American embassy were flown home aboard a military plane this past weekend. President Reagan called his trip to greet the plane, "one of the saddest journeys of my Presidency."

Washington — Secretary of State, George P. Shultz, embarked on a journey to the Middle East on Sunday in hopes of negotiating with Israel to make concessions involving troop withdrawal from Lebanon. An agreement through Shultz would open the way to withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian, and Palestine Liberation Organization troops at the same time. President Reagan explained Shultz's role in a radio broadcast Saturday, Mr. Shultz, "will now add his personal efforts" in "bringing about the earliest possible withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon in a way that will promote peace and security in this troubled region."

This Saturday night, April 30, SNAP will present the Second Annual Outdoor Movie on Oller Hall lawn, starting at 9:00 P.M. The feature is "Horsefeathers," starring the unforgettable Marx Brothers, as they arrive, in true form, on a college campus. Over 100 people attended last year's showing of "Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein." Admission is free and so is the popcorn. Also, bring a friend and a blanket to sit on. In case of rain, film will be shown in Alumni Hall.

Shoemaker Artists Display

Two Centre County artists will display their work April 28 to May 20 in Juniata College's Shoemaker Galleries.

Robin Gibson of Boalsburg, a graphic artist, and Robert Neffson of Lemont, a painter, both currently teach art at the Pennsylvania State University.

Ms. Gibson holds B.A. and B.F.A. degrees from the University of New Hampshire and an M.F.A. degree from the University of Wisconsin. In addition to Penn State, she has taught at Montgomery College in Maryland, California State University at Long Beach and the University of Wisconsin.

Prints by Ms. Gibson have appeared in exhibits throughout the United States including one-person exhibitions at the Gallery North, Setauket, N.Y., and the Philadelphia College of Art. Her work is included in the permanent collections at the New York Public Library, Metropolitan Museum and Art Center in Coral Gables, Fla., and the University of Wisconsin.

Neffson received both his B.F.A. and M.F.A. degrees from Boston University's School of Fine Arts. He has also studied at Tanglewood Institute in Lenox, Mass., Skohegan School of Painting and Sculpture in Maine, and at the Arts Students League in New York.

Prior to coming to Penn State in 1982, Neffson taught at Arizona State University. He has also taught at Fisher Junior College in Boston, DeCordova, Museum in Lincoln, Mass., and at Boston University. His work has been displayed in one-man exhibitions at the First Street Gallery in New York, Capricorn Gallery in Bethesda, Md., Long Island University, and the Roswell Museum and Art Center in New Mexico. Neffson has participated in other exhibitions throughout the United States and in Rome.

Baker Lecture
U.S. Policies

by Mark Royer

Two weeks ago on Thursday evening, Wayne Smith, a former U.S. State Department employee, lectured at Shoemaker Gallery on America's policies in Central America. I understand how excited most of you get about world affairs so I'll try to keep this short and avoid any comments on student apathy.

Mr. Smith worked for 25 years at the state department until resigning last summer, too disgusted with our policies to continue. He said that our current problems with Nicaragua and El Salvador could have been avoided if the Carter and Reagan administrations had worked more diplomatically with all the groups involved. As it is now, the U.S. refuses to communicate with the Marxist Sandistas who are in power in Nicaragua. Instead we supply the Somosistas with military aid in hopes that they can overthrow the Sandistas. Mr. Smith said that after 2½ years of aid, nothing has changed, and that aid is not the answer to the problems there. He feels that in Somosistas we have picked the worst possible allies and that our "Secret War" is not working. Since we are carrying on the secret war, we have no other paths to follow and thus have pushed the situation to radical extremes.

El Salvador is worse. We back the government there but the guerillas are very strong. Mr. Smith says to win the war we need to send in troops, but the way Americans feel after Vietnam makes this virtually impossible. The U.S. refuses to talk with the guerillas so the war is in a stalemate, neither side giving in or communicating. Again Mr. Smith says we should have dialogue with the guerillas if we wish to keep out the radical elements. There are 5 guerilla organizations in the FALN and each has different motives, but at the moment they have a common goal. If we wish to have a say in the future of the country we should sit down with each of their leaders and discuss the issues.

In the center of the problem lies Cuba, or so Ronald Reagan believes. Mr. Smith disagrees with the President. While Mr. Smith

Draft Law Ended

The U.S. Dept. of Justice has warned the U.S. Dept. of Education to stop even going through the motions of making male financial aid applicants swear they've registered with the Selective Service.

In what one source called a "strongly worded" statement, the Justice Dept. says any further Education Dept. efforts to require young men to register might violate a preliminary injunction issued last month in Minnesota against the law linking military registration to federal financial aid.

In that ruling, U.S. District Court Judge Donald Alsop said the law may violate students' protections against self-incrimination, and enjoined the government from enforcing the law until the full case against the government is heard this July.

Students Present Play

The comedy-drama "The Corn is Green," will be staged May 5, 6 and 7 in Juniata College's Oller Hall by Theater Juniata, the student theatrical company. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Set at the turn of the 19th century, the Emlyn Williams play deals with life in the remote Welsh village of Glansarno. A spinster schoolteacher, Miss Moffat, inherits her late uncle's country estate and with the meager funds, is determined to establish a school for the local miners' children, despite the bitter protests of the town squire.

As the schoolmistress is about to abandon her project, she discovers 15-year-old Morgan Evans whose keen but crude intelligence inspires her to make him her protege. With Pygmalionish authority, Miss Moffat fashions Morgan into a candidate for an Oxford scholarship, but not without some rebellious moments from the high-spirited Morgan.

The play combines Welsh, cockney and British dialogue in a way that emphasizes the struggles and differences among the characters themselves.

The Theater Juniata production is being directed by Dr. Luise Van Keuren, assistant professor of English, and stars sophomore Wendy Whitehaus of Hummelstown as Miss Moffat, and junior David Merwine of Harrisburg as Morgan.

Cast in the other major roles are senior James Henry of Landisburg as the town squire, sophomore Karen Brown of Terre Hill as Miss Ronberry, and junior John Molcan of Mt. Airy, Md. as John Goronwy Jones.

"The Corn is Green" was first staged in 1940 and starred Ethel Barrymore as the confident Miss Moffat. Later film versions of the play featured Bette Davis and, most recently, Katharine Hepburn.

All three performances of the play are open to the public, and admission is free.

because I don't want to rape and kill."

Not all my friends are Ellertypes. I have friends in the service as well, and I'm convinced people should join the armed services if it is representative of the things he/she believes in. Some of my friends made the right choice. Some aren't so sure. They are finding that they seem to lose the very thing they are supposedly fighting for for the rest of us — freedom.

I do not feel as strongly as Hostetter about army ads appearing in the Juniatian. But I am unable to see where he is trying to take away everyone's right to be free, and it is hard for me to deal with the labeling of him as "fascist" or "ungrateful" when his argument appears to have more Christian-sounding undertones than anything else. God help the radical who might just be endorsing some literal interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount.

Sincerely,
Kathleen Achor

Dear Editor,

This letter is for the sole purpose of "educating" all liberal-minded Juniata students who use the Juniata Sports + Recreation Center. This does not concern the entire facility, but rather just the west exit or the doors facing the Cloister. The writing of this letter is the response to a sanction imposed at a Juniata Board Hearing on the 14th of April.

During the middle of winter, I had the ignorance to walk out the more convenient exit known as the west exit, after 5 p.m. with another Juniata student. At this time, I, alone, was summoned to appear before Dr. Arnold Tilden and Nancy Latimore for an informal inquiry for my infraction. Here I was "educated" as to the rationale of the establishment for their restriction of these doors after 5 p.m.

The following few lines are their rationale as interpreted by two enlightening encounters of mine. For one, a subject close to all Juniata students — that of money; Juniata cannot afford to employ an usher at that west entrance. Secondly, they wish to restrict all undesirables, or townspeople who did not pay their fee, from using

Dear Editor,

Perhaps it was because I had spent the previous evening sorting through things in the attic. Or maybe it was because my JC class will be celebrating its 30th reunion next month. Or maybe it was because — well, for whatever reason Doug Grossman's letter about the old gym caught my attention.

While he writes as historian, what I would have to say about the activities held in the old gym would be more a matter of reporting the "I was there" school. My memories of those experiences — and lots more that the historian has no access to, thank goodness — are fresh and vivid in my mind.

When I was a student here, the old gym was a source of experiences that linger as memories. And perhaps as you get older, those memories become more important than the facts, more important even than the tangible evidence of them which remains. In any event, the demise of the old gym brought not a single tear to my eye.

The sad fact is that in recent years I doubt that it provided any students with the stuff of which Bartok, All Class Night, Totem Inn and other memories are made. Indeed, for the contemporary generation, the building was probably an eyesore. It simply did not provide much in the way of activities for very many persons.

And if the building was not functionally useful, did it have sufficient merit to warrant preservation? In a historical sense, hundreds of people used it, but that is true of any public building. And to the best of my knowledge, no single event of great historical significance happened there — none even great by the standards of local history. By student standards, the building was OLD, but there are living alumni who are older. Architecturally unique? Perhaps, but not for aesthetical reasons; it simply bordered on being ugly. Architecturally sound? No, it was not. Indeed, as it came down it was discovered that it was in even less good repair than had been thought. (And I am not referring to cosmetics like paint.)

So, it is gone. The decision to my mind was a sound one. If I choose to be sentimental about it, I can be sentimental about memories; I don't need the tangible evidence. Mr. Grossman has not that choice, I realize, and I'm sorry for that.

p.s. If they touch one brick of Founders, I'll be on them like a tiger. So there!

Dear Editor,

I was surprised at the response to Dave Hostetter's article regarding the military advertising in the Juniatian. Dave's request that such advertising be excluded from our newspaper on principle was unfairly compared to Nazi tactics.

The impact of what the Juniatian publishes may not be obvious to all. Yet, when the newspaper of a college historically known for its position on peace has the opportunity to make a gesture toward such an aim, shouldn't we expect that it follow through? Strangely enough, the call for a small contribution to peace became, for some, conducive to fascism.

Apparently for some people, freedom means the right to fight. I would not deny anyone that right — in order for there to be wars, we need people to fight them. Still, not all of us sustain the same illusion. Provided that we do not all share the same "window of vulnerability," is it a denial of one's basic rights to ask that the Juniatian not accept money from an organization whose sole purpose is destruction? I would argue that our basic rights to an adequate education, working opportunities, and a secure old age are being denied because of the displacement of necessary funds to the military, in order that it might promote its own existence.

No matter how remote the connection, we all have the responsibility for war or for peace. Most of us would like to see Juniata's contribution as one on the side of peace.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Swartz

admits that Soviet expansionism is involved, he doesn't think it is a major issue. Castro has never denied that he has shipped arms to Salvadorian guerillas. Again the U.S. refuses to talk with the party involved. Castro is willing to discuss matters but Reagan is not interested. Mr. Smith says that it is a necessity to talk with Castro if there is to be peace in Central America.

In concluding his lecture, Mr. Smith stressed the contradictions and irresponsibilities in the U.S. foreign policy. If there really is a threat to the U.S. growing in Central America, then we should send in troops. Smith is an ex-Marine and understands that when military options are necessary they must be carried out. He does not see this in Central America. He believes that the U.S. policies represent "the height of irresponsibility" and have only added to the problems that exist in the region.

Co-Rec

by Mark Royer

Well sports fans, it's time once again for the co-rec volleyball game-of-the-week. Monday night at 8:00 One More Time met T.C.R. in a match that lasted longer than I thought it would. The game got off to a late start due to the lack of a referee. So not only did I get to write about the game, I got to referee it too. How exciting. T.C.R. jumped off to an early lead with 6 points from the service of Lisa Hocker. After that things evened out until Kirk Fleck put together 4 in a row for T.C.R. The game hung at match-point from 14-8 until 14-12 but the O.M.T.'s rally fell short and the game ended 15-12, T.C.R. The O.M.T.s played hard and never gave up, and I thought they might sneak up and take game No. 1, but T.C.R. hung on for the victory.

In game 2, T.C.R. again came out of the gate in a hurry, with Jocelyn Fowler serving 7 in a row to make it 8-0. It looked as though T.C.R. wasn't going to take any chances in this game. While the final score was not close, 15-6, there were some good volleys and exciting plays. In one, Jim Engleman of T.C.R. went about half way across the gym to keep the ball in play. One More Time's record falls to 0-4 in the White Flight and T.C.R. is now 4-0. O.M.T. fought the whole way, and I'm sure they'll win a couple matches before the season ends. Captain Julie Case played well, as did Steve DiMarco on the losing side. T.C.R. played excellent as a team, getting balls out of the net and using sets well. I look for them to go far in the playoffs.

Women's

The Bop and Grooves defeated the Tussey Terrors in Women's IM volleyball action on Sunday, 15-11, 15-7.

The Bop and Grooves started the first game with five players. The Tussey Terrors took advantage of the shortage to open an early commanding lead. The Terrors won the service volley, and Becky Hay quickly served the Terrors to a 3-0 lead. The Bop and Grooves lost their serve without getting a point and Betsy Halsey gave the Terrors a 5-0 lead. The Bop and Grooves finally got on the scoreboard on a spike by Michelle Bartol. However, the Bop and Grooves just couldn't get on track. The Terrors, on the next serve, took an overwhelming 9-1 lead. Then, the rest of the Bop and Grooves then arrived and the stage was set for a comeback. Sue Detweiler served seven points for the Bop and Grooves. Included in the comeback were many excellent plays by both teams; especially Lee-Anne Ardan and Holly Crable for the Bop and Grooves and Yvette Rotundo for the Terrors. Serve exchanged hands a couple of times until Katrina Flamm of Bop and Grooves gained serve. She gave the Bop and Grooves a 12-20 lead. Halsey, of Terrors, served for a point to make it 12-11. However, the Bop and Grooves surge was just too powerful. Ardan served the last three points with Maria Glendenning spiking for the game point, 15-11. The win was a complete team effort by the Bop and Grooves. The Terrors should also be commended for their excellent play.

The second game was a real battle at the start with each team trading points. Glendenning was a real force for the Bop and Grooves early on. Ardan gave the Bop and Grooves a 2-0 lead, but the Terrors came right back on the serve of Rotundo to take a 3-2 lead. Glendenning gave the Bop & Grooves a 6-3 lead with Amy Dubois making an excellent play for point number five. The two teams continued to exchange points until the Bop & Grooves led 9-7. Then, the Bop & Grooves "ace" server Crable took control. Her serves really tied the hands of the opposition. She brought the game home for her team serving for six points. The Bop & Grooves won 15-7.

In other action on Sunday, Awesome Forces II defeated Cowards of the Court through a forfeit, U-ho defeated T&A 15-2, 15-8, and Last Chance defeated The Volley Girls 15-2, 15-5.

On Wednesday, Last Chance defeated Apraxia 15-3, 15-9 and T&A defeated Volley Girls 15-10, 15-7. Bop & Grooves won over the Cowards of the Court by forfeit, and Awesome Forces II defeated the French Curves 15-9, 15-8.

Angler's Angle

by Dave Lehmann

Quality of fishing for this week will depend on the weather. As of Monday, rain had left all area streams and lakes so muddy that fishing was a waste of time. If it continues to rain, the angler might as well stay home and sharpen his hooks. However, if the rain stops, fishing could pick up. A couple of places to try are:

Stone Creek — The first place on this trout stream to clear is the area around Alan Seger's State Forest. Fish are taking all live baits, but redworms look particularly good. Small spoons and spinners are also catching some good trout, but the water can clear very quickly, so make long casts and stick to light line to keep from spooking the fish. Although it isn't an easy stream to fish this far up, this area offers good wading and crowds are minimal. Further down stream around Cornprops Mills, the crowds are large, but if you can find room around a deep section, a good number of 14 inch plus trout are being caught. Best

Women's Lacrosse

by Mark Shaw

Women's Lacrosse is a club sport at Juniata College. It has been in existence for about four years and, this year, involves some 20 women. The team is comprised of people who really know the game to people who had never handled a Lacrosse stick before this year. The club gets help from the athletic department, student government and from themselves. Most of the girls invested in their own sticks which are quite expensive.

Women's Lacrosse is different from Men's Lacrosse. The girls don't have to wear pads or helmets; also, the pockets of the girls' sticks are smaller than the pockets of the guys' sticks. The smaller pockets make it tougher to handle (or cradle, as they call it) the ball. Most of the rules of the game are designed to protect the players; they try to keep the game from being too dangerous. The game is very team oriented; it is a passing game with teamwork being very essential.

The women have played four games this far, the latest being yesterday against Bloomsburg. They have yet to win a game but they have played well and have learned a great deal. On their away games they lost to Dickinson, 8-3 and also last Friday to Lock Haven, 8-3.

In their only home game this season, the women lost to Susquehanna, 8-2. It was a cold day with snow showers coming down every once in a while. Juniata won the draw and got first possession but Susquehanna was first to score early in the first half and took a 1-0 lead. Susquehanna took a 2-0 lead shortly after their first goal. Even though they were being outshot, the Juniata women played tough. Nancy Fieldman scored on an excellent shot to make it 2-1. After Fieldman's goal, both teams raced up and down the field missing numerous scoring opportunities. Sue Ferguson played a great defensive game for the Indians. Both goaltenders played well. Susquehanna was next to draw blood and took a 3-1 lead. Juniata began to control the tempo but couldn't get the ball into the net. Susquehanna continued to capitalize and went on to score 2 goals before the end of the half to take a 5-1 lead.

The second half was much like the first half in that Juniata had a tough time scoring and Susquehanna didn't. Kathy Murphy provided the only Juniata score in the second half when she scored on an excellent play. The game ended with the women losing a tough game, 8-2.

Track to MACs

by Paul Bomberger

Last week the Men and Women fell on hard times in track action.

The Ladies bowed to Messiah, 73-41½, and to F&M, 48½-41½. They salvaged the meet by defeating Swarthmore 41½-0.

Once again, Peggy Evans was the leading point getter with 12¼ points. Peggy scored victories in the 100 m. hurdles, the 100 m. dash, ran a leg on the second place 400 m. relay and captured a fourth place in the long jump.

In the distances, freshman Carol Tendall ran against her stiffest competition this season, but still held her own. Carol finished third in the 1500 m. and second, behind All-American Denise Paull of F&M, in the 3000 m. Only a freshman, Carol has three bright years ahead of her on the track.

The tribe will run against Susquehanna this Wednesday in a dual meet at home.

Despite coming up one point short to Messiah 73-72, several Indians had personal bests and qualified for MAC's.

Kevin Burket turned in another stellar performance, with victories and personal bests in the 100 m. and 200 m. Kevin has qualified for MAC's in both events.

The dependable Tom Cable had a fine day in the jumps, with seconds in the long jump and the high jump. Tom has qualified for MAC's in both jumps.

Others who qualified for the MAC meet were: Dave Heck in the 100 m., Todd Naylor and Doug Brown in the intermediate hurdles, Gino Perri in the javelin, Rob Yankcello in the shot and Pete Hauer and Kirby Wilcher in the 400 m.

Coach Turnball feels the team is prepared for their confrontation with Susquehanna, defending MAC champs, this Wednesday at home.

Softball

by Tracey DeBlase

The Juniata Women's Softball team continued their winning ways with a 9-3 victory and a 14-3 rout of Lebanon Valley on Saturday. According to Coach Bill Latimore the team "performed well and the victories were fun." He praised the pitching performances of Michelle Wengryn and Jean Moulder. He also said that Karen Sill and Sue Silvestri played a nice defensive game in their 14-3 win.

The entire team seemed to have a good day at the plate. They were led by Colleen Irelan, who homered in the first game; freshman Cindy "Bird" Bowman, who homered in the second game with two runners on base; and Renee Krause, who tripled twice.

With a 6-1 record the Indian women are in the midst of the M.A.C. Northeast Division title fight. Coach Latimore said that the next six games are crucial. On Friday, the women play a tough Wilkes College team (last year's M.A.C. champion), and on Saturday, the Juniata women must face Messiah College.

bait here is small minnows, and the top lure is a silver Mepps.

Little Juniata — This is some deep fast water, so be careful if wading. Every year big fish come out of here, and Saturday the fishing was good enough to indicate another strong season. This is also a tough stream to fish; you might not catch your limit but the fish you pull out should be large.

Upper Honey Creek (Lewistown) — Dan Pierce, who runs a tackle shop in Lewistown says this spot can get red-hot. One angler at his shop reported taking 19 trout on wet flies. He caught most of his fish on a weighted Mallard Quill.

Raystown Lake — If you're looking for bass, this is the best spot. Some largemouths and stripers are being taken on jig and eels off of deep points. The fishing has been slow, but should pick up as the largemouths start setting up their spawning beds. When they do, switch to plastic worms.

Any junior interested in writing Along Muddy Run for the 1983-84 school year may submit a sample column to The Juniatian, Box 667 or give the submission to any of the current board members.

Tennis Struggles

by Tracy Catanese

Men's Tennis

The JC Men's Tennis team scored a big win over St. Francis last Friday. The team managed to win 8 of the day's 9 matches to break a three-match losing streak.

Winners for JC singles included number 1 Tom Tracy 7-5, 6-4, number 3 Tom Lancaster 6-2, 7-6, number 4 Dave John 6-1, 6-2, number 5 Chris Savage 6-3, 6-3, and number 6 Dave Moore 6-3, 6-0. Keith Fox, who regularly plays number 1 singles, did not make the road trip.

All of the JC doubles teams were victorious. Tracy and Scott McNeal paired up to win 6-4, 7-6, John and Moore won 6-3, 7-5, and Savage and Brad Horton won 6-1, 6-1.

The only loss of the day came to number 2 singles McNeal 1-6, 6-3, 5-7.

Things didn't go very well for the team on Saturday, April 23, as the team dropped the road match to Lycoming 9-0. Four of the team's 9 matches went 3 sets and a fifth match went to a tiebreaker in the second set, but the team still fell short.

Coach Ash felt that despite the outcome of the meet, that the team "played pretty well against a good team." He attributes the loss to the fact that the team has lost so many close meets and matches lately, that they fell under the pressure.

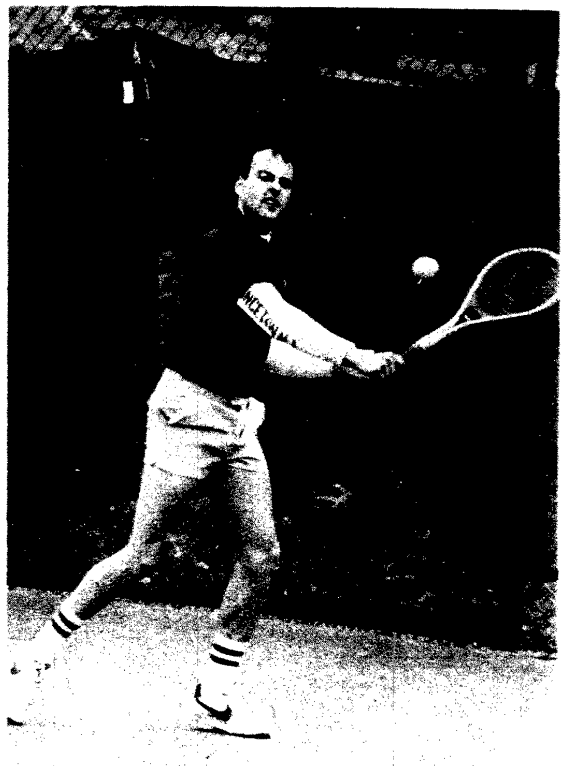
Coach Ash also stressed that he is not discouraged with the team, and that the guys are playing well.

Women's Tennis

The JC Women's Tennis team lost a tough match to Susquehanna on Friday. Some of the team's regular players were unable to play because of afternoon labs or classes, and the team saw only one victory for the day.

Senior Sharon Ammarell won her match 6-1, 6-1 and raised her individual record to 5-0. Other players who saw action included Amy Powless, Ginny Krall, Kim Detwiler, Yvette Rotundo, and Tracy Benson.

NET NOTES: The Women's record now stands at 2-3, but they played away at York on Monday. The Men are now 2-4 overall and 1-3 in MAC's. MAC's are being hosted by Gettysburg College on May 6. The men going will probably include seniors Keith Fox, Tom Tracy, and Scott McNeal. The other players are yet to be decided. The men should have a good contest on Friday when they play at Elizabethtown.



JC's number 3 tennis player Scott McNeal shows his backhand form during a recent match at home. The men's record is now 2-3.

Sports Corner

by Mark Shaw

Spring term is commonly known as the blow-off term. You can see students lying around trying to get a tan, or playing on the tennis courts, or maybe just throwing around a frisbee. There always seems to be some excuse for not doing your work when the sun is shining and it's 70°. Work is generally put off until the last minute and even then, it sometimes isn't done; but, you have fun anyway and it improves your outlook.

This spring term, however, has been different. The sun hasn't been out that much; it has been too cold to lie out when the sun has been out; and there has been a lot of raining and even some snow. What kind of spring term is this? We're supposed to be having fun in the sun! Last year at this time I had already jumped into the lake at Raystown.

Now, you may be asking, "What does this have to do with the price of tea in China?" Well, it has nothing to do with China; but I think it does have to do with sports (at least in a roundabout way). A lot of people become athletes in the spring. You see, we've sat around all winter term saying, "Boy, I can't wait until spring term, I'll be able to really get in shape for the beach this summer. I'll start running, I'll start lifting weights . . . yeah, I'll even start doing sit-ups." When spring arrives, however, very few people really do what they said they were going to do. However, the ultimate reason — getting in shape — does occur to some extent. Why? Well, when the weather becomes nice and warm, you are more prone to go out and have a catch or hit a golfball; you become more active. Just becoming more active will help you to get into shape.

To explain the present effect of recent weather, I've come up with a theory. It's the "if things are already bad, they'll only get worse" theory for weekend athletes who are still sitting around waiting for spring to arrive. The way I reason it, is that since the weather has been so bad, people not only have not done what they said they were going to do all winter, but also have not had the chance to become more active. We will therefore be worse off than we were during the winter. So if you were in bad shape to start the spring term, you're probably in worse shape now. But, don't fret, the weather will break and soon you'll become your normal weekend athlete self. Only, this year, it'll probably be winter by the time you do get into the shape you want to be in.

Silverman, 2nd In Nation

by Ron Renzini

Junior Steve Silverman, with a stellar shooting performance at this past weekend's 15th annual National Intercollegiate Trap and Skeet Championships, came back to Juniata second in the nation in the American Skeet event.

Silverman, along with Juniata team members Tom McDonald, Jack Makdad, and Coach Jack Linetty, went out to Peoria, Ill., to compete in the April 22-24 tournament.

In this tournament, colleges from all over the country come to participate in four distinct events: International Skeet, Modified Clay Target, American Trap, and American Skeet. Juniata students, however, were entered only in the latter two categories.

All shooters in the competition are then classified into groups by their average scores and compete against other shooters in their class. There are six different classes of shooters and each has a champion.

On Saturday, the shooters shot American trap. This competition consisted of 200 trap targets being shot from 16 yds. While Juniata shot well, no one was able to earn an award.

Sunday, the shooters took aim at the American Skeet event, which consisted of shooting at 100 skeet targets.

In this event, Steve Silverman, who hit his last 39 targets in a row, collected a total of 90 hits to finish second in the nation. The eventual national champion connected on 91 of 100 shots.

Homeruns Galore

by Mark Shaw

On Monday, April 25, the Juniata College Indian Baseball team defeated the Gettysburg College Bullets 11-8.

In a game that was hampered by a constant rain, the Indians jumped out to a large early lead and coasted to victory. Grady Paul started off the Indian scoring with a three-run homer. Scoring along with Paul were Scott Cole, who reached base on an error, and Carl Pavolic, who singled. After Paul, Tom Shawley doubled and was thrown out at third when he tried to advance on a John Widener ground ball. Jim Laphan walked to put two on base for Mike Castellani who tripled. The Indians led 5-0 after the first inning. The Indians scored three more runs on a homer by Dave Murphy in the second inning to make the score, 8-0. The aerial attacks continued in the bottom of the third when Tom Shawley smashed a two-run homer to the right of the 405-foot sign in center field.

Gettysburg got on the scoreboard in both the top of the fourth and fifth innings. In each inning they scored one against Indian hurler Dave Lesser. The "Bullets" also threatened in the sixth when they had the bases loaded and two out; but Lesser got the next batter to ground out to end the inning. Juniata led 10-2. In the seventh inning, Gettysburg scored two more when they got a clutch base hit with the bases loaded. Juniata led 10-4.

Juniata added another run in the eighth when Glenn Heinman singled and eventually scored to give Juniata an 11-4 lead.

Gettysburg, however, would not fold without putting up a fight. Dave Lesser had gotten 2 outs in the top of the ninth when the Bullets staged a comeback. Gettysburg scored two against him when Coach Berrier decided to change pitchers. Bruce Farina came in with 2 runners on base and gave up two singles that scored two runs; cutting Juniata's lead to 11-8. Coach Berrier then changed pitchers again; this time bringing in John Summers. Summers came in and retired the first batter on a fly ball to left field, giving Juniata an 11-8 victory.

In Saturday's games against Wilkes, Juniata split, 12-4, 9-10. In the first game, Juniata was dominating. Pitcher Rich Howie collected his fifth straight win. On the offensive side: Paul, Pavolic, Widener and Jeff Meeker all had two hits; Paul, and Widener had homeruns. The second game was a heartbreaker. After being down 6-1, Juniata came back to tie the game at 6 in the third inning. Wilkes had a 10-7 lead going into the bottom of the seventh when Juniata tried to steal the game away. The Indians managed to score two runs; but, with two outs and men on first and third, they failed to capitalize.

Indian Notes: The Indians are now 6-5 in the league and have been eliminated from the MAC playoffs. They are still, however, being considered for the ECAC Tournament and the regional NCAA playoffs. Grady Paul has had six homeruns in the last five games. On Thursday, April 21, the Indians split a doubleheader with Albright 8-10, 11-6. On Tuesday, April 19, they defeated a 9-1 Penn State Capitol Campus team, 7-4.

Rep. Hayes To Deliver Lecture

"Reapportionment in Pennsylvania" is topic

Rep. Samuel E. Hayes, Jr., Republican Whip in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, will deliver the G. Graybill Diehm Lecture in Political Science at Juniata College Thursday, May 12 at 8:15 p.m.

Hayes, who represents the 81st legislative district including parts of Huntingdon and Blair counties, will discuss "Reapportionment in Pennsylvania." The lecture, which is open to the public, will be held in the Faculty Lounge in Ellis College Center.

A resident of Tyrone, Hayes was first elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in 1970, and has served on the Education, State Government, Military and Veterans Affairs, Ethics and Rules committees. During the 1981-82 General Assembly session Hayes served as Majority Leader.

Hayes holds B.S. and M.Ed. degrees from the Pennsylvania State University, and was selected an Outstanding Young Man of America in 1972. He served in Vietnam with the U.S. Army and was the recipient of a Bronze Star.

The G. Graybill Diehm Lectureship in Political Science was established in honor of the late G. Graybill Diehm of Lancaster who served 35 years as a member of the State House of Representatives, Republican County Chairman, State Senator, Chief Clerk of the State Senate and top advisor to state GOP leaders. The lectureship brings to Juniata speakers on such topics as political leadership, governmental operations and procedures on the state and local level, and participation by a responsible citizenry.

News Briefs

Buffalo, NY — Illegal aliens entering the U.S. through New York's border with Canada have significantly increased in number, during the past year, according to American immigration officials, government prosecutors, and lawyers defending the aliens. These aliens are taking advantage of the more numerous movements of aliens from Mexico as Washington immigration enforcement officials move power from northern to southern borders. The aliens crossing from Canada come mainly from the Caribbean. They fly to Toronto and pay an average $2,000 to smugglers who arrange car or truck transportation across the New York border. The aliens, usually middle class people, head for New York City or New Jersey where relatives help them find jobs.

Beirut — On Saturday, Secretary of State George Shultz, said that he was willing to interrupt diplomatic talks between Jerusalem and Beirut to travel to Damascus to discuss Syrian troop withdrawal from Lebanon. He said he was prepared to make the trip as soon as "genuine progress" had been made towards an agreement on the Israeli pull out.

Bangkok, Thailand — The capitol of Thailand, Bangkok is sinking and engineers warn that the entire city is in danger of falling below sea level by the end of the century. The city is a victim of its population growth, and the water table keeping the city afloat has been depleted. The city sunk nearly three feet in the past three decades and the pace has heightened to four inches a year in some parts of the city.

New York — George Balanchine, 79, one of the greatest choreographers in the history of ballet, and the co-founder and artistic director of the New York City Ballet, died Saturday of pneumonia in New York. Mr. Balanchine guided the New York City Ballet to preeminence and elevated ballet choreography to an independent art, insisting that the dance element came before spectacle, story, mime, acting or music.

Juniata announced its 1983 Man and Woman of the Year at the May Day breakfast held this past Monday.

Seniors Brian Check and Sheila Squier were voted Man and Woman of the Year as a result of votes cast by fellow students. Britta Harris and Priscilla Coppolo were the senior representatives; juniors — Lori Mengel and Margi Guerrini; sophomores — Chris Schleiden and Peggy Evans; freshmen — Jill Loomis and Beth Bence. Each woman was escorted by a senior man, who was nominated by the May Day Committee.

Juniata men from all classes were on hand to serve breakfast to the women. Following the meal, Carol Broadwater, a 15-year graduate of Juniata, spoke about some of the memories of her days in school and the benefits of her experiences in and out of the classroom.

Music was provided by Jay Hinish and Deb Waltz, performing a duet, accompanied by Beth Weader on the piano.

Professor Betty Ann Cherry was selected the Honored Woman of the Year in appreciation of her participation in Center Board activities and her involvement with the students.

Despite the dreary weather, the May Day Committee did a great job of planning this year's event.

Award Winning Play To Show

"Same Time, Next Year," the romantic comedy about a 25-year-long love affair, will be presented Tuesday, May 10 in Juniata College's Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m.

Elizabeth Nelson (Doris) and Richard Carlow (George) will be seen as a casually-met couple who have a weekend tryst at a North California inn. The attraction between them is so strong that they arrange to meet again the following year at the same inn. The ensuing scenes show the lovers at five year intervals as they come together for their annual rendezvous.

The comic and cosmic problems they face as individuals and as participants in a hectic period of history are the substance of "Same Time, Next Year."

Doris begins as an unsophisticated young wife overwhelmed by the complexities of a too-early marriage. She has a lot of catching up to do educationally and socially. In the course of her development, she freaks out as a flower child, makes the Women's Lib scene and ends up heading a successful catering business.

George is an urbane, ambitious accountant who manages to be extremely likeable even when stuffy and narrow-minded. Before the annual one-night stands have concluded, he has moved in and out of a $150,000 house, voted for Barry Goldwater, played piano in a singles bar and wound up with wider lapels and attitudes.

Through all the years of their amorous cavalcade, the two remain devoted to their respective spouses. They come to vicariously know and like their opposite numbers and exchange information and concern about their families' ups and downs.

"Same Time, Next Year" opened on Broadway on March 13, 1975 and ran until Sept. 3, 1978, a total of 1,425 continuous performances. The play starred Ellen Burstyn who won a Tony Award for her role as best actress of the 1974-75 season.

In 1978, "Same Time, Next Year" was released as a motion picture starring Miss Burstyn and Alan Alda.

"Same Time, Next Year" will be presented at Juniata by the Alpha Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America. Tickets for the play may be purchased at the door.

Top Films Billed for '83-'84

The Juniatian has obtained the names of the films to be shown for the 1983-84 school year. The films to be shown next year include: "Chariots of Fire," "On Golden Pond," "Tootsie," "Sophie's Choice," and even the film which stole all of the Oscars, "Gandhi." The Center Board Film Committee should be given a round of applause for the films which they will be bringing onto campus next year. The films are all excellent. They provide a good mixture of seriousness and comedy. A number of the films were nominated for Academy Awards, if not winners of the awards. In fact, the only really big movie which seems to be missing is "E.T. The Extraterrestrial;" but most people have already seen it anyway. The films will cover all areas of interest and should prove to be very successful next year. Hopefully, the students will show their appreciation to the committee by attending these films.

The Center Board Film Committee has achieved greater and greater success over the last couple of years. Each year the quality of movies which they acquire seems to improve. This year's films were much better than last year's selection with "An Officer and a Gentleman" being the highlight of the year. That movie nearly brought in a full house. Overall, the attendance of the films has improved greatly over last year's attendance. This proves that the Film Committee has been improving in fulfilling the entertainment needs of the college. The higher attendance figures of this year should be topped by the attendance figures of next year; if they do not, there must be something wrong with the tastes of the students.

The Film Committee should be commended for the work they have been doing this year and last year. The Juniatian hopes that the committee keeps up the good work, and that the students fully appreciate all that they do.

Along Muddy Run

by Lisa Ellek

Every so often on one of my tours, some gum-cracking and wordy individual will ask, "Do you have any frats or sororities here?" I politely smile my "Welcome-To-Juniata-Watch-The-Tram-Car-Please" smile and then explain how there is really no need given the size of the school and the fact that the dorm residents are cohesive among themselves. What I do not proceed to explain is that when I came as a freshman and was asked where I lived, men held up their fingers in the sign of a cross, fending me off because I was a Lesher "leper."

So often in four years I've thought the dorm distinctions were childish and unnecessary. It was only this year, the final year of four, that I saw true dorm cohesiveness work effectively, dorm spirit channelled to some meaningful end.

It was the final Sunday of Winter Week — the week full of sunshine and low 50's, without a trace of snow — and festivities were grinding to a halt. My democratic R.A. "signed" me up for the "Almost Anything Goes" competition. Begrudgingly but loyally, I carried my shoes to the wrestling room. Once there, we were separated into teams and I joined my fellow Mish's and Pink Palacians for the fun and games.

The first event was tumbling. One at a time we were to effect as many somersaults as we could from one wall to the opposite wall and then run back. No problem. Part B of the tumbling event (whoever designed this must have also designed the various parts to GRE analytical problems) consisted of the participant taking a diving forward roll over a partner and vice versa, until reaching the same "deadly" wall as before. Move over Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

It was Part C of the tumbling event when my first great "dawning" came. The entire five-person team was expected to lie flat on the floor, then the person on the end was expected to roll across his other four team members and so on down the line until the team reached "the" wall. In theory this sounded ridiculous; in actuality this was ridiculous.

Ironically, as the "rollers" got heavier, I became more enlightened. "I must like these people an awful lot to let them crush me," I kept thinking. "Roller" and "rollee" came face-to-face and exchanged snatches of conversation without realizing the potential of this exercise as a new weight-loss method.

Off-campus took last place in the tumbling event. We were bitterly disappointed but determined to succeed in the remaining events. We were unified in the spirit of competition for the three-legged race. We cheered each other on for the "clothes-putting-on" competition (even though I kept losing my sweats), and shouted encouragement through the "pass-the-lifesaver-to-your-team-member-by-means-of-a-toothpick" event.

"Sherwood has to be cheating," we whispered to one another after Sherwood's correctly-positioned last lifesaver earned them honors. Still, the off-campus comrades were undefeatable and deadly earnest. Childish dorm distinctions?! All was fair in war!

And in a personally climactic moment, there was proof of affiliation to my fellow team members. In a crucial event for off-campus, each team member had to twirl around ten times with a basketball held above his or her head before running back to the team. After completing my ten

Dear Editor:

I am addressing this letter to the person who ripped a photograph off a May Day poster in the Ellis Lobby. I just want you to be aware that a lot of time, thought, and memories went into creating that poster, and it probably took you less than a minute to ruin it. Instead of being a J.C. keepsake, that poster is now ready for the garbage can. If you just wanted a picture, why didn't you ask for one? If, on the other hand, you were trying to be malicious, you've succeeded.

Beth Stravino

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to Mr. Hostetter's Muddy Run column concerning ads for the military appearing in the Juniatian. It seems that his viewpoint has threatened some students' image of the armed forces. They feel a need to speak in defense of the army's right to be considered as a legitimate advertiser in the Juniatian. However, accusations of censorship and a reference to Nazism seem to be out of place.

I'm certain that a good number of our students come from a family with a military background. Many of them probably receive some funding from these organizations. It is also likely that some of them have suffered the tragedy of losing an older brother in Vietnam. To think of the army as an organization created for the sole purpose of legalized killing would be, for many of our students, to grapple with the idea that a brother, a father, or an uncle died in vain. The image of a protector or defender of American ideals would, for a fleeting instant, be replaced by that of a murderer. Why kill them a second time?

We are, after all, American citizens. The freedoms that we enjoy here in the states are rare in most of the world. The state has given us many reasons to be grateful. Because we enjoy these freedoms, it would be hypocritical of us to set ourselves against the organization which granted us our privileged position. Or would it?

Because we have received these freedoms and enjoy them, should we all eagerly sign up and start polishing our bayonets? Is it unpatriotic to speak of Nicaragua, Hiroshima, El Salvador, or Vietnam as a mistake? Was the administration clearly honest with the people concerning casualties and the true status of the war? — clearly not. Were people like Daniel Ellsberg, who found it necessary in his own conscience to disobey the law, simply ungrateful, unpatriotic, bleeding hearted liberals who had forgotten the "price of freedom?" If this heinous offense had not been carried out, would we yet know what really happened to Uncle Andy?

I don't plead that Juniata boycott any attempt by the military to make their pitch. I would simply urge young men to make a conscious, clearly thought out deci-

Pete Townshend — Scoop

I suppose that if one were a die-hard Townshend fan that they would buy an album of Pete singing in the shower. Actually, that's Scoop.

Townshend's "new" album is really nothing of the sort. There is no new material, in fact, there is very little good material. Scoop is a double album set of songs that Townshend wrote for himself. Wonderful, but they mean virtually nothing to me. Everything is recorded in his own personal studios, with less instrumentation, more dubs and more feedback than on the originals. The previously released material is interesting, but at the same time not very moving either. There is a full song, "Zelda," written about Townshend's niece waving out the back of a car.

I don't doubt that the album means a great deal to Townshend, but I have no idea about what makes it special to him.

I find myself very skeptical of an artist who just recently completed a tour that was sponsored and promoted by Schlitz beer and then releases an album of previously unreleased material. The public is bound to have very sentimental feelings toward a band such as The Who on their last tour. To play on that sentiment at this point in time is not an ethical thing to do. I could see the reason for releasing this set if the music was especially noteworthy, but it's not. The songs don't mean anything to me without their original urgency, or Townshend's. Let Atco eat this one.

revolutions, I ran at my hardest to reach the starting point, but with my head in a fog, my body was pulled far left of where my team stood. My eyes knew where they wanted to go; my body simply could not get me there, and in a desperate plea, I cried "Help, guys," and stuck out my arm. I remember seeing a familiar arm, and then I think I momentarily blacked out.

It's taken me four years to realize that some dorm distinctions are necessary and even constructive. Cohesiveness often gives us a sense of pride. I was prompted to think back on Winter Week's events because Springfest is here and, along with it, most probably, another "Almost Anything Goes" competition. With my sense of pride and loyalty, spirit and bondage, I heartily say, "Let me be in hiding when the event takes place."

Out & About

by Amy Smith

If you're in the mood for an elegant Italian style dinner without the typical price you pay for elegance, Delgrosso's Restaurant along Route 220 in Tipton, Pa. is just the place to go. This past weekend, my partner and I had the opportunity to experience this type of dining.

Upon our arrival at Delgrosso's, we had about a twenty minute wait, which, however, could have been avoided had we made previous reservations. We spent this time talking in the dimly lit bar area until the hostess directed us to one of the dining rooms.

This particular room was unimpressive as far as the decor was concerned. Its formal essence was attributed to the white linen covered tables, wine lists, and five-piece silverware settings. As a romantic atmosphere it lacked a few key elements: candles, music and a beautiful view. Fortunately, we were seated at a table far from the windows which exposed the surrounding scenery: an industrial plant, a car dealership, and a gas station.

Although the atmosphere wasn't as extravagant as we had expected, we were not at all disappointed with the main reason we chose this restaurant — the Italian delicacies. My partner's full course meal consisted of Antipasta, fruit cocktail, soup, meatballs and garlic bread (compliments of the chef), salad, and the main course, Veal Parmisan. I chose the homemade spaghetti with meatballs, which also included salad and Italian bread. Of course we saved room for dessert, American style — cheesecake and chocolate ice cream!

I am not certain whether or not the hostess, being informed of the purpose in our visit, had any influence on the excellent service we received. The waitress made no delay in serving each course promptly after we had finished the previous one. When our entire meal was completed, she returned with the check and collected the money at the table, sparing us the trip to the cash register.

Overall, the disadvantages that inevitably accompany any restaurant were outweighed by the advantages: the food, the service, and the reasonable prices (the bill was less than $25).

Expanded Patio In The Works

by Jim Biles

A new, expanded patio, as you've probably already noticed, is currently being constructed in front of The Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center.

The new structure will triple the size of the already existing patio. It will consist of three tiers with steps leading to each tier. Area will be set aside so that portable bleachers can be brought in to allow for extra seating. The patio may be used for summer orientations, commencements, as well as numerous other outdoor events that were previously held in lawn tents.

The cost of the patio is not to exceed $60,000, according to Juniata's Business Manager, Bill Alexander. Though a large patio was originally planned for the Sports + Recreation Center, it was axed in order to save money. But, fortunately, with the addition of several new donations, it is expected to be completed sometime by the end of the school year.

sion. Mr. Hostetter's opinion was not an attempt to legislate our principles for us. He simply raises some difficult, seldom heard questions.

The danger that I see is a neglect of our responsibilities to see our own mistakes as a nation. The Nazism that Mr. Hepner mentioned works two ways. While reading his commentary, I couldn't help but be reminded of the allegiance of the German people to the lies of Hitler and the nationalist passion that led them to their cooperation as part of that war machinery. It took cooperation on all levels for Germany to become the terror that it was: factory workers, logistics, plumbers, as well as, soldiers who "saw action." It is simple enough for us to point at them and condemn their participation, yet without a voice of dissent, How many more Americans would have died in Saigon? These are difficult questions each of us must answer for ourselves. For myself, any participation is granting my consent. As Einstein said, "The pioneers of a warless world are the young men and women who refuse military service."

Winning Seasons

by Paul Bomberger

The Men's and Women's track team completed their dual meet season on Saturday at Dickinson. Both emerged with lopsided victories.

Last Wednesday afternoon at College Field, the women upended Susquehanna, 89-47.

Peggy Evans had a phenomonal meet scoring 27½ points. Peggy recorded first places in the 100 m., 200 m., 110 hurdles, long jump, triple jump and also ran a leg on the winning 400 and 1600 meter relays.

Carolyn Andre came on strong in the absence of Carol Tendall. Andre notched victories in the 800, 1500 and 3000 meter runs.

The women continued their winning ways last Saturday by crushing Dickinson and Gettysburg. The double victory gave the ladies an 8-2 record for their first track season.

Peggy Evans did it all, capturing five first places once again. Carol Tendall came back from shin splints and cruised to victories in the mile and the 2 mile.

The Men gave Susquehanna all they could handle, while losing 80-65.

Gino Perri was outstanding as he set a school record in the shot put. Gino's 48' heave broke the previous record of 47'9½", held by teammate, John Voler. Gino also threw his best throw of the season in the javelin, 196'10", good for second.

Pete Hauer won the 400 m. and anchored the mile relay, which clocked a 3:27.31, their fastest time this season.

The dependable John Voler won the triple jump and placed third in the 110 high hurdles, tallying 6 points.

In the 5000 meters, freshman Bill Ciesla rose to the occasion and cruised to victory in 16:03.95. His time was the fastest on the team this season.

On Saturday, the Men rolled over Dickinson, 95-30. The victory gave the Tribe a 4-3 dual meet record.

Kevin Burket led the Indian attack with 11¼ points. Kevin sped to firsts in the 100, 200 and anchored the 400 relay to a 43.34 clocking.

John Voler collected 10 points, winning the 110 high hurdles and the triple jump.

In the jumps, Tom Cable tallied 8 points, while winning the long jump and finishing second in the high jump.

It was a day of fantastic finishes for the distance crew. In the 880, Dave Long and Paul Bomberger pulled second and third places. John Weiner and Mike Murray went 2-3 in the mile and Mark Royer and Bill Ciesla went 1-2 in the 3 mile run.

Angler's Angle

by Dave Lehmann

The report for last week still holds true! If the rain stops, fishing should pick up everywhere. However even in this wet weather there's still good fishing to be found if you look. Raystown and area trout streams overshadow some very good fishing in farm ponds and strip pits. Farm ponds can be found by driving about the countryside and looking out your window. Most of these ponds are stocked with sunfish and bass, but before fishing, get permission from the land owner. Probably, the most enjoyable way to fish these ponds is with a fly rod. By working a medium sized popper along the shoreline you could get anything from a four inch bluegill to a big bucketmouth bass. Of course, any type of tackle can be used, but, even if using spinning or casting gear, topwater lures are most fun. If topwater lures don't turn the trick, try shallow runners, spinnerbaits and plastic worms.

Widener, Murphy: Hot Bats

by Jay E. Jones

By virtue of their four game winning streak and their overall 15-6 record, the Juniata College Indian baseball team is one of a number of teams being considered for an NCAA berth in the Midwest Region. "It all depends on how we do in our next six games," said Coach Bill Berrier. "We will know for sure after next Tuesday (May 10)."

The Indians started the week with an 11-8 victory over Gettysburg College, on Monday, April 25. On Wednesday, April 27, the Indians pulled off a classic come-from-behind victory over Indiana University of PA, with the final score reading 11-7. IUP built a commanding 6-2 lead with one run in the first inning, three in the second, and two in the third. They managed to hold that score until the bottom of the fifth inning when John Widener unloaded a three-run homerun to narrow the gap to one run. IUP then answered with a run in the sixth. But the Indians were not to be denied as they again rallied for three runs in the bottom of the inning with the big blow being Carl Pavolic's one-run triple. Juniata finished the day by scoring three more runs in their last two at-bats. Glenn Hineman drove in one run with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the seventh and Dave Murphy drove in the other two runs with a triple in the eighth. Dave Musser started for the Indians and worked six full innings in recording the win. John Summers, entering the game in the seventh inning with the first and second bases occupied and nobody out, stifled that rally and pitched scoreless relief over the remaining two innings to record the save.

On Thursday, April 28, the Indians returned home from an away double-header against Lebanon Valley with a sweep, by scores of 3-1 and 15-4, respectively. In the opener, Bob McDonald, in perhaps his best performance of the year, pitched a five-hitter, recording twelve strikeouts along the way. The Tribe scored their total of runs in the first inning with Tom Shawley's triple driving in two runs and John Widener following with a double to score Shawley. Lebanon Valley's single tally came in the bottom of the sixth inning.

In the second game, Dave Murphy and Jeff Meeker each collected two hits in the opening inning as Juniata sent seventeen men to the plate, scoring thirteen runs. Both Murphy and Meeker finished the game with three hits and two runs-batted-in. Tom Shawley and Glenn Hineman also contributed to the fourteen-hit attack with a pair of singles each. Rich Howey, with much support from the Indians' bats, eased his way to a victory by allowing just four runs in the six innings he pitched. Jim Laphan then came in to record the last three outs of the game.

Overall, Coach Berrier is pleased with the Indians' performance to date. "With the number of inexperienced players we have this year, we've made a lot of inexperienced mistakes. We're very fortunate to be 15-6 right now. However, it is very scary to think that without those mistakes, we could be 21-0."

"Sports Corner"

by Mark Shaw

The major league baseball season has just begun. And, quite surprisingly, Philadelphia and Baltimore are at the top of their divisions. Why is it surprising? Well, both teams are notoriously slow beginners. They usually lose a large percentage of their games in April; then begin to turn around by the middle of May; and by June or July they're in full swing. This year, however, neither team seems to be following its tradition. Both are winning and playing well.

Why have these teams been playing so well? One guess, for the Phillies great start is the line-up changes made during the off-season. Tony Perez and Joe Morgan add experience to the line-up; and, maybe they have ignited the other players by showing that they can still play well at their age. Baltimore, on the other hand, has lost the services of Earl Weaver; but new manager Joe Altebelli is trying very hard to get Baltimore to forget Earl. Somehow, he has ignited his team to one of its best starts ever.

Now, I've been analyzing the situation and I think I've finally figured it out. I think the two teams collaborated over the off-season in a conspiracy against the fans. They got together and decided to give the fans a shock by starting off really well. Personally, I think they've achieved their purpose. I'm shocked, how about you?

Sharks Return to JC for Springfest '83

by Kathy Novak

The Sharks, billed as Central Pennsylvania's best dance band, came to Juniata for a return appearance last Friday, kicking off Springfest '83.

The Sharks are getting to be a familiar face on Juniata's campus. They performed as part of the Winter Week festivities in January, and were asked back to play their brand of danceable rock to an estimated 300 J.C. students in Memorial Gym during Springfest. The group, who have been playing together for about three years, consists of Sam Lugar handling lead vocals and guitars, Steve Zero on guitars, bassist Shea Quinn, and drummer Doug Phillips, all of whom also contribute vocals.

The performance consisted of songs by other recording artists, as well as original material, and the music kept students dancing from beginning to end. The Sharks entertained the crowd with musical renditions from groups such as Generation X, Billy Idol, U2, The Fixx, and several selections from A Flock of Seagulls, to name just a few. They also got the opportunity to prove their own composing abilities in performing such original tunes as "Do You Remember?", "I'm A Bit Touched," and "You Better Watch Her," which elicited well-deserved approval from those in attendance.

The audience also got a preview of the Sharks' latest endeavor, as the guys played the title cut from their forthcoming album, Another Night In Kemo. But even that was not enough to satisfy the crowd, and the band was called back to do an encore. This consisted of yet another Sharks' tune, "(Take Me) Back To The Water," which wrapped up three spectacular sets of modern dance music.

The Sharks displayed the talent that gives them their wide audience appeal. They were entertaining both visually and musically, and packed a lot of energy into the show. Playing at colleges and universities is a rather new experience for the band, but they say they enjoy it, "because we get treated real well, and Juniata's one of those colleges that treats us well."

The group has released two albums and three singles, and is planning to start recording its third LP at the beginning of June, which may be out sometime in July, according to manager John Harris. They also hope to produce a video of the title cut from their new album soon.

The dance was sponsored by Center Board and V103, and if audience response is any indication, there will be a lot of people looking forward to future Shark attacks and recording efforts by one of the best dance bands around.

Juniata Students Receive Honors

In recognition of excellence in a number of diverse academic areas, 32 Juniata College students were honored May 4 during the college's annual Spring Awards Convocation.

President Frederick M. Binder, who presented the awards, noted that the students were being recognized for outstanding academic achievement, leadership and citizenship.

Prior to the awards presentation, Dr. James L. Gooch, professor of biology and Juniata's 1982 Beachley Distinguished Professor, delivered the convocation address.

Clifford R. Thumma, a senior political economy major from Carlisle, received three awards at the Convocation. Thumma was presented with the Dow-Jones Company Award for student achievement, William S. Price Social Science Prize and John M. and Thomas F. Bailey Oratorical Award.

Two scholarships were presented to Ronald F. Renzini of Scranton, a junior marketing and communications major. Renzini received one of two Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation Scholarships for academic and personal achievement. He also was awarded a special merit scholarship established for this year only by the college's Small Business Management Class, with matching funds from the college president.

The Convocation's other award recipients were:

— Patricia A. Kirksey, a sophomore from Wyckoff, N.J., the Victor Kamkin Book Award for excellence in Russian studies;

— Christina W. Corry, a senior from Glenn Mills, and David Hostetter, a senior from Hershey, the Baker Peace Studies Book Award;

— Penny L. Shaffer, a senior from Morgantown, the Accounting Plaque;

— Rocky Sliker, a senior from Glen Gardner, N.J., the Charles M. Rice Accounting Prize for outstanding achievement in accounting;

— Elaine Gruver, a senior from Ebensburg, the Justina Marstellar Langdon Prize, awarded to the senior woman who best exemplifies the spirit of helpfulness in others, gentleness of character and loyal devotion to the college;

— Joseph A. DePra, a senior from Johnstown, the Wilbur W. Oakes Prize for academic achievement in biology, established by Jane B. Swigart of Huntingdon in memory of her cousin, the late physician and surgeon;

— Robin G. Blackburn, a senior from East Freedom, the Raymond R. Day Social Science Prize provided by Dr. Raymond R. Day, a Huntingdon native and Juniata graduate;

— James E. Henry, a senior from Landisburg, the Dr. E.J. Stackpole Prize;

— Richard Fonda, a senior from State College, and Philip Torcivia, a senior from Easton, the Alice G. Blaisdell Prizes in Geology and Mathematics;

— Margaret L. Donahue, a senior from Hershey; David Lacomis, a senior from Dupont; G. Martin Keeney, a senior from Harrisburg; and John G. Kolonich, a senior from Hooversville, each of whom received the Andrew B. and Maria F. Brumbaugh Science Prizes;

— Lisa M. Ellek, a senior from McKees Rocks, the John R. and Emma G. Wald Humanities Prize;

— James G. Adams, a junior

Athletes Receive Awards

Student-athlete Keith Fox of Hagerstown, MD, became the 37th recipient of the Stanford Mickle Award in a special awards convocation on Juniata's campus in Huntingdon, PA, on May 4.

The Mickle award is given annually to a senior man for leadership in Indian sports and contributions to Juniata's overall athletic program including intramurals and athletic administration.

Fox has been a member of the Juniata soccer team and played in the number one spot for the past two years for the Juniata tennis team. During his senior year he served as the president of the student government.

Andrew Pearson of Oxford, Ohio, a member of the college's cross country team received the John E. Blood Memorial Award as the outstanding senior student athlete and Nancy Roach of Johnstown received the Charles Barger-

Springfest — When Was It?

This past weekend was Springfest — or was it?

Well, the fact is that Juniata College's Springfest consisted of a dance/concert on Friday night (beginning at 10:00) and ended at 6:00 the following Saturday.

For those of you who went home this past weekend, or those of you who were on campus but still missed the weekend's festive activities, perhaps a recap is in order.

Let's see, Springfest began with the Sharks concert on Friday night. They performed extremely well throughout their three set act, even for the 50 people on hand for their last set. Why didn't more people come to see the Sharks perform? Could it be the quality of the band or the price of the ticket?

The Juniatian believes not. Instead, it was the poor weekend scheduling that Centerboard had devised for Springfest. Just as a strong television show leads in for another show of lower viewer ratings, the Sharks could have been used that way.

But NO! Instead, Saturday was filled with an afternoon of activities that started at 1:00 and ended at 6:00. These activities included a Victorian photographer, a funnel cake booth, and a gold-fish toss booth (seriously). For musical entertainment, songs were performed by Kauffman and Clark. Saturday night was forgotten — left unscheduled by the Springfest committee.

No wonder students left for home and other colleges this past weekend. The dance is one we could get any time of the year and gold-fish tossing has never been high on the list of priorities for why a student remains on campus.

The Juniatian realizes that Centerboard cannot get bands such as Robert Hazard to perform at our Springfest weekends, but at least give the students of Juniata a weekend.

This year's activities consisted of 9 hours of activities. To our knowledge, a weekend consists of at least 24 hours of activities.

The Juniatian knows this had to be Springfest weekend, it was listed in the pathfinder right next to the Spring Play (p. 23).

This year is over, but it is hoped that Centerboard in the years to come will program Springfest events aimed at an entire student body, for an entire weekend. Obviously, it did not occur this year.

My apologies Juniata. I had envisioned my final column differently from the finished product presented here. I had wanted to write a profound summation of the four years minus a term that I have spent wedged in these inviting but unyielding PA hills. Alas, the end of term crush has left my mind bereft of much profound or positive to say about these ivied walls. (Well, the stuff grows on Founders at least. Maybe folks could paint some on the other buildings as part of next year's dorm competition. No? Oh well.)

So, what I have to say here is connected to wunnerful Wanita in the universal sense only. Last weekend I was strolling through Central Park in NYC and happened upon the main meadow where the big disarmament rally was held last June. I happened to be one of the 750,000 plus people that gathered there to voice their feelings about the arms race. At one point during the rally hundreds of balloons were released as a symbol. I can't remember precisely what it was supposed to symbolize, but when I looked at my snapshots (which I finally had developed last week) I came up with an idea of what it meant to me. Here goes.

June 12 Remembered

The meadow now is dotted with ball players and frisbee throwers.
But on June 12 it was packed, solid people from side to side.

All of us there, so many that no spot was bare.
All of us together, wanting the same thing. Peace.

For peace, and the future, we threw our balloons at the clouds, at war. Into the sky the scores of

Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Dear Editor:

I consider myself to be one of the foremost champions of freedom of speech and expression of opinion and accept criticism in the hopes of improving myself. When the criticism is both unconstructive and unfounded, however, I must protest. As was pointed out to me by Mr. Schwartz in his "letter to the editor" of April 28, I am "gossipy" and perhaps, "afraid to transcend . . . into a slightly intellectual realm."

I, in turn, would like to point out to Mr. Schwartz that according to Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, "gossip" is "a rumor or report of an intimate nature." The word "rumor" suggests "a statement or report current without known authority for its truth." "Intimate" means "marked by very close association, contact, or familiarity." Since I have never so much as met Mr. Schwartz, I question what he bases his accusations upon.

While I am honored that Mr. Schwartz does agree that "it is aggravating to find that the library doesn't have a book, newspaper, or magazine that you need to write a paper," I feel he missed this point in my column.

If Mr. Schwartz was vehemently outraged enough to write a letter, then I sincerely apologize for my offenses. Words such as "apparently" and "I think" do not make for "reliable information sources" either, though, Mr. Schwartz. In addition, since I consider "gossipy" to be of my "deepest nature," I would suggest that Mr. Schwartz reread the definitions of the terms he used, and then decide who is "gossipy." Since my subscription to Newsweek expired over two years ago, I have transcended . . . I read the dictionary.

Sincerely,
Lisa Ellek

To the Editor,

"Juniata's boring and there's nothing to do in Huntingdon." How many times have you heard or said it? Granted, Juniata and Huntingdon are both small, but that doesn't mean that they have to be boring.

Take "there's nothing to do in Huntingdon" first. I haven't yet determined if it is because of ignorance or laziness that people decide to stay on campus and bitch, but for whatever reason, people continue to do it. In addition, anyone who dares to say anything good about the area is examined for a fever. To those of you whose idea of Huntingdon is Sheetz, Rudie's, OIP, Max's, and the State Store, I guess Huntingdon is dull, that's not much of a life. Having lived out of town last year and at Hess this year, I guess I have a different attitude than most. Through living at Hess especially, I've met a number of "townies" who are great.

But you say "I don't care about the townies, what else is there?" How about the 8,300 acres of Raystown Lake, thousands of acres available for public hunting, fishing, and hiking, the cliffs, walking along the RR tracks, the county library (where you can find "normal" reading and getting a borrower's card is free), the student discounts at the downtown stores, The Book Store at the Rt. 22 Plaza (which has more magazines than I've seen anywhere), two year-round theatres and one drive-in movie theatre, Lincoln Caverns, the roller skating rink, breakfast at Grubb's diner, the amazing

by Dave Lehmann

Recently, while Tom Shawley and I were pondering our freshman year, Tom blurted out, "Nothing's really changed since then. The campus has changed a little, but we're the same."

I thought about this for a couple of minutes and answered, "Something has changed: our expectations. I came to college to become more intelligent and to make it easier to find a job. Now, I'm about to graduate and realize that despite one having a college diploma, jobs are still tough to come by. Even worse though, I feel less intelligent than when I came here."

This second point scares me. I came to Juniata sure of a number of things and expected to leave sure of a great many more, but what I've really learned in college is that I don't know much. I go into class every day hoping to learn to understand some of the mysteries of the universe and stumble out either unable to understand them or with the knowledge that the mystery I had prepared for had been gone over a week ago — the day I had overslept. If I can't even write a computer program — which I often can't — how am I ever going to grasp important issues? A computer is a perfect machine; one tells it what to do and it does it. Unfortunately, I never know what to tell the computer except when my programs won't run, and that's the one thing a computer can't do.

I feel less efficient with even the simplest tasks since coming here. For some reason or another, they all get put off too long. I remember the embarrassment of being called into Jack Linety's office earlier this year for forgetting to return my key to Mission House from the previous year. Actually, what really happened was I forgot to pick-up my key last fall, and I spent all of last year having my roommates letting me into my own apartment instead of going to the housing office to pick up my key.

Education reacts inversely with my mind; the more time that I spend in a learning environment, the more of a bumbling idiot I become. This August, I head for grad school. Sadly, I realize that before I'm done there, I will have regressed to a three year old's mentality.

Job Market Weak

by David Gaede

(CPS) — Despite some encouraging signs that the nation's economy may be starting to pull out of the worst American recession since World War II, the recovery has yet to show up on campus, and probably won't in time to help this spring's graduates find jobs right away, college placement officers say.

In fact, campus recruiting and the number of job offers to graduating seniors are down again this spring, while experts say starting salaries are lagging behind even the declining inflation rate.

Even engineers and computer science majors, who generally have had their pick of jobs in recent years, are having more trouble getting work this spring, the officers add.

"Last year was a tough year, and this year's going to be even worse," warns Victor Lindquist, placement chief at Northwestern University and director of the Endicott Report, an annual survey of job prospects for college grads nationwide.

"Companies keep waiting for this recovery that the president's trying to jawbone into place, but it may be a long time in coming," he predicts.

Back in January, the Endicott Report forecasted American business would offer the Class of '83 11 percent fewer jobs than it did the Class of '82.

"Now," Lindquist says, "it's even worse than we thought."

"For the Class of '83, it'll be the toughest year since World War II," adds Jack Shingleton, Michigan State's placement director and coordinator of that school's annual national student job survey.

Other campus placement directors report spring recruitment is off as much as 50 percent from last year's depressed levels.

Consequently, the summer job market will be more crowded than ever, with fewer jobs available as companies continue to delay hiring new employees.

"There'll be 1,300,000 students graduating this spring," Shingleton points out. "There'll be a million jobs open."

Overall, Michigan State thinks students with bachelor's degrees will get 17 percent fewer job offers than a year ago.

Liberal arts majors will have the hardest time finding work, Shingleton's study found.

Things are better for electrical engineers, computer science, busi-

Students Perform Classics

Music by Bach, Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, Brahms and others will be performed Wednesday, May 18 as Juniata College music students present a free recital.

The 8:15 p.m. concert will be held in Oller Hall and the public is cordially invited. Students will perform on the piano, harpsichord, clarinet, flute, guitar and organ.

All of the participants are students of Mary Ruth Linton, associate professor of music and department chairman, Ibrook Tower, associate professor of music, or Diane Gold, Bruce Schettig, Terry Murray, Patricia Lloyd and Katsuko Ochiai, all instructional assistants in music.

Off, Off, Broadway

by Rod Keller

This past weekend, Oller Auditorium hosted The Corn is Green, a student production under the direction of Luise Van Keuren. The show was written by Emlyn Williams, and is a somewhat autobiographical account of Williams' life.

It deals with the story of an educated woman who attempts to start a school for the children in a Welsh mining village. She meets with strong resistance from the townspeople, particularly those who have money invested in the mine, since most of the boys work there from the time they are 12. Just when she is about to give up, she meets a young boy who is very bright, and the bulk of the play deals with her attempt to get this boy a scholarship to Oxford University.

The Corn is Green is one of the better student productions of the last few years. Wendy Whitehaus and David Merwine both gave excellent performances with other notables being Karen Brown, Sharon Dotts and Jocelyn Fowler. Jim Henry, a Juniata theatre regular, also did a fine job as Bonario, or was it Count, King or Squire? Well anyway, he did do a good job, but it would have been nice to see him try something different at least once before he graduated.

Perhaps one of the weaker performances was put in by John Molcan as Mr. Jones. One was never quite sure what his character was supposed to be or why he was doing what he did. The only other complaints anyone could make about the show was that it got too wordy towards the end. But this was no fault of the actors, and overall, The Corn is Green must be considered a step in the right direction for Juniata theatre.

Army Grants Increase

by Carson Reed

LAFAYETTE, IN (CPS) — The vision of one of the nation's most eligible seniors forsaking private industry — or anything else — for the military would have been improbable in years past. This year, however, the armed forces are cleaning up among college students.

ROTC (Reserve Officers Training Corps) enrollment has been creeping upward for years, but this year has spurted higher and faster again.

"Along with the rise in enrollments, there has been a fast rise in the number of ROTC scholarships — very fast," reports Army ROTC spokesman Wesley Williams. Indeed, the number has almost doubled since the 1979-80 school year.

Students Visit NYC

Attend U.N. Briefings

by Rob Riefler

New York City was visited last week by 39 Juniata students on a trip sponsored by the Committee on International Affairs.

Students left for the city after dinner Wednesday. The chartered bus ride from Huntingdon to New York took about six hours. The group arrived at the Times Square Motor Hotel, on 43 Street, at midnight.

On Thursday morning, students met at the United Nations for a guided tour, followed by several briefings on South African affairs. The first guest speaker, a woman representing the Commission on Namibia, was from the Department of Decolonization. She outlined the basic issue: South Africa wants to continue to control Namibia's resources, and thus control them socially. Namibia, wishing to be independent, seeks support from SWAPO, a controversial underground liberation group.

The second conference featured a woman from the Center of Apartheid. She conducted a discussion on legalized segregation in South Africa. The next guest, SWAPO's Deputy Minister, spoke on the policies and goals of SWAPO. The final briefing of the day featured Anne Miroux, representing transnational corporations in South Africa.

On Friday, students began the day by viewing a film on the living conditions in Namibia. Then they left the U.N. and travelled down the street a few blocks to discuss Namibia with a member of the African National Congress. After picking up posters given out by the ANC, students headed back to the U.N.

An amusing sideline here involves freshmen Kay Shellenberger and Kellie Smith. They were separated from the group on the way back to the U.N. Upon entering the U.N., the security asked to see the posters they were holding. When he discovered they were propaganda posters from the ANC, he insisted that the two ladies check the posters in the coatcheck room before going any further.

Additionally, Miss Smith failed the metal detector test due to a bottle of Tab she had placed in her pocketbook earlier. This called for a thorough search of her pocketbook by the guard. By then, the two ladies were so late for the next briefing that they were required to go to the information desk to get a late pass allowing admittance to the Conference Hall.

The third briefing of the day was by a member of the South African delegation, the first of the speakers to take a stand against independence for Namibia. He evoked great student response; the conference ran half an hour overtime. Rounding out the day's events was a trip downtown to speak with a member of the Africa Fund, a U.S. based organization.

Evenings were free, and most students spent them visiting restaurants, bars, and shops, or seeing shows such as "Amadeus," "Porgy and Bess," and "Evita." Shopping was the favorite pastime on Saturday afternoon.

The weather was sunny and warm all three days in New York. The bus left the city shortly after 5:00, and students arrived back at school at 11:30. The cost of the trip was an inexpensive $20, including transportation and lodging.

PACS Scholarship Available

The Peace and Conflict Studies Committee has available, through its Baker Scholarship Fund, one or possibly two non-renewable $500.00 merit scholarships for current freshmen.

To be considered, students must have evidenced interest in PACS through the taking of one or more PACS courses, and must have a cumulative GPA of 3.0. To keep the scholarship, students must take the equivalent of one PACS course per year, participate in PACS programs, and maintain a 3.0 GPA.

To apply, students should submit a statement to Prof. Mulvaney by Tuesday, May 17, 1983, outlining why they feel they are qualified for the award.

Prof Goes Abroad

by Jim Biles

Sandy McBride and his wife Kim Richardson will both leave Juniata next year to work with the Brethren Colleges Abroad Program in Cheltenham, England.

McBride, Juniata's art professor, and Ms. Richardson, a professor of education will take sabbaticals next year. While his wife will be very active with the BCA Program, McBride plans to help when needed and take a long, hard look at his painting. He feels that away from the pressures of teaching he will be able to better understand his paintings. He wants to be able to "look at his paintings on a grander scale."

With his roots in Britain, specifically in Scotland, McBride is looking forward to returning. While he is away, the college is planning to hire a teacher to handle his photography classes, but they are not planning to schedule any painting classes. McBride will resume his duties when he returns from England.

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1970, McBride holds a B.F.A. from the Rhode Island School of Design and an M.F.A. from Cornell University. Ms. Richardson joined the faculty in 1979 and holds a B.A. from Duke University, an M.S. from Old Dominion University and a Ph.D. from Temple University.

News Briefs

Damascus, Syria — Lebanon approved and Israel accepted in principle the draft agreement for early Israeli and Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon that Secretary of State George P. Shultz presented last week while in the Middle East. The Syrians, however, appear to object to the agreement. They are "hardly enthusiastic about the agreement," according to Mr. Shultz. Negotiations to bring about Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon will begin when Lebanese officials arrive in Damascus with a copy of the agreement. Mr. Shultz feels that the negotiations will be very difficult.

— Intelligence sources from NATO and neutral countries have concluded, despite denials from Moscow, that the Soviets have been intruding in Swedish and Norwegian waters. The conclusion follows sightings of submarines off Sweden and Norway coasts in the last eight months. The intelligence sources believe that the Soviets were testing the abilities of some of their new submarines and the effectiveness of the Scandinavian navy's ability to detect and combat submarines. The sightings have brought up questions about antisubmarine warfare and the expansion of Soviet undersea forces.

Wittenberg, East Germany — Martin Luther is being lionized this year in a gesture of rehabilitation by the atheistic East German leadership. After being denied honor and referred to as a lackey of reactionary 16th century princes and an enemy of the people by the German Marxists and Communists, the father of the Protestant Reformation is finally being embraced and accepted in the year of the 500th anniversary of his birth. In April, the East German Communist leader, Erich Honecker, declared it a "noble duty" for their socialist state to care for the inheritance of the German people. Wartberg Castle, where Luther completed his New Testament translation and hid from persecutors, is now regarded as a "landmark of German history" and citizens are encouraged to visit there to strengthen their national feelings. Events marking Luther's lionization include ceremonies, sermons, speeches, films, books and commemorative stamps.

Bonn — The West German magazine Stern's two chief editors announced their resignation Saturday after the statement by the Interior Ministry that the documents the magazine presented as lost diaries of Hitler were forgeries. The two editors resigned because they failed to discover the forgery before the first installment of the reported diaries was published. West German newspapers criticized the Stern today of negligent research, noting that in a few days state supervised laboratory tests proved the paper and bindings of the supposed diaries to be of the post-war period.

Washington — The names of the 13 American diplomats killed April 18 in the US Embassy bombing in Beirut have been etched on a memorial to diplomats killed in the line of duty. The memorial, in green marble, was unveiled by Acting Secretary of State, Kenneth W. Dan, in the diplomatic lobby at the State Department.

clutter of Mark's Corner Store, and the view from the flagpole behind J.C. Blair hospital for starters? You might even try church sometime — you could be pleasantly surprised.

"OK, maybe Huntingdon has more going for it than I thought, but Juniata's still boring." What makes anyone say that is beyond me. Besides the usual college sports, we have Trap & Skeet, Judo, and Rugby. We've got organizations for the yearbook, amateur radio operators, spelunkers, and young Republicans. We have a chorus and band, societies for many different majors — from JEC for business to the Barrister's Club for pre-law, we even run a radio station and a newspaper. Student government, SNAP, Centerboard, KVASIR, and Laughing Bush provide outlets for us. The Artist Series and the Baker lectures expose us to culture and make us think. Even if there isn't a current organization or activity for what you want to do or see, you always have the opportunity to start one.

The downtown merchants who offer the student discounts and the people who take the continuing ed. classes are a credit to the community, and those students who are on the fire company are a credit to the school; but why aren't there more?

Juniata and the Huntingdon area are rich in chances to experience things you may never be able to do once you graduate, but you have to take the first step — you have to want to do something.

Before you complain about nothing to do, look at what you've done to make a difference. When all you can see is the end of your own nose, it's tough to please anyone.

Sincerely,
Greg Law

love bombs flew, to explode in the hearts of those who trust in hate.

Gays and blacks, lesbians and Presbyterians.
Jews and drunks and kids and Krishnas.
People. Together under gray skys, launching an attack of love on hate, of hope on despair.
With balloons.

On June 12 in that park
we listened and sang and cheered and danced.
For peace. All of us there,
together.

Nearly a year has passed now.
It sometimes seems that our balloons have yet to reach their mark.
Or have they hit already? The meadow is still there. People do care.

Will the love bombs hit before the missiles do?

It's not too late, but it's up to us.
All of us
Together.

What are STDs? They are a class of diseases which are usually spread during sexual activity. Because immunity cannot be built up and there is no vaccination against them, they can be recurrent and have serious and permanent consequences. STDs are spreading rapidly because sexual activity is increasing, especially among young people. Often there is no awareness of the diseases, so symptoms are ignored, partners are not informed, and the diseases are spread. Eighty-five percent of the cases involve people between the ages of 15 and 30, and more than 10 million Americans are infected each year.

Gonorrhea is the most commonly reported STD. It is caused by the Neisseria Gonorrheae bacteria and is transmitted during sexual contact. It cannot be picked up from toilet seats, towels, etc. Symptoms do not always occur. If they do, they appear three days to three weeks after contact with the infected partner. In males and females, symptoms may include pain and burning during urination, and discharge. Diagnosis requires a physical examination as well as laboratory examination of secretions. Antibiotics are safe and effective.

Syphilis is one of the most dangerous STDs. It is caused by the Treponema Pallidum microscopic organism and is almost always transmitted by sexual contact. However, it can also be spread by skin contact if skin is broken or cut. Symptoms eventually disappear but serious consequences can result if untreated. In the first stage, 1 to 12 weeks after contact, a reddish bump (chancre sore) forms where the organism entered the body. It lasts 1 to 5 weeks, and is painless. 1 to 6 months after contact, second stage, a rash on chest, back, arms and legs may appear with lymph gland enlargement, fever and sore throat. In the third stage, 3 or more years after contact, there may be ulcers on the skin, arthritis, and pain and disability due to damage of heart, blood vessels, and/or brain and spinal cord. Diagnosis includes a physical examination, and laboratory examination of blood samples, and exudate from chancre sores. Penicillin therapy eradicates syphilis.

Herpes is any of several diseases that are caused by viruses. Five types of herpes virus can affect humans, including those causing chicken pox, infectious mononucleosis, fever blisters, and shingles. However, the major herpes problem today is caused by the Herpes Simplex virus of which there are two types. Type I, called oral herpes, affects the lips, mouth, and occasionally the eyes. The other type is Type II, or genital herpes. Both types cause sores in the affected area. Even after the sores subside, the virus stays in the ganglia (group of nerve cells) near the brain (type I), or near the base of the spine (type II). Genital herpes is almost always transmitted by sexual contact, but there is some evidence that the herpes viruses can live for many hours on toilet seats, towels, and clothing. However, it is not believed that the transmission of herpes in this manner is likely. Symptoms for Herpes II include painful, blister-like, itching sores in 2 to 20 days after time of infection and lasting 2 to 3 weeks. Also present may be swollen glands, muscular aches, fever, pain and burning on urination, and headache. Diagnosis is made by examination of genital lesions, and may be confirmed by laboratory studies. The average frequency of episodes is three or four times a year. However, many people never have another episode, some have them regularly, and others rarely.

Herpes II is not life threatening, and it will not interfere with most of your usual activity, but it is imperative that medical advice be obtained if herpes is suspected. Information on how to care for yourself and avoid infecting others is the major concern. Treatment using a glucose derivative is now being tested, but there is no proven cure.

There are many other STDs, some more serious than others, but all require medical attention. Almost all can be cured. If you suspect you have an STD, get help immediately! Health professionals respect your confidentiality and want to help. Your personal physician, STD clinic, community health agencies, hospitals, and school health services are all available to you. There is also a national hotline (800-227-8922). If you have a diagnosed STD, tell your partner(s) and follow physician's instructions. The ultimate answer to the STD problem is PREVENTION!

Army ROTC

more than expected — took Army aid in 1982.

"We've come of age," exults Navy Recruiting Command Lt. Barton Buechner. "All of our recruiters are getting a much better reception on campus."

"You don't have the 'anti' people on campus anymore," agrees Kansas State ROTC Lt. Col. Don McCann.

"When I go on campus (to recruit) now, I'm on equal footing with Lockheed or anybody," adds Lt. Rich High, a Navy recruiter in Denver. "In fact, for sophomores and juniors, I can make promises that they can't. I can start giving a student money right away, before he graduates."

"The economy is certainly a factor," says Lt. Tom Wyld of the Navy's College Recruiting Command in Washington, D.C. "I think the Navy is more and more an employer of first resort, rather than an employer of last resort."

Army ROTC at Yale fell from five students to none this school year. Schools as diverse as Cal State-Fullerton and Fort Lewis College in Colorado formally have turned away efforts to re-establish ROTC on their campuses. Harvard administrators are resolutely opposing efforts to start even a "Friends of ROTC Club" at the school.

"I'm a refugee from a fascist country, so maybe I'm more sensitive to this kind of thing," explains Vera Simone, a political science professor who helped block ROTC at Cal State-Fullerton recently.

She believes "there is an insidious effect on people just by having them around. I worry about xenophobia. I worry about student attitudes. The growth of the military must be checked. By the time they've already grown, it's difficult to do anything about it."

The growth is continuing, however.

The number of ROTC "post institutions" has grown from 275 in 1979-80 to 303 in 1981-82 and 315 this year, reports P.I. Officer Robert Wallace of Army ROTC's media office.

"That's the highest number of post institutions that I've seen in 16 years," he says. Although there were more students involved in the program back in 1966, he points out, many schools required students to enroll in ROTC in those days.

ness and other engineering grads, in that order.

But there are still 12 percent fewer engineering positions available this year than last year, the College Placement Council says.

Similarly, even schools that are faring relatively well this spring are in terrible shape.

"Our recruitment is down about 25 percent, and we're one of the fortunate ones," Lindquist says.

At New Mexico State University, the number of employers recruiting on campus is down a whopping 44 percent, placement Director Steven Salway says.

Company after company canceled recruiting visits, leaving seniors' job search nothing short of "horrendous," he says.

Twenty-five percent of the firms scheduled to interview at Kentucky this spring canceled because they "just aren't recruiting in order to save money," Drema Howard, UK's associate placement director, says.

Alcoa Aluminum, Schlumberger Services and Dow Chemical, among others, canceled their Kentucky visits. Others — including big employers like Exxon, Union Carbide, Ashland Oil and Armco — have cut back the number of interviews they grant students, Howard adds.

"We'll be hiring considerably less this year," says Phil DeLong, spokesman for American Telephone and Telegraph's college recruitment division. "Partly because of the economy, and partly because of our divestiture proceedings, we're taking a cautious, wait-and-see attitude."

"And with fewer recruiters and fewer offers being made, many placement directors have noted that students are accepting the first or second offer they receive," observes Linda Pengilly with the College Placement Council.

"And salary offers are not increasing like they were several years ago," she adds. "For the last few years we saw salaries increasing by eight-to-ten percent a year. This year they've gone up only one-to-two percent."

Few experts, moreover, expect things to improve greatly in the near future.

"And for every one company that may be hiring a few more people this year, there are ten who are cutting back."

Even if the recovery begins to whittle away at the unemployment rate, adds Michigan State's Shingleton, "the blue collar workers will be brought back first. Then there'll be a considerable lag before companies start hiring white collar people."

The Mess Express Rolls

Men's

by Paul J. Kardish

The weather has started to clear and it has finally given this reporter something to report. Action in the Blue flight has been intense and as predicted there are a few teams challenging for the lead. Emerging at the top of the division are the teams Fall Us and Way Way Off Campus. Both of these clubs are sporting 3-0 marks. Way Way Off Campus is coming off an impressive victory over King A and the Exs, who are currently in second place. King A and the Exs endured a rigorous week of 4 games and came out with a 3-1 record. The Pigeons II are currently residing in fourth spot with an uncharacteristic 2-2 mark. A note of interest to the rest of the teams in the league is that Pat Snatchers have been tossed out of the league as of May 9. This should open up another coveted playoff spot for the Snatchers were almost assured one.

In the other division, the Mess Express is tearing up the league. They have gone through their first 4 games with an unblemished 4-0 record. This is undoubtedly due to the leadership and inspiration of the Mess himself, Mike Appleby. Two teams with identical 2-1 records are challenging for second place. These teams are The Schlongs and P.F.C. and Company. Last Chance has encountered some rough games, and, not being a rainy weather team, they have fallen to a 1-2 mark. Look for their record to improve with the help of former Juniata baseball legend, Gerry Crowley.

Teams can expect to be playing many games as the days pass by, as the I.M. department looks to fit the remaining rained-out contests into the few days left in the term. The playoffs are soon to come.

Co-Rec

by Tracey Catanese

In Co-rec Softball action last week, Victor's Vibrations earned a come-from-behind victory over Spring Fever, 14-13.

Spring Fever started strong as Scott Taylor doubled and was brought home by Cindy Corle's double down the third-base line. Lauren Hill then picked up an RBI as she singled to score Corle. Victor's Vibrations managed only one run for the inning as Lisa Hocker scored on a sacrifice fly by Patty Renwick.

The third inning was a partial repeat of the first for the Fever as Taylor doubled and then scored on a Corle single. Corle, as SF's pitcher, relieved the Vibrations 3 in a row to keep the score at SF 3 — VV 1.

The fourth inning went well for VV as they connected at the plate. Paul Bomberger doubled and picked up an RBI as Jeff Nicholas scored. With 2 players in scoring position, Bomberger on second and Sondra Shrade on third, Deb Cosper singled, and earned 2 RBIs as both teammates scored. Burgan again connected to deep center field for a double and moved Cosper to third. Esther Campher replaced Kathy Manzella in the batting order and sacrificed to score Cosper. The score was tied at 5-5 at the end of four.

Spring Fever scored 4 runs in the fifth inning, but not nearly enough to surpass the 8 scored by Victor's Vibrations. Corle again connected for a double and scored on a Challenger sacrifice. Hill, who was on third, and DiMatteo, on second, scored as Wendy Silcox reached base on a fielding error. Silcox scored on another fielding error. The top half of the inning ended with the bases loaded, Kraus on third, Amy Dubois on second and Brango on first, as Denise Avis hit a fly to shallow center field.

For the Vibrations, Renwick started the scoring with a triple on which Jim Merola scored. Renwick then scored as Nicholas reached first on a Taylor error. Shrade connected a nice hit through short and into the outfield for a double which sent Nicholas to third. Bomberger then earned 3 RBIs as he cleared the bases with a 2-strike homerun to deep center. With only one out, Cosper, Burgan and Campher loaded the bases. Scott Chaffee sacrificed to score Cosper and Hocker doubled to score Burgan and Campher. The score now stood at 13-9.

SF, apparently upset by falling behind, fought back to score 4 additional runs in the sixth inning. Taylor led off the inning with a single up the third-base line, followed by a Corle single to the same place. Taylor scored on a Challenger single. Then Hill earned 2 RBIs with a hit past second base which enabled Corle and Challenger to score. SF lost momentum as their next two batters were retired, but Kraus singled to center to score Hill. The score was tied, but the inning was over as Dubois hit a fly to shortstop Burgan.

SF was unsuccessful in holding VV for a seventh inning as they were again plagued with fielding errors. With Renwick on second by an error, Nicholas hit a fly to Taylor in deep center, which advanced Renwick to third. The game was then ended as Shrade connected to left field to score Renwick.

Murphy controlled the serve for the 4 points needed for victory.

The second game was completely controlled by the French Curves. It appeared as though T&A could do nothing right. Murphy started the scoring for the French Curves as they took a 3-0 lead.

Then, Nancy Fieldman took control of the game, serving for 7 points as the French Curves took a commanding 10-0 lead. The score was 13-0 when T&A finally got onto the scoreboard with Carol Johnson serving. But, there was to be no comeback as Murphy, once again, finished the game off.

In other action on Sunday, Last Chance defeated Tussey Terrors 15-8, 15-3; The Bop & Grooves defeated The Volley Girls 8-15, 15-4, 15-13 and Apraxia defeated Awesome Forces II by forfeit.

In Wednesday's action, Last Chance defeated T&A 15-3, 15-10 and Apraxia and U-ho won by forfeits over The Bop & Groves and The French Curves.

by Mark Shaw

This past week saw the occurrence of one of the greatest sports events of the season. No, it wasn't the Kentucky Derby; nor was it the Sixers two-point victory in overtime.

This great sports event of which I speak is the powderpuff football competition between the classes. The winner gets the bragging rights of who is the toughest. The loser gets to go home and complain about the bruises they got from playing the stupid game.

The rules of the game are quite simple: do anything you can as long as you can get away with it. But really now, there were real rules. For example, you weren't allowed to tackle the players with the ball; you were supposed to grab their flag and rip it out. Unfortunately, however, I think someone glued some of the flags in; half the time, when a girl's flag was pulled, she came right along with it. But hey, once they got used to it, there weren't many complaints. Plus, the coaches caught on and told the players to grab the flag, then tackle them (at least you could say you were trying for the flag).

The first game was played on Wednesday night. It pitted the sophomores against last year's champions, the Seniors. The game promised to be a tough fight for both teams. For a while, it appeared as though the seniors wouldn't be able to field a team, but the sophomores were not about to be given an easy victory. The seniors jumped to an early commanding lead; they led by 19 points at halftime. But, the sophomores regrouped and fiercely came out to the second half. The sophomores were within a touchdown of the seniors when they scored their final touchdown to take the lead with 45 seconds left in the game. The sophomores held on for victory, winning 26-25. They moved on to the finals.

The sophomores were to play the winner of the Junior-Freshmen contest. The Juniors, under the direction of Hank Coyne, had practiced for two days. (We knew the freshmen would be tough — our scouting reports told us they had size and speed advantage.)

The juniors started off poorly as the freshmen unexpectedly came out charging. They tallied 2 quick touchdowns; and the juniors found themselves in a bind. The juniors then buckled down; but it seemed like everytime we scored, they answered with a score of their own. They defeated us 22-12. (Sorry guys, I'm not about to play up a junior defeat — it's against my character.)

Anyway, the stage was set. The game was supposed to be Saturday, but nobody could make it. So, it was moved to Monday night (which really messed up my schedule — layout is Monday night). I was also given the pleasure of being a referee; a job I had last year (I should have learned — only kidding).

The sophomores scored first as Peggy Evans scored up the middle; the extra point was good, 7-0. However, the game belonged to the freshmen from here on out. Mary Moynihan scored the tying touchdown. Then the Karen "Cheese" Fonner-Stephanie Porter connection took over. The pain resulted in three passing touchdowns. The freshmen air attack was just awesome. The sophomores could not stop them. The freshmen became this year's champs, by the score of 27-13.

So, I guess it's congratulations to the freshmen; even though I think they were in a secret weight training program (only kidding).

Angler's Angle

fish; try each until the fish indicate their preference. The angler must remember that fish are going to hit what they want, not necessarily what the angler wants to throw.

Stripers also may be beginning to cooperate. Jack Linety took six last week using shallow running plugs and Monday Mike Vasalan took a fat six pounder on a — you guessed it — shallow running plug. Mike, along with Jeff Powell and Gino Perri are also doing fairly well with largemouths.

Best bet for trout (if the rain ever stops) is the Little Juniata. If using spinning tackle, don't be afraid to use large lures. One gentleman that I talked to, who works at the tackle shop at Spruce Creek, says that he often takes large trout on plugs up to six inches.

Men's Lacrosse

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Men's Lacrosse team lost to the Penn State Men's Lacrosse team 17-3 on Saturday, May 7.

Penn State totally dominated the 1st quarter of play. Their first goal came shortly after the start of the game on a shot from about 15 yards out. Penn State then proceeded to sure fire more goals, making it 6-0 Penn State after the first quarter.

Juniata had some problems on defense as Penn State continually penetrated the middle lane. The offense was also having its problems as they tried to charge up the middle; but, Penn State's defense always succeeded in frustrating the Juniata stickers.

In the second quarter, Juniata began to put things together. They were playing much more aggressively and began to play their kind of game. On defense, Hank Coyne and Barry Miller made some fine plays while Jack Sturgeon made a couple of excellent saves as goaltender.

Dave Wagner started to get the offense organized as they began to try the outside lanes. About 4 minutes into the 2nd quarter, Juniata got onto the scoreboard on a goal by Joe Soule. That goal made the score 6-1 Penn State.

Suddenly, however, Penn State erupted with 4 unanswered goals. Juniata let down for a few moments and paid for it. Juniata then scored near the end of the second quarter as Mike Lang put one in to make it 10-2, Penn State.

After the 1st half, Penn State completely dominated the game. Their accurate passing was just too much for Juniata to handle. Juniata, however, did get the last goal of the game as Soule scored his second goal.

The Penn State game was the team's third game this season. The two others, against Dickinson and Millersville also resulted in losses. The Indians had 3 other games scheduled but due to bad weather, they were cancelled.

The Men's Lacrosse team was begun last year by Jay Kochiss, who presently heads the club. Being without a formal coach, the experienced players try to teach the inexperienced players the finer points of the game.

For next year, the Indians already have 2 home games scheduled.

Angler's Angle

by Dave Lehmann

Bass are heading for the shallows of Raystown. Despite the colder than average water temperatures, bass are preparing their beds for the spawn. The females are fat with eggs, while the males — which seldom grow to over a pound and a half — have the characteristic worn down tail from fanning away gravel to make the spawning beds.

Now is the best time to catch lunkers. The bass are going to gorge themselves one last time before spawning. Once on their beds, spawning bass seldom eat. However, even then fish can be caught by working a plastic worm very slowly across beds. The bass see the worm as an intruder and will pick it up to remove it from spawning beds.

Catching the pre-spawn lunkers is based primarily on finding the fish. Once the fish are located, usually some can be enticed to strike. Bass seem to be congregating in five to twelve feet of water. Look for obstructions in the water that provide cover for the fish; submerged tree stumps, rock ledges and stream channels all may hide bass. Often if small bass are seen around a particular type of cover, larger fish will be near similar cover in deeper water. Plastic worms, crankbaits, and spinnerbaits each take their toll of

V-ball Playoffs Nearing

Co-Rec

by Mark Royer

On Monday night, the Hula-Hula Boys II dropped an intense match to their Yellow Flight rivals, the Chokers. As play began, the Chokers had only four players on the floor and were down 5-0 by the time the rest of their team arrived. They didn't manage any better during the next few points but they finally got warmed up and pulled within striking distance, down 14-10. After neither team had scored for several services, Tonya Snyder served up four points to tie up the game. After a few more volleys back and forth, captain Steve Whiteley iced the game for the Chokers. The final score: 16-14.

Throughout the match The Hula-Hulas questioned the legality of many returns by Mark (Spike?) Rucinski. The ref was convinced that the returns were legal and so the games went on. Steve Whiteley got the Chokers rolling in the second game with five quick points. He had some help from Rucinski who was in the front row. The Hula-Hulas didn't give up though, they pulled in front 12-7 behind the inspired play of Jay Hinish and Tina Tweardy. But the Chokers came from behind again and it was Steve Whiteley serving the final 7 points to end the hopes of the Hulas. The Chokers are now 3-1. The Hulas were not pleased with the officiating of the match but admitted that their opponents were good. Said captain Dave Heisterkamp, "They were good, we'll see them in the playoffs." I'd say these are two of the better teams I have seen so far this year and when they meet again it should be very interesting.

Women

by Mark Shaw

The French Curves defeated T&A in two straight games, 15-10, 15-1 in women's volleyball action on Sunday.

With both teams having only 5 players, the French Curves were the team which best overcame the shortage. T&A took an early 2-1 lead on the serve of Michelle Masitis but the French Curves came back strongly.

Angie Spickler and Chris Schleiden combined for 7 points. T&A had problems returning the great curve on Schleiden's serve. The French Curves added three more points to make it 11-4 on the hard serving of Traci Yonko.

T&A was not to give this game away so easily. Masitis and Barb Huber brought T&A to within one, 10-11. The French Curves appeared to lose momentum as T&A made their comeback.

The French Curves pulled together, however; and Kathy Season's Over

by Tracey Catanese

The Juniata Men's Tennis team has completed another season. Although their overall dual meet record was 2-7, this does not at all reflect how well the team did play.

According to Coach Rob Ash, the "team probably could have done a lot better than the record shows." He doesn't feel discouraged with the team's performance and doesn't believe he could have expected his players to do any better.

Most of the team's problems could be attributed to the loss of consistent play because of the inclement spring weather. Many of their errors were little mistakes which could have been improved with practice and it's possible that a winning season could have resulted.

The season's record was 2-7, but two of the meets were 5-4 losses and three were 6-3 losses; therefore the season wasn't as unsuccessful as one might gather at first glance.

Coach Ash cited the Dickinson meet as the closest of the season. The meet ended with Dickinson on top 6-3, but it was actually only 2 points that cost the JC netters the meet. In the singles, one JC player lost 4 match points to succumb to his Dickinson opponent. History repeated itself in one of the doubles matches with one match point being lost.

Another very close meet was played at Lock Haven. Tom Tracy had to default when an old knee injury flared up. The resulting final score was LH 5-JC 4.

Tracy was chosen as the team's most valuable player. Tracy, a senior, also played No. 1 singles. His season record was 4-4. He was to travel to MACs, but due to his injury did not make the trip.

Senior Keith Fox, No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles player, ended with a 2-6 record. He travelled to MACs and teamed with Scott Mcneal in the doubles competition. They won their 1st round against Gettysburg College's No. 1 team, but lost in the 2nd round to Haverford's No. 1 team.

Women 2nd at MACs; Men, 7th

In their first varsity season, the women's track team took on seventeen teams at the conference meet finishing second to Franklin and Marshall. F and M had 148 points, Juniata had 123 points, with Dickinson finishing in third place with 45 points. The top performers for Juniata were, Peggy Evans with 49 points, Nancy Roach with 21 points and Jeanne McLaughlin with 10.5 points.

Carol Tendall established a new MAC record in the mile with a 4:55.62 time. Peggy Evans established a MAC record in the triple jump with a leap of 11.11 meters. The 400 relay made up of Sue Occiano, Michelle Bartol, Nancy Roach, and Peggy Evans established a MAC record with a dash of :52.64. Jeanne McLaughlin, Chris Schleiden, Peggy Evans and Nancy Roach also established a new record in the 1600 meter relay with a run of 4:12.85. In the first year of an award for Outstanding Woman Performer in the MACs, Peggy Evans took the honors.

"I am more than pleased with the outstanding performance of all the young women on this team. Each one has worked hard and has shown improvement from the beginning of the season to the end. I am grateful for the opportunity I have had in coaching the ladies of the team," stated Coach Roslyn Hall.

The Indian harriers had a good day last Saturday to finish seventh out of sixteen teams in the MAC. The tribe accumulated 27 points overall. Points were given for the first six finishers in each event; the steeplechase was a non-scoring event.

Kevin Burket came away with a pair of fifth places in the 100 m. (11.22) and the 200 m. (22.65). Kevin also anchored the 400 meter relay to a third place finish in 43.11.

In the hurdles, John Voler captured fifth place in the 110 high hurdles (15.73) and Todd Naylor glided to fourth place in the grueling 400 intermediate hurdles (55.83).

Kirby Wilcher, Doug Brown, Todd Naylor and Pete Hauer combined in the 1600 meter relay for 3:23.99, good for fifth place. John Weiner finished fourth in the steeplechase in 10:18.0. That was the first time John ever ran the steeplechase.

The weightmen flexed their muscles, as Tom Weiner threw the javelin 182'6" for fourth place. Gino Perri heaved the shot 45', also fourth place, and Rob Yankcello took sixth in the shot, with a 43'10" throw.

Coach Turnball was pleased with the performances of his team on Saturday. He feels the team will be even stronger next season with added experience.

Winning Ways

by Jay Jones

The Juniata College baseball team (18-6) moved three steps in the right direction towards securing a spot in the NCAA tournament. The Indians continued their winning way by sweeping the week (3-0) and extending their winning streak now to seven games.

On Wednesday, May 4, Juniata won another come-from-behind contest by beating Bucknell 11-9. The Tribe started the scoring with four runs in the third inning as Jim Laphan singled in one run and Grady Paul tripled in two other runs. Paul then scored on a wild pitch. In the bottom of the inning, however, Bucknell answered with seven unearned runs to take the lead. Starting pitcher Dave Lesser gave way to Dave Musser in the inning. Juniata narrowed the gap in the top of the sixth with three more runs compliments of RBI-singles by Glenn Hineman and Scott Cole. Then in the seventh inning, the Indians took the lead for good as Jeff Meeker collected his second double of the day, driving in two of the three runs scored in the inning. Terry Yoder, a late-inning replacement in the outfield, ended the scoring with a solo homerun in the ninth inning. Musser picked up the win, his third of the year, as he scattered eight hits over the six-plus innings he worked.

The following day, Juniata recorded a doubleheader sweep against Point Park in Pittsburgh by scores of 5-4 (in eight innings) and 8-5. In the first game, Bob McDonald pitched a seven-hitter, allowing just one walk and recording six strike-outs in chalking up his fifth win against two defeats. The Indians again opened the scoring with one run in the first inning on John Widener's RBI-single. Point Park scored three unearned runs in the first, however, to take the lead. Juniata tied the score in the second inning on Scott Cole's two-run double. Point Park regained the lead in the bottom of the inning with another unearned run. The Indians knotted the score in the top of the sixth on a clutch double by Jim Laphan. Then, in extra innings, Jeff Meeker trotted home with the eventual winning run on a bases-loaded walk to Carl Pavolic. In the game, Laphan and Widener each had three hits.

In the second game, Juniata exploded for six runs in the first two innings and then hung on to win the contest 8-5. Grady Paul put the Indians on board first with a three-run homerun in the opening inning. Jeff Meeker tripled in another run and scored himself to account for the other two runs scored in the first inning. Then in the second, Paul connected with his second homerun of the game, a solo shot, to ice the victory. Starting pitcher Rich Howey conveniently scattered nine hits over the seven innings he worked to raise his record to 6-0.

Indian Notes: Juniata, with an MAC record of 5-5, is now 11-0 outside the league. . . . The Indians have now won fifteen of their last eighteen contests. . . . Three regular season games remain on Juniata's schedule: a doubleheader vs. Lock Haven State on May 9 and a makeup game vs. Penn State on May 10.

Davis Named To Board of Trustees

Richard R. Davis of Jeannette, assistant superintendent of the Penn-Trafford School District, has been named to the Juniata College Board of Trustees.

Davis, elected to a three year term, will represent the Western District, Church of the Brethren, and is one of three church representatives on the Board.

A 1962 graduate of Lock Haven State College where he received his B.S. degree in secondary education, Davis holds an M.Ed. degree in educational administration from the Pennsylvania State University. He received his principal's certification from Penn State and his superintendent's certification from West Virginia University.

Davis was named assistant superintendent in July, 1979. Prior to that, he was principal of the Jeannette Middle School. From 1962 to 1970, he was a teacher at Morrisons Cove Junior High School in Martinsburg.

A member of numerous professional organizations, Davis serves the Greensburg Church of the Brethren as moderator, deacon, chairman of the Deacon Board, senior high school Sunday School teacher, CBYF advisor and past Sunday School superintendent. In addition, he is moderator of the Monroeville Church of the Brethren and a lay speaker at both the Monroeville and Greensburg churches.

Davis also is active in the Jeannette Corps of the Salvation Army, Phi Delta Kappa, Central Westmoreland United Way and the Jeannette United Way.

The election of Davis came at the spring meeting of the Juniata Board of Trustees. Reelected to the Board at that time were: Dr. John C. Baker of Essex Falls, N.J., president, emeritus of Ohio University and a 1917 Juniata graduate; Dr. Harold B. Brumbaugh of Huntingdon, vice president for college relations, emeritus at Juniata and a 1933 Juniata graduate; George E. Cruser of New Hope, senior vice president of Westvaco Corporation and a 1952 Juniata graduate; Edith Hartman Cutrell of Roslyn Heights, N.Y., a retired educator and 1927 Juniata graduate; Dr. Calvert N. Ellis of Huntingdon, president, emeritus of Juniata and a 1923 Juniata graduate; Elmer G. Grant of State College, president of Central Counties Bank; Thomas A. Martin of Washington, D.C., director of the division of taxation, American Petroleum Institute; Jack E. Oller of Huntingdon, professor of French, emeritus at Juniata and a 1923 Juniata graduate; and Vincent A. Sarni of Mount Lebanon, senior vice president of PPG Industries. All were reelected to three year terms.

Guest Speaker Chosen for JC Commencement

Commencement to be 104th for Juniata

Dr. Paul G. Pearson, president of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, will be the guest speaker at Juniata College's 104th Commencement Sunday, May 29.

Prior to becoming Miami's 18th president on July 1, 1981, Dr. Pearson was executive vice president and professor of zoology at Rutgers University in New Jersey. He joined the Rutgers faculty in 1955 and worked his way through the professional ranks, serving as department chairman, director of the graduate programs in zoology, associate provost and, in 1977, executive vice president. During 1978-79, Dr. Pearson was acting president of Rutgers.

In addition to Rutgers, Dr. Pearson has taught and lectured at the University of Tulsa, University of Florida, Hunter College, Drew University and the University of Virginia's Mountain Lake Biological Station. Dr. Pearson also is a professor of zoology at Miami.

Much of Dr. Pearson's scientific research has been on populations of vertebrates and, most recently, the impact of pollutants on ecosystems. He helped write and test the ecological version of the Biological Sciences Curriculum Study and co-wrote the second edition of "High School Biology: BSCS Green Version."

Over the years, Dr. Pearson has held many positions with the Ecological Society of America, American Institute of Biological Sciences and the American Society of Zoologists.

From 1971-76, Dr. Pearson was a member of the New Jersey Noise Control Commission, serving as the group's chairman from 1974-76. He also has been a consultant with the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J.

A native of Florida, Dr. Pearson received his B.S. degree with honors from the University of Florida and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He also received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Florida, and holds an honorary Doctor of Letters degree from Rutgers.

During Juniata's Commencement ceremony, Dr. Pearson will be awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree in recognition of his "notable accomplishments as an educator, scientist and university administrator."

Dr. Pearson and his wife, Winifred, have three children including P. Andrew Pearson, a member of this year's graduating class at Juniata.

The Commencement ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. on the lawn in front of Oller Hall.

Brown to Speak at Baccalaureate

The sermon at Juniata College's Baccalaureate Service Sunday, May 29, will be delivered by Dr. Dale W. Brown, professor of Christian theology at Bethany Theological Seminary in Oak Brook, Ill.

A native of Wichita, Kans., Dr. Brown is a graduate of McPherson College, and received a bachelor of divinity degree from Bethany Bible Seminary. In addition, he holds a Ph.D. from Northwestern University.

A member of the Bethany faculty since 1962, Dr. Brown also has taught at McPherson College, and was the Visiting Lilly Professor at Berea College in Kentucky in 1977-78.

Dr. Brown is the author of numerous books and articles. He has served the Church of the Brethren as a pastor, moderator of the Middle Iowa District, member of district and regional boards, member of the General Brotherhood Board, and moderator of the Annual Conference.

His sermon, "Freedom From . . . Freedom For," will be delivered to some 300 graduating seniors, their parents, faculty, staff and guests. Dr. Brown resides in Lombard, Ill. with his wife Lois, and three children.

In addition to Dr. Brown's sermon, the Baccalaureate Service will include a welcome by Juniata President Frederick M. Binder, the call to worship by the Rev. Dr. M. Andrew Murray, campus minister and the morning prayer by the Rev. Dr. Robert W. Neff, general secretary of the Church of the Brethren.

Several students also will participate in the service. Senior Gaye E. Shelley of Thompsontown will give the Psalter, senior Jacqueline L. Loucks of Clarendon Heights will read the Epistle and senior Nancy M. Roach of Johnstown will present the Gospel.

The anthem, "I Have Only One Life to Live," will be sung by the Juniata Chamber Singers under

Making Memories Juniata Style

Spring term at Juniata always seems to be a time of reflection, especially as it draws to an end, and graduation is once again at hand.

Each year Juniata graduates a couple hundred seniors, each of whom surely has his or her unique memories of college life. But what type of memories are the seniors likely to take with them as they head out into the "real world?"

It most likely won't be the first test that they failed so long ago (although that was a traumatic experience.) It also won't be handing in that history term paper late, or all the hours spent laboring away in the computer room with 14 other frustrated programmers.

What is most memorable about Juniata are the people and the events that are unique to this college alone. Where else do such great traditions such as the Raft Regatta, Mountain Day, the Madrigal Dinner, All Class Night and May Day exist? Each of these functions and many more provide the opportunity for friends to create memories.

Remember all those trips to the cliffs, or joining the sun worshippers on the many campus beaches with music blaring from the windows? Or how about the trips to Raystown Lake, OIP, or Tote? When an alumnus, returning to Juniata College was asked, "Would you do anything different if you could go through college again?" he responded, "I'd worry less about studying, and have more fun." We can't forget what our purpose here is, but often the only thing that gets us through the hectic and frustrating times so familiar to college life are the people. These are the very same people, both students and faculty alike, that it is so difficult to say "goodbye" to each summer.

Juniata also seems to have quite loyal alumni, who continue to take an interest in the school over the years. This has been proven by the fine efforts of those who were involved in the fund-raising campaign for the Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center. No matter how much students complain now, there must be something special about Juniata that keeps the alumni coming back each Homecoming.

At the present time, it may seem easy to find fault with any number of things at Juniata, but when we get to look back on our four years here, we may be able to admit that even Baker Refectory wasn't so bad after all.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the recent controversy over military advertising in the Juniatian and more specifically in response to Ms. Swartz's letter of 28 April. Ms. Swartz raises several points that I would disagree with. First, she states that "apparently for some people, freedom means the right to fight." Obviously Ms. Swartz is not familiar with the Communist doctrine of world conquest and likewise she has never been behind the "Iron Curtain." Well, Ms. Swartz, I have been behind the "Iron Curtain" and I have seen what goes on there. I have seen the hopeless facial expressions; I have seen also the watch towers, machine-gun nests, barbed wire and mine fields at the borders. These measures are by no means to keep people out: they are to keep people in. Is this, Ms. Swartz, what you want for America? Freedom does not mean the right to fight. Freedom means that we all have a duty to fight, if the need arises.

Secondly, Ms. Swartz argues that because "necessary funds" are being "displaced" to the military our "basic rights to an adequate education, working opportunities and a secure old age are being denied." On the contrary, by "displacing" these funds to the military we are helping to insure that our "basic rights to an adequate education, working opportunities and a secure old age" will not be denied.

Lastly, Ms. Swartz feels that the "sole" purpose of the military is destruction. It is quite apparent that does not know the difference between armed aggression and deterrence. I will not deny that the military kills and destroys when necessary, and, while I am not in favor of the arms race or of war itself, I, for one, will not stand peacefully by, like the inhabitants of the Warsaw Ghetto, and be annihilated. Perhaps the purpose of the military establishment is best described in the words of Elihu Root, former Secretary of War, on the founding of the U.S. Army War College: "not to promote war but to preserve peace by intelligent and adequate preparation to repel aggression . . ." The preservation of peace, Ms. Swartz, by intelligent and adequate preparation, is their purpose and what better place to obtain the necessary intelligent and responsible leadership than on a college campus?

Editor, The Juniatian

It occurred to me the other day that I've been listening less and less to Juniata's radio station than I did when it was WJC, or even "Vee ninedy, too," as they used to say. So I began to think about how the station's emphasis has shifted to generic, risk-free programming that offers no surprises, nothing to think about, and little in the way of what might be called "foreground music."

I began to be suspicious when what used to be called "the news" became a "lifestyle report" (Whatever that is. Is the news easier to take if it's called something that doesn't mean anything?) Then there was the shift on the dial, from the pure, NPR-oriented left side of the radio to the commercial-prone territory where it is presently located. Worst of all was "The Newsblimp" — that masterpiece of reportorial flatulence. "The Newsblimp" is a potentially informative program crippled by its own cleverness. Newsblimp editors apparently feel that if they can't relate phrases from rock music to current events, listeners will lose interest and the validity of the "report" would stumble and fall. Hot air truly keeps the Newsblimp aloft.

Current programming, or lack of it, creates a status quo of audio patterning in listeners and de-

ALONG MUDDY RUN

by Lisa Ellek

In the past nine months I have tried to write a column for you, my fellow students. At times I have been more selfish than usual by championing my own causes. Many times I have revealed the personal details of my life and the inept workings of the senior brain. In my parting words to the loyal devotees who have followed my bi-weekly tribulations, I would like to be both personal and unselfish. With deepest sincerity I would like to dedicate this column to the underclassmen of Juniata and leave to you something more than just words.

While I was a member of my high school newspaper staff for four years, seniors were looked upon with awe. At the end of each school year, graduating seniors filled out surveys listing a variety of questions, the favorite of which was "What do you bequeath?" In each of the four years my fingers were permanently ink-stained from running off pages upon pages of senior answers to insert within the last newspaper.

Since Juniata does not follow the Montour High School ways of sending surveys to seniors (four years of evaluation forms are apparently enough), I decided to take the initiative in bequeathing my own bequeathables to those who remain behind. While one can take the memories with him, one cannot always take the tangibles.

First off, I would like to bequeath my closet to one of next year's lucky occupants of the back bedroom in Apt. 1, Mission House. Mine was the standing wardrobe which never withstood anything. It couldn't handle my wintertime sweaters and corduroys: it refused to associate with my summer cottons and linens. Undoubtedly several forgotten outfits will be found in the clean-up operation. I will throw in the extra tension bar

Beirut, Lebanon — The Lebanese Cabinet unanimously approved the troops withdrawal pact with Israel according to a cabinet statement Saturday. Lebanon's chief negotiator with Israel, Antoine Fattal, is expected to sign the agreement sometime this week, as soon as a date and place are scheduled.

A Washington State department spokesman described the Lebanese approval as "a constructive step in the ongoing process directed towards the withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon."

Israeli, Lebanese, and American negotiators met Sunday in Netanya, Israel to go over the agreement to make sure there were no questions as to the wording or language and to set a date for the ceremonial signing. The agreement will be published in Arabic, Hebrew, English and French.

Damascus, Syria — Syrian President, Hafez-al-Assad rejected the draft agreement on troop withdrawal from Lebanon. A high ranking Syrian official stated that if the accord was signed Syria would not remove its troops from Lebanon and would do all they can "to foil the agreement."

San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua — Nicaraguans have made this Pacific harbor available to the Soviet Union as a port call for Soviet fishing boats. In three months, a 7,000 ton drydock and 60-foot long floating pier will be anchored in San Juan del Sur bay to serve Soviet tuna vessels. Nicaragua made the agreement with the Soviet Union one year ago in which the Soviets will pay $200,000 per year as a rental fee.

San Juan del Sur is more centrally located to the areas fished by the Soviet fleet than the port they presently use in Peru.

Washington — Watergate case pardons were denied to Jeb Stuart Magruder and E. Howard Hunt, Jr. by President Reagan Saturday. Magruder and Hunt served as aides in the Nixon White House and were convicted for the 1972 break-in of Democratic Party Headquarters in Washington. Both were paroled after serving prison sentences, Magruder for obstruction of justice and Hunt for burglary, conspiracy, and wiretapping. Mr. Reagan rejected their requests for pardon in accordance with the recommendations of the Justice Department Acting Pardon Attorney, Associate Attorney General Rudolph W. Guiuliani said. However, Mr. Reagan did pardon Eugene R. Martinez who was also convicted for burglary, conspiracy and wiretapping.

Foreign Exchange Includes Librarians

Juniata College's foreign studies programs have always offered students a variety of opportunities to study abroad. But these exchange programs are not always limited to students.

This spring, Juniata and the College of St. Paul and St. Mary in Cheltenham, England, have exchange librarians. Juniata's public service librarian, Celene L. Seymour, is working in England while Dorothy Daniel, resources librarian at the College of St. Paul and St. Mary, is working at Juniata.

"The library systems in the two countries are really quite different," says Miss Daniel who is in charge of the education library at her school. "We do not have student help, for example, and the library is not open late at night or on Sundays as it is here. This is a difficult situation for American students to adjust to when they come to England to study." She also notes that because the College of St. Paul and St. Mary is a private institution, the library is not open to the public the way American college libraries are.

"The cataloging system here is also better than in England, where books are only cataloged by author. If you don't know the name of the author, it can be very difficult to find the book you want," says Miss Daniel.

Although the library system at the two schools is different, Miss Daniel sees many similarities between Juniata and the College of St. Paul and St. Mary. "Both schools have similar enrollments and backgrounds," she notes, "and the students ask the same sort of questions."

Out & About

by John Ferich

This week's Out and About required more than just "wining and dining." The location of the event was Seven Points Marina at Lake Raystown. Now, if you are an outdoor lover you will find this to be to your liking and even if you're not an outdoor lover, this can be a pleasant alternative to dining out.

Your menu will have to be prepared before your departure. Most items needed can be purchased at Weis Market and a cooking kit can also be rented from Laughing Bush Outing Service for 75¢. The total cost of this venture runs between $15-20 depending on the type of steak you like.

There are several different spots to be chosen for the cook-out. My date and I chose a grassy peninsula overlooking the marina and lake. When we both decided on a grill, it started to drizzle so we moved under a pavilion to eat. (The service was very good and the waiter was cute, too!)

The meal took less time to prepare than to eat. We started with slices of fresh watermelon as an appetizer. Our main course consisted of two ten-ounce Delmonico steaks, a sauce of mushrooms and onions cooked in butter, baked potatoes, a loaf of garlic bread and a bottle of Taylor red wine. To prepare the meal, I covered the grill with aluminum foil and used charcoal briquets that already contained lighter. When the flames died down I put the potatoes, wrapped in aluminum foil, into the fire to be turned often.

Next, I used the pans from the cooking kit to create the sauce which consisted of diced onions, mushrooms and melted butter. To complete the sauce a tablespoon of wine was added. I let this sauce simmer and stirred it once in a while. Now, I put the steaks on the grill and when they were cooked, I cut them up and mixed the pieces in with the sauce to marinate the steak for a few minutes. Also, I toasted the bread on the grill and by this time the potatoes were done.

My date and I both felt that we enjoyed this meal better than any meal that we have had in a long time. The meat was tender and delicious and the sauce accented and added to the flavor. To end this perfect meal we had fresh strawberries and whipped cream.

Even though we are newcomers to cooking, we both found it simple to prepare this meal. It was worth the effort to cook it ourselves, because not only did we save money, but to quote a well-known saying, "If you want it done right, you have to do it yourself."

Also, as an option you can rent a tent from Laughing Bush for $2 and camp at the lake overnight. Off-season there is no charge for a campsite. Go for it!!

Dave's Dribble

by David Lehmann

I carried my suitcases into 206 Sherwood and noticed that my roommates (whom I hadn't met yet) had beaten me to unpacking. The room looked so sterile. Three pinewood desks lined one wall and two pine dressers were built into the adjacent wall. The freshly waxed tile floor glistened so brightly that it caused me to blink. I opened my eyes, and it was nearly four years later. Four years? Time passed too quickly.

I often hear people complaining about this college being boring. Those that disagree will point to parties and movies as evidence that there are opportunities for amusement. I take a different standpoint. Juniata can be either dead or lively. How it appears to an individual doesn't depend on what events are going on though, it depends on that individual. There are students who didn't get involved with this past weekend's festivities and were bored, while those who played mud volleyball or floated on a raft feel rejuvenated from their experience. The fun of an event such as raft regatta focuses on the people involved. We all have a wonderful opportunity here for meeting new people and making new friends. I realize that this is a small school and that we get used to seeing the same faces, but how often do we take the time to know these faces? It can be intimidating to walk up to a stranger and just start talking to him or her. However, events such as raft regatta give us a looser environment where we can do just that while also spending time with old friends.

When we arrived as freshmen, we knew very few of the other students, and we made an effort to get to know the people on our halls. For too many of us, this was the last time we have made such an effort. We became comfortable in a small group and didn't wish for any new contacts. This seems silly to me. One can never have too many friends, but quite often we have too few and are left bored.

People are like surprise packages. We can seldom tell what is in the box by looking at the wrapping. Only once the box is opened, can we judge the package's worth to us. If the package contains something undesirable, we leave the box and are no worse for opening it. Yet if the box contains a pearl, we have profited greatly by taking the time of opening a box.

Surprise packages are all around us. Some may be opened by just saying "good morning" to that student who we pass everyday on our way to breakfast but never took the time to talk to. To open others, it might require us to ask a girl to dance or accept an offer to dance. At the very worse, we get turned down, and our ego takes a lump. However, if we don't get turned down, we may have stumbled onto a pearl.

Take the time to know the people around you. Don't wait till tomorrow; start today. Unfortunately if we wait, we may blink away four years. When I think back over my college years, I remember people first and am thankful for having the chance to know them. They are what has made my college experience enjoyable. Juniata is the people here. Know your school.

Off, Off, Broadway

Same Time Next Year, by Bernard Slade, was performed in Oller Hall this past Tuesday night. Directed by Ken Zinck, the play is a series of windows on the lives of two lovers living through the 50's, 60's and 70's. The two main characters, Doris, played by Elizabeth Nelson, and George, played by Richard Carlow, change and develop as the time passes. Meeting at a Northern California hotel every year, they reflect a changing society at 5-year intervals.

Same Time Next Year is a very highly acclaimed play, and it was the excellence of the story itself that was the main attraction for the evening. Elizabeth Nelson did a good job with her part, but Richard Carlow's performance left something to be desired. His characterization did improve during the second act, but it never reached the same level as Ms. Nelson's.

Ken Zinck must be commended for two different aspects of the performance. One was the utility of the set. It was not only effective from a staging point of view, but was also highly mobile. This is an absolute necessity for a travelling show and was accomplished quite successfully. The second was the addition of a third character not found in the script — the innkeeper. He would enter at the end of each scene and prepare the set for the next. In this way, the audience was kept amused while the main characters went through their extensive costume changes. This was a very clever idea, and was received well by the audience.

Overall, it can be said that Same Time Next Year was a well directed performance that was light, entertaining, and made a nice midweek study break.

which fell down at least 12 times in the past year.

I bequeath my bravery to any humanities major who challenges the limitations placed upon him ("You humanities majors have it so easy!") and takes both a business course and a science course merely to "diversify" himself (or suicidally, to include in his POE). In four years at Juniata I have never felt so accomplished as in this, my senior year, when I successfully completed the untried, novel Computers and Society and the grueling and physically demanding HOBO. Oceanography aside, (after which I wanted to work at Sea World with the dolphins), these first dabbles into the science and business worlds were especially brave due to the infamous professors who taught them (Doctor "Dept. Chairman" Cherry and "Smoke 'em Chalk" Fisher).

There was a quiet resolve in my mind as one of my HOBO group members, after watching me fall chest-first into a stream on the "obstacle course" at Blue Diamond, asked, "You took this course as an elective?"

I bequeath to any wordy person my all-time favorite college sayings beginning freshman year when everyone was either a "chickee" and "niiiiiice" or a "yukface", and ending this term with "puke me off" (thus leaving me "puked-off"), "poophead" and "sounds like a problem for the therapist."

I bequeath a pair of shoes to the shoe repairman on Mifflin Street who was kept consistently busy with my faulty footwear (once seeing the same pair of shoes at least three times in one week).

I bequeath two years worth of old Ziggy calendars to any Ziggy cult member and my favorite, obnoxious pink stage blush from Oller basement, "heather rouge," to any serious actress who keeps returning to the stage for more punishment.

I bequeath my knack of making the worst possible sundaes on Sunday nights to the hopeful of Juniata, for each Sunday I hoped I would improve and meet both my eyes' and stomach's approval.

I bequeath my bottle of lemon juice, my "lunar" blanket, and my bent radio antenna to any Lesherite who lists her spring term address as "Lesher Beach" for three years in a row.

I bequeath the "no parking sign across the street from Mission House to those deviants who have been adhering to the sign — they don't park; they merely run the sign down.

I bequeath to future tour guides the "Lisa Ellek Manual of What to Say Where" — a collection of anecdotes told to each of my tours and the exact location where they were told.

I bequeath my song-writing abilities to future musical superstars. My freshmen friends will not forget the lyrics to "J.C. B.s" (sung to the tune of "Jingle Bells"), a song about freshmen love gone wrong, and my senior roommates will not forget "Poop Attack," the Olivia-Newton-Ellek version of eating in the cafeteria.

I bequeath my post office box, 313, to any freshman who doesn't expect to receive mail in the next four years.

I bequeath my pre-med neighbors, Moe, Larry, and Curly, to the world of medicine. May Hershey, Jefferson, and Guadalajara rest in peace until they arrive.

I bequeath my top-bunkie roommate to the unfortunately unaware females who fall under the rule of her R.A.-dom. When problems arise, girls, pretend you're seniors (which is what she did this year), and keep in mind that she loves purple, shoes, and Twix bars.

I bequeath my gown and mortar board to a 1984 senior who loves to iron angelic-looking costumes. (But, too bad, I get to keep the Ku Klux Klan-ish hood and the tassle.)

I bequeath my wide-eyed naivete to all incoming freshmen.

Most of all, I bequeath my position as co-columnist of "Along Muddy Run" to someone who will treasure it as I have, who will be unafraid of expressing an opinion, and who will remember, above all, to entertain. Goodbye Juniata. I'll miss you.

emphasizes the importance of the spoken word. DJ's just glue their musical selections together with phrases like: "Well, we just heard from Tom Petty, Dire Straits, and The Police. And now here's a little Pat Benatar . . ." How come nobody ever says anything on the campus station? Nobody's ever interviewed, nobody ever thinks out loud on the air, nobody ever reads a poem, says a few lines from an up-coming play, gives an editorial opinion, reviews a book or movie, reads a personal essay or short story, or makes live music.

Listeners are guaranteed they'll never hear Mozart after lunch, or Eliot Carter, or Terry Riley, Carla Bley, John Renbourn, Patrick Godfrey, Philly Joe Jones, John Abercrombie, Kate Wolf, Brian Eno, Sonny Terry and Brownie McGee, Stephan Grapelli, Oregon, Doc Watson, Keith Jarrett, Bessie Smith, Dave Grisman, King Oliver, Meredith Monk, Don Reno and Red Smiley, Si Kahn, Tommy Dorsey, Chick Corea, Carlos Montoya, Alan Stivell, or Jean Pierre Rampal. In short, if you listen to Juniata's radio station any weekday you'll never hear anything unfamiliar that you might grow to enjoy. It's guaranteed.

Music is a vast smorgasbord, and to program only rock and roll during the week is comparable to the food service's cooking pizza three times a day, week in, week out. It's Wonderbread for our ears. Where's folk music? Ethnic music? Where's classical music of any kind during the week? Where's bluegrass? Where's instrumental music of any genre on a weekday? Where's the chance to expand our tastes and interests? Who's pulling the strings? Who's restricting our diets? Who sets the limits? Who's, uh, "keeping us in touch?"

I happen to live where I can pull in WDFM, the campus station from Penn State; WQSU, from Susquehanna University; and sometimes WDUQ, from Duquesne University. All these commercial-free stations offer alternative programming that varies considerably. Isn't that one of the freedoms and responsibilities of non-commercial radio? Our station, by contrast, seems like just another commercial broadcaster which doesn't broadcast commercials. The same unimaginative format, the same old (and new) rock and roll, the same sameness.

Campus radio can help shape listeners' preferences, and by playing only "what's popular" station personnel enforce a rigidity of musical tastes that make anything different seem "weird" or "strange." If you go to Juniata, and find your musical tastes expanding away from those groups and individuals with the slickest marketing and promotional agents, I give you a lot of credit. The campus station isn't helping you a bit in your search for interesting alternatives to what it, too, has been led to believe is the "official" music of our time.

Next year, how about a variety of quality programming that addresses a diversity of musical tastes, that has the courage to originate some issue-oriented topics for discussion, that doesn't make every broadcaster a DJ, and which isn't necessarily 100% predictable. In short, why can't it be a little more like our very own station?

I'm not anti-rock and roll by the way. I own more r&r records and tapes than I can physically carry.

Juniata Rafters Make A Splash

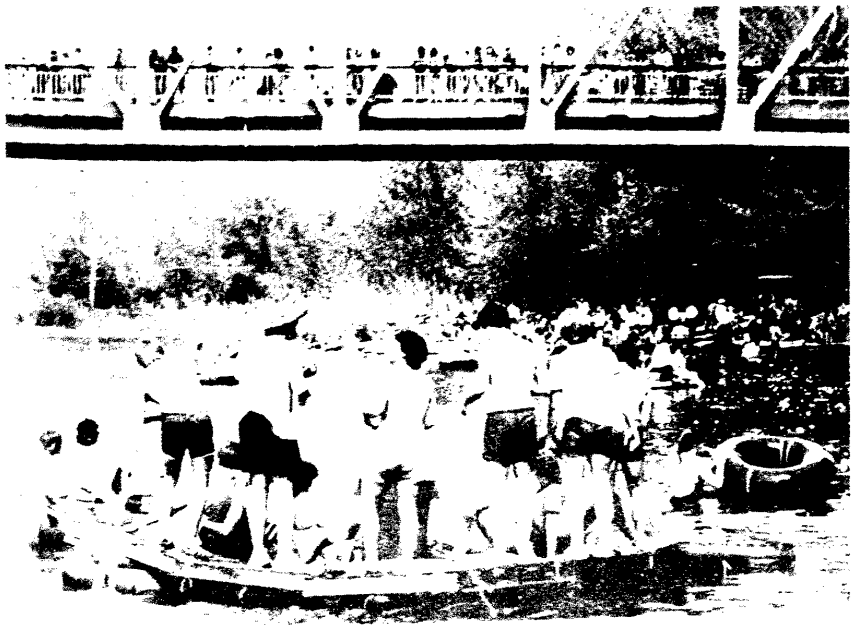
Juniata rafters get psyched and paddle their way down stream during Saturday's regatta. Over 80 rafts were registered for the event.

These rafters are boarding for their voyage down stream. Or are they just getting back after a call from nature?

Faculty moderators (Sue Esch, Tom Nolan, and Betty Ann Cherry, l. to r.) paddle their way up and down stream watching for "floaters."

Students made their way down the river on floats, in inner tubes, and by jumping from raft to raft.



Mike D'Olio can't believe his raft made it to the finish as he shares the laugh with Jack Williams and other crew members.

Juniata Skydivers Take to the Air

by John Brogan

Picture this — The loud engine of the Cessna 182 rattles the small plane as you climb to 3000 feet. While the pilot makes a hard banking turn you carefully study the distant airport below. Suddenly, the door to the plane opens and you cautiously lean back into the plane away from the inrushing air. As the plane begins to level off, the jumpmaster orders, "Get Your Feet Out!" You suddenly realize you will not be landing in the plane. With your feet hanging outside the plane, the next instruction pierces the wind, "Get Out!!" Without questioning your actions, you grab the strut which supports the wing and you pull yourself onto the small, wobbly, metal step just above the landing gear. Building your confidence, you let your right foot dangle off the step and look back into the plane at your jumpmaster. He studies the ground below, and at the precise moment he looks you in the eye and yells, "GO!!"

This is the moment most people ask experienced skydivers about. That instant you let go of the plane and begin your descent to the airfield below. If you ask one of the Juniata students who have completed their first jump, they will surely explain in explicit detail this exhilarating feeling to you. Laughing Bush, in an attempt to increase club organized outdoor activities, sponsored two trips to Allegheny Skydivers at Indian Lake Airport near Central City, PA this spring. Although both weekends were hampered with bad weather; with snow on March 26th and rain on April 23rd, all 22 participants have been trained to complete their first static line parachute jumps. On both weekends, the instruction took most of the day on Saturday with Allegheny club members jumping all day. Uwe Willme, a German exchange student here at Juniata with approximately 200 parachute jumps, joined the first-jumpers to try and complete some free falling formations with the Allegheny skydivers. Trip organizer Paul Wagner commented, "Everything went very well except for the weather. Chuck Askins our instructor was very thorough and Laughing Bush looks forward to running another trip next year, possibly in the fall when the weather is more stable."

Laughing Bush would like to take this opportunity to thank all the participants on both the Fall and Spring whitewater rafting trips and the skydiving trips for their cooperation in making all the trips successful. Laughing Bush plans on running some basic programs next year to complement these trips.

Rain, a Softball Problem

Men's

by Paul J. Kardish

Men's softball is finally rounding the home stretch of a long and rain-shortened season. At the end of this week a new champion will be crowned. This season will not have a repeat champ. The Pigeons II hopes for reproducing the feat which they accomplished in fall term were eliminated when they failed to finish in the top four. The team responsible for knocking them out of the playoff picture was Blood & Guts. Blood & Guts rebounded after a horrendous 0-2 start. The EHF Wingmen also snuck into the playoff after a similar slow start.

With Monday's games already cancelled (you guessed it, rain), the games will have to be rescheduled. Times and fields have yet to be determined by the I.M. department. The one bracket will pit King A and the Exs against P.F.C. & Co. Look for King A and the Exs to take this game. They are a team of vast playoff experience and with the three Yonie brothers in the lineup, they are virtually unstoppable. The other quarterfinal game will put Fall-Us against the Schlongs. Fall-Us has the power and speed to secure their ticket to the semi-final. The other bracket has the two of the division winners in it. Way-Way Off Campus plays the EHF Wingmen. Way-Way Off has just too much talent for them. The Mess Express will probably breeze through their game. I would not even venture to guess who will win the game between Way-Way Off and The Mess Express. The title game should match King A and the Exs and the winner of that game. As we all know in Men's softball, anything goes.

Women's

by Cindy Duick

There are no playoffs in Women's IM Softball this season. The Jockettes were determined the champions because of their superior record, 6-0. They didn't allow any of their opponents to score more than three runs against them.

On May 10, "Some Girls" were able to take three runs from the powerful Jockettes. "Some Girls" scored once in the second inning and twice in the third, while the Jockettes tallied eight in the first, seven in the second and eight more in the third.

The Last Resort was able to score one run off the Jockettes, but were over-powered 15-1, on April 26.

Angler's Angle

by Dave Lehmann

The most interesting fishing I've experienced this spring occurred at a strip pit about 15 miles from campus. Strip pits are spring fed ponds that fill in old strip mine gauges. They are generally very clear water and deep (most drop to 40 feet or more). Strip pits can be located by talking to locals in towns that have abandoned mines. That's how I found the one that I fished on Saturday.

I had already spotted a good number of rock bass, bluegill, and small largemouths, when I spotted a fish of about twenty inches swimming slowly at me. Once it was closer, I became confused. It looked like a bowfin, but they weren't supposed to be native to the area. Yet, when a local fisherman to this pond talked to me, he confirmed what I had seen. He claimed that the pond was full of bowfin.

Bowfin, also called mudfish, are very primitive fish. Besides gars, they are the only lobed-finned fish still extant in North America. Generally, they prefer warm slow moving water which explains their abundance in the deep South. Dr. Robert Fisher informed me that a ways back bowfin had been stocked as a predator in some lakes by the State Fishing Commission. Walter Rosser of the Fish Commission confirmed that bowfin were stocked in a few lakes to control bullhead, but that this particular pond never received state stockings. How the fish in the pond got there is a mystery, and why bowfins have prospered here is an even bigger mystery, but it's no mystery that I'm returning to that pond to try to catch one of these relics from the past.

Women's Tennis

by Tracy Catanese

The Juniata College Women's Tennis team ended their regular season with a 4-5 record. Coach Nancy Latimore was very pleased with the way the team progressed this season — both as a whole and as individuals.

One of the season's highlights was senior Sharon Ammarell. Ammarell finished the regular season undefeated at 9-0. Her outstanding performances enabled her to travel to the NCAA Division III championships at Claremont College in California. As one of the 32 women competing in the event, Ammarell was paired with the tournament's number 8 seeded player for her first round. Unfortunately, she was defeated by her opponent, Susan Lochiatto from Salem State College in Massachusetts, 2-6, 2-6. Latimore believes that Sharon put in a lot of extra hours during her tennis career at Juniata and that it was an honor for her to participate in a prestigious event like the nationals.

Ammarell also participated in the MAC Women's Singles Tournament at Dickinson College. Seeded No. 4 going into the tournament, she progressed to the quarterfinals before being defeated by Jo Zierdt of Ursinus, 6-3, 6-3. In her first of three matches on Friday, Ammarell defeated Kristyn Lortz of Dickinson, 6-1, 6-4. She fought hard to win the second match over Becky Brillen from Susquehanna, 7-6(7-5), 7-6(7-2) before succumbing to Zierdt, who finished in the final four of the tourney. Ammarell's final record was 11-2.

Freshman Ginny Krall also traveled to MACs. In her first round, she defeated Kim Gormley of Susquehanna 7-5, 6-4. Krall had lost to Gormley earlier in the season 6-1, 4-6, 2-6. In second round action, Yvette Wagensommer of F.D.U. defeated Krall 6-0, 6-0, on her way to taking first place MAC honors. Wagensommer also was a national quarterfinalist.

In MAC doubles action, Kim Detwiler and Amy Powless were defeated by a team from Western Maryland 6-2, 6-1. In the consolation, they were defeated by a Lycoming team 6-0, 6-0 in the semi-finals.

Latimore is hopeful about next season with most of the team returning. Freshmen who had starting honors this season included Krall at No. 2 and No. 3, Detwiler at No. 4, Leanne Egolf at No. 5, and Liane Burns at No. 5 and No. 6. Others to see playing time include senior Janey Povey, junior Pam Baughman, sophomore Yvette Rotundo, and freshmen Lauren Rogerson and Tracy Benson.

Latimore also commented on Egolf playing in only 5 of the 9 matches of the season because of afternoon classes. Her season record was 5-0 and the coach feels that she could have been a key factor in turning some of the matches around.

Net Notes: For the Men's Tennis team, freshman Chris Savage had an outstanding year as he finished 7-2. He played No. 4, 5, and 6 singles during the season. He travelled to MACs for the singles competition. He won his 1st round, but lost the second to the No. 1 player from Ursinus.

Junior and first year player Tom Lancaster ended 4-3 on the season. He competed at the No. 4 and 5 singles positions.

Sophomore Dave Johns finished 5-4. He played No. 4 and 5 singles during the season.

Men Finish 20-7

by Jay Jones

"We just have to be happy with a 20-7 record, regroup and get ready for next year," stated a disappointed Coach Bill Berrier. The Indian baseball team, who won twenty games in a season for the second time in the team's history (the first time was in 1981), was overlooked in the bids for the NCAA post-tournament play. The Indians were one of seven teams being considered for six positions in the Midwest Region of the NCAA's. Elizabethtown (24-11), winner of the MAC North Division, was chosen to represent that Division in the Midwest Region.

The Tribe was able to achieve its twenty-win season by virtue of a split of a doubleheader against Lock Haven State and a wild victory over Penn State (for the first time in at least seventeen contests). Lock Haven won the first game of the doubleheader held on May 9 by a score of 17-12. Juniata was holding an 8-2 lead going in to the top of the fourth (thanks to a four-run first and a four-run third inning) when LHSC exploded for nine runs in the fourth inning and five more runs in the fifth inning to run away with the contest. Juniata scored four times in the final inning to finish out the scoring. Dave Musser started the game, working three-plus innings, giving way to the eventual losing pitcher, Dave Lesser. In the game, the Indians accumulated fourteen hits with Dave Murphy's three hits and John Widener's homerun leading the way.

In the second game, Rich Howey, pitching in relief of starter John Summers, shut down a LHSC rally in the fifth inning and continued to fire scoreless ball over the next two innings to help Juniata to a 9-4 victory. The Indians took the lead in the first inning following a solo homerun by Carl Pavolic. Then in the second inning, Juniata scored four more times to add to its lead.

Lock Haven threatened in the fourth and fifth innings scoring two runs in each of those innings but the Indians answered those runs with four of their own coming in those innings. In the fourth, Grady Paul unleashed a two-run homerun and in the sixth, Glenn Hineman collected on a two-run single to account for those four runs.

On Friday, May 13, Juniata surprised the Penn State main campus team with a 13-10 victory. The Tribe, down 8-5 in the sixth inning, scored six times in that inning to take the lead for good. Juniata collected but two big hits in the inning: Grady Paul hit a two-run double and Jeff Meeker ripped a three-run triple. The Indians took full advantage of six walks issued by the PSU pitcher and one error committed in the inning. Juniata scored twice more in the eighth inning as Dave Murphy led off the inning wth a line-drive homerun and Scott Cole singled in Jim Laphan from third base. Penn State threatened in the top of the ninth with two runs of their own but their rally fell short. Rich Howey, again in relief, picked up the win, his eighth of the year. He pitched four-plus innings in relief of starter Bob McDonald. Along with Paul and Meeker, Tom Shawley collected two hits in the game.

"Overall, I was pleasantly surprised with the impressive results of our relatively inexperienced ballclub," said Coach Berrier. "It is odd that the first game of the year (a split in a doubleheader with Elizabethtown) kept us out of the NCAA tournament."

Indian Notes:

Coach Berrier said that the team was waiting to decide about a possible ECAC tournament bid. The players were to vote on Tuesday, May 17 as to whether or not they desired to participate in the tourney the weekend before finals . . . Coach Berrier gave special notice to Rich Howey's 8-0 record as a freshman pitcher . . . Dave Murphy was voted second team outfielder on the MAC all-star team.

"The Sports Corner"

by Mark Shaw

Well folks, here we are. We've arrived at the end of another wonderful year here at Juniata (please don't laugh). And, of course, along with the end of the year comes the last issue of the Juniatian (sob, sob, or cheer, cheer depending upon your perspective).

I remember way back to the beginning of the year, I think it was September, when I started out as an assistant sports editor to my predecessor, Andy Berdy. There was a lot to learn back then, and, hopefully, I have filled his shoes admirably.

Also, at the beginning of the year, we didn't have a gym (oh, excuse me, a Sports + Recreation Center). We waited with great anticipation for its opening in January. Many of us were filled with skepticisms of whether it really would be completed when they said. Our skepticism proved to be misplaced as the Sports + Recreation Center was completed as scheduled. (You know, I was just thinking, I am glad the gym is called the Sports + Recreation Center because when you write about it, the name takes up more space than gym. Therefore, I can write a shorter article without it appearing any shorter.)

Anyway, the Sports + Recreation Center has proven to be a great success, and it has provided for a number of great sport stories throughout the year. Personally, even though I was one of the many skeptics, I am glad that it was built.

As a thought about writing my last "Sports Corner" for this school year, I began to look back on Juniata's year in sports. I decided to page through some of the old issues.

One of the best weekends for sports occurred on the first weekend in October, Parent's Weekend. The parents were in for a treat as they watched both the football team and volleyball team win. In football, we played a tough Delaware Valley team. The Indians were down 10-0, but came back to win 12-10 on the shoulders of their aerial attack.

The Women's Volleyball team played in the Juniata Classic. They captured first place by winning all of their matches. It was an exciting weekend in sports.

The Women's Volleyball team provided further excitement as they became ranked number 1 in the nation and, later, made it to the Division III final four. The women had a truly spectacular season.

As the football team ran into problems and the women's volleyball team continued their winning ways, the winter sports began action.

The men's basketball team got off to a slow start and appeared to be destined to stay that way. The women, however, continuously flirted with the chance for a .500 season, only to drop 2 of their last three games. Wrestling did give us something to cheer about. The team finished with one of its best records ever, and, for me (and those watching) provided great excitement when they came back from a 22-0 deficit to defeat Kings College.

Next, came the spring sports. Spring is always a time when people go out and become active. Juniata College is no different. The baseball and softball teams had good years, as the softball team just missed becoming MAC champions, and the baseball team finished 20-7. Women's track became a strong force in the MACs as they finished second; the men, also fared well at MACs as they finished sixth.

And, of course, there were intramurals. Almost everyone participates in them; in winter term there were almost 1000 people playing intramurals. I think a hearty thanks should be given to the IM department for the work they have done. It is a tough job to keep track of about 12 different divisions and some 80 or 90 teams. Believe me, this organization has made my job a lot easier.

In closing, I'd like to apologize to any team that I have not mentioned, or any outstanding athlete that I have overlooked (and we have many), but I only have so much space in the paper.

I am looking forward to providing you with the sporting news which you desire to read next year (if you come upon any great revelations over the summer please let me know). And if any one out there gets the urge to write sports next year, feel free to attend our first meeting (I'm sure I'll find something for you to write). Finally (did I hear a "Thank God" out there?), I hope that next year will be as great a year in sports for Juniata as this year.

VOL. XXXV, NO. 1 | Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652 | SEPTEMBER 23, 1983

Detwiler Plaza added to campus

by Maureen Morrissey

Many upperclassmen were disappointed last week at what one senior described as "a poor excuse for a storming of the arch."

The long-lived Juniata tradition was carried out Wednesday, September 14, and while most are used to this event lasting well into the night, this year's episode was completed in about a half an hour. "It wasn't even dark out when they stopped," one senior male commented. "I remember when WE did it, it was very dark when it was over."

The subsequent panty raid which usually sends terror into the hearts of the girls in Lesher every year was also a letdown. As the residents hid in their barricaded rooms expecting the worst, refusing to come out even for telephone calls, this year's freshmen merely irritated them by knocking on their doors pretending to be making pizza deliveries.

The Storming of the Arch, which goes way back in Juniata history, stems from the idea that senior men want to "protect" the freshmen women or all J.C. women from the freshmen males who are considered unworthy. In order to prove themselves the freshmen men must try to break through a wall of senior men blocking the archway of Cloister. They have never succeeded. What usually occurs is a great deal of tackling, pushing, screaming of obscene insults and the tearing off of clothes.

At the storming several upperclassmen speculated that perhaps the tradition, which usually involves a trip to J.C. Blair for at least one of the participants is being slowly phased out. It appears after the seventh charge by the freshmen they were told to stop. In addition, throughout the storming the freshmen had to be instructed what to do next by the football players who acted as the referees for the evening. What occurred was described by one senior as "more talking than storming."

This year the women of the arch created a banner which hung over the arch. It read: "The Arch will Keep its Virginity. The Freshmen Cannot Penetrate." However, according to one of the arch's female residents, there may be more for them to do next year besides making banners. As she ascended the stairs of the arch to her room, she shook her head and said of the freshmen, "Even the archwomen could have done a better job."

New computer system ready after fall break

Possible computer in every dorm room

by Laura Mumaw

The new computer system in the Brumbaugh Science Center is nearing completion. The facilities are expected to be ready for use upon the return of the students from the fall term break.

The advantages of this new system include a larger memory, a faster read-out and 45 additional terminals.

In preparation for the arrival of the new system, the Science Library at the Brumbaugh Science Center was moved into the compact shelving unit in the basement of the L.A. Beeghly Library. A former physics laboratory provides a temporary location for the new system until it can be placed in the former Science Library.

While the new terminal is waiting to be moved, there are a group of students and faculty being trained to assist students on the new system.

Dr. Dale L. Wampler, Director of the Academic Computer Center, feels "this is the first step to making computers more accessible to a larger part of the student population."

As far as expansion in the future, there are possibilities of a system being set up that enables students to tap directly into the main terminal by telephone while they use their own personal computers in their dorms. This action, however, would require major renovations of the residence halls.

On the idea of students owning their own computers, Kevin McCullen, Director of Institutional Planning and Research, felt that, "In the next five years, computers are going to become more and more a part of student life at Juniata. Many students will bring their own computers to school just as they bring their stereos. We plan to meet the needs of these students with appropriate courses, creative teaching and excellent computer facilities."

McCullen also felt that, in regard to the new system, there will be no need for major replacement in the future.

Arch Storming: "a poor excuse"

by Linda Ramsay

The dirt and cinders have disappeared. What once was mud and tractor tire grooves has been swept over and constructed into the Detwiler Plaza.

After almost a year of building and construction in and around the old Memorial Gym, the dust has finally cleared. The Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center was officially dedicated in April, although construction continued from late April through August on the plaza in front of the Kennedy Center.

The Detwiler Plaza was named honoring Virginia C. Detwiler and Dr. Dale W. Detwiler in recognition of the dedicated planning and service done by the Detwilers on the sports complex.

Dr. Detwiler is a trustee of the college and chairman of the Building and Grants Committee. The funding for this $60,000 project came from additional gifts and trustee contributions.

Not only is the plaza an attractive entrance for the Sports and Recreation Center, but according to Mr. William Alexander, head of the business office for Juniata, it was built with several other purposes in mind. The obvious convenience of the plaza is pedestrian travel. The paved walks leading to the sports-plus complex will decrease the tracking of mud and water in the area, especially in the winter.

The layout of the plaza, including dimensions of the tiers, steps, and wall facing the Sports and Recreation Center were all taken into account at its construction. The brick tiers are wide enough for three rows of folding chairs and each step can accommodate an additional row. The back wall was erected at a height convenient for sitting. Electric outlets were also installed within the light posts for an added convenience

Special occasions such as receptions associated with freshmen orientation, Parents' Day, Homecoming and Alumni Weekend were all offered as possible uses of the area. Juniata is also exploring the possibility of holding graduation ceremonies on the plaza.

Besides being an informal meeting place and convenient area to stop and talk, activities such as the picnic and band at the start of the school year can be entertaining purposes for the Detwiler Plaza.

The Juniatian and you — the year ahead

The Juniatian Staff would like to take this first editorial of the year to welcome all students and faculty back to Juniata.

There have been a few changes in the staff for this year and we hope that this new staff will continue to stimulate the minds of those associated with Juniata.

As in years past, The Juniatian will again carry news, features and sports articles.

In the news area, the Juniatian will cover both college and national news. The hot items on campus can be read weekly. The "In the News" feature, introduced last year, will give a summary of the week's world events. In addition, there will be a weekly editorial cartoon on current national or seasonal topics.

In the features area, the Juniatian will hopefully cover the areas which interest students most. "Along Muddy Run" will be continued as a satire about the college, the national news or life in general. "Hot Wax" will also be continued, reviewing current albums. In addition to these weekly features there will be reviews of artists series, speakers and maybe even some of the area's restaurants.

In the sports area, the Juniatian will cover both varsity and intramural sports. All of the varsity sports will be given ample coverage. In response to the great acceptance of the intramural coverage last year, it will be continued this year. Hopefully, whatever you want to know about sports at Juniata will be found in the Juniatian.

The Juniatian will hopefully cover the needs of all of the students. We are always open to any suggestions students or faculty may have; in fact, we welcome them. Any ideas which would make the Juniatian a better paper would be greatly appreciated.

Walk for Nuclear Freeze

Local supporters of a bilateral freeze on nuclear weapons testing, production and deployment are invited to join tens of thousands of like-minded walkers in more than 240 communities in the First National Freeze Walk on Saturday, October 1, according to Debbie Justham of Huntingdon County Campaign for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze.

People may pre-register and receive a sponsor pledge form by phoning the Freeze Walk office at (814) 643-4774.

The 5 kilometer (3.1 miles) fund-raising walk-a-thon will start at 1:00 P.M. at Huntingdon Area High School. Walkers will follow a designated route and return for a short rally.

Said Justham, "Our local Freeze Walk will show that people in our Congressional district want an end to the nuclear arms race and are walking to raise the money to bring this about."

For futher information and pre-registration call (814) 643-4774.

In case you haven't noticed (or haven't gotten that far yet), the life cycle of that old Juniata T or sweat shirt has four stages, at least up to the point at which I am now. The four stages don't necessarily correspond with the basic four year system, (meaning Freshman year, Sophomore year, etc. . .) as a matter of fact, they usually don't.

It all begins when your parents bring you up to Juniata for orientation. As we all remember, and usually hate to admit, exploring all the novel creaks and crevices of the proverbial Campus Bookstore is one of the main "do on your own time" features of the weekend. It's all new to you and your parents are running around embarrassing you in front of all those people by telling you that Uncle George would just love one of those Juniata mugs for Christmas. You probably looked down, rubbed your nose and mumbled "yeah." Mom picks up a couple of Juniata stickers for the car. "Should I get the long one or one of the little ones? What do you think?"

Sure, you browse through the books. Dad may comment about the high prices. They were cheaper in his day. You knew that. Everything was cheaper in his day. Just ask him, he'll tell you. You move on through shelves stocked with various Juniata College paraphernalia. I should add right here that the variety of Juniata College paraphernalia has grown considerably since my Freshman Orientation. But that just makes me feel old.

Inevitably, you end up at the clothing section. Mom says she'll buy you a T-shirt (or a sweat shirt, depending on how proud she is of you and how much she's willing to dish out for it). You say sure. So you hunt through the different styles and eventually the three of you decide on one. (Dad is almost always asked his opinion and in typical fatherly style he likes just about any one that's shown to him.)

You now have your own college T-shirt — from your very own college. You go home from orientation and wear it and wear it and wear it and everyone you know knows where you're going to school in September. Being a female, I was asked many times, for some reason unknown to me, if Juniata was an all-girl school. Even today I still have to answer that question once in a while.

Anyway, you go back to Juniata and start school, and suddenly it's uncool to wear your Juniata shirt anymore. Everyone here already knows where you go to school. So the shirt stays in the drawer until it's time to paint or it's wash day or something.

The next thing you know it's okay to wear your Juniata shirt again. It doesn't look new anymore because you've worn it for only the most brutal activities for the past six months or so. Now it's stretched out, maybe a couple of paint stains, a hole or two. All of the sudden it's one of your favorites. You catch yourself wearing it on Saturdays and any other time you're just bumming around. You even catch other people wearing their's on Saturdays and any other time they're just bumming around. It's cool to wear your Juniata shirt again. So you wear it.

Now, logically, what should follow here would be answering the question of what happens next. Well, I don't know. I'm not there yet. I would imagine, though, that there are four possibilities. You may give it to your mother who then uses it as a dustcloth. (Is that really why she bought it in the first place?) Or maybe you give it to a younger brother or sister, assuming you have one, and if so that that brother or sister doesn't already have a shirt that you got them for Christmas or something. It's also quite possible that your younger brother or sister gives it to Mom to use as a dustcloth. The last possibility, it seems, would be that you would keep it to wear for Saturdays or painting or just bumming around. I guess I'll keep it.

Student Government Comes to Order

by Joy Hadley

"Student Government is off to a good start," said president Rory McAvoy after the Thursday, September 15 meeting of the association.

Following welcoming remarks by the president, the agenda included comments on the radio announcements, a summary and the highlights of the Leadership Conference, sponsored by Student Government held September 3rd and 4th at Green Hills. Committee appointments were approved, the Budget and Management Committee gave its report, followed by discussions on the formulation of the attendance policy for Student Government members, and the status and results of the Used Book Store.

Probably the most important item on the agenda was the report by the Budget and Management Committee, chaired by Greg Kimble, treasurer. Approved by the Student Government members was the establishment of line accounts for the five major clubs and organizations, which include the Alfarata, the Juniatian, Laughing Bush, KVASIR, and WKVR. Two purchases are also approved. A typewriter is felt to be a necessity for the Student Government office and an ice machine is to be placed in an area more accessible than those in Baker Refectory. RHA agreed to contribute to the cost of the ice machine. Neither purchase is to exceed $1,000.00. Funds were also provided for improvements on the Student Government office.

Also mentioned in the report by the Budget and Management Committee was solicitation in dorms and on campus. In order for any organization or association on campus to solicit, they must be chartered and a license is required. Applications for a license can be found either in the Student Government office or at the Information desk in Ellis. Failure to comply with these requirements can result in the organization being asked to leave the area where they are soliciting. Further offenses can result in Student Government recommending that the Dean of Student Services take disciplinary actions against the organization.

A committee was formed to decide on the attendance policy.

Artist Series Opens with Joffrey Ballet

by Paul Bomberger

Tickets for Juniata College's 1983-84 Artist Series, which opens Oct. 6, are now on sale.

The six-program Artist Series offers music, dance and theater, and is designed to provide cultural and aesthetic opportunities to both the campus community and its larger, regional audience.

The Oct. 6 performance features the Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group. Established five years ago, the Concert Group has become very popular and well-known in the United States and Canada, with tours of South America and Europe planned for the future.

On Oct. 19, John Mohler, clarinetist will appear. Mohler is currently chairman of the wind and percussion instruments department of the University of Michigan School of Music, and is clarinetist with the University Woodwind Quintet.

Mummenschanz, the Swiss mime company, will delight the audience with their unique interpretation of life in theater and theater in life. Mummenschanz creators Andres Bossard, Bernie Schurch and Floriana Frassetto have broken through the barriers of conventional pantomime to create a fanciful new manner of theatrical expression based in part upon the Ancient Swiss theater tradition of "The Masks." The performance is set for Jan. 11.

The March 18 performance features the Michala Petri Trio. The young Danish artist, Michala Petri is acclaimed as one of the finest recorder players in the world. She has given hundreds of concerts in Europe and Israel, and participated in a number of festivals including the Kuhmo Festival in Finland.

A Huntingdon native, pianist Robert Swan will perform on April 10. He has played in New York, London, Taipei, Seoul, and at the White House. While on tour of the Orient, Swan became the first American pianist ever to perform the Gershwin concerto in Taipei, a performance aired in the Peoples Republic of China over China Television Service.

On May 18, the Juniata College Department of Music will present Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience," the final program in the 1983-84 Artist Series. Gilbert and Sullivan are known throughout the world as the collaborators of 14 of the most popular operettas ever written in the history of English theater. Most of their works are lighthearted satires on Victorian behavior and the British Empire. The Juniata College production of the operetta "Patience" will be produced by Bruce Hirsch, associate professor of music; Marjorie E. Hirsch, instructional assistant in music; and Doris P. Goehring, assistant professor of speech and theater.

Ticket prices for the 1983-84 Artist Series are $5 for regular season tickets for students. All ticket orders may be placed through the information desk in Ellis Hall.

Campus Jobs Scarce

by Kathy Manzella

Each fall a large number of students return to Juniata with hopes of seeking campus employment. According to Financial Aid Director Larry Bock, this year has been no different.

Bock reported that 400 students have been placed so far in various positions on campus. There are, however, an additional 380 students eligible to work who have not been placed in positions. Bock regrets that such a "positive thing as campus employment is allocated only limited resources leaving some students without jobs."

The new system which began last fall allowing students to select their own positions seems to be working quite well. This new system replaced one which required students to wait in long lines outside of Founder's Hall.

Currently there are still a few technical positions available to those students who are qualified and eligible. Students who have received eligibility cards from the Financial Aid Office are encouraged to check the Campus Employment Bulletin Board in the basement of Ellis for any further openings.

New Writer at J.C.

by Leslie A. Singleton

In the past Juniata has had many distinguished writers in residence. This year is no exception with the presence of Mr. Daniel Lusk.

Mr. Lusk, originally from the Mid-West, has lived the last five years in Central Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

Educated in the Mid-West, he holds two Masters Degrees, one in philosophy from the University of Missouri, the other in English from the University of South Dakota.

During his career Daniel Lusk has published four books, two of which are volumes of poetry; the others include a teaching handbook on Creative Writing, and also a novel, O Rosie, which is available in the campus bookstore. In addition to his own books he has been published in such distinct literary magazines as The North American Review, The New Renaissance, and Swiftriver.

Versatile, Mr. Lusk has worked in public television and also served as editor on an Arts magazine for five years. Currently he has a weekly radio commentary called "Off The Wall." It is a widely syndicated show in which he critiques books.

Daniel Lusk will only be here fall term during which he will teach Fiction Writing and Freshman Composition. While he is here, he is going to give a reading of his poetry which will be scheduled sometime in the next two weeks. He also is planning a lecture on Fiction Writing with illustrations from his works O Rosie, and his newest effort which has yet to be published Mother Wouldn't Like It Very Much. He's hoping to bring in other writers this term to lecture.

This seems like a lot to get accomplished in one term but this is nothing new to Mr. Lusk who has lectured and given readings in over sixty colleges in the East and Mid-West.

Transcript Program Implemented

by Beth Gallagher

Last spring, the initial phase of the Co-Curricular Transcript Program was launched by the Student Services Office in cooperation with Career Planning and Placement. Open to all students, this program is designed as a means of recording any extra-curricular activities in which a student participates. It is based on the underlying principle that learning in college is not restricted to the classroom, rather there are important skills developed outside of the classroom. Under the direction of Arnold J. Tilden, Jr., Dean of Student Services, the program attempts to give more structure and place more emphasis on the importance of co-curricular activities by providing written documentation of participation rather than the generally brief resume description. Student Services hopes that the transcript program will enhance and further promote activities such as Residential Life, R.H.A., KVASIR, THE JUNIATIAN, and V103.

A transcript for each enrolled student will be on record and housed in the Career Planning and Placement Office along with the standard academic transcript. Included in the transcript are the activities the student performed, skills acquired from participating in those activities, and evaluations from the corresponding resource person (the director of the club or activity).

Interested students may start their Co-Curricular Transcript by stopping and seeing Dean Tilden in Student Services. At this time interested students should fill out the required registration form. Preferably, Dean Tilden would like to have an interview with all candidates to further explain the program. Students will then be periodically informed of new developments within the program.

The Co-Curricular Transcript Program has another phase which deals with leadership seminars and conferences. Like last year, Student Services will be sponsoring a variety of conferences concentrating on leadership strategies and development. Likewise, student attendance of the conferences will be documented on the transcripts.

Currently, there are twelve students enrolled in the transcript program. However, Student Services is expecting the program to expand this year. Student Services is particularly appealing to Freshmen for participation, but all other classes are encouraged to enroll as well. Specifically for upper classmen, the program is open-ended so that activities done before its development can be backdated and recorded, too.

Dean Tilden especially stresses two primary benefits of this program. First, it provides structure for development, and perhaps more important in today's competitive job market, it may enhance placement possibilities with corporations and graduate schools. With foresight of these benefits, Student Services anticipates wide-spread involvement in the transcript program.

Peer advising for new students

by Soraya Morgan

In the past, freshmen were oriented the first four weeks of college by a faculty member. This program, freshmen conference, has proven to be in the past, and continues to be a very helpful way to enable the first year students in becoming more aware of what Juniata can offer them.

However, this year, the college is offering peer advising in addition to freshmen conference. This new program has been organized by Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services, Arnold Tilden, Vice-President and Dean of Student Services, and Jay Buchanan, Campus Counselor. Peer advisers are upperclassmen who counsel the new students on academics, careers, and the social aspects of college.

Ms. Keehner explained that there are 48 peer advisers who work with eight to ten students each. These upperclassmen meet with their class the first four Mondays of the Fall term at 7:00 p.m. However, Ms. Keehner believes that in the future the program will continue longer. Dr. Tilden remarked, "The whole concept is not to replace, but to complement freshmen conference. There are many questions new students have that upperclassmen will be able to answer from experience."

In this program, the main tool used to enable freshmen to assess career goals is "The Strong-Campbell Interest Inventory." Dr. Buchanan explained that it is to help the students discover their basic interests and capabilities. However, he stressed the survey is, "not an absolute, but rather an instrument to help self-assessment." Charlene Badorrek, a peer adviser noted that after her class took the survey, they showed much interest in analyzing their results.

Also included in the program is a tour of the career center. This is to make the newcomers aware of job opportunities, and the resources to be obtained.

When asking Dr. Buchanan what he believes can be improved with the program he replied, "As we are just starting out, there is still much organization needed, but also I think in the future we should train the peer advisers more thoroughly."

During the summer, the advisers were selected based on their leadership qualities. Careful consideration was given in placing the advisers with their groups. Most new students were placed with advisers whose academic majors were similar. Freshman, Bill Hinckman believes, "The peer advisers are good because they help with careers, but also with social questions because of their personal experiences."

Congratulations to the pioneers of this new Juniata program! It already has and shall continue to prove a useful contributing enhancement to freshmen conference.

"Odyssey" excerpts performed

Excerpts from the Greek epic "The Odyssey" by Homer will be presented at Juniata College Tuesday, Sept. 27 by Richard Dyer-Bennett, professor of speech, emeritus at the State University of New York at Stonybrook.

The British born Dyer-Bennett is a well-known singer, storyteller, minstrel and folklorist. For the last few years, Dyer-Bennett has been working on a complete recording of "The Odyssey." His 8:15 p.m. performance in Juniata's Oller Hall includes excerpts from the recording, arranged in three parts.

Using the Fitzgerald translation of "The Odyssey," Dyer-Bennett accompanies himself on the lyre to mark the transitions in the drama. He has given the program before audiences at the Library of Congress, Yale University, The Pennsylvania State University and at other locations across the United States.

"The Odyssey" is Homer's second epic, recounting the wanderings and adventures of Odysseus after the fall of Troy and his return home. The Sept. 27 reading is open to the public at no charge.

Binder: "History Study Essential"

Defending the study of history as "essential to becoming an educated person," Juniata College President Frederick M. Binder told incoming freshmen Sunday to "enjoy the excitement and the value of a course in history while at Juniata."

The president, who also is a professor of history, made his remarks at the Opening Convocation marking the beginning of Juniata's 108th academic year.

Dr. Binder noted that many Americans today view history as "a tale told by fools." Rejecting that viewpoint, the president, quoting Professor E.H. Carr of Cambridge University, said history is "an unending dialogue between the present and the past."

"It is not the task of this college to prepare students for careers as practicing historians, although we would encourage those few who may wish to follow that course. But we do suggest that while careers are of great importance to each of you, careers are superfluous to knowledge and knowledge is useless without value-judgment, understanding and perspective." Part of that understanding, the president noted, is being able to separate historical fact from historical interpretation.

Using the Middle East as a subject, Dr. Binder cited examples of historical fact and historical interpretation from Paul Johnson's recent book, "Modern Times, The World From the Twenties to the Eighties," and questioned the right of historians to make judgments on the past.

"If the study of history also enables man to comprehend the societies of the past and, in doing so, helps man to improve his mastery over the societies of the present, the question may be raised, does the student of history have the right and duty to sit in moral judgment over the past?" Instead, Dr. Binder proposed that students seek answers from the past to help make rational decisions for the future.

Noting that history is a broad discipline and nothing in it is inevitable, Dr. Binder told his audience that "the study of history produces an individual who can select pertinent data, build a thesis and draw conclusions, who sees the present more clearly and who has 'the future in his bones.'"

Dr. Binder concluded his remarks by expressing the hope that the students would profit from their exposure to history, no matter what career they chose. "I encourage you to take the present by the hand and, looking backward for example and support, walk confidently into the future."

Dep. Club Retreat

by Mary E. Ritchey

Last weekend a group of Juniata students attended the Deputation Club's Fall Retreat. A total of 50 people participated throughout the weekend, with Saturday night being the most crowded.

Deputation Club's Fall Retreat is a tradition at Juniata. It serves to kick-off the year's activities and introduce new members to each other and returning members. The weekend featured games to help people loosen up and get to know each other, sing-alongs, canoeing, beach volleyball, marshmallow toasting, a hike/picnic and ultimately, Bible studies. Campus Minister Andy Murray offered Communion Saturday night. A brief Sunday morning Worship Service concluded the retreat.

This year the Deputation Club plans Sunday services for churches throughout much of the state, a food drive to help Huntingdon's Food Bank and Christmas caroling at J.C. Blair Hospital.

Islamic Uprising Lecture

The recent Islamic revolution in Iran was the focus of the first Baker Lecture presented Tuesday, Sept. 20 in Juniata College's faculty lounge, Ellis Hall.

The 8:15 p.m. lecture, "Islamic Fundamentalism and the Revolution in Iran" was delivered by Dr. R.K. Ramazani, Edward Stettinius Professor of Government and International Relations at the University of Virginia, where he has taught since 1954.

Dr. Ramazani, a native of Iran, is the author of nine books, including the prize-winning volume "The Foreign Policy of Iran, 1500-1941" and "Oil, War and Revolution in the Middle East." He also has contributed to 20 other books and published numerous articles.

In addition to the University of Virginia, Dr. Ramazani has held visiting professorships at the School of Advanced International Studies at The Johns Hopkins University, the American University of Beirut and Cambridge University in England. He is on the editorial boards of "The Middle East Journal," "Journal of South Asian and Middle Eastern Studies" and "The Levant." Dr. Ramazani has been a consultant to the Rockefeller Foundation, U.S. government and the United Nations.

Eight programs have been planned for the 1983-84 Baker Lecture Series, co-sponsored by Juniata's Peace and Conflict Studies Program and the political science department. All lectures are open to the public at no charge.

As the policy stands now, each Senator is allowed two absences as stated in the Constitution. The committee will decide what constitutes an "excused" or "unexcused" absence. Student Government also approved the appointments of Mike Kaulfold as the new Sherwood Senator and Linda Fultz as President Pro Temp. Kaulfold replaced Kerry Hendershot, who vacated the position to become an RA.

Peggy Evans reported on the success of the Used Book Store. The enterprise earned approximately $498.00 for students who turned in their books to be sold. Of course not all of the books were sold, but Evans stated, "I think it went well for a first time," and insists that the Used Book Store, "will be better organized the next time."

Nicolee Mengel, liaison between Centerboard and Student Government, reported on items from Centerboard minutes which were to be brought to the attention of Student Government. Among the items was a discrepancy over the handling of a water safety course offered last year by Red Cross. Centerboard offered suggestions as to how to avoid future problems. Also Centerboard is considering funding special projects, such as Homecoming and the Madrigal Dinner, for which each class is expected to pay. However, no decisions were made since representatives from the classes were not present.

Apparently considered a social center and an inadequate study area, the library was brought up as a major student concern. Suggestions were made for the opening of Good Hall as an alternative.

The next Student Government meeting is scheduled for September 26, at 8:30 in the Faculty Lounge.

Pitt Native Named Director

Juniata College President Frederick M. Binder has announced the appointment of Kenneth M. Kornick as director of college advancement.

A native of Pittsburgh, Kornick comes to Juniata from Duquesne University where he had worked since June, 1976, most recently as assistant director of development.

Prior to his association with Duquesne, Kornick was an editorial consultant to GAI Consultants, Inc., in Monroeville, an instructor in English at LaRoche College in Pittsburgh, and a news and information specialist/statistical analyst for the Western Pennsylvania Special Education Regional Resource Center in Gibsonia. Kornick also served in the U.S. Army as a public information and civic affairs specialist, stationed in West Germany.

Kornick received his B.A. degree in English from Duquesne in 1969. He also holds an M.A. degree in English and an M.S.Ed. in secondary school guidance and counseling, both from Duquesne.

As Juniata's director of college advancement, Kornick will be responsible for designing and implementing a promotional plan, writing copy for promotional materials, drafting proposals for financial support, developing media presentations and other advancement duties.

"Mr. Kornick comes to Juniata with an impressive background in development and communications work," said Dr. Binder. "His knowledge and talent will be an asset to the college advancement program at Juniata."

Kornick and his wife Nancy reside at 3730 Cold Springs Rd., Huntingdon.

Landscapes on Display

Local residents will have the opportunity to appreciate the beauty of European art through an exhibit at Juniata College.

Through September 30, a montage of prints and drawings of European landscapes will be on display in Shoemaker Galleries. These are graphic works by major and minor masters from the 17th to the 20th centuries, including original etchings, engravings, lithographs, woodcuts and watercolors.

Landscape art is actually something of the 19th century invention. The earliest landscapes usually did not depict geographically identifiable scenes as such, but rather portrayed nature as a background for religious, mythological or historical subjects. The negative medieval attitude toward the natural world is sometimes reflected in these early landscapes.

Not until the Romantic artists was the beauty and value of nature explored. Scenic landscape held the greatest interest among artists during this period, and cityscapes evolved from the Industrial Revolution.

Many 20th century artists, including the cubists, expressionists and surrealists are more interested in the forms of artistic expression in landscape art than in realistic representations of nature. Nonetheless, the more traditional 19th century landscape style has continued.

The exhibit in Shoemaker Galleries is sponsored by the Argus Gallery of Washington, D.C., and is open to the public at no charge.

The Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants is sponsoring its ninth annual Student Manuscript Competition. The purpose of the contest is to encourage college students to address those issues which will affect the future of the accounting profession.

The competition is open to all junior, senior and graduate students majoring in accounting at a Pennsylvania college or university. A committee composed of CPAs in public accounting, industry, and government or education will review the manuscripts. Cash awards of $700, $500 and $300 respectively will be given for the three best articles.

The first place winning article will be published in the summer of 1984 issue of the PENNSYLVANIA CPA JOURNAL. The topic of the contest is "Accounting Standards Overload: An Alternative Approach." Manuscripts must be 1500-2000 words in length and submitted by December 30, 1983.

For more information and an application, contact the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants (Mary Sachs Building, Suite 200, 208 North Third Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17101.

Indian Summer Heat

Guard Yourself Against Illness

Warm fall weather is the ideal time for outdoor activities and organized athletics.

But even in autumn, temperatures can soar and humidity can be oppressive. And that can mean a lot more than just fun and games if the body is not properly protected against the effects of heat stress, according to Dr. David Lamb, a Purdue University professor and former president of the American College of Sports Medicine.

Active people are usually acclimated to warmer temperatures by late summer and fall, Lamb said. But distance runners are reminded that it is virtually impossible to adequately replenish all the fluids lost during a full marathon run. And football players, encased from head to toe in foam and plastic protective wear, are especially vulnerable to the ill effects of heat stress.

Heatstroke is the second leading cause of death on the playing field, Lamb said. Left untreated, it is nearly always fatal. But early treatment almost always results in complete recovery. Common sense is the first step toward prevention. A reasonably well-trained athlete who has been acclimated to high temperatures should dress appropriately and consume 2 cups or more of cool liquids every 15 or 20 minutes during exercise, Lamb said. Avoid caffeine, alcohol and most carbonated beverages. These are not well-tolerated by the body under heat stress and can sometimes cause nausea and actually increase fluid loss.

Most cases of heat-related illnesses are less serious than heatstroke, of course. Dehydration, the precursor to heat exhaustion and heatstroke, results when lost body fluids are not restored to normal levels. Athletes are often unaware that they are dehydrated, but symptoms may include mild dizziness, fatigue, some nausea and loss of concentration.

Heat exhaustion is characterized by faintness, rapid pulse rate, nausea, headache and heavy perspiration. In heatstroke, the final and most critical stage of heat illness, the victim may cease sweating, is mentally confused or delirious, has a rapid pulse and a very high body temperature. The body is literally overheating.

Just as seat belts can reduce the risk of injury in an auto accident, fluid consumption a few minutes before exercise and every 15-20 minutes thereafter helps offset heat build-up in the body. During exercise, 75 percent of the energy used is converted to heat. The body perspires to cool itself. Dehydration occurs when the body's fluid-intake is inadequate to replenish fluid lost in sweat.

Body fluids lost through sweating contain elements of sodium, chloride and potassium. These electrolytes are essential to the body's osmotic processes and help move fluid from the stomach and intestines through the body. According to Lamb, electrolytes are needed to stimulate the nerve impulses that contract muscles. Thus, an imbalance of electrolytes may disrupt neuromuscular function. Excessive losses of electrolytes during exercise must eventually be made up by the consumption of electrolytes in food and drink.

A Look at the 1983 Fall Sports

Looking for a National Championship

The Juniata College women's volleyball team opened its 1983 campaign on September 13 at Eastern Connecticut. The team competed in a triangular event with Occidental (Ca.) and Eastern Connecticut.

With a fourth place finish in the NCAA tournament last year and finishing runner-up in the nation in 1981, Coach Larry Bock hopes to maintain the winning tradition.

Despite losing five starters and starting the season without a senior on the roster, Bock is still looking forward to the year with anticipation.

"We have great potential on this team but this season we will need patience while we gain experience. Our primary goal will be to repeat as champions of the Middle Atlantic Conference," Bock points out.

The five starters lost from last year include four selected to the Middle Atlantic Conference All-Star Team and two selected to the NCAA Division III All-American Team.

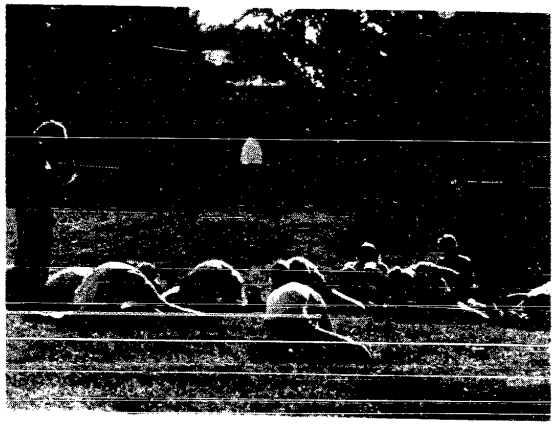
"This season we will face the toughest schedule that we have ever put together," Bock said, "and it is particularly rough in the early part of the season, but we should develop strength as the season progresses. We need to develop depth and confidence. If we can avoid the injuries that hurt us so must last year we should be a contender when playoff time rolls around."

A total of nine letterwinners will be returning this season and Bock looks for Opanayikul Ekanong, Peggy Evans and Tracey DeBlase, all juniors, to pace the team.

"We were able to recruit an outstanding freshman group — it is as good as we could have hoped for," says Bock, "not tall, but quick and intelligent. All come from excellent high school programs."

Bock believes that the important factor early in the season will be to maintain a positive attitude.

Coach Bock will be looking for quick help from some members of the freshman group and he believes that help will come from a group that includes Trish Corl of Norwin, Mariella Gacka of Richland Township, Carolyn Stambaugh of Spring Grove, Jennifer Bock of Eastern York, Diane Hauger of Rockwood, Lisa Forsythe of Kane, Terri Yoder of DeLone Catholic, Lori Bason of Somerset and Jessie Fox of Quakertown.



Field Hockey Coach Roslyn Hall seems to be checking her notes while her girls loosen up for a practice.

Hoping to Improve

The Juniata College soccer team under fifth year head coach Klaus Jaeger opened its 1983 campaign on September 7. The team traveled to Wilkes-Barre and faced Kings College.

Coach Jaeger expects this year's team to show marked improvement over last year's somewhat disappointing 2-12-0 season.

For the second year in a row, some 15 freshmen are among the 30 players reporting to soccer camp and the early prognosis is favorable.

Freshmen John Vedovich and Bob Rhodes will be contenders for starting positions in the backfield. Nat Burnside, Tom Marshall and Pete Rech, also freshmen, may be called upon to fill key positions in midfield with Loren Barclay, Wes Manger and Michael Smith adding depth and much needed scoring punch to the front line.

The position in goal is going to be hotly contested by four players. Last year's starting keeper sophomore Russ Leberman will be facing competition from senior Steve DiMarco, sophomore Bob Williams and freshman Todd Arnette.

The five lettermen returning this fall, seniors Chris Doran and Gary Steckley, and sophomores Russ Leberman, Sean Ruth and Tom Visosky, face the challenge of helping the freshmen adjust quickly to college level soccer. They will be aided by senior Jeff Dougherty, MVP in 1981, who is rejoining his team as captain after sitting out the 1982 campaign because of injuries sustained in an auto accident.

The 1983 schedule calls for 14 games, four of which will be against Division II opponents Bloomsburg, Shippensburg, St. Vincent and UPJ. All other games are against Division III foes including always tough Elizabethtown, league champion Albright and powerful Messiah College.

The team will be the underdog in almost all of its games. Coach Jaeger, however, expects his players to be ready to "spring a few surprises" provided everyone stays healthy throughout the demanding eight-week season.

The complete Indian schedule:

Sept. 7, at Kings; 10, St. Vincent; 14 at UPJ; 17 at Elizabethtown; 22, Messiah; 24, Lycoming; 28, Dickinson.

Oct. 5, at Wilkes; 11, York; 15, Susquehanna; 19 at Lebanon Valley; 22, at Albright; 26, at Bloomsburg; 31, at Shippensburg.

Fast Running

The Juniata College men's and women's cross country teams will open their 1983 seasons on Saturday, September 10, at the Lebanon Valley Invitational at Annville.

The women's team, one of the most successful of Juniata sports teams during its three years of existence, closed the books on 1982 with a 10-2 record. The men's squad ended last year with a 6-2 tally.

Four letterwinners will be returning for women's coach Bill Latimore including sophomore Kathy Duffy who, as a freshman, finished first ten times in regular meets. Another sophomore member of the 1983 squad will be Carol Tendall who finished second in the MAC championship race and fifth in the NCAA Regionals.

Joining the pair will be senior Carolyn Andre, a three letter winner and junior Chris Schleiden, a two letter winner. Also returning will be seniors Linda Fultz and Susan Richards, sophomore Colleen Wright and several freshmen candidates.

First year men's head coach Joel Brown will be trying to combine some tested veterans and a good crop of freshmen to improve upon a fine 1982 season.

With five lettermen returning, the team will have some proven point getters from the upperclass ranks.

Coach Brown will be depending on junior Mark Royer and sophomore William Ciesla, along with sophomores Paul Bomberger and Ken Kramer, juniors Pat Hepner and two year letterwinners Dave Long and Andy Marsh.

The complete Indian schedule:

Sept. 10 at Lebanon Valley Invitational; 17 at Gettysburg and Messiah; at Elizabethtown and Albright (men), at Albright (women).

Oct. 1, F & M (women); 5 at Shippensburg (women); 8, Dickinson; 12, York; 15, Susquehanna (men), at Allentown Invitational (women); 19, Lycoming; 22 at Western Maryland; 29, at Dickinson Invitational.

Nov. 5, MAC championships, TBA.

Sports Corner

by Mark Shaw

Well, here it is another year. You know, after a while they all begin to look the same. But, each year something new and exciting happens that makes that year special. What will it be this year? Last year, it was the opening of the new gym (oops, Sports and Recreation Center); the year before that our Women's Volleyball Team finished second in the nation for Division III schools; and my freshman year — who can remember that far back? (whew, thinking back to my freshman year makes me feel old).

So, anyway, what will make this year special? Will it be that our football team defeats Widener at home or will our basketball team soar to new heights? (I hope you enjoyed that pun . . . actually I hope that you got that pun) Will our volleyball team gain that national championship they've been yearning for or will our spring sports become the most successful ever?

The answer to these questions will come to us some time next year when we look back upon them. Then, it may dawn on us that it was not the idea of winning that made the events special, but rather the feelings and times shared during these moments.

Many of my memories about sports here at Juniata do not necessarily deal with varsity sports (I never played on a varsity team — perennially bad knees) but rather, they deal with intramurals. I look upon intramurals as great instruments for making friendships, both on your team and on opposing teams. Intramurals offer a great way to meet people and give many of us long lasting memories.

I remember the co-rec softball team of my freshman year. We had a blast that term; and, even though we lost in the playoffs, the experiences proved to be well worth it. In fact, that team of freshman year has basically remained intact but we have yet to gain that elusive championship. Another I.M. team that I remember is the soccer team that I was on last year. We did not win a game all term, but we gave it our best and enjoyed ourselves (wait, I just remembered that we did win one game — against one of the girl's soccer teams).

These are some of the many memories which I bring with me into my senior year. I am sure that there are many, like myself, who have precious memories concerning sporting events; each one holding a special place. As I begin my senior year, I hope to add to that list of memories and, yes, maybe I will get that elusive teeshirt that I have been longing for.

My advice is, especially to the freshmen who have the longest time to be here, to get involved and enjoy yourself. Because, once you graduate the real world begins, and this great opportunity to form long lasting memories and friends will have been lost. I am glad that I took advantage of the opportunity.

Stickers Strong

ord, but gained a great deal of experience out of it. Their play improved with each game.

Thus far, the Lady Stickers have looked quite impressive. Under the coaching of Roslyn Hall, they have become a team to reckon with.

The Lady Stickers have a game at home this Saturday at 10:30 against Wilkes College.

Looking Strong

The Juniata College women's field hockey team opened the 1983 campaign on September 10 when they traveled to Wilkes College in Wilkes-Barre.

Starting her second season at the field hockey helm, Coach Roslyn Hall will be looking for improvement over last year's young squad that finished 1-6-3.

Of the eighteen players from the 1982 squad, seventeen will be returning. In addition, senior Heidi Loomis, who spent her junior year in Europe, will rejoin the club.

The return of Loomis should add much needed strength to the offense and senior Terry Sagan, the 1982 MVP, will anchor the defense.

Returnees Laura Babiash, Jill Loomis, Leslie Pinto, Lisa Wilson, Tammie Seitzinger, Deb Barker and Mary Moynihan loom large in the plans for the 1983 campaign.

Coach Hall also expects a great deal of a freshmen crop that includes Polly Oliver, Lisa DiMarzio and Alexandrea Grison. In the cage will be junior Therese Libert and freshman Holly Snyder.

Sue Occiano, an MAC all-conference candidate will return at mid-field and play a major role in the efforts of the team.

The entire field hockey season:

Sept. 10 at Wilkes; 13 at Wilkes; 17, Western Maryland; 24, Wilson; 28 at Messiah.

Oct. 1 at Dickinson; 2, St. Bonaventure; 5, at York; 8, Susquehanna; 12, F & M; 15, Lycoming; 22 at Gettysburg; 24, MAC's, TBA.

Looking Tough

by Kathy Harwick

The soccer team opened its fifth season as a varsity sport by traveling to Kings College on September 7. The resulting 0-3 loss to Kings, however, did not deflate the Juniata spirit as the comeback in their September 10 game revealed. With the support of home fans, the Indians sent St. Vincent home with a 1-0 loss. Sophomore Sean Ruth sent the ball into the goal, after an amazing assist by sophomore Tom Visosky. They continued with their season by traveling on September 14 to U.P.J. They stayed with U.P.J. after freshman Wes Manger sent a bomber from 25 yards out from the upper right corner of the field to score the Indians' only goal. But, in overtime, Juniata was defeated after U.P.J. scored two goals to end the game with a final score of 1-3.

Coach Klaus Jaeger is very optimistic about his young team. With a traveling team of 4 seniors, 6 sophomores, and 7 freshmen, Jaeger feels his team is "fast, disciplined and fun to work with, but there is still space to improve once the team gets to know each other."

On Saturday, the team met with Elizabethtown, the 5th ranked team in the Tri-state area. Team captain Jeff "Doc" Dougherty, who rejoined the team after injuries sustained last year, commented, "We put a scare into them the first half of the game where at one point we were ahead 2-1." Manger scored both goals that kept the Indians tied until half-time. But, Elizabethtown came back with two quick goals which Dougherty said "took the wind out of us." After a tough game, the Indians came home with a 2-7 loss.

Even with a 1-3 record, Jaeger feels his team started the season well. They approach every game as an underdog, and any close game he feels is still a victory. Today the Indians will face 1st ranked Messiah here at Juniata. Dougherty says he has good expectations this year and appreciates the good turnout of fans.

V-Ball Splits

by Suzanne Hickle

The Juniata Women's Volleyball team swung into action Tuesday by taking a road trip to Connecticut to participate in a tri-match with Eastern Connecticut and Occidental College from California.

The team began their season by defeating Eastern Conn. 15-13, 15-14, which was "a very important and critical match," says head coach, Larry Bock.

Juniata next met up with Occidental College who they saw once before in the NCAA finals in the 1981 season. The women had a great comeback in the first game from losing 10-4 and taking the game 15-13. In the second game, Juniata had their ups and downs in passing and serving, losing the game 14-16. In the third game, under great pressure, the women took the lead 10-1. Serving and spiking very well, Occidental came back winning the game 15-11. Coach Bock feels this comeback was due to a lack of aggressiveness in hitting and passing.

The team finished the week out in Morgantown, W.V. playing in a tri-match with W.V.U. and Duquesne. Juniata defeated Duquesne 15-5, 15-4, 16-14. W.V.U. took the match from Juniata winning 15-8, 15-12 and 17-15. This leaves Juniata with a record of 2-2.

X-country

by Paul Bomberger

Saturday, September 17, the Women's and Men's Cross Country teams opened their dual meet seasons versus Messiah and Gettysburg at Gettysburg College.

The ladies were led by Carolyn Andre's second place finish. Kathy Duffy, Chris Schleiden, freshman Sue Gill, and Colleen Wright followed Andre giving the Harriers victories over Gettysburg, 22-34, and over Messiah, 19-38.

The Men's team did not fare as well. Mark Royer led the Indian charge with a 7th place finish overall. Freshman Jim Gandy, Dave Long, John Burr, and newcomer Dave Dann rounded out the top five for the Indians.

The Harriers got by Messiah, 25-33, but fell short to a strong Gettysburg team, 15-48.

The Women and Men will travel to Elizabethtown this Saturday to run against the Bluejays.

Greyhounds Run Over Indians

by Joe Scialabba

After opening the season a week ago with an offensive menu that included plenty of courses, Saturday afternoon in Bethlehem the Juniata Indians never got past the appetizer in dropping a 29-6 Middle Atlantic Conference decision to Moravian. The loss makes the Tribe 1-1 overall and 0-1 in the reorganized nine-team league. Moravian is 1-1 overall as well as in the MAC.

In the September 10 season opener the Indians started slowly but got cooking in time to dish out a 38-0 defeat on the Red Flash of Saint Francis of Loretto. The game was played at Altoona Mansion Park.

After leading only 2-0 at halftime the Tribe stormed to 36 second half points with Freshman Quarterback Todd Kaden (13 of 26 for 161 yards) tossing scoring passes from 6, 7, and 12 yards. A 189 yard team rushing night was led by Dave Hornberger's 69 yards and TD runs by Marty Kimmel and Dave Duncan of 11 and 50 yards respectively. The defense recorded two safeties to go along with its shutout effort.

Unfortunately, the scoring punch that was shown in the opener missed the mark this past Saturday.

Missed opportunities in the early going came back to haunt the Indians as they watched the host Greyhounds score 29 straight points after falling behind 6-0.

Twice in the first 16 minutes, Juniata penetrated the Moravian 10 yard line only to come away with Mike Schaffner field goals. The left-footed Sophomore capped an 11 play, 62 yard drive with 7:53 left in the first quarter to give JC a 3-0 edge. Then less than a minute into the second stanza Schaffner was true again, this time from 24 yards out, following a 10 play, 71 yard march.

Moravian missed a golden opportunity of its own only minutes after the second Indian field goal as it covered 56 yards to the JC 5 only to fumble on a first down play. But the next chance would not be wasted.

The Hounds held the Indians to three yards and two incompletions on three plays before Hornberger punted 29 yards to the JC 37. Kurt Montz returned the kick 20 yards to give the hosts new life inside the Juniata 20 yard line.

After losing a yard through a rushing play, an incompleted pass, and a five-yard penalty, Moravian faced third down and 11 at the JC 18. Quarterback Frank Godshall got not only the first down but a touchdown when he connected with wideout Dave Bianco for six points with 5:21 to play in the first half. John Messemer kicked the PAT to give the Hounds a lead they never lost.

The Indians tried to jump right back in it but instead fell further behind in a matter of only 28 seconds as Moravian followed up two Juniata turnovers with two quick scores.

A Kaden pass was picked off at the Hound 48 and returned by Tim Williams to the JC 20 yard line. A clipping call on the return moved them back 15 yards but still left the hosts in great field position. It took eight plays to score — but only a field goal was gained — as Messemer hit a 34 yard three-pointer with only 55 seconds left in the half.

Trailing 10-6 the Indians wanted to just head for the locker room but instead fumbled at their own 30 yard line with 31 seconds remaining in the half. One play later the scoreboard read: Moravian 16, Juniata 6.

Godshall's second TD pass covered 30 yards to Tony Kosloski and, despite the botched extra point try, allowed the Greyhounds to successfully steal the momentum and the lead in a matter of minutes late in the second period and head to the locker room with a ten point edge.

Early in the second half, on Moravian's second play, the Indians had a chance to get back the lost "Mo" thanks to a Ron Hall interception that set up Juniata at the MC 34 yard line. But the tide just wouldn't turn for the Tribe.

Two plays lost 13 yards making it third and 23 at the Moravian 47 when a completed pass apparently got about 20 yards back. But on the play, QB Kaden was detected for stepping over the line of scrimmage during his throw, nullifying the play, and taking away five more yards and a down (since the penalty was a loss of down call). Hornberger's fourth down punt was blocked and then recovered at the Juniata 14 yard line by Tim Williams leading to a three yard TD run by Jim Joseph that made it 22-6 Greyhounds.

A turnover on the next possession for the Indians was followed up by a partially blocked punt later on, setting up the hosts again in excellent scoring position. A seven play, 37 yard scoring drive finished with Joseph going the final yard for the touchdown, and Messemer's PAT kick blew it open for good, 29-6, with 1:13 left in the third quarter.

The Indians got to the Moravian 28 yard line in the fourth quarter but fumbled again, making their giveaway total for the game four (two fumbles and two interceptions) to go along with the blocked punt. In the final period the Hounds ran 22 plays to JC's 12 and successfully ran out the clock for the victory.

The difference in the game was Moravian's ability to take advantage of Indian miscues, while at the same time limiting their own mistakes and effectively controlling the ball on the ground, especially in the second half. Moravian turned it over just twice (one fumble and one interception), while out-rushing the Tribe 178 yards to 9. Hornberger led the Juniata running attack with 9 carries for 29 yards.

The air game was almost even with Juniata gaining 157 to Moravian's 142 yards. In his second start, Freshman Quarterback Kaden was 11 of 30 for all 142 passing yards for the Indians. Dave Murphy caught six passes for 77 yards; Carl Fekula four for 73.

Moravian QB Godshall hit 12 of 23 tries and threw for two touchdowns. Kosloski led the Hound receiving corps with four catches for 68 yards.

TRIBE TIDBITS: Moravian's stingy defense has yielded only one TD in two games, the one being the difference in their 7-0 loss to Widener in their season opener . . . Widener is the next Juniata opponent as they visit College Field this Saturday . . . Widener (2-0) beat Bowie State 34-6 on Saturday, and is ranked among the top Division Three teams in the country . . . The Moravian-Juniata meeting was the first since 1974 when the Indians won 17-16 . . . A good Juniata contingent made the trip to Bethlehem on Saturday and was among the estimated 1500 fans on hand at Steel Field . . . The Indians played again without the starting services of injured Sophomore QB Dave Pfeifer, who may be ready for the Widener game, and also missed injured Junior Offensive Lineman Greg Lomax, whose status for Saturday is unknown . . . Fred Santarelli (15 tackles), Pat Quint (12 tackles), and Bob Adamek (12 tackles) led the defensive stats on Saturday for the Indians . . . After the home opener against Widener the Indians will hit the road again traveling to Albright and Western Maryland prior to the October 15 Parents' Weekend contest with Wilkes. . . .

Stickers Strong

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey Team soundly defeated Western Maryland 3-0 on Saturday, September 17.

The Lady Indians did not take long to score as Heidi Loomis put one past the goaltender at 1:39 into the first half to give Juniata a 1-0 lead.

The first half action saw an initial surge by Juniata as most of the play was in the Western Maryland end. Juniata was passing very well (which they did for the entire game) and Western Maryland had problems adjusting.

As the first half continued, Western Maryland gradually shifted play more evenly. However, H. Loomis, Sue Occiano, and Mary Moynihan played excellent defensive games, and helped hold off the Western Maryland attack.

The second half saw Juniata keeping up the pressure as much of the action was in the Western Maryland end. At 5:19 into the second half, Jill Loomis scored on an assist by Occiano to give Juniata a 2-0 lead. Juniata added an insurance goal as J. Loomis scored again at the 16:50 mark; this time, Leslie Pinto assisted.

The game ended with Juniata winning 3-0 thus upping their 1983 season record to 2-0. It was the second official shutout for goalie Therese Libert, who had eight saves on the day.

Juniata recorded its first official win of the 1983 season with a 1-0 victory over Wilkes College on September 13. On September 10, Juniata participated in a "play-day" at Wilkes. The Lady Indians came out of the day with a 1-2 rec-

Computer Search Adds to Beeghly Reference Resources

by Sandy Beard

An apparent lack of reference materials in Beeghly Library often draws criticism from students, but a tour of the library reveals a noteworthy, and perhaps underutilized asset — the Computer Search Service.

Introduced to Juniata approximately four years ago by Dr. David Eyman, the system allows students to reference and obtain research materials otherwise unaccessible to Beeghly. Several hundred specific subject headings are categorized in the computer memory, which may in turn be combined in any number of ways in order to narrow the search.

For example, if a search were run on the subject "AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY", one would receive a printout of thousands of articles. However, combining the aforementioned with "GOVERNMENT REGULATION" would result in a more precise listing.

The central terminal, located in Palo Alto, CA, compiles information from 200 data bases — e.g. BIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS — reducing normally cumbersome, many-volumed stacks of periodical listings to a space-saving terminal. Moreover, the process of thumbing through indexes is eliminated as Lockheed — the system's founder — categorizes and standardizes the material despite references given by the original data base.

Obviously, the search process is expensive. The librarian must telephone California where Juniata's terminal is connected with the central computer. Depending upon the type of material being searched, the time-sharing costs range from $35-150/hour, the average being about $75/hour.

The cross referencing program is based on Venn ("and/or") logic, again emphasizing the utility of citing subject matters particular to the desired information. This service allows much flexibility because materials are loaned among most Associated College Libraries of Central PA.

If these institutions do not have the desired material, other facilities will be contacted, depending upon the time limit within which one would be willing to wait. Generally, materials arrive within seven to ten days. Articles are even available in foreign languages.

The only requirements for requesting a search are a Juniata library card and a scheduled appointment with the reference librarian. The average search lasts fifteen minutes. Materials which are not available at Juniata are requested through application forms at the main desk. Students are encouraged to take advantage of this informative and free service. Note well, most larger institutions charge a base fee of $25 plus computer time-sharing fees for similar services.

GRADS Project Gets Underway

by Cinny Cooper

Juniata students now have the opportunity to volunteer their time to help Huntingdon County residents earn high school diplomas through Project "GRADS".

Project GRADS — Grass Roots Alternative Diploma Study — was deemed necessary when the 1980 census revealed the following statistics: (1) 40% of the adults in Huntingdon County have not earned a high school diploma, (2) unemployment stands at 20% in Huntingdon County, (3) Huntingdon County's rate of teenage pregnancies is the highest in Pennsylvania and, unofficially, the third highest in the nation.

GRADS is designed to prepare any interested Huntingdon County resident to take a high school equivalency test. Lessons will be available in 3 ways: by television, newspaper, and tutoring.

Two one-half hour lessons will be broadcast twice a week by Huntingdon TV Cable Company. For those adult students out of the cable company's area, video cassette recorders will be set up at predetermined sites throughout the county.

The Daily News will be printing 2 lessons each week as a public service. For those non-subscribers, the newspaper will provide free supplements.

According to Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services, the tutoring end of the program is where Juniata students can help. Contact sites will be set up at various locations and times for one-to-one informal tutoring. Volunteers may put in as few or as many hours as they wish, the norm being 2 hours per night per week. According to Keehner, this is an "excellent volunteer opportunity" for all students at Juniata.

Further questions and interested volunteers may be directed to Ms. Keehner's office in Founders Hall.

J.C. Awaits Mountain Day

by Laura Mumaw

In 1895, Dr. M.G. Brumbaugh, an ardent nature lover, extended an invitation to the faculty and students of Juniata College to spend a day on his farm property near Old Forge. This occasion which continued throughout the years is now a tradition, known as Mountain Day.

"Mountain Day is annually set aside in order that the faculty and students may become intimately acquainted with the beauties of nature about Juniata," writes a former student of the college.

It is also a day for hiking, tug-of-war, contests and touch football. It is a time to mix faculty and students, free of texts and studying, for an entire day of relaxation and fun.

In past years, Mountain Day has been held in numerous state parks surrounding Juniata. This year's location is at Trough Creek State Park.

Although the place is announced, the date of Mountain Day remains a mystery, more out of necessity than tradition. In 1979 the decision was made to keep the date a secret until that morning, because of extensive damages during a Mountain Day Eve "celebration." The change, however, has added spontaneity to the holiday, and an assurance of good weather.

As traditions have changed so have the students who attend Mountain Day. A graduate of the class of '43 reflects on how the first Mountain Day 88 years ago may have been, when the trip was made in haywagons. "The privilege of riding on the wagons was reserved for feminine company only, while men walked beside and behind, casting shy glances at the wagon's occupants. It was quite a gay spectacle with the girls in long ruffled dresses, stiff collars, long sleeves and stout shoes. The prim young males of course endured the agony of a collar and tie." This attire is a far cry from the hiking boots and jeans of today's mountain goers, as is their methods of dating.

To sum up the entire meaning of Mountain Day one statement from the class of '54 says it best. "You mustn't miss it — it's a part of college — what's more, it's a part of Juniata — and it's coming our way."

The Blue Army:
All Washed Up

Maintenance of the residence halls and other public facilities has always been the primary purpose of the custodians employed at Juniata. However, recent events have led The Juniatian to believe that the "blue army" has not been carrying out their job properly.

It is impossible for any resident of East Houses to ignore the growing "pool" in Long/Miller lounge. The pool, which is a result of a plumbing leak in the towers, is two years old. It was supposedly corrected last year, only to reappear to a worse degree this year.

If the puddle in the lounge isn't bad enough, it seems there are other problems stemming from the plumbing lead. Attention should be directed to the apartment which is also housing, along with its rent-paying occupants, a good amount of the water.

Aside from having a continually sopping living room floor, some of the occupants have been putting up with only one shower. Why? According to one resident, "The blue army dug up the shower to fix it — only it has been over a week since they've returned to complete the job."

The leak in East Houses does not stand alone. As of last Friday, Tussey-Terrace was without shower stalls, even though they were promised they would have them early in the month. Lesher has run into complications with their faucets as well. However, it seems maintenance doesn't feel it deserves their attention, that is, until four inches of water covers the entire bathroom floor.

These events lead one to question the motives of the blue army. Why bother repairing something if it's not going to be done right? What purpose does it serve to start a project only to leave it go two, three weeks, maybe months to finish? Where, in fact, is the blue army channeling its energies?

On campus students at Juniata pay $1,110 per year for room. Indeed, many of us may be wrong in thinking this money goes, at least in part, to capital repairs.

Perhaps it is time to re-educate the blue army and their supervisors on what their jobs really entail.

ALONG MUDDY RUN

by Kathleen Achor

Upon returning to our beloved Juniata this year, science majors soon discovered that for the time being they will not have their private nook of the campus to use for reference. The science library has been ripped apart, and is being remodeled in accordance with the computer age. Eventually, after the existing computer has been moved upstairs to its new home, the science library will be allowed to exist independently once more, where the computer in fact used to be. In the meantime, the science and the humanities majors, separated for four years by 18th and Moore Streets, will have the rare opportunity of encountering one another in Beeghley.

As one strolls by the former science library, one sees men hard at work preparing the new computer center for hopeful grand opening next term. They are surrounded by those basic materials which one expects to see in areas of construction, with the possible exception of one: a lone banana plant.

According to the stories that have reached my ears, this banana plant, which has existed for years in the science library, has been replanted several times in the course of its growth. And as everything was being moved out of the library this summer, the discovery was made that it had grown to such magnitude that it would not fit through the door. After several conferences on the matter, it was decided that the plant would not be removed.

To most of us, this technical inconvenience comes off as being rather amusing. But as a writer for the Juniatian, I felt it my duty to probe deeper, to find out if there was more to the story than met the eye. I decided to interview the banana plant myself.

I got a few strange looks from the workmen as I entered their

Dear Editor,

The recent Soviet shooting of the Korean airliner underscores the height of international tension that exists today. Tragic as this was, it pales in significance to the tragedy the world would know if even one nuclear weapon were detonated.

The situation in which we live today is truly terrifying. Right now we and the Soviets have the nuclear equivalent of 4 tons of TNT for every man, woman, and child on this planet. And the more we build, the more tensions increase, and the more likely it becomes that many of us will get our 4 tons' worth.

President Reagan's concept of "peace through strength" is a sound concept in and of itself, but it is very dangerous in terms of nuclear capability. As it has so often been aptly summarized, "There are no winners in a nuclear war."

The President is currently pushing for the MX missile, which has been dubbed the "Peacekeeper". Ironically, it is anything but. The MX missile is twice as explosive as any nuclear weapon that exists in Russian or U.S. arsenals today. It is specifically designed to destroy Russia's nuclear missiles housed in superhard silos on the ground. As such, it is a "first strike weapon". Congress has already approved the production of the MX and within the next few weeks will vote on supplying funds for actually making the MX. If this goes through we risk a giant leap closer to the brink of nuclear war. Our having such a weapon will likely cause the Soviets to build one of their own rather than give in at arms reduction talks, and would certainly increase Soviet paranoia to the point where they would likely shoot first and ask questions later — as they did in the Korean airliner incident.

No, we cannot trust the Russians! But we also cannot trust our future to bigger and more destructive nuclear weapons. Nuclear war is not a viable solution for the resolution of conflict. And based on how things have been going, we cannot simply "leave it to the boys in Washington". The best weapon against nuclear war is not a bigger bomb, but millions of people standing up and saying "No". There is still time to voice an opinion of the MX missile. We must go beyond fear and address reason.

Dear Editor,

We would like to speak for all Juniata women in extending our sincere apologies to all Juniata men for our in-excusable behavior these past Sunday nights.

We Juniata women are guilty — yes — we cannot deny it. We have indeed sinfully indulged in the despicable act of ice cream consumption.

Don't try to let us off easy, fellows. We knew we were doing wrong all the time. We were

Enrollment Decreases

by Ann Cameron

Why did you decide to attend Juniata College? Was it the numerous mailings or a telephone call you received? Were you influenced by a campus visit? Did you attend a college fair? Declining enrollment in colleges and universities nationwide has made college recruiting a competitive and costly business.

This year enrollment at Juniata is down by about 2 to 3%; however, Kevin G. McCullen, Assistant to the President for Institutional Planning and Research, insists, "Our enrollment is still very healthy." The decline in enrollment can be attributed to several factors. The population of high school graduates each year is also shrinking by approximately 2 to 3%. Also, the class of 1983 was the largest ever to graduate from Juniata College.

In the fall of 1982 there were 1,280 students on campus. This is a substantial increase over the 1,061 students on campus in the fall of 1975 when President Binder came to Juniata. In fact, enrollment has been one of Dr. Binder's hallmarks. Counter to the national trend, Juniata has maintained or increased its enrollment in the past few years. Dormitories are filled to capacity — just ask any freshman stepping over his roommates in a triple.

Even though enrollment is down slightly, Mr. McCullen says it was projected and has been accounted for in the budget. Based on an increasing number of inquiries about the college, enrollment for next year looks encouraging. Enrollment remains a major concern of the Admissions staff, though. The entire Juniata staff, as well as the students, must strive to make Juniata a desirable place to attend college. "Recruitment only works if the college maintains a high academic quality and all the trimmings," states McCullen. As for now, JC is the place to be.

Red Cross Bloodmobile to be held

If you happen to find yourself with a few free minutes on Thursday, Sept. 29, you may find it a gratifying experience to donate blood to the Red Cross Bloodmobile.

Hosted by Circle K together with Scalpel & Probe and Tri-Beta, the bloodmobile will visit the campus for the first of its triannual stops on Thursday, Sept. 29. Students may donate blood any time between the hours of 11:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. in the ballroom at Ellis.

As in years past, particular requirements exist for donors. Minimum age is 17 and minimum weight is 110 pounds. A donor must be in good general health, and must not have donated blood within 56 days prior to Sept. 29.

Wayne Justham, Director of Programming and a regular donor approaching his ninth gallon, discussed the possibility of prizes and cake being offered to those who choose to donate on Thursday. Refreshments will be served to all donors in order to replenish the body, and for the purpose of giving students a few minutes to relax before continuing with busy schedules.

According to Mr. Justham, response to the Red Cross Bloodmobile has been varied in the past, with the average donation on the Juniata campus nearing 140 pints.

Head Nurse Jane Brown commented, "I have always felt that the Red Cross Bloodmobile is a great humanitarian act; the most important thing is the replacement of blood for the seriously ill and injured."

Those who are unable to give blood on Thursday but may wish to in the future will be able to donate on January 12 or March 21 when the bloodmobile will be visiting the Juniata campus again.

Freeze Walk backers seek large turnout

Early registrations indicate a large turnout for the Huntingdon County segment of the First National Freeze Walk to be held on Saturday, October 1. According to Debbie Justham of the Huntingdon County Campaign for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze, "The purpose of the walk is to demonstrate the support of the people of Huntingdon County for a verifiable bilateral nuclear weapons freeze and to raise funds to support that goal."

The 5 kilometer (3.1 miles) walk will begin at the Huntingdon Area High School and end with a rally at Juniata College. Walkers will be treated to refreshments at the rally donated by McDonalds Restaurant. Folk singer Nan Hoffman of Buffalo, New York will provide entertainment for the walkers and interested spectators.

Ms. Justham indicated that in accordance with national policy the HCCNWF will award free National Freeze Walk T-shirts to all walkers who collect $50 or more in pledges, but all supporters are encouraged to walk whether or not they are soliciting pledges.

Students may pick up sponsor sheets at the Ellis Information Desk or register at the high school at 12:30 p.m. on Saturday. The Freeze Walk will begin promptly at 1:00 p.m.

territory and approached the banana plant, pencil and paper in hand, press card in hat. "Mr. Banana Plant," I began, "would you care to comment on your current situation?"

There was a rather long silence. One of the men began laughing at me. Another, more sympathetic, told me that this particular plant had Honduran roots, and spoke only Spanish. I thanked him, feeling guilty about my ethnocentrism. I had assumed banana plants spoke English.

I returned an hour later with an interpreter. At last, I was able to communicate with the banana plant, who was more than willing to discuss his situation with me in Spanish.

"You may believe it sheer coincidence that I do not fit through the doors of the science library," the banana plant told me, "but in fact I have been planning this for quite some time. I am a member of a budding band of revolutionary banana freedom fighters, and I refuse to move from this room until our demands have been met."

I prodded him for more information concerning his organization and its demands.

"Our forces are greatest in Central America," the plant offered, "for that is the current scene of the greatest potential for banana plant oppression. We are hard-working plants, producing billions of pounds of bananas to ship all over the world, mostly to the United States. Naturally, I feel almost familial ties to that area, for I am the direct offspring of a Honduran sucker."

I winced at the word "sucker", thinking it a derogatory term, seemingly out of place with the banana plant's obvious pride. The interpreter must have picked up on this, for he then explained that a sucker was a growth cut from the underground stems of a mature plant, and was then planted to grow another. The banana plant continued.

"The United States has caused banana plants much pain. Since the 1890s you have been in Honduras, setting up corporations, reaping profits from the people who are poor and have to rely heavily on us economically. The Honduran people have struggled for their rights, and have made advances, but as late as 1975 they were removing a political leader from office due to corruption — a U.S. banana bribe. It is bad enough that these people have been so taken advantage of by your country because of us, but now things have become even worse.

"Banana plants everywhere are uniting to protest against the United States' increasing involvement in Central America. We feel there is enough instability without you. We are not only concerned now with the rights of the Hondurans — and all peoples of Central America — but for the freedom and safety of banana plants as well. We continually see potential for military escalation and fear for our survival as a species in that area of the world. As things have become progressively worse, I have grown progressively bigger so that I now am able to sit in this science library in protest of what I see as a serious political blunder."

I asked what his demands were.

"A change in U.S. military policy in regards to involvement in Central America, higher wages for those employed in the banana industry, and more heat in the science center. It's pretty damn cold for a banana plant in here."

I asked how long he intended to sit in this room.

"Until my demands are met. I'll sit here with the computers if I have to. And I warn you, heed carefully my demands. My power will only multiply with a computer at my disposal."

The banana plant let out a sinister laugh, and uttered something in Spanish that, apparently due to the horror of it, the interpreter refused to translate.

Fellow Juniatians, I feel it my duty to report this to you. Who knows what this banana plant might do if his demands are not met? How many accounts, how many vital statistics for the running of our fine upstanding institution could be brutally demolished under the zealous leaf of a radical? It seems that there is a lot our administration has neglected to tell us, be it an intentional ploy to keep us ignorant, or merely a consequence of their own obliviousness. Regardless, the next move is up to us.

Professor Gets Attention

MARQUETTE, MI (CPS) — A Northern Michigan University military science instructor has been fired from his teaching post for biting the head off a live chicken during class and then drinking the blood of the slaughtered fowl, all in an effort "to get students' attention."

The incident occurred September 1st as Sgt. Maj. Jimmy A. Powell was lecturing his leadership training class for new ROTC (Reserve Officers Training Command) recruits.

"Apparently (Powell) had the whole thing planned out in advance as a way to get students' attention during their first day of class," says Col. Donald Taylor, head of the military science department.

After introducing himself and lecturing students for several minutes, Powell left the room and came back carrying a live chicken.

"According to the students, he was just walking around with the chicken, explaining things like what happens if you attend class out of uniform, when all of a sudden he extended the neck of the chicken and bit it off," Taylor says.

Then, as horrified students looked on, Powell held the chicken up over his head and let the blood run into his mouth.

"I was shocked and disgusted when I heard about it later that afternoon," Taylor says. "I checked all the facts and concluded that there was absolutely no justification for what had been done, and that it simply could not be tolerated."

The following morning Taylor met with university officials and decided to relieve Powell of his teaching post and reassign him to nearby K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base.

"Nobody had any knowledge this thing was going to happen," Taylor explains. "(Powell) had taught a number of classes like Land Navigation and Marksmanship for over a year, and we'd never had any trouble with him before."

Other faculty members have expressed "shock and revulsion" at what happened, says Faculty Senate Chairman Roger Barry, a NMU chemistry professor.

"But," Barry adds, "we do think Col. Taylor handled the whole thing quickly and properly."

Powell's case is now being reviewed by U.S. Army officials. Taylor says, who may take additional action against the 40-year-old career soldier.

"He still doesn't understand why I and the other university officials have reacted so strongly to what he did," Taylor says. "He still feels it was an acceptable technique to get students' attention."

Presidents Put NCAA Under Pressure

The same group of college presidents that managed to impose tough new academic standards for athletes on the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) has announced a drive to exert more control over all the NCAA's policy-making procedures.

A group of 27 college presidents — members of the American Council on Education's (ACE) Committee on Division I Intercollegiate Athletics — emerged from a meeting in Keystone, Colorado last week with plans to create a new NCAA group made up exclusively of campus presidents.

It's only the most recent challenge to the NCAA's administrative staff's authority. A group of some 30 NCAA-member schools have sued to keep the NCAA from negotiating future television contracts for them. The case is pending. The enormous revenues generated by the contracts have been the major tools used by the NCAA to keep members in line.

The so-called Board of Presidents, says Bob Atwell, the ACE's acting president, "will be concerned with issues of academic standards, financial matters and the general integrity of intercollegiate sports."

The proposed 36-member board would give the presidents direct control over solutions to the grade-fixing and recruiting scandals that have rocked college sports in recent years, Atwell says.

Although the new board's plans are still tentative, they could mean tougher grade standards and more control for individual schools over sports revenues.

The NCAA, on the other hand, says the proposed board is unnecessary "since the structure is already in place for (the presidents) to do what they want to do," says NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood.

"The NCAA has been built on institutional control and (presidents) have always had the power to determine the voting delegate for their institutions," he explains.

But the ACE presidents maintain their delegates are usually athletic directors. Even if they're formally appointed by the presidents, Atwell says, they don't

Concert Committee Changes

by Kathy Manzella

Centerboard has decided to restructure this year's Concert Committee due to poor turnouts and lack of participation for past concert events. According to Concert Committee Chairman Rick Burgan, this year's committee "will be responsible for sponsoring trips to concerts other than on campus." Currently the committee is in the process of establishing contacts with various colleges and civic centers in areas such as Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Maryland.

The restructuring was also the result of a budget cut for the committee's finances. "My allocation was meant to get the committee started, and so we wouldn't get carried away and plan a big concert," stated Burgan. The committee is eligible to receive money to subsidize the buses under a line in the budget for new programming.

The change resulted due to lack of interest in past concerts featuring such groups as STYX, America, KIX, and Daddy Licks. The concert committee hopes to start going to concerts by the beginning of Winter Term.

The Concert Committee is open to suggestions and is currently looking for information from students on whereabouts of future concerts. "We are also looking for

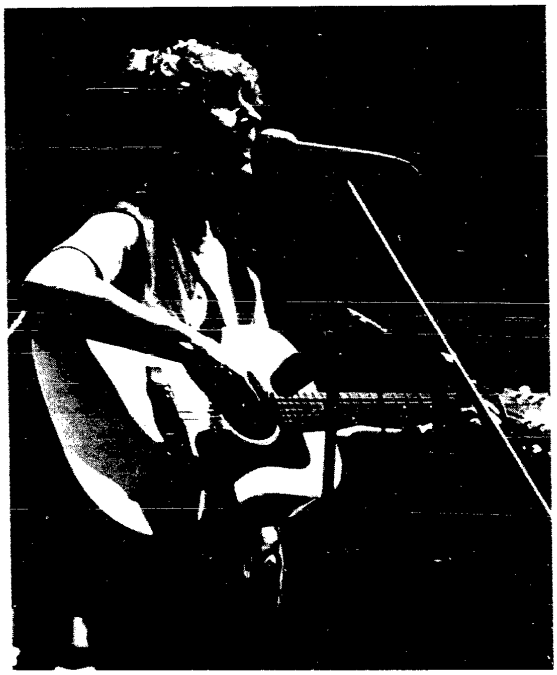
Hoffman to Perform in Catharsis

The Center Board Coffeehouse Committee will present Nan Hoffman in Sherwood Catharsis Lounge at 9:00 P.M. on Saturday, October 1. Ms. Hoffman appeared at the Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts at State College this summer, where she stirred up some controversy with her delightful composition "It's Only a Wee Wee".

Nan has been collecting songs, traveling and performing for well over a decade. Her varied repertoire includes traditional songs and ballads and her own compositions. She accompanies herself on the guitar or autoharp and often sings unaccompanied.

Ms. Hoffman's album "A Thousand Cranes" is a collection of songs for peace and a better environment. The title song "I Dreamed I Saw a Thousand Cranes" is her own composition and is based on the story of Sadako Sasaki, a child of Hiroshima who folded paper cranes as she lay dying of radiation exposure, believing the magic of the cranes would grant her wish for peace.

She will also present a short performance at the end of the Huntingdon Freeze Walk at Detwiler Plaza on Saturday afternoon. Tickets for the Coffeehouse will be available at the door.



Pictured is Nan Hoffman, who is scheduled to perform a collection of songs for peace and a better environment on Saturday at 9 p.m. in Catharsis Lounge.

Real Campus Rape Rate Higher Than Reported

AUBURN, AL (CPS) -- The real number of campus rapes and sexual assault cases may be many times higher than officials have traditionally believed, according to a new Auburn University study on sexual attitudes.

Nearly one out of every six male students questioned admitted to forcing women to have sex with them, the study of over 200 sophomores found.

Moreover, 20 percent of the female students surveyed said they had been forced to have sex even though they objected.

Surprisingly, "very few of the women defined such situations as rape," notes Auburn psychologist Barry Burkhart, who helped direct the study.

"None of these men were ever arrested or charged with rape, and as far as I know none of the women had reported what happened to them," he says.

The reason, it seems, is because all of the incidents involved what experts are now calling "acquaintance rape."

"We're finding that acquaintance rape is a very frequent type of incident that takes place on campuses," says Dan Keller, director of public safety at the University of Louisville and president of Campus Crime Prevention Programs, an independent campus law enforcement association.

"It could typically involve a girl and guy who meet at a party, then the guy invites the girl home and physically forces her to have sex. The guy just won't take no for an answer, even if it means using force."

The Auburn study shows that most of the time neither male nor female considers that a rape has occurred, Keller continues, "because of the traditional concept of rape as a situation where somebody grabs you off the sidewalk and attacks you."

Burkhart calls the results of his study both "surprising and distressing" because "they indicate that there's still a great deal of rape sentiment among males in our society."

Keller believes that for every case of reported student rape by a stranger, "there are dozens of cases of acquaintance rape that weren't reported."

Burkhart agrees, saying that despite the 40 rape cases disclosed by his study, "campus police have had only two rape cases reported in the last several years."

Shields Attracts Attention

PRINCETON, NJ (CPS) — Princeton University officials and students have been offered bribes and other inducements for helping reporters photograph or talk to its most famous new freshman, actress Brooke Shields.

Several national magazines reportedly offered as much as $500 for a candid shot of Shields, the model and star of teen movies like "The Blue Lagoon" and "Endless Love," as she went through orientation at Princeton last week, according to George Eager, the school's communications director.

But during orientation week campus security guards managed to turn away most of the hordes of autograph seekers and journalists who descended on campus.

Getting them through school successfully means "respecting the student's privacy," Walter Littell says.

Toward that end, Princeton security guards will be watching for journalists even after the initial weeks of school, will screen Shields' mail, and try to prevent outsiders from gaining access to the actress through her roommates and friends, Eager says.

"She just wants to be a normal student," he adds, "and we will do everything we can to see that she has that right."

Movie Review: Superman II

by Leslie A. Singleton

Superman comes of age. . . . Our childhood hero has undergone some kind of change! In Superman II he flies flashingly into the 1980's sense of style. We see that our hero has feelings just like all of us and in this film he loses his virginity to Lois Lane and also his superhuman power. But don't fret he is able to get his power back to combat the enemy and save the world from domination. His enemies, criminals that his father banished to eternity in space, are clad in black leather with revealing slits and black hip boots all with a New Wave flair.

The beginning of the film dealt too much with credits, flashbacks, and clips of upcoming footage which led me to believe the director had to use fillers because he didn't have enough film. The footage he did have was filled with incredible feats of special effects that I'm sure kept everyone's attention. The only problem was that this is all the film had going for it. The conversation was dull and cliche, which didn't aid the flatness of the characters. While watching the film, I kept reminding myself that this was just our old comic friend but I'm sure they could have done a much better job by not making it seem like he was reading his lines from the comic book.

One scene which did earn at least a laugh from my guest and I was when Superman was battling his enemies and he grabbed the S from off his chest and flung it into the air where it became human fly-paper and trapped his enemy in a gooey bond. Then to top it all off, his suit still had the S on it. Well that's a new one for me! I sure hope that they give Superman a better shot in Superman III and at least let him solve his relationship crisis with Lois Lane. I think they copped out on that touchy subject at the end.

give the presidents a direct say in the policy-making.

"Plus, college presidents really don't have the time required to be a delegate, but they do want to participate in deciding major issues. The Board of Presidents would give them this opportunity."

The ACE, in the meantime, is hoping to have the full NCAA vote on its proposal at the NCAA convention in January.

The presidents, however, are apparently interested only in Division I sports.

Atwell said his committee has no plans to form a similar committee for the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics, which serves smaller schools around the country.

Get down to business faster. With the BA-35.

If there's one thing business students have always needed, this is it: an affordable, business-oriented calculator. The Texas Instruments BA-35, the Student Business Analyst.

Its built-in business formulas let you perform complicated finance, accounting and statistical functions – the ones that usually require a lot of time and a stack of reference books, like present and future value calculations, amortizations and balloon payments.

The BA-35 means you spend less time calculating, and more time learning. One keystroke takes the place of many.

The calculator is just part of the package. You also get a book that follows most business courses: the Business Analyst Guidebook. Business professors helped us write it, to help you get the most out of calculator and classroom.

A powerful combination. Think business. With the BA-35 Student Business Analyst.

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey team was defeated in a scrimmage against Lock Haven State College 8-0 on Saturday.

The girls played well but the Division II National Champions of last year proved to be too good. The Lady Indians controlled the ball as much as Lock Haven did, but failed to capitalize on their scoring opportunities. Coach Roslyn Hall played down the loss commenting on the caliber of Lock Haven's team. She felt her team played quite well. The Indians remain unbeaten in MAC play with a 2-0 record.

Overall, Coach Hall thinks that the team will do well this year. So far, the team has bettered last year's win column. Coach Hall attributes the team's success thus far to a couple of things.

The team is better offensively this year than last year. The offense has been scoring more as a result of changing last year's defensive philosophy. Also, the team has been bolstered by an influx of quality freshman players, in addition to the returning players.

The Lady Indians have the toughest part of their schedule yet to come with Franklin and Marshall, Dickinson, and Gettysburg being the toughest. The team's biggest goal is to go to the MAC championships this year — something no Juniata Field Hockey team has ever done.

The team travelled to Messiah yesterday and will play Dickinson on Saturday at Dickinson.

V-Ball Wins Big

by Suzanne Hickle

The Women's Volleyball team had their first MAC game last week at home against Susquehanna University. Juniata played awesomely, beating the Crusaders in three straight games.

In the first game, Jan Trissler began play by serving nine straight serves to give the women a dominant lead. With Tracey DeBlase spiking and Ekanong Opanaykul blocking, Susquehanna could not get a point off of Juniata. Juniata won the game with a shut-out score of 15-0.

The second game was more of a competitive match, but Susquehanna still could not take over the Juniata women. Trish Corl started the game with two powerful serves making the score 2-0. Even with Carolyn Stambaugh slamming middle hits, the Crusaders fought back to keep the score tied up. The score was close throughout the game until Ekanong got fired up and had two kills and a block to push the score up to 12-8. This psyched up the team and Juniata won 15-9.

Susquehanna started out ahead in the third game, but they weren't strong enough to overcome Juniata. Peggy Evans set the ball skillfully, and Mariella Gacka and Tracey DeBlase slammed away at the opponent. Juniata was up on Susquehanna 10-4 and Coach Bock put the JV in to finish the game, winning it at 15-7.

The JV also won 15-9 and 15-7.

The team traveled to IUP Saturday, coming back with another win over a highly ranked team of last year. Juniata conquered IUP in three games, 15-6, 15-6, and 15-9. This gives the team a record of 4-2.

Tonight the ladies are in action against Dickinson at 6:30 in our gym. Come and help support the team for a victory.

"The Sport's Corner"

by Mark Shaw

Mountain Day will soon be upon us. The trees will begin to turn color, the days will turn colder and, (as usual) the schoolwork will continue to pile up. But, when the news of — "It's Mountain Day" reaches everybody, all work will come to a halt and most of the student body (i.e. those of us who really don't care how far behind in work we are) will hurry off to Trough Creek, where Mountain Day is being held this year. Now, you may be wondering: "What does this have to do with sports?" The answer: "A lot."

You see, there are numerous important sporting events scheduled for Mountain Day. The first one that comes to mind is the annual Senior-Faculty (or Faculty-Senior — depending upon your frame of reference) game. This game can allow two things to happen: 1.) it allows the seniors to get back at the professors who never give above a "C" for any course they teach, or 2.) it allows the professors to get back at the students who were a pain in the ____ for the last 3 years.

Actually, the game is played in good fun, but if I am correct, I remember students in their sophomore year saying that they couldn't wait for Mountain Day (this is called trying to intimidate your opponent), so, if I were you (faculty) I'd think twice before making up that test this week (only kidding).

I expect a good game against the faculty. As far as I can remember, I don't think they have lost in a long time. Hopefully, their reign will soon end.

Another contest which comes into mind is the infamous Cloister-Sherwood game. This game is a new addition to the Mountain Day activities, but it has been played on a regular basis at other times during the year. Last year, Cloister was victorious, and the year before Sherwood won. This game is always characterized by very hard play (like mauling, biting, punching, etc . . .). Actually, it could be called a second storming (I hope this one is better than the last one).

There is always some sort of refreshment on the line during these games, but not paying off the bet seems to be as annual as the game. However, it's not who wins, but who can inflict the most pain (only kidding — winning helps to ease the pain if you know what I mean). The game promises to be a good contest with Cloister, of course being victorious. (Living in Cloister gives me a slight bias.)

Other contests involve the tug-of-war between the classes. Each class is pitted against one another in a single elimination tournament. The class who gets the most power on the length of rope usually wins the contest.

So, Mountain Day looks to be quite a day in sports. Hopefully, Cloister and the Senior Class will be victorious.

Kickers Lose

by Kathy Harwick

The soccer team continued its season last Thursday with a loss to the Tri-state's 1st ranked Messiah. Even with captain Jeff Dougherty out with injuries, the Indians held Messiah to a 0-1 half-time score. Sophomore goalie Russ Leberman had many amazing saves, but Messiah came back from half-time to put three quick goals past Leberman within the first fifteen minutes. The Indians worked hard to hold Messiah, but still sent them home with a 6-0 win.

On Saturday, the Indians put their record at 1-5 with their loss against Lycoming here at Juniata. Lycoming led the match with two surprising goals, followed by a penalty kick goal in the first half. Sophomore Sean Ruth commented, "We stayed with them in passing and field play, but we didn't capitalize on our chances to shoot the ball." Lycoming came into the second half to score and end the game in a 0-4 loss against the Indians.

Indian's Fall

by Joe Scialabba

"They do what they have to, when they have to, to win."

That statement came from the press box crowd on Saturday as they watched Widener University roll out of a potentially tight game to a big 38-7 romp over Juniata before 1800 chilly fans at College Field.

It was the Pioneers third straight win this season. Juniata took its second consecutive loss to fall to 1-2 overall and 0-2 in the Middle Atlantic Conference. Widener is 2-0 in the MAC.

The Pioneers drew the media raves and those of the fans as well when they drove 82 yards in the third quarter to go up 17-7 after the Indians had seemingly gotten everything together.

Widener had scored on Dan Guy's nine yard TD pass to John Roche in the first quarter and a Nick Pulos 44 yard field goal, along with his extra point kick, to lead 10-0 at halftime.

Despite the fact that the Indian defense had seemed to slow the Pioneer offense down early on, Widener still managed to get the job done driving 73 yards for the touchdown and then 70 yards in the second quarter for the three-pointer.

While the defense held its own, the Indian offense moved the ball well only to sputter when they got within striking distance of the Widener goal line. The Tribe stalled at the Widener 34, 30, and then at the 13 yard line in the first half. On the third plunge inside the WU 30 Mike Schaffner had a 30 yard field goal try miss wide right.

The Indians hit the Pioneer 36 right before halftime only to have a holding call and a sack send them walking to the locker room down ten points despite outgaining the visitors 154-142, including a surprising 73 yard rushing effort.

In the third quarter, all of a sudden, things started to click for the Tribe.

Bob Crossey intercepted a Guy pass; fumbled, but Grady Paul recovered to set up Juniata at the Widener 30 yard line.

Quarterback Dave Pfeifer, starting his first game since recovering from a broken finger, hit Dave Murphy on a fourth down play at the 19.

A pass to Dave Duncan to the 7 got another first down.

Marty Kimmel ran right for four yards to the three.

Then, Jeff Kaden took an inside reverse handoff into the end zone for the touchdown.

Schaffner kicked the PAT and with 8:09 left to play in the third period, just like that, it was a new game, 10-7.

On the ensuing kick off, Rich Howey and Chip Austin combined to rack up the return man with a vicious tackle at the Widener 18.

That's when the Pioneers showed why they are known as a national Division Three powerhouse.

It took nine plays and just over four minutes to travel the distance with Mike Forward taking a pitch around left end for the final 16 yards and the touchdown.

Pulos kicked the extra point for a 17-7 Widener lead with 3:47 left in the third stanza.

Widener had regained control in impressive fashion.

After the kickoff return, featuring a clipping penalty against the Indians, Juniata was in a hole at its own 12 yard line. After one first down, an offensive pass interference call forced a Dave Hornberger punt.

On Widener's series, starting from their own 37, they got to the Indian 31 before losing it on downs thanks to an illegal receiver downfield on an apparently successful fourth down try for the sticks.

The Indians lost nine yards in three plays and Hornberger punted again.

John Irving broke the game open in a matter of seconds as he fielded the punt in the center of the field, cut to the outside, and then shot down the sideline 66 yards to score and start a big scoring period for the Pioneers.

Bobby Freece hit his first of three consecutive extra point kicks to give Widener a 24-7 cushion with 14:24 remaining.

Neither team did much the rest of the way until the roof really fell in on the Indians late in the game.

Auggie Cipollini shot out of the Widener backfield and through the Indian secondary to grab a 53 yard scoring bomb from Pete Brescia with 4:34 left.

Then Cipollini ran it in from 16 yards out with 2:46 to go to round out the scoring.

The Tribe turned it over on two straight late game possessions, and watched Widener run the last 13 scrimmage plays to make it a blow out.

The Indians had it all go wrong at once, and Widener is just not the team you want that to happen against. The score was not indicative of how close the game was through three quarters and how close it could have ended up.

It was a big offensive day for Widener picking up 268 yards on 57 rushing attempts and hit 10 of 15 pass attempts for 172 passing yards.

Juniata, after gaining 155 in total offense in the first half, finished with 220-yards in total offense. The Indians rushed 24 times for 96 yards, and threw for 106. Pfeifer was 12 for 41 tosses with three passes intercepted on the day.

Freshman Kimmel led the Juniata ground game with 66 yards on 13 totes.

Forward had 93 yards on 13 carries for the Pioneers.

TRIBE TIDBITS: The win on Saturday gives Widener an 11-2 edge in the series . . . The Indians missed regular starters Greg Lomax and Carl Fekula, both out with injuries . . . Dave Murphy caught five passes for 56 yards, Kevin Smith three for 37 to lead the Juniata receiving corps . . . Defensively, Pat Quint recorded 16 tackles, Tom Wilkinson 14, and Bob Crossey 13 to lead the Tribe . . . Freshman quarterback Todd Kaden, who had started in place of Pfeifer the first two games, saw some action at wide receiver on Saturday while fellow classmate Mike Culver took a few late game snaps for the Indians . . . Juniata travels to Reading Saturday night to meet Albright, kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. . . . .

Runners Split

by Paul Bomberger

Last Saturday the JC Men's and Women's Cross Country teams travelled to Elizabethtown for a triangular meet.

The Women ran Elizabethtown and the U. of Scranton.

Carolyn Andre, Miss Consistency so far this season for the Indians, finished in first place overall. Kathy Duffy, Sue Gill, Chris Schleiden and Sue Richards followed to ensure a JC victory over Elizabethtown, 18-38. Despite Andre's heroics, the Harriers fell short to Scranton, 26-29.

The Men ran Elizabethtown and Albright. The results were almost a carbon copy of the Women's race.

Mark Royer, once again paced the Indians with a sixth place finish. Freshman Jim Gandy, Bill Ciesla, Dave Long and Dave Dann followed, which gave JC a victory over Elizabethtown, 25-33. Albright rolled over the Indians by a 15-47 score.

After two triangular meets each, the Women's record stands at 3-1, and the Men are an even 2-2.

The next meet for the Women is their first home meet this season against MAC powerhouse, F&M on Saturday, October 1. The Men have a week off and then face Dickinson at home on October 8.

Cross Country Notes:

Senior and number one runner for the Indians, Mark Royer, was elected captain of the Cross Country team by a landslide vote this week. . . .

It appears that sophomore Bill Ciesla is recovering from a knee injury, which kept him out of the Gettysburg meet last Saturday. Ciesla finished number three man for the Indians on Saturday at Elizabethtown. Coach Joel Brown hopes Ciesla is fully recovered by Parents Weekend, when the Indians tangle with MAC powerhouse, Susquehanna. . . .

Freshman Jim Gandy, from Cherokee High School in New Jersey has been impressive thus far for the Harriers. Gandy is presently number two man for the Indians. . . .

Intramural action began on Thursday, September 22. The action began in both the Men's Softball and Co-Rec Volleyball leagues.

Men's Softball is composed of one division with 11 teams. The Co-Rec Volleyball league is composed of 3 divisions with a total of 31 teams.

The Juniatian Sports Department plans to give complete coverage to the intramural sports. The format will be the same as last year's format with a standings chart as well as game coverage. We are looking forward to an exciting year in intramurals.

Accounting Internships Available

by Sandy Beard

If the prospect of another text- and lecture-filled term in the Business department is less than intriguing, be advised that alternatives do exist. Specifically, one may consider a ten-week change of scenery as a business intern, applying classroom theory in the "real world" of Brooks Brothers/Pendleton-clad executives.

Eligibility entails Senior standing in the Business Department, the final approval resting with the department's faculty. Spring term, all Junior Business majors should receive information about the Accounting and Business internships in the mail. Those interested must apply for a position, indicating which internship is desired. Several options exist in the Accounting sector, including Corporate Accounting, Public Accounting, Banking, and Hospitals. Moreover, applicants are free to suggest other opportunities that may be relevant to the program, although one's choice is geographically limited to the Huntingdon area. Generally, the administration advises students to maintain on-campus housing; however, exceptions are made upon occasion.

Students granted the fall accounting internship are notified

W. Bruce Kissel of Lancaster (left), a senior at Juniata College is the recipient of the Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. Award, established at Juniata by Rep. Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. of Tyrone (right), Minority Whip of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. The award was presented to Kissel for academic excellence in the areas of government service and public administration.

Former Juniata President Dies

Dr. John N. Stauffer who served as Juniata College's seventh president from 1968-75, died Wednesday, Sept. 28 in Naples, Fla. He was 68.

A native of Palmyra, Dr. Stauffer and his wife, the former Marianne Louise Lee of Altoona, received their degrees from Juniata in 1936. Dr. Stauffer received his M.A. degree in psychology from the University of Pennsylvania in 1942, and after further study in psychology at Harvard University and Ohio State University received his D.Ed. in counseling and higher education from the Pennsylvania State University in 1956. He received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Juniata in 1964 and an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Wittenberg University in 1968.

In his first professional position, Dr. Stauffer taught mathematics at the Milton Hershey School in Hershey from 1936-43. He then served as senior psychologist at the Pennsylvania Industrial School in Huntingdon, and director of counseling service at the Hartford, Conn. YMCA. From 1945-47, he was assistant director of the Veterans Guidance Center at Harvard University.

Dr. Stauffer joined the Wittenberg University administration in 1947, serving as dean of students for 10 years. From 1957-63 he was dean of the college and from 1963-68 served as Wittenberg's ninth president. At the same time, he held successive faculty ranks of assistant professor, associate professor and professor of psychology. He also was a professor of psychology at Juniata.

Listed in "Who's Who in America" and "American Men and Women of Science," Dr. Stauffer belonged to numerous professional and civic organizations. He served on the executive committee of the Commission for Independent Colleges and Universities and as the groups vice chairman. He has been a member of the Government Relations Committee, Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities, and was chairman of several evaluating teams for the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Dr. Stauffer's many civic activities have included seats on the boards of several local organizations including J.C. Blair Memorial Hospital. He has served at the local, state and regional levels of the YMCA, and as chairman of the National Scholarship and Fellowship Committee of the Y's National Board.

Over the years, Dr. Stauffer served Juniata as president of its National Alumni Association and as a member of the Board of Trustees. After resigning as Juniata's president in 1975, he assisted the college's development program, maintaining special responsibility in estate planning. He retired from that post in 1979.

In addition to his wife, Dr. Stauffer is survived by three sons, Thomas M., John L. and Donald D.; a daughter, Mrs. Nancy Montgomery; and several grandchildren.

The Stauffer family plans to hold a memorial service for Dr. Stauffer at Weaver Chapel, Wittenberg University, Sunday, Oct. 16 at 2 p.m.

J.C. Artist Series Tonight

Gets Started With Joffrey Ballet

The Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group will open Juniata College's 1983-84 Artist Series tonight in Oller Hall.

Originally formed as an outlet for new choreographers to work with professional dancers, the Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group is one of the most popular and well-known groups in the country. They have toured throughout the United States and Canada, with tours of South America and Europe in their future plans. The Concert Group has performed at colleges and schools, with symphony orchestras and on television. Each summer, the group performs concerts and musicals at the Grand Rapids Summerfest in Michigan.

The dancers are carefully selected from the professional scholarship program at the Joffrey Ballet School and through professional auditions. The dancers' days are filled with a rigorous schedule which includes two or three classes plus daily rehearsals to perfect the repertoire or create new works. The variety of their repertoire, together with the high quality of dancers, has made the Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group one of the leading ballet ensembles.

The 8:15 p.m. concert at Juniata will feature a variety of classical and popular routines. Included will be Gustav Holst's "Holst Suite," "Ancient Dances" with music by Respighi, "Works I," featuring the music of Keith Emerson, and "Scott Free" performed to the music of Scott Joplin.

The Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group is under the direction of ballet master and choreographer Jim Snyder. A summa cum laude graduate of Towson State University in Maryland, Snyder has performed with the Electric Shakespeare Company, Towson State Dance Ensemble and the Peninsula Ballet, and was a featured dancer in "The Common Glory" at Busch Gardens, Williamsburg, Va. In addition to the Joffrey Ballet School, Snyder has taught at the Peninsula Ballet and Esperance Dance Theatre of Newport News, Va., the Usdan Center for the Performing Arts and the Clark Center.

Students to Fend for Themselves

With the start of every year brings about anticipation and hope for more eventful activities on Juniata's campus. This year's hopes were no different for both the students and the clubs who plan activities for our college community.

After only a few weeks into the fall term though, it is sad to see that a much too familiar trend is starting once again — student apathy.

The Juniatian apologizes to all of those students who have heard these remarks about lack of participation in school sponsored events before. The lack of participation in events across campus is just too startling to be left unnoticed.

After four weeks of movie presentations at Oller Hall, the average turn out has been 136 people per film. This is over two and one half times less people per film than last year's average of 355 per film over the same four week period.

Why is it that no one is turning out to see the films? Out of the first four this year, two were Academy Award winners, (Chariots of Fire & On Golden Pond) and all have been released just a few years ago.

Other disappointing crowds have been received at parties across campus and at the recently held concert in the multi-purpose room. Granted, the sound system may not be the best, but only 162 students on campus were willing to pay the nominal $3 cover charge to see a live band and be served traditional "beverages".

Scheduled in the future is an October 23 lecture from Ralph McGehee on the C.I.A. and its activities with foreign governments and a December 6 nuclear debate between Harvey Wasserman and General William Westmoreland.

Will these special events produce a more favorable student turn out? Probably not, but The Juniatian realizes that these student activity clubs put forth great effort to schedule and promote events.

If no students turn out to support events, then the college community may face the possibility of not having the choice to support or not. For these committees may turn to their apathetic side and let Juniata students fend for themselves on weekends — and who could blame them?

Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank everyone who helped to make my No. 9 Party a huge success. Thanks to Norm Gopsill and Hallmark Food Service for donating the party cakes and to Center Board for donating the prize money. Thanks to Scalpel and Probe, Tri Beta, and Circle K for covering many of the stations at the Bloodmobile.

A special thanks to the 135 individuals who took time out to donate. The 130 pints collected was five over our quota for the day. Both the American Red Cross and I appreciate your generosity.

Sincerely,
Wayne W. Justham

Dear Editor,

I would like to respond to the "poor turnouts and lack of participation" in regard to Centerboard's concerts, specifically the Centaur concert. As one of the roughly 1100 students who didn't attend the concert, I'll tell you why: 1) poor advertising and 2) the price.

Who or what was Centaur? The way I found out was I asked someone, and luckily enough she was a member of the Concert Committee. Sure, there were a few posters in the lobby of Ellis, and those barely readable dittos hanging all over the place. But what about the other possibilities — the window of Tote (just about everyone looks up there at some point in time during meals), the balcony of Good Hall (how many students don't see that building during the course of the day) or the College Post Office (all that's necessary is that there be a name and a box number; besides, other clubs and organizations send junk mail). Those are just a few commonplace advertising spots, which the Concert Committee didn't use.

Although $3.00 (the price of the tickets) isn't exactly a lot of money, in many cases, it's more than Juniata students are willing to pay. The problem is obvious: Why pay $3.00 for a band, that you may not like, when you can pay half that amount for a campus party with the same considerations (i.e. beverages), and music that you're almost sure to like? It's an "if-y" situation: if you don't like the party and you leave, you're only out of $1.00, maybe $1.50 and you shrug it off, but if you don't like the band and you leave, then you're out of $3.00 and more than likely, you'll be mad because you had a lousy time.

Afterwards, I heard from others who attended the Centaur concert, that the band was actually pretty good. Even so, the promotion wasn't so effective that it

Dear Editor,

Dr. Kirchhof-Glaziers' letter last week concerning political efforts to bring about nuclear disarmament made some valid points, but I feel compelled to comment on the significance of these efforts as they relate to world peace efforts. A concentration of political effort upon the most immediate threat to peace, nuclear arms, is an excellent start in dealing with world wide aggression, but to make this the sole issue for the peace movement is a dangerous error.

The elimination of only nuclear weapons is a short-sighted goal considering the other areas in which equally destructive weapons are being produced. President Reagan's "Star Wars" speech in which he proposed development of particle beam weaponry and the technology may make the elimination of nuclear weapons argument moot. The present state of world politics almost assures continued conflict regardless of the specific technologies available to an individual government. Concentration on the removal of nuclear weapons may merely cause a shift to these newly proposed weapon systems.

The prevelent attitude of "we can't trust the Russians", as Dr. Kirchhof-Glazier phrased it, is a view that can only lead to the advancement of hostilities, even if every nuclear weapon in the world was dismantled. It's time to recognize the fine line between the policies of the two superpower governments and not continue the public perception of a good vs. evil confrontation on a global scale. Ronald Reagan's delusions of using John Wayne tactics in international diplomacy illustrate this attitude perfectly. In his zeal to defeat communist movements around the world he has furthered a perception in many eyes of the United States as an oppressor, not a liberator of the third world.

The U.S. record in world politics includes support of the Shah in Iran, Samoza in the Philippines, and an equally oppressive regime in El Salvador. We have allowed support of forces attempting to otherthrow the government of Nicaragua, attempts to assasinate South American leaders, and are financing the displacement of Arab landowners by continuing military aid to Israel. Despite any mitigating circumstances involved in these operations, we must recognize that our own actions have left many nations with as sinister a picture of the U.S. as we maintain of the Soviets.

So where does this leave the nuclear freeze and disarmament movement? As a stopgap measure to prevent a plutonium bloodbath, it obviously has strong merits. But nuclear disarmament will never solve the critical need for an end to aggression in a highly technical age. World peace will require an end to nationalistic machismo currently seen in superpower politics, not merely the elimination of a specific technology.

It is time for Americans to throw our white cowboy hats back in the corner with Roosevelts' big stick and recognize the importance of solving the economic causes of conflict, leaving nationalistic pride to fall where it may.

Sincerely,
Roderick S. Keller

Dear Editor,

I would like to comment on a letter to the Editor in last week's issue of The Juniatian. The letter was from certain female MOO club members who have taken a rebellious, cynical stand against being "MOOed" at as they approach the Baker Refectory ice cream machine. The letter had a juvenile quality to it and was indicative of some neurotic, self-conscious personalities; it certainly did not exhibit a responsible opinion towards much of anything.

One cannot help but wonder if the fact that quite a high percentage (100%) of this elite club's members are on The Juniatian staff, was any influence on the incorporation of the letter into last week's Juniatian. As responsible Editors of The Juniatian, these Moo!-people apparently also took a few liberties with their writing such as speaking for all Juniata women, and by over-zealously using cynical writing to bring out a point of view more suitable for a Bra-Burners Convention rather than the Letters to the Editor column.

If the club members feel so strongly about this MOOing (which must be exceptionally annoying) then why not: 1) have the Muddy Run writer — MOO! club member — write an appropriate satire, or 2) MOO back (or maybe the members could be creative and OINK).

Should the MOO! club members sincerely be working diligently to provide the male population of Juniata (I believe the term was "studs") with curves of unparalleled perfection then please do it in the Kennedy Recreation Center and not in the Letters to the Editor column.

Dave Heydrick

Editors Note: Let your wondering cease. As printed in previous issues of The Juniatian, letters are welcomed from all of our readers, which include staff members.

Dear Editor,

Being quite proud of the Physical Plant Department — affectionately referred to as "The Blue Army", I feel compelled to respond to some of the questions raised in the last issue of this newspaper.

The Long/Miller Lounge in East Houses will continue to experience water problems for another week to ten days as the major shower repairs continue in Apartment 207. Last spring, cracked pipes in the pipe chase behind the showerheads of Apts. 307 and 407 were replaced and the Lounge ceiling was repaired. This corrected the problem and no further leakage occurred. These showerhead brass pipes may have broken

Stauffer featured on Organ

The music of Johann Sebastian Bach will be the subject of an organ lecture and recital Sunday, Oct. 9 at 8:15 p.m. in Juniata College's Oller Hall.

George Stauffer, organist and director of chapel music at St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, will present the program entitled "Bach the Borrower, Bach the Virtuoso."

Stauffer's program will be presented in two parts. He will open with commentary on Bach and his music, then complete the program by performing Bach compositions on Juniata's Moller organ. The concert will consist of Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, Three Chorale Preludes on "In dulci jubilo," Concerto in A Minor by Antonio Vivaldi as transcribed for organ by Bach, and Prelude and Fugue in A Minor.

A graduate of Dartmouth College, Stauffer holds an M.A. degree from Bryn Mawr College, and M.Ph. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. He has studied with Robert Elmore, John Weaver and Vernon de Tar and has given numerous solo recitals. His many articles and papers on Bach and the organ have appeared in such publications as "Musical Quarterly," "Current Musicology," "Bach-Jahrbuch" and "Organ Yearbook."

In addition to his duties at Columbia University, Stauffer is an assistant professor of music at Hunter College in New York City.

Stauffer will be performing on Juniata's Moller organ, viewed by experts as one of the finest organs in central Pennsylvania. The instrument was installed in Oller Hall in 1940 as a gift from Miss Rello Oller of Waynesboro, a 1920 Juniata graduate. The organ was completely restored by the Moller Organ Company in 1981.

The Oct. 9 concert, which is open to the public at no charge, is made possible in part by the Edith B. Wertz Endowment for Support of Cultural Events.

Dr. Clouse is Visiting Professor

by Claire Barnard

Juniata has a new face on campus this year, Robert G. Clouse, the J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professor of Evangelical Christianity.

Coming from Indiana State University to Juniata's friendly campus is a welcome break for Dr. Clouse, especially after working on his latest book, "Wealth and Poverty: Four Christian Views."

Currently he is conducting a class entitled "Introduction to Evangelical Christian Faith."

A native of Ohio, he earned his B.A. in History from Brian College, Tennessee, a B.D. from

According to tradition, Juniata's proverbial Mountain Day should be held any day now (If, by the time of this publication, it hasn't already been held). My question is who really knows when Mountain Day is. I guess I should re-phrase that — I mean, we all know when it is once it happens but who really knows when it will be before it happens.

For those of you new to Juniata, I'll give you yet another explanation of what Mountain Day is. Keeping in mind, of course, that you are a minority the explanation will indeed be short. Mountain Day normally takes place in the first two weeks of October. "Before the weather turns" they like to say. (Turns what?) One day in these two weeks all the little students and professors go frolicking through the woods and nobody has to go to school. Nobody even gets punished for it.

This affair takes place but one time a year and we are told that only a select few are a part of the selection of the actual date. And that ONLY this select few know that date and will ever know that date until, of course, that date arrives. On this date telephones ring (or so we are told) and RA's holler down the un-ivy-covered corridors of our wonderful institution spreading word of the joyous event. "Today is the day" (and it's got nothing to do with the yearbook.)

Okay, now . . . down to the question at hand. How many people really know when Mountain Day will be? We're not talking assumptions here. We all know what happens when we assume. I know I've got my assumption but I won't say it here in case I'm wrong, because then I'd really look silly, despite the fact that everyone else I know is assuming the same day. Since most of the people I know are upperclassmen, the assumption falls out of the category of blind assumption and into that of educated guess.

My idea is that maybe a lot more people know about the mystical date of our tradition than we, the poor unaware supposed majority, are led to believe. How can we be sure that only that handful of people know "the day"? Maybe all the RA's and RD's already know or the professors or the coaches or even the teams, but all are sworn to secrecy.

It's also possible that only the seniors know, but we're not telling anybody because if we do they'll track us down, and one day we'll find one of those foreboding blue envelopes telling us that we won't be graduating on time. It's someone's sadistic idea of a test of our loyalty to good old J.C. or our ability to keep a secret.

Another possibility could be that everyone knows but Freshmen. It's used to test their analytical skills. How easily do they adapt to their new situation and how well can they approximate the date of this tradition. How much abuse can they take from upperclassmen who get a real kick out of watching them sweat it out as they debate whether or not they really have to write that Freshmen Composition paper tonight.

Then again, I suppose it's possible that everybody knows but me and it's all a big joke. But the joke's not on me this time because I have an educated guess. Unless everyone I know has lied to me or they changed the day because too many people guessed it, then I haven't got a clue.

Due to renovations in the science library, second floor of Good Hall will be open until 11:00 p.m. as additional study space for Juniata students. During finals, if necessary, there may be extended hours and additional rooms opened.

Last year classrooms were monitored by students. Because of the completion of the Beegley Library renovations and the low number of students utilizing Good Hall last year, money was not requested this year to pay student monitors. Without monitors additional rooms can not be opened due to faculty complaints of student destruction to the rooms.

Student Concerns Subject of Meeting

by Joe Hadley

Student concerns headed the agenda at the Monday, September 26 Student Government meeting, which was held in the Faculty Lounge.

Discussions concerning alternate study areas, which began at the September 15 meeting, were continued at this meeting. Dr. Arnie Tilden, Vice President and Dean of Student Services, spoke on the subject, saying "There's not much that can be done. Good Hall is open, both the first and second floors. We'll see how it works. If there's a demand, then we will open more rooms." He added, however, that last year there were not as many rooms used as rumored.

Other Student Concern issues included the Student Directories and the washers and dryers in Lesher. The finalized edition of the Student Directory were submitted for publication Monday, Sept. 26. Although it's not known exactly when the directories will be available, they will be on sale in the Student Government office and at the Information Desk in Ellis. The sale price will be 50¢.

There was further debate over the purchase of the ice machine, the major problem being the whereabouts of a central location. Earlier it was thought that the area by the Information Desk was a possibility, however that idea was scratched since a drain is required for the machine. The latest location possibility is the Sports + Rec Complex.

Residents of Sherwood are to be charged for the damage to the linen lockers, which were broken into on Thursday, September 23. The cost is estimated to be between $125.00 and $195.00. Student Government, however, has agreed to pick up the tab for the $10.00 to be billed to each of the three students whose linen was stolen. Greg Kimble, treasurer, also suggested that the service be discontinued, since the profits are almost negligible.

Concerning the College Governance Committee, a report was submitted by Dave Deisher on the Faculty Academic Committee meeting. It seems that the committee feels that some of the requirements (i.e., historical, analytical, . . .) are not really being met. The committee wants to restructure the distribution requirements so that students will have to take more upper levels in order to fulfill the requirements.

The final highlight of the meeting was a report from Dave Wagner, President of the Class of '85. Wagner is requesting that the classes, which represent the largest clubs on campus, be recognized and funded just like any club or organization. Student Government asked that the classes submit some type of written program of their required activities, estimated costs, etc., and complete the necessary paperwork for becoming a chartered organization.

Monday, October 10 at 8:30 is the next Student Government meeting, to be held in the Faculty Lounge in Ellis.

Spring term after the Business department has completed its review of candidates. The selection process involves consideration of academic performance as well as degree of involvement in extracurricular activities. The internship does not preclude a hefty workload. Applicants should anticipate: an evaluation of their performances by the placement company; an obligatory technical paper; an oral and written presentation to the faculty; weekly meetings during which experiences are discussed. Naturally, credit is given for work successfully completed.

This term's Accounting interns are: Robert Bond with Nabisco Corporation; Michael Sachais and Thomas Eberhart with Young, Oakes, Brown and Co.; and Earl Supplee with Mead Products. Interested juniors with questions about the Accounting internship should contact Professor Kaminsky, or one of the aforementioned interns.

Artist Performs "The Odyssey"

by Kathy Manzella

If you were one of those who attended Richard Dyer-Bennet's performance of The Odyssey last Tuesday night, you probably found yourself immediately taken back in time to the age of Odysseus and the great mythological warriors. Accompanied on the harp, Dyer-Bennet performed parts of Homer's Odyssey as translated by Robert Fitzgerald.

A professional singer and guitarist, Dyer-Bennet has been performing a wide range of folk and classical song literature for more than 25 years. Since his recent retirement as a professor from SUNY Stony Brook, he has devoted himself to performing and recording The Odyssey. He has performed selections at the Library of Congress, Yale, Penn State, and various other locations around the country.

Homer's Odyssey proclaims the adventures of Odysseus, the great warrior who has spent ten years conquering Troy, and another ten years returning from the battle. Dyer-Bennet read from Books I and II, which told of the adventures of Telemachos searching for his father Odysseus. In the final selections from Books XXI and XXII, Dyer-Bennet performed the dramatic Test Of The Bow, and Death In The Great Hall.

Dyer-Bennet's fine oratory skills combined with his acting ability kept the audience captivated. His excellent use of various voice inflections caused one to feel they were listening to several performers rather than just one. The pretentious sense of timing demonstrated in accordance with the harp accompaniment by Dyer-Bennet added greatly to the work's dramatic effect, particularly in the final selection.

Juniata College's writer-in-residence Daniel Lusk reads a selection of his own poems in Shoemaker Galleries. Lusk has taught at the University of Missouri and been a writer-in-residence in several other schools around the country.

Poetry Reading by Lusk

A selection of poems written by Daniel Lusk, writer-in-residence at Juniata College, was read by Lusk Thursday, Sept. 29, in Shoemaker Galleries.

A graduate of Sious Falls College in South Dakota, Lusk received his masters degree from the University of South Dakota and studied literature at the University of Missouri, Columbia. Currently an adjunct faculty member at Somerset County College in New Jersey, Lusk has taught at the University of Missouri and been a writer-in-residence or poet-in-residence in the public schools of Delaware, New York, South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming.

Lusk is the author of several books of poetry, and a novel, "O, Rosie." In addition, his poems have appeared in such publications as "Dakota Arts Quarterly," "Falcon," "Kansas Quarterly," "Nimrod" and "The North American Review." For five years, he did literature reviews and commentaries for National Public Radio.

Lusk is a member of numerous professional organizations including the Literature Panel of the Pennsylvania Council and the Arts and the Advisory Board of the American Folk Theatre in New York City.

Trostle Named Instructor

Susan L. Trostle of State College has been named an instructor in education at Juniata College for the 1983-84 academic year.

A 1973 graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania with a B.S. degree in elementary education, Ms. Trostle received her M.Ed. degree in reading, with certification, from West Virginia University. Currently she is completing work on her Ed.D. degree in early childhood education at The Pennsylvania State University.

Ms. Trostle has been a graduate assistant and lecturer at Penn State, as well as an early supervisor at Schlow Library and Montessori Preschool in State College. She also has taught in the Johnstown public schools.

The author of several articles on early childhood education, Ms. Trostle is a member of several professional organizations including Phi Delta Kappa, Association for Early Childhood Education International, American Educational Research Association and American Psychological Association.

JC Club Continues Project

by Cinny Cooper

Juniata students, do you remember what it was like to have a big brother or sister? There was always someone to share your secrets with, someone to do things with, and someone to just be with. Now that you've grown, you can relive all the fun from the other side.

Juniata's Social Service club is organizing a Big Brother/Big Sister program. Interested students are paired with one or more students from the Huntingdon Middle School. JC students choose whether they want a boy or girl and from there the matches are made by Middle School officials. According to the Social Service Club there has been a good response from the college students this year with over 25 attending the organizational meeting.

According to Marie Oliver, Social Service Club Secretary, the rewards of participating in this program are far greater than the time involved. She spent approximately 2 hours per week with her little sister last year and has memories of some wonderful times. Movies, roller skating, trips to Raystown, and parties were just some of the things they did together. This year to make it easier for JC students to plan activities with their little brothers and sisters, the Social Service Club will be sponsoring monthly activities.

These kids "need special attention" that only a Big Brother or Big Sister can give, Marie explains. They also need the "consistency" of having 2 hours per week, every week, devoted to them.

You can arrange to have a little brother or sister anytime during the year by contacting Marie Oliver.

from too strenuous attempts to move the showerheads further than their design allowed.

On September 19th our department received information that water was again leaking into the Lounge. Our plumber immediately checked the showerhead pipe in all three apartments. Being dry at those locations, the wall was partially removed in the lower apartment shower stall. It was determined by our staff — and confirmed by Standing Stone Company — that the shower floors in Apartment 207 had developed bad leaks. At that time, the Standing Stone Company was given a contract to apply patches to both shower floors, with the understanding that one stall must be completed before the other was started so that the eight apartment residents would have one shower for their use. By the time this letter is published, the second shower floor will be under repair. After completion, the Lounge ceiling will also be repaired. Next summer, when the building is not in use, these floors will be completely replaced. The present stopgap patch effort has kept us from having to move the eight students out of the apartment for a couple of months. Those residents have been well-informed throughout this process — even if the Juniatian Editor was not.

About ten years ago, some old shower stall partitions were placed in operation in Terrace restrooms to give added privacy to the female residents. Tussey restrooms have never had individual shower stalls. A curtain is in place at the shower entrance. Lesher and South were originally constructed with some individual partitions. The third floor of North has a shower curtain at the entrance.

This past summer the old Terrace partitions were removed and a curtain installed at the shower room entrance. These partitions were removed because large portions had completely rusted out, causing unsafe jagged edges that were extremely dangerous. Soon after the academic year started, Mr. Linetty called and I explained the situation to him. He was also reminded that no budgeted monies existed to replace the metal partitions, but since the previous residents returned — expecting individual shower stalls, I would see what — if anything could be done.

Some of the Lesher faucets continue to be a problem even though several were repaired during the summer. Delays are occurring at this time because needed parts are being back-ordered by the wholesaler and the manufacturer. We have been told that the factory will not make new parts until enough orders are received to warrant a new production run. These parts are not interchangeable among companies. Another call this past week verified the situation and we were told that we can expect the parts in 6-7 weeks. We are experiencing similar problems on other style faucets and other parts. As an example, door hardware parts take as much as six months delivery lead-time. Under current economic conditions, neither manufacturers nor wholesalers can afford to tie up funds in inventories. Therefore we started increasing our own Central Stores inventories about three years ago to help alleviate the problems. This has helped us a great deal.

The Physical Plant department consists of 43 union employees, a secretary, and four management staff members. There are 24 Custodians who keep the 34 campus buildings clean and sanitary, 6 Groundsworkers who maintain the 106 acres of the main campus, 4 Boiler/Firemen who operate the central heating plant on a 24-hour schedule, a Storekeeper responsible for the Central Stores operation, and 8 craftsmen who accomplish building repairs. This craftsmen crew consists of a Plumber/Steamfitter, an A/C Refr. Mechanic, three Carpenters, an Electrician, a Plumber, and a Painter. Most of the 40-per-day Work Requests are completed by these craftsmen. During the month of September, a total of 909 Work Requests were reported to us. We completed 761 of those during the same month for an 84% completion factor. Many reasons exist on the lack of completion of the 148; such as back-ordered parts, time available and priority, plus some were just received by us on the last day or so of September. Some of the Work Requests take a lot of time, such as the plumbing problem in East Houses.

I am quite proud to be associated with this small, but dedicated and loyal staff that work hard to keep Juniata College in tip-top shape. We do a good job, and you're getting your money's worth. "The Blue Army: All washed up?" NO WAY!

Respectfully submitted,
James A. Quinlan,
Director, Physical Plant

J.C. Intramural Season Opens

co-rec volleyball

Blue/Gold

by Andy Hiscock

Intramural volleyball is serving up to be another bump and grind season. The first full week of competition has just been completed and we can already see that it will be a tough road to the play-offs for all those involved. Many of the games played went into the third game of the match to decide the victor, with each team waging war for each crucial point. The great parity shown in the three flights (divisions) can already be seen and felt, which should lead to an exciting stretch run for those coveted play-off berths.

For those readers not associated with the current intramural volleyball system, here is a brief description. The volleyball league is co-recreational with thirty-one teams currently registered for competition within three separate flights. Each team must consist of at least three girls and three guys with an equal distribution of each on the court at all times (A team may compete with five members without having to forfeit). The teams compete in matches on Monday, Thursday, and Sunday nights between 6 and 10 o'clock. To win a match a team must win two out of its three games.

Each week one match in each flight will be highlighted to give those players playing well some notoriety, while those players who happen to have a bad game will have some incentive to do better. This past Monday the action in the Blue Flight was hot and heavy. The highlighted game was between Mark Harris's North American Destroyers and Scott Stelt's team B.H. and the P . . . The Destroyers proved true to their name crushing the B. and P. right out of the opposition in two straight games 15-4, and 15-6. It was such a team effort for The Destroyers that naming particular team members would be unfair so the whole team can take a bow for their performance even though Lisa Smoker and Dave Hock put up a good fight for B.H. and the P. . . . In other action Monday night The Spigots won 10-15, 15-7, 16-14; Lord Marvel and the Principles defeated The 4-Players 12-15, 15-0, 15-4. The following teams were also victorious: A Fresh Start 15-8, 4-15, 15-10; Trojan Warriors 15-3, 0-15, 15-6; The Far Side 15-11, 15-12; and Who Cares 15-3, 15-14.

In the Gold Flight this past Wed. Merlin's Minstrels failed to obey their master which led to their demise with the help of the strong abilities of their opponent Rob's Rejects. The Rejects rallied to defeat the Minstrels in two games (15-3, 15-10) under the strong serving of Mark Kirchgasser and great bumping of Nancy Dodge. The only player that did well for Merlin was Byron Newton with a five-point serving stretch. In other Wed. night games, Lord Marvel and the Principles beat up on The Maniacs 15-3, and 15-10; The 4-Players defeated A Fresh Start 15-5, 15-3.

Green

In the green flight this week, the Tight Seals, Captain Mike Fenello, are cleaning up with three wins and no losses to date. Competition in this division has begun with full participation and no forfeits. Scores have been close with most matches consisting of a third game to break the tie.

The Seals' first win came in the first week of IM Competition against the Late Comers, whose Captain is Joan Barrett. This past week, they collected another win from Anything's Possible, whose Captain is David John, in two games with scores of 7-15, 11-15. The team's third match put them up against a second place team, Midnight Madness, whose captain is Mike Wojcik. Madness is tied for second place in the green flight, recording two wins and two losses. The Scopers, captain Michele Shields, hold an identical record.

Wojcik's team suffered a loss to the Tight Seals on Wednesday, leaving the Scopers to try their skills with the Seals on Monday the 17th. The round-robin type tourney is in its early stages, however, with four weeks left for games before the play-offs begin on November 6th.

In other co-rec volleyball action, the Scopers swept the Cheekers, captain Kelly Mehigan, with a close first game giving way to a quick 15-3 win in the second game. Earlier in the week, however, the Cheekers took one from the Chokers in a three game bout. Check that out. Who's cheeks got choked in that one?

In a match between the Adolescents and the "Volleyball Players", captains Susan Kipp and Timothy Sunderland, respectively, the Adolescents walked away with a victory after a close, three game encounter. With ten teams active in this division and all teams recording at least one win to date, the prospects are good for some hot competitive action on the IM courts this fall.

Attention!! Sportswriters Needed! Especially for the intramural sports coverage. If interested, please contact Mark Shaw, P.O. Box 667 or come to the assignment meeting Tuesday night at 7:30. For intramural coverage for this week, please contact as soon as possible.

Juniata Classic

The Juniata College women's volleyball team will host the third annual Juniata Volleyball Classic this Friday and Saturday, October 7 and 8, at the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center. Eleven teams from five states will vie for the Classic title which will be awarded after the two day competition.

The field includes some of the top teams in Division II and III. Pennsylvania will be represented by Duquesne University, Shippensburg University, Wilkes College, Grove City, Waynesburg and host Juniata.

New York will be represented by Brooklyn College and Ithaca College. Illinois will be counted by Illinois-Benedictine while Maryville College represents Tennessee.

The tournament will consist of two pools with each team playing every team in their pool. The four top teams from each pool will meet in quarter-final competition at 4:15 and 5:30 Saturday evening.

The Classic semi-finals will be held at 6:45 with the finals at 8:00 p.m. in Memorial Gym.

Dodgers. Phils ace "Lefty" Steve Carlton was on the mound in the opener. The Dodgers seem to have the Phils number this season, defeating them in 11 of 12 games. L.A. fans will look to veteran Pedro Guererro to unleash some of his power on the Phils. They will also rely heavily on the play of two prize rookies, Mike Marshall and Greg Brock. Do not fear; The greatest Phillie of all-time, Mike Schmidt, will come through with the big hit and with a little help from the bullpen — the Phillies take the Dodgers in 5 games.

In the American League, it is the year of the socks — the Chicago White Sox. The White Sox took the league by storm this season, winning 99 games, the most in the majors. However, the White Sox were, without a doubt, in the weakest division in baseball this season. They were the lone team in the American League West to end the season above .500. The Royals, who finished second to the Sox in the West, did not finish at the .500 mark.

On Wednesday night, the Baltimore Orioles will counter with MVP candidates, Cal Ripken, Jr. and Eddie Murray. Baltimore has a slight edge, 7-5, in the season series with the White Sox.

New Coach

Nineteen-eighty-three Lycoming College graduate Doug Schonewolf will join the Juniata College Indian staff this fall as the squad's defensive line coach. The announcement was recently made by Juniata President Frederick M. Binder.

Schonewolf, the son of Juniata's offensive line coach John Schonewolf of Tyrone, was a standout at defensive tackle for Lycoming College, earning four varsity letters. With numerous post season honors including All MAC defensive tackle his sophomore, junior and senior year; All MAC punter his junior and senior year; All ECAC his senior year; and Little All American honorable mention his senior year, Schonewolf will be an asset to the coaching corps at Juniata.

Indians Lose Again 25-6

What's Wrong?

by Joe Scialabba

It was a misty and muggy night in Reading on Saturday and the Juniata offense got fogged-in for the third straight week as the Indians dropped a 25-6 decision to Albright.

It was the third consecutive loss for the Tribe, all to MAC opponents, after a non-league win over St. Francis in the season opener. Albright is 2-1 overall and in the Middle Atlantic Conference.

The Indian offense again looked under the weather, especially in the second half, as it managed only eight first downs overall and just two in the final two quarters. Juniata rushed 22 times for minus-17 yards while gaining a solid 171 through the air. The Tribe was slowed down by three interceptions.

The offense came out of the clouds long enough to pull the Indians to an 8-6 score at halftime as Dave Pfeifer (12 of 38 on the night) hit a diving Dave Murphy with a 33 yard scoring pass on the last play of the first half. Murphy caught six passes on the evening for 134 yards.

Marty Kimmel was stopped short of the line on his rush for two points on the conversion.

The Lions scored first on a safety in the opening quarter when a snap on an attempted Juniata punt slipped out of Dave Hornberger's reach and slid out of the end zone.

Then late in the second period, after holding the Indians on a fourth-and-one play at the AC 34, the hosts drove 65 yards in nine plays to go on top 8-0.

Jim Kirkpatrick rolled right and fired to Dennis Grosch for the seven yard touchdown play. John Meil missed the extra point kick wide to the left but Albright had built their lead to eight points with only 1:38 left until halftime.

The Indians, however, covered 71 yards in nine plays in their scoring drive to pull within two.

It was to be the only Tribe trip into the Albright end zone.

The Juniata offense hit hard times in the last half as Pfeifer was intercepted three times while completing just two passes, both to Murphy, for 51 yards. The Tribe lost five yards on the ground in the second half, putting heavy pressure on the air game to provide the fire-power.

It just wasn't there on Saturday.

Ultimately, the Indian defense had to take the brunt of the Albright storm as the Juniata offense failed to keep possession for any significant amount of time the entire second half. The Albright offense ran 54 plays to Juniata's 27 in the final 30 minutes and held the ball for over 23 of those minutes.

The Lions' balanced offense produced three second half scores with the first following the second half kickoff as Albright went 71 yards in 14 plays with QB Kirkpatrick passing to a wide-open Dave Curtis for the final 16 yards. Meil kicked his first of two PAT's to give Albright a 15-6 edge.

Meil added a 29 yard field goal with 8:42 left in the game to stretch the lead to 18-6.

The JC defense, which was on the field seemingly the whole second half, as usual, didn't get much of a rest as the Lions intercepted a Pfeifer aerial on the first play following the kickoff and set up the final Albright scoring drive, which covered 28 yards in three plays.

Kirkpatrick got his third TD toss of the night as he threw to Jeff Price for the 28 yard touchdown with 7:15 to go and put a lid on the 25-6 Albright victory.

The Indians failed to move the ball the rest of the way and basically never mounted a serious threat all evening, with the exception of the lone scoring pass, getting inside the Albright 30 yard line only one time.

The Tribe offense could hold the ball only one time for more than six plays in a series and again that was only on its scoring trek late in the first half.

Other than the off-and-on passing game, the only offensive weapon that was consistently effective was the leg of Dave Hornberger who punted ten times for a 40 yard average and put the Lions in some rough field position on a couple of occasions.

But, throughout the game, the Albright offense seemed to have its way.

The winners rushed 60 times for 175 yards and threw for 146, with Kirkpatrick completing 13 of 19 attempts. The Lions turned the ball over twice (one fumble, one interception) but the Indians could not take advantage.

Jim Arnout rushed 33 times for 115 Albright yards while Kimmel got just 10 yards on 12 tries to lead the Indian rushing effort.

TRIBE TIDBITS: 2500 fans watched Saturday's contest in Shirk Stadium as the hosting Lions gave their Senior Night faithful something to cheer about . . . The Indians were again struck with injuries as five starters either strained old hurts or sustained new ones: Carl Fekula (bruised bicep), Kevin Smith (sprained ankle), Steve Haley (sprained knee), Pat Quint (sprained knee), and Bob Crossey (dislocated elbow) will all be questionable starters for this Saturday's game . . . Pat Quint (17 tackles), Steve Haley (14), Tom Wilkinson (13), and Gino Perri and Bill Swope (10 each) led the Juniata defensive effort . . . The Indians have now lost six out of their last seven games dating back to last season . . . The Tribe will be on the road again Saturday travelling to Westminster, Maryland, to meet Western Maryland for a 1:30 kickoff . . . After meeting the Green Terriers on Saturday, the Indians will come home again for an October 15 Parent's Weekend date with Wilkes. . . .

The Sports Corner

by Mark Shaw

Well, here it was Sunday night and I have yet to write my Sports Corner (So what's new?). Actually I was hoping I wouldn't have to write one, but unfortunately the wide open spaces which are glaring at me are telling me to fill them. So, something has to go there and necessity deems that it is my article (since it's my responsibility).

So, here I sit. What the hell am I going to write about? It can't be authoritative because I haven't done any research on anything (except, of course, for my courses). And there really wasn't anything interesting or peculiar that happened in sports this week to joke about (the football escapades aren't funny). So I guess I'll have to really go off the wall.

Well, here goes:

As sports editor for about a year now I've had plenty of opportunity to read and analyze the various names given to intramural teams. Some are quite witty; some quite dull; and, some quite interesting.

Let's see if we can analyze some. I think I'll go back to some of last year's teams to start. I'm now looking at the standing box from last spring.

Something that is quite interesting is the rampant use of initials. It's like the authors are trying not to let everybody know what they really stand for. Well, guess what? I think everybody knows. Let's look at a couple: G.H. — now everybody in the entire world knows that G.H. stands for "Good Housekeeping". I mean, what else could it be? Then, there's T and A. What could this mean? I would venture to guess that the T stands for toenails and the A has got to be appendages. You see, it makes sense that toenails are connected to toes which are appendages. Then, this year, we have N.L.S.A., (come on people, how is anyone supposed to guess this one — give me a break!)

Now, let's look at some of the other names. The first one that catches my eye comes from last year: Joe Mama — what an imagination! Now, come on, who calls their mom Joe — let's be serious. The next name that comes to sight is the "Schlong's". I think that stands by itself. (I hesitate to comment! Actually, I think some teams try to see how far they can go with their names.)

Then, you have some of the simple names like the Defenders, Last Chance, etc. These names apparently didn't take much thought, but then again, not everybody has been endowed with a great creative imagination.

I'm going to start on this year's teams. Let's see now. "We'd Rather Be Fishing" — well, if you'd rather be fishing what are you doing playing volleyball — come on now, get your act together. Then we have the "4 Players" — cute! Of course, then we have some real imaginative people — "Staff Infection" and "J.C. Fac & Staff" — Guess whose teams they are?

Then, we have a few team names that come from the distant past like Merlin's Minstrels, The Trojan Warriors (I'm not sure about this one) and Lord Marvel & the Principles (sounds like a new singing group).

Well, I think I'll stop here before I get into any more trouble (actually I've filled up all of the space I've needed to). So, until next week, think up names for your Winter intramural teams (I may need to do this again).

Guess what? I still have a couple more inches to fill. So I guess I'll B.S. a little more. My editor (Ron) just pointed out to me that attendance for movies etc. is way off of last year. These figures coincide with something I noticed — the amount of I.M.'s has also decreased. Why? I can't figure it out. Maybe someone has an idea — if so, let me know. Well, I think I've made my quota, so it's bye. Again.

Lady Spikers Victorious

by Suzanne Hickle

The Women's Volleyball team had a full schedule last week starting it out Monday night by traveling to Gettysburg. Despite the many injuries on the team, the ladies came out on top beating Gettysburg three games to two.

The women were in action Thursday evening in our gym, playing Dickinson College. Due to injuries, Coach Bock started out five freshmen and one upperclassman. With their small amount of experience of playing together, the women dominated the match, killing the Red Devils three games straight.

The game started out in a slow pace with many sideouts and mistakes from both teams. Juniata pulled ahead when Tracey DeBlase and freshman Diana Hauger blocked two of Dickinson's spikes in a row. From this point on, the Red Devils lost their pace and the Indians pushed for a victory with a score of 15-9.

The second game started out with Juniata being more aggressive. Lori Bason came in slamming middle hits, while Trish Corl increased the score with her powerful serves. Tracey, as usual, was spiking away, and Mariella Gacka helped out with her ace serves. Again Dickinson lost their enthusiasm and Juniata won 15-7.

Peggy Evans returned in the third game to help lead the team to another win. Juniata had a dominant lead of 12-1. Dickinson got hot towards the end of the game getting eight points off of Juniata. They still could not overcome Juniata, with the Indians winning with a score of 15-9.

The women finished the week in a tournament at Towson University. The tournament was dominated by division one and two teams, but this didn't turn Juniata away. The women came home with a record of 4-2 in the tournament. Juniata lost to Delaware University and Gerge-Mason putting them into the constellation bracket. Here the ladies won the finals, playing against 11th ranked Western Maryland in the final game.

As of this past weekend, Juniata was ranked 8th nationally and is holding an overall record of 10-4.

The ladies will be in action this coming weekend at home. They will be hosting their annual invitational beginning Friday evening.

Harriers Lose

by Paul Bomberger

Last Saturday afternoon, the Women's cross country team hosted defending MAC champions, Franklin and Marshall, at College Field. F & M put a damper on the Indians' first home meet of the year, with an 18-48 romp.

From the start, three F & M runners ran together and finished strong to win the race by 50 yards.

Once again it was Carolyn Andre leading the JC charge to the tape, with a fourth place finish overall. Kathy Duffy, Chris Schleiden, Sue Gill and Sue Richards completed the top five runners for the Harriers.

On Saturday, October 8 Dickinson College will travel to Juniata to run both the women and the men in a dual meet.

CROSS COUNTRY NOTES:

Senior, Carolyn Andre has finished first for the Women in all three cross country meets so far this season. . . .

The Harriers are still without the services of two fine sophomore runners, Carol Tendall and Colleen Wright, due to injuries. If these two ladies are healthy, the Women should fare well at the conference meet in November. . . .

Stickers Strong

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey Team defeated St. Bonaventure, from New York, 3-0 on Sunday, October 2.

The lady stickers played one of their best games of the season in their victory. The team looked really strong, especially in the area of passing.

Offensively, the team was led by sophomore Jill Loomis, who had a spectacular game scoring two goals (the second time this season that she has accomplished this). Both goals came from assists by freshman Polly Oliver, who has been coming on strong as of late. Senior Laura Babiash accounted for the third goal for the Indians.

Heidi Loomis and Sue Occiano also had strong performances, while Terry Sagan had a strong game defensively. The victory gave Juniata a 3-1-1 record for the season.

In other action this past week, the Indians tied one and lost one. The lady Indians were defeated on Wednesday 2-0 by Messiah College. The team did not execute well in the first half, which Messiah took advantage of. In the second half, Juniata controlled most of the play but they were unable to score.

The Indians played Dickinson on Saturday and came home with a tie. The ladies only goal was scored by Oliver. Juniata controlled much of the game but crucial mistakes in the offensive circle hurt them. They outshot Dickinson by a 2:1 margin, but failed to capitalize. The Indian goaltender Therese Libert played very well and made an excellent save on a penalty stroke.

Coming into this week, Juniata has a 1-0-1 record in the M.A.C. They played a tough York team yesterday, and on Saturday they play Susquehanna. Both games look to be good contests.

On the junior varsity level, the Indians are not faring as well as the varsity. They have yet to win a game (0-3). However, Coach Roslyn Hall feels that although there are a lot of young players on the J.V. team, many of them have a lot of potential.

Golfers 4th at Dickinson

by Duane Stroman

Juniata's golf team placed in the middle of seven schools at the Dickinson College Fall Invitational Tournament held at Cumberland Golf Club outside Carlisle on September 23, 1983. Each team entered five players with the four best scores counting. Shippensburg University won the team trophy with a total score of 303. Steve Moelein from Shippensburg was medalist with a 73. The other six team scores in order were 329 for Franklin and Marshall, 334 for Dickinson, 337 for Juniata, 342 for Lebanon Valley, 349 for Gettysburg and 352 for Muhlenberg. Mark Loeper was medalist for Juniata with an 80, followed by Jeff Spicer and Tom Cancelmo with 85s, Joe Scialabba with an 87 and Steve West with an 88.

Kickers Struggle

by Cathy Harwick

Last Wednesday, the soccer team met with Dickinson to mark the half-way point in their season. Captain Jeff Dougherty came off the bench after sitting out the last two games with injuries. He felt the team got the intensity back that was lacking in their game against Lycoming last Saturday, but commented, "our passing and intensity were equal to Dickinson, we just had trouble putting the ball in the net." In the 0-4 loss, Dougherty said, "We handed them three of their goals by making three crucial mistakes." The loss to Dickinson put the Indians' record at 1-6.

Yesterday the team travelled to Wilkes and will play York at home on Tuesday.

Parents Weekend Events Slated

Tours, Lectures, Sports a among activities

by Kathy Manzella

Walking around campus this past week, one could not help but notice members of the Blue Army working extra hard in preparation for the upcoming Parent's Weekend.

Activities are scheduled to begin on Friday with the opening of the Juniata College Museum Exhibit by Harold B. Brumbaugh, which will be held in Shoemaker Gallery. The exhibit will be open from 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

The Juniata Concert Band will be performing at 8:15 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights in Oller Auditorium. The annual Cruises on Lake Raystown have been scheduled for 8:00 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, and 1:30 p.m. on Sunday. Tours will be given of the Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center starting at 9:00 a.m. The tours will depart from the Lobby in the Hall of Fame.

Students and parents will be given an opportunity to meet with the faculty at a Coffee With The Profs session, which is scheduled to be held on the Detwiler Plaza from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. A Career Planning and Placement Open House will be hosted by William Martin from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 Noon on Saturday in the Lower Level of Ellis Hall. The World of Computer Games, directed by Dr. Dale Wampler, will be held from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 Noon in the Computer Center. A lecture and slide show will be given by Dr. Earl Kaylor, Chairman of the Department of History, entitled "Juniata Through The Years," from 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. in Carnegie Hall of Shoemaker Galleries. An open house for Alumni Parents is scheduled from 10:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Juniata will not be lacking in home sporting activities this weekend as the Women's Field Hockey team, the Volleyball team, the Football team, and the Men's Cross Country team will all be in action. The field hockey team will face Lycoming at 10:30 a.m. The Parents Weekend Invitational Volleyball Tournament is scheduled to begin at 11:00 a.m., with the semi-finals at 6:00 p.m., and the finals at 7:30 p.m. The Football team will face Wilkes starting at 1:30 p.m. The Men's Cross Country team will run against Susquehanna at 2:00 p.m.

The President's Reception for students, parents, and faculty will be held from 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. on the Detwiler Plaza. Entertainment in the evening will be provided at the Big Band Dance which will be held from 10:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. in Memorial Gymnasium. The dance will feature music of the '40's performed by a live band. Refreshments will be served.

Juniata Students Receive Four Top Scholarships

Academics and character recognized

Four of Juniata College's top scholarships have been awarded to four outstanding students in recognition of academic and personal achievement.

The William A. Schlichter Award was presented to senior Joseph W. Whitacre of York Springs. Honoring William A. Schlichter, a member of the class of 1971 until his death on Sept. 14, 1969, the award is presented to a senior man based on his first three years at Juniata according to criteria which reflects Schlichter's life. These include academic achievement, Christian character, dedication to Juniata and promise of future usefulness.

Laura A. Babiash of Malvern was presented with the Martin H. Heine Memorial Scholarship. Established by family and friends, the scholarship honors the late Martin H. Heine, a prominent Huntingdon business executive and civic leader. The scholarship is for a senior who has decided to pursue a career in business. Selection is based on meritorious achievement and character.

The C. Jewett Henry Memorial Scholarship was presented to Joy L. Hadley of Camden, N.J. Established by the Juniata Board of Trustees, the scholarship honors the late C. Jewett Henry, a member of the Juniata class of 1929, former chairman of Juniata's Board and a prominent Huntingdon attorney. The scholarship is for a Juniata senior who has decided to pursue a career in law, with selection based on meritorious achievement and character.

Mark L. Taylor from Tyrone was awarded the Elizabeth Bailey Thornbury Pre-Law Student Scholarship, honoring the late Mrs. Thornbury, a 1929 Juniata graduate and daughter of the late Hon. Thomas F. Bailey, President Judge of Huntingdon County from 1916-36.

The scholarship is awarded to a senior who plans to enter law school after graduation, has a grade point average of at least 3.2 and has made a positive contribution to campus life.

Joffrey Ballet Performs

by Mary Ritchey

The Joffrey Ballet Center Concert Group appeared before a near capacity crowd of faculty, students, and townspeople last Thursday.

The many styles of dancing guaranteed everyone enjoyment. All of the dancing emphasized the athletic abilities of the company as they executed difficult jumps and tossed ballerinas from hand to hand. "Ancient Dances" was presented in a semi-classical style complete with a plot — in a ballroom full of couples, a single man searches for his love. In contrast the lively, high-spirited "Works I" was purely interpretive of Keith Emerson's rock-classical score. Concluding the evening on an upbeat was the hilarious farce "Scott Free", a tribute to Scott Joplin. It was performed as a silent screen type comedy. The exaggerated flapper costumes and slapstick jokes sent the audience into near-hysterics at some points. "Scott Free" was a true climax to a marvelous performance.

All of The Concert Group's dancers are young professionals of some distinction. The group has toured extensively in the United

What to do with Mt. Day?

One of the oldest and best-loved traditions on Juniata's Campus is Mountain Day. Unfortunately, the Juniatian feels that a lot of the fun and tradition of Mountain Day has been lost.

The Juniatian is referring, of course, to the way Mountain Day is chosen. Presently, a Mountain Day committee is formed, then in coordination with Wayne Justham, the chairperson picks a day in October to picnic in the mountains. Nobody else knows when that day will be until 7:00 that morning when it is announced on the radio.

As most people know, that's not the way Mountain Day really started. The traditional Mountain Day included knowing in advance the date of Mountain Day. This process was altered in 1979 when extensive damage resulted from a pre-Mountain Day party. The planning committee adopted the present system with the belief that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure".

But is the new system feasibly doing its job? The Juniatian argues NO. Events of a recent Monday night exemplify this. A rather large portion of the campus was engaged in Mountain Day-eve parties thinking that Tuesday was a sure bet for Mountain Day. The only sure bet was a group of very hungover students in classes Tuesday.

Perhaps there is more to the hangovers than meets the eye. The point is students were partying even though they didn't know when Mountain Day was. Undoubtedly this partying will continue until Mountain Day finally arrives. The result: three, maybe four nights of partying instead of one. So while the intent was to prevent damage, in reality the secrecy of Mountain Day creates opportunity for more damage.

To many, a curse word looms in that last paragraph: PARTYING. Horror upon horror, in reality parties do exist during the academic week regardless of whether it's Mountain Day. And what's so wrong with that? If a student feels himself competent enough to party during the week, by all means let him. If he's not, he'll be bounced.

The Juniatian can't help but think that the opportunity to socially grow is being limited with the present Mountain Day system. Most students attending this school are at least 18 years old and somewhat capable of making rational decisions (otherwise they wouldn't be here). In essence, Juniata students are being treated as if they aren't mature enough to handle the responsibility of budgeting time between work and play.

The Juniatian now addresses the counterpart of partying — work. Workwise, current Mountain Day procedures could almost be called a hinderance. Does anybody stop to consider how frustrating it may be for a student to study for a test only to find out it's Mountain Day and he has to re-psych himself again the next night? It's frustrating for faculty, too. Mountain Day's secrecy prevents them from relying on plans.

What it boils down to is that the Mountain Day system has two basic faults. First, it makes the assumption that students are irresponsible and incapable of acting rationally. It is too bad that the system doesn't recognize that the actions of a few in 1979 are not representative of the actions of many in 1983. Second, it creates pressure for both students and faculty. The current system is putting a damper on what should be a bright day.

Mountain Day is a wonderful tradition, and the Juniatian feels certain that few would like to see it abandoned. But since the current system isn't working feasibly, why not alter it again? Reverting back to the traditional Mountain Day system has the Juniatian's vote.

ALONG MUDDY RUN

(Disclaimer: The following excerpts are from diaries, recently discovered in our own archives, of an anonymous Juniata College student. This collection is scheduled for publication in June of 1984. At present, however, the diaries are being carefully scrutinized for authenticity, as many of the historical dates seem to be written at future times.)

September 30, 1980 — One reason I came to Juniata College was because I thought they were more lenient here about declaring a major. I thought this would be a perfect situation for someone who doesn't know what she wants to be when she grows up, like me. Was I ever wrong about this place! Most schools let you wait until you're at least a sophomore before forcing you to declare a major, but these people are wanting me to put something down in writing before the end of winter term. They tell me I can change it, and to put down some general ideas right now. Maybe I'll pretend I'm premed. I'll never take chemistry, but they'll figure out soon enough that I'm putting off my decisions.

February 5, 1981 — It is time to face facts. I have to submit a Program of Emphasis at the end of this term. Things are even worse than I imagined. Not only do I have to list the courses I plan to take, with so many upper levels, etc., but I have to write out a synopsis of goals and expectations, and then some sort of justification of how the courses fit in with the synopsis. My question is: What if I don't have any goals? I'm not even nineteen years old yet. How can I possibly know what I want to do with the rest of my life? Oh well, I'll never have to bother with it again . . . until I'm a senior.

December 12, 1981 — I'm getting really bored with the type of courses I am taking here at good old J.C. I am thinking about com-

Dear Editor,

The recent letter by Dr. Kirchof-Glazier was interesting but doesn't make as strong a case against the MX as might be made.

The argument that we have enough nuclear weapons to destroy the other side many times over really misses the point as far as the backers of the MX are concerned. The Reagan administration wouldn't deny at all that in any nuclear war scenario we could inflict totally unacceptable damage on the Soviet Union with our present forces if it was in our interest to do so, but the latter is important. Reagan fears that the Soviets might launch a first strike that would destroy most of our land based missiles but cause relatively small civilian casualties. Since our submarine and bomber forces don't possess weapons of high enough accuracy to hit missile silos, the President could only respond with an attack on the Soviet Union that would cause massive civilian casualties, thus inviting them to do the same to us. Rather than commit national suicide, the President might well choose to simply surrender. Reagan worries that since we can't be sure the Soviets wouldn't try something like that we might be tempted to let them act the bully in international affairs.

Opponents of the MX argue that any Soviet leader considering such a plan would face formidable uncertainties. He couldn't be sure that his missiles would stay on an accurate course since the magnetic and gravitational forces that would affect the trajectory of missiles fired over the North Pole are poorly understood. He would be launching history's biggest battle without the benefit of a dress rehearsal. He couldn't be sure we wouldn't fire on warning at the first sign of enemy missiles, thus leaving only empty holes as targets. Finally, even if the strike was successful, he couldn't be sure that the President wouldn't retaliate with our remaining forces, even if it would be suicidal.

I think that the opponents have valid arguments, and there is serious question as to whether the MX as proposed would solve this problem of vulnerability even if it does exist. Furthermore, it may be greater cause for the Soviets to fear a first strike from us against their ICBM force, a much larger percentage of which are land-based than ours. Certainly the MX will drain funds from the private sector needed for capital investment to meet foreign competition. It will make reducing the budget deficit more difficult, and perhaps delay the return to fast noninflationary economic growth. For these reasons we are better off without the MX.

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to Joy Hadley's evaluation of the poor turnout for the "Centaur" dance the night of September 23rd. Her analysis of the poor turnout stated that it was a result of "poor advertising" and "the price". In response to her criticism, I would like to first reply to the aspect of "poor advertising" and finish with the idea of the price.

"Who or what was Centaur?" This was the statement used in last week's article by Miss Hadley. She also stated, however, that she did see the posters for the dance in Ellis and saw the dittos placed in the dorms advertising the event. If this was the case only an illiterate could still ask who or what was Centaur. The dittos as well as the posters stated that the Baxter invited to D.C.

Dr. Craig Baxter, professor of politics and history at Juniata College, was one of 20 educators from across the country invited to review a study on India undertaken by the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) at Georgetown University.

The India project was one of 11 studies done by CSIS on factors affecting the future course of conflict in Third World nations. Areas examined included defense problems, military power in each country, types of weapon systems that might be developed by each country and the probability and character of conflict in these nations.

The project on India was written by Dr. Rodney W. Jones, senior associate at CSIS and a 1964 Juniata graduate, and reviewed by Baxter and the other 19 experts on India. The panel, representing such institutions and governmental units as the University of Texas, University of California at Berkeley, U.S. Department of State, House Foreign Affairs Committee, Embassy of India and the Central Intelligence Agency, made comments on the India project and offered guidance in the preparation of the final paper.

The Department of State has asked Dr. Baxter to return to Washington Oct. 21 to participate in an Academic Review Panel reviewing a study on India that was commissioned by the State Department. Dr. Baxter is one of four educators invited to sit on this panel. The other three are from Columbia University, the University of California at Berkeley and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1981, Dr. Baxter was a State Department official for 25 years, stationed in such countries as Pakistan, India, Afghanistan and Bangladesh. He received his B.S., A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, and is the author of two books on politics in India.

Dr. Baxter recently completed work on an article entitled "Bangladesh: The Unique Successful Case," dealing with the Pakistani Civil War and the independence of Bangladesh. The article will be included in the book "Ethnic Separatism and World Politics" scheduled to be published next year by University Press of America. Baxter served as political counselor at the U.S. Embassy in Bangladesh from 1976-78.

Ex-CIA Official to Speak

Ralph McGehee, author of Deadly Deceits, and an ex-CIA top official, will be the featured speaker in Alumni Hall Oct. 23, 1983. As a twenty-five year veteran of the CIA, McGehee has travelled extensively in the Central American area and is prepared to speak about world-wide CIA operations. Through his experiences and subsequent research, McGehee shows that the CIA is primarily the covert action arm of the presidency. He describes how the CIA shapes its intelligence, even in such critical areas as Soviet nuclear capability, to support presidential policy. Dis-information is a large part of its covert action and the American people are the primary target audience of its lies.

Mr. McGehee will explain the specifics of the Agency's deceits and operations that dragged us into and kept us in the Vietnam War. He will also emphasize the dangers of President Reagan's March 11, 1983 Executive Order that places hundreds of government employees under the constraints of the secrecy agreement. This issue is of paramount importance to college students anticipating any type of career in government.

event being held was a dance. Logically it should follow that "Centaur" was a band. Granted, posters could have been placed in the window of Tote, but posters outside of Good Hall would probably not last outside of a day or two.

Also she summed up her own idea of putting flyers in mailboxes well with her own terminology. She stated, and I quote, "other clubs and organizations send junk mail." This is probably precisely what she would have done with a flyer, junked it! It would have made little impact on the actual turnout at the dance.

In addition, announcements were made advertising the dance at meals and hourly on V-103, which by the way, has an eighty-five percent listenership. In fact I was told by one person that they were "tired of hearing them." If this advertising was not enough, I really doubt that anymore would have made a significant difference. As a final comment on advertising, think back to last year's Homecoming. Who was the band? That's right, "Centaur," and incidentally they went over very well with no complaints.

As for the price of three dollars a ticket, I really don't feel this is out of line. Miss Hadley stated that a typical party on campus costs one dollar to one dollar and fifty cents. Obviously she hasn't been to many parties this year. The going rate is usually one dollar and fifty cents and typically is two dollars. Is an extra dollar really too much to ask for, given the same beverages plus live entertainment. I don't think so. Many I have talked to express similar sentiments.

In fact a party earlier this year charged three dollars and gave admission to two parties that were held at the same time. What is the logic of this? If students are willing to spend three dollars for this then why not a party with a live band. I think the price was not a major factor in turning people away from the dance.

As an aside, the senior class threw a party at two dollars a ticket the following night and made approximately three hundred dollars. Until expenses were accounted for, this represents a population of at least two hundred people at the party. "Centaur" netted only one hundred and sixty-two people. Why? In setting ticket prices one must also take into account the cost of the entertainment. "Centaur" cost eight hundred dollars and refreshments and expenses came to approximately two hundred and fifty dollars. This totals to one thousand and fifty dollars to put on the dance. At three dollars a head the attendance required to break even is three hundred and fifty people. The typical dance at Juniata doesn't net this many people. The Dance Committee thus felt it had to charge three dollars to keep from going in the hole. The Dance Committee has a limited budget and thus can't afford to provide free dances. The object of the committee is to break even and at three dollars a ticket the committee doesn't even do this. I think this satisfies any questions about the price for the ticket.

Needless to say, with one hundred and sixty-two people the Dance Committee lost quite a bit, over five hundred dollars in all. This represents one-fourth of the Cloister stepped out from its rough exterior image by sponsoring the first campus semi-formal. The Inaugural Ball held in South's lounge marked the beginning of the Cloister Country Club.

The Country Club resulted from the collaborated efforts of Resident Director Mark Shaw, and RA, Dave Stoll. The Country Club is "progressing very well," according to Stoll. The club is sponsored by the Cloister RHA and also by the Residential Life Committee. Membership is open to all residents of Cloister. Interested residents were required to pay dues which entitles them to participate in all of the club activities. Shirts for the club members have also been ordered.

Currently the Country Club is sponsoring the Monday Night Football Gatherings held in the Cloister Ranch. Films are also shown weekly and a recent repelling trip was held. The first "Long Ball Gold Tournament" is scheduled to be held sometime soon. The object of the tournament will be to see who can drive a plastic golf ball the farthest. Future activities being planned include a Winter banquet and the Spring Pro Am Gold Tournament. The tournament, which will be open to the entire campus, is scheduled to be held at the Standing Stone Country Club.

Club activities will be determined upon the interests of the members, according to Stoll.

Information Session for Study Abroad

Are you interested in living and studying in a foreign country? Did you know that Juniata has a growing, improving study abroad program? Do you have the information you need to make a sound decision as to whether study abroad should be a part of your experience while you are a student at Juniata?

To gain information concerning all of these questions plan to attend an information session to be held Thursday, Oct. 13, 1983 at 7:00 p.m. in the faculty lounge at Ellis Hall. This meeting will give you the opportunity to hear the directors of these programs describe, briefly, the goals and potentials of each. Dr. Ruth Reed will describe Juniata's exchange program and Dr. Crouch will explain the Brethren Colleges Abroad program. You will then have the opportunity to talk to Juniata students who studied abroad during their junior year. Also, our guest exchange students from Germany, Spain and France will be present for you to meet and talk to.

This meeting is primarily for freshmen and sophomores. If you are at all interested then this is the time for you to start planning. With registration set for Wednesday, Oct. 26, you need to begin now to plan your schedule to incorporate a term or year abroad. This means immediate attention to the possibility so that you are prepared.

You need not commit yourself at this time but you do owe it to yourself to investigate the possibilities offered through these programs. This is a world of increasing international interaction; take advantage of this opportunity to be a participant.

Parents Weekend Concerts

A variety of musical selections will be performed by the Juniata College Band at two free concerts Friday, Oct. 14 and Saturday, Oct. 15, in Oller Hall.

The 60-member band, is under the direction of Ibrook Tower, associate professor of music and a member of the Juniata faculty since 1974. Tower received his bachelor's degree in clarinet and music education from the Peabody Conservatory of Music, now affiliated with Johns Hopkins University, and holds a master's degree from Temple University. He currently performs with the Juniata Woodwind Quintet and the Nittany Valley Symphony Orchestra.

The 8:15 p.m. concerts on Oct. 14 and 15 will feature "Zampa Overture" by Louis Herold, "Folk Song Suite" by Ralph Vaughan-Williams, "Suite of Old American Dances" by Robert Russell Bennett, "Medley of Broadway Show Songs" by James Burden, and several marches.

The public is invited to attend the concerts which are being held in conjunction with Parents Weekend at Juniata College.

Students Speak

by Maureen Morrissey

Question: There is a rumor going around that Mountain Day may be cancelled this year. What do you think about this?

Tim Lacey: "Mountain Day has been a tradition for many years. It means as much to Juniata as the Storming of the Arch, Parents Weekend or Maude Lesher. I see the talk about cancelling it as just that: talk."

Beth Bence and Jill Wineka: "We don't think it should be cancelled — it is a day for the students. It's not fair to punish everybody for the few people who have been having parties — if that's the reason why they are talking about cancelling it."

Ken Marsh: "I would not be happy because I've never experienced Mountain Day and I've been looking forward to it."

Along Muddy Run

pletely switching departments. The idea of it is quite appealing in every sense but one — I have developed an acute phobia of dealing with my POE. Whether this is due to my basic lack of future goals, or the psychological connection I make with it to Edgar Allan, I am unsure. Perhaps I will see how long I can go without telling anyone about my change in priorities.

October 12, 1982 — I have decided that the only way to deal with phobias is to face them head-on. Today I submitted another draft of my POE. Yes, it was difficult, but deep down I feel as though it was the best thing to do. My fingers were shaking on the keys of the typewriter as I tried to make up some goals, and then to justify them. I pray that the Lord will forgive me for "stretching the truth" a little bit, for in fact, I am still quite goal-less. But what do they expect? I'm only twenty years old. How can I possibly know what I want to do with the rest of my life?

January 29, 1983 — The inevitable question of "What's your major?" has always ranked right up there in personal favoritism with "What is the answer for world peace?", "When was the last time you weighed under 120?" and "Are you saved?". As a student, I am labeled. I am expected to have goals, a life plan, skills . . . So what is someone who has dabbled a little bit in the various sections of the humanities to say? That I am spending $8000 a year to learn bits about the world in general? That I am in college because it's expected of me, that I have nothing better to do, and that a diploma, no matter how general, might be worth something? That I'm (heaven forbid) practically a candidate for liberal arts?

March 16, 1983 — I have decided to declare Pre-Unemployment as my major. I figure I could do this by writing up a POE that fits together in no cohesive fashion. The synopsis of goals and expectations would be relatively simple to articulate: "The purpose of my POE is to provide myself with an educational background that will serve as a tool for a better understanding of, as well as support for, my basic belief that I am non-marketable. I plan to go out into the world and be continually turned down for employment due to my lack of expertise in any one particular area." Included in this program of academic rigor would be an internship in which the student would spend a term of total non-productivity, an experience to provide valuable insights to one not counting on any kind of real job, post-graduation. If the student were to do poorly enough in his courses, his goals would be achieved, and he could surely graduate cum laude, exemplary of Juniata's academic caliber.

After all, I am told unemployment is the career of tomorrow. Juniata should be making greater strides in preparing its students for this field.

September 26, 1983 — Maybe I should change my major. Is it too late to completely switch over to English or something? I have the attention span of a three-year-old.

October 5, 1983 — I recently got a blue envelope in the mail from the registrar's office. Now that I'm a senior, they are insisting that I send them all sorts of information, like my full name for my diploma. This means first, middle, last names and suffix (i.e., Jr., II, III, etc.) One of my roommates is threatening to use "Etc." as her suffix. The worst part is that they want your final POE title. That's awfully personal, I think, especially when I haven't decided what it's going to be yet. And why the hell is it due two weeks before the final POE is due? That's bureaucracy for you. As far as I'm concerned, they can wait. Anarchy now!

October 9, 1983 — I'd like to know how many seniors are out there who actually don't have majors. I have a suspicion that there is a higher percentage of POE-avoiders than one might imagine. An invisible, silent group (for obvious reasons), perhaps if we all came out we would find we were actually in the majority. Yet we've all waited until the last moment to try to paste together the courses we've taken into some sort of articulate, cohesive whole, rather than to bear the shame of admitting we never had a major, or if we did it no longer exists, or we are (heaven forbid) liberal arts.

November 14, 1983 — At the very last possible moment today, I handed in my POE, thus avoiding Academic Probation. I ended up creating an interesting title on October 31 and just taking it from there. I feel badly for the administration, as I change my mind each term as to what I'm going to take. Alas, they've not seen the last of me. But when I think about it, it's really not my fault. I'm only twenty-one years old. How can I possibly know what I want to do with the rest of my life?

Dance Committee's budget for the year. If this is to be the trend for dances, then you, the students, are seriously limiting the Dance Committee's resources and thus the quality and number of dances on campus. On the other hand, if the dances are well supported, the quality of the dances won't drop and will probably go up. Consider this the next time you decide that three dollars is too much to pay for a ticket.

As a final comment on the price of the tickets, consider how many people are willing to spend well over three dollars for a cover charge to get into a club and then spend over and above that for drinks. Is three dollars really out of line?

Finally, as one last comment in response to last week's article on the "Centaur concert" addressed to the "Concert Committee," the event was a dance, not a concert and was sponsored by Centerboard's Dance Committee, not the Concert Committee. Next time you write a list of your ill-founded grievances at least address it to the proper committee.

Sincerely,
Jeff Nicholas,
Dance Committee

Nuclear Age Lecture

Juniata College's Baker Lecture Series will continue Tuesday, Oct. 18 with a program on "How to Find Security in the Nuclear Age: Preparing for the 1990s."

The 8:15 p.m. lecture in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge will be delivered by Dr. Robert C. Johansen, senior fellow and chairman of research and policy studies at the World Policy Institute in New York.

A former president of the Institute for World Order, Johansen is currently a visiting fellow at the Center of International Studies at Princeton University, and a member of the Board of Directors of the Arms Control Association in Washington, D.C.

Johansen received his B.A. degree with distinction from Manchester College, and holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University. He is the recipient of numerous academic awards including a President's Fellow at Columbia and a National Science Foundation Fellowship for Research in the Social Sciences.

Over the years, Johansen has written numerous articles, papers and books including "The National Interest and the Human Interest: An Analysis of U.S. Foreign Policy" and "Toward an Alternative Security System: Moving Beyond the Balance of Power in the Search for World Security."

The Baker Lecture Series is sponsored by Juniata's Peace and Conflict Studies Committee and the political science department.

Jim Snyder, ballet master, choreographer, and teacher for the Concert Group, is as brilliant as his pupils. He has been with the group since its beginning and designed the elegant but lively choreography for "Ancient Dances" and the Romeo and Juliet excerpt.

The Juniata Artist series will continue next Wednesday, Oct. 19th, with John Mohler, clarinetist.

"Best Friends" Review

by Leslie Singleton

"Best Friends" was a wonderfully entertaining film, starring Burt Reynolds and Goldie Hawn, which should have received much more attention than it did when it was first released.

It is a romance but not in the usual sense of the word. This film gives us a real look at love in that it touches face with the complexity of marriage and living together. Most importantly, it gives a view of two people who are best friends and afraid that marriage will ruin this.

Amid a sea of stereotypic films of perfect love and romance where lovers walk away into the sunset, this film stands out with its comic, and at times, touching portrayal of reality.

When we are introduced to her Buffalo, New York family and his Virginia family, we laugh uncontrollably at the typical characteristics of each of these areas. Everyone can relate to them depending upon what area they're from. Another entertaining situation was their honeymoon spent on an Amtrak train with all its inconveniences such as the twin bunks for sleeping.

PSU Changes Logo

There's a new cat and new lettering on Penn State t-shirts, sweatshirts and mugs this fall. The traditional Nittany Lion with its old block lettering are gone.

They're victims of a renewed campus pursuit of as much as $500,000 in licensing revenues. Indeed, more schools — mostly in the province of the Third Federal District Court in Pennsylvania — soon may be junking honored old symbols and logos in favor of new ones in the coming years, according to various administrators, trademark experts, and clothing manufacturers.

The reason, they say, is to make it easier to control and lay claim to the money to be made from manufacturers who put collegiate "allied marks" — pictures of mascots, school initials, etc. — on products.

"Everyone's getting tough about the use of the logos," mourns a midwestern manufacturer of key chains who says he recently reached a none-too-amicable settlement with a college over use of the campus' mascot on key chains.

"Years ago," says Fran Lynch, Penn State's assistant athletic director, "schools were pleased to have their names on things as a sort of walking billboard. But along came the budget crunch and, boom, we've got to generate more revenue."

Lynch speculates licensing revenue from the new logo and symbol is worth a "potential" $300,000 to $500,000 a year.

Penn State took the unusual step of just starting all over with a new logo and mark instead of trying to license the old symbols because "we had 21 different Nittany Lions and as many different kinds of type (styles) being sold, and we wanted a unified identity."

But Stephen Crossland, head of International Collegiate Enterprises, which helps license the marks of some 60 schools nationwide, points out Penn State is in the only judicial district in the country where courts have ruled against schools in trademark rights with private manufacturers who marketed products without paying the schools.

"They took an ounce of prevention," Crossland says. "They figured 'If we're going to the hassle (in the courts), why don't we go ahead and change the marks?' That way, their right to license them is unquestioned, and the old marks still being printed without licenses become worthless."

A number of other schools are facing similar problems. Brigham Young, Virginia, and Georgia have all recently threatened to go to court to stop private firms from marketing beers and drinks with their names and initials on the cans. None of the schools, however, has a long record of defending its trademarks actively.

To keep a good legal claim on the marks, schools must have a record of protecting the symbols, and must be able to prove having "first internal and commercial use" of them, explains Edith Collier of the U.S. Trademark Association.

But adopting wholesale changes and risking the wrath of traditionalists — and grammarians (Penn State, for instance, is now written as PennState in the new trademark scheme) — can be expensive.

Crossland says throwing out all the old for a new identity "really is not a practical route unless there's a strong likelihood of getting tied up in litigation" over licensing somewhere down the road.

"They would have changed everything in a minute," contends the midwestern manufacturer about the Illinois school that recently "blackmailed me" into paying a licensing fee.

It may be worth it. Crossland says officials of the highly-successful National Football League licensing program estimate "that if colleges ever got themselves organized and together, they could do 10 times as much as the NFL."

That would amount to some $3.5 billion a year in revenues for the nation's campuses.

I.M. Co-Rec. Volleyball

by Andy Hiscock

The Co-Rec Volleyball season continues into week No. 3 with the three Flights starting to show their true colors. The Blue Flight has only two teams with unscathed records, while the rest of the division is spread out over the gamut from good to poor. The Gold Flight has just about the same situation, but only one team has not been able to find the key to success. (It just happens to be the team that I'm on; "Merlin's Minstrels.") The Green Flight definitely is more closely matched than the other two Flights during this young season. I'm sure that all of those teams tied for third place would like to have won more games than they have lost, but they are still in the hunt.

Now for this past weeks highlighted games. I had some trouble covering the action this past week because the two games that I went to report on ended up being forfeits. I guess "The Staff" were still contagious because they had to forfeit to the "North American Destoyers"; while "The Spiggots" drained a win from "No Win Situation" because they did not have enough players to compete. In other Blue Flight action from Sunday, "The DSA Stumblers" defeated "B.H. and the P." in two straight games (15-11), (15-10); "We'd Rather Be Fishing" beat "To Be Announced" by luring their opponents to a quick (15-4), (15-12) win; and "Who Cares" decided to take interest in the game and overpowered "The Esmereldas" (15-11), (15-3).

This week in the Gold Flight there was also a forfeit of the Far Side to N.L.S.A. I did get to catch the game between Chris Muha's team Rob's Rejects and Rhonda Bergey's team The Maniacs. The Maniacs went crazy and rejected the fact that Joe Cambell was serving up a storm with their own firepower of Maggie Gregory's ability to set the ball to the front line players and Tony Clemente's ability to place the ball anywhere on the court from those fantastic sets. The Maniacs were able to win two straight games with the scores of (15-13), (15-10). One other Sunday night game for the Gold Flight was that heated contest between teams at opposite ends of the spectrum. A stunning victory goes to A Fresh Start for crushing those hapless fellows on the winless Merlin's Minstrels (15-11), (15-9).

Crawlers Ahead

by John Surbeck

The fall IntraMural Softball season has been underway for three weeks producing a competitive, evenly-balanced league. Each team has earned a victory, while only the "Night Crawlers" remain undefeated. Juniata's faculty has entered a team, "JC Fac and Staff," along with nine student-formed teams.

Thus far, the "Night Crawlers," a team consisting mainly of Juniata College baseball players has shown they are the team to beat, posting a 4-0 record. "The Pigeons III," who also have four wins, are one of two teams with only one loss; the other team being the "Galloping Ghosts" at 3-1. The top six teams are eligible for the playoffs and with half the season left, it appears as if all ten teams have a legitimate shot at making the playoffs which begin October 30th.

This week features a match-up between the league leading "Night Crawlers" and the aggressive fourth place team, "Save the Whales." The "Whales" are looking to better their league standing, feeling confident that they can be the first team to blemish the "Night Crawlers" perfect record.

Attention!! Sportswriters Needed! Especially for the intramural sports coverage. If interested, please contact Mark Shaw, P.O. Box 667 or come to the assignment meeting Tuesday night at 7:30. For intramural coverage for this week, please contact as soon as possible.

Juniata Stickers Tie Once Again

by Mark Shaw

On Saturday, October 8, the Juniata Women's Field Hockey Team tied Susquehanna 2-2.

The first half of the game belonged to Susquehanna. They dominated and kept the ball in the Juniata end for much of the first half.

Halfway through the first half (35 minute halves), a Susquehanna player beat the Juniata defense, then beat the goaltender to give Susquehanna a 1-0 lead.

Things continued to look bad for Juniata as the Susquehanna offense continued to surge. With about seven minutes left in the half, Susquehanna scored again to make it 2-0. It appeared as though the lady stickers were in for a long game.

But, Juniata did not give up. With 2 minutes remaining in the first half, Laura Babiash scored from the left corner. Babiash's goal was Juniata's first shot on goal.

In the second half, Juniata played much better. Both teams travelled up and down the field; first, Susquehanna would surge, then Juniata would surge.

With ten minutes remaining in the game, Polly Oliver scored for the Indians with an assist by Missy Moyer. At the end of regulation, the score was tied at 2.

After double overtime, the score remained 2-2. Both teams played well during the two overtime periods, but neither could score.

Juniata goaltender Therese Libert had an excellent game with 11 saves on 13 Susquehanna shots; Juniata had seven shots on goal. Also playing well for the Indians, in addition to those who scored the two goals, were Heidi Loomis and Sue Occiano.

In action on Wednesday October 5, Juniata also tied York, 3-3. The Lady Indians played well and, in fact, were leading 3-2 with three minutes left to play; but York scored to tie the game in the closing moments. The Indian goals were by Deb Barker, Missy Moyer, and Jill Loomis.

At the end of Saturday's play, the Lady Stickers were 1-0-1 in the M.A.C. and 3-1-3 overall.

Yesterday, the ladies played a tough F & M team, and on Saturday they will host Lycoming at 10:30.

A Sack Invasion

by Mark Shaw

A new game has been invading the campus of Juniata. Some call it "Hackensack" — they're wrong; its technical term is Hacky Sack. The game has recently been taking Cloister by storm, and will surely spread to the other halls soon.

Hacky Sack was patented in Oregon in 1972. The "Hacky Sack" is a ball about an inch and a half in diameter. It is made from cow leather and is filled with the mysterious "Hacky Sack" beads.

The game is believed to be an old Indian game (that should make it at home here). It is also thought to have been a game played by hobo's while they waited for a train. Presently, at Juniata, it is a method that Cloisterites use to blow off studying.

The object of the game is not to let the Hacky Sack touch the ground. The Hacky Sack is served (which can be served in a variety of ways) and the person who gets the sack must try to keep it in the air by kicking it. (Hands cannot be used; if they are, the person who uses them is sacked — the sack is thrown at them.) The players then try to pass it to each other so that everyone touches it once; when they all touch it, it's called a "sack".

I'm sure there are many people out there who have seen a group of people playing Hacky Sack, especially on the Cloister porch. The leading Cloister sacker, Mike Langer, has been largely responsible for the sack revolution at the Cloister. In fact, rumor has it that there may be a Hacky Sack Club forming soon.

Now, you may say to yourself, "Who would be stupid enough to play this game?" Answer — Everybody who has touched the sack once. It presents a challenge to your eye/foot coordination. It also challenges your reflexes. The game is quite contagious. People have been known to play it for hours on end.

Hackey Sack has also found a new way to utilize the new Detwiler Plaza. Not only can the Detwiler Plaza be used for Presidential receptions, etc., but it makes a great Hacky Sack arena. So if you see a group of people playing "sack" at the Plaza; stop, take a gander, and I'll bet that after a few minutes, you'll be dying to play.

Tribe Better, Still Loses

by Joe Scialabba

The Juniata Indians played perhaps their best football in four weeks but lost their fourth straight game on Saturday, a 20-7 decision to Western Maryland, before 3200 sun-drenched Homecoming day fans in Westminster, Maryland.

The Tribe fell to 1-4 on the season and remains 0-3 in the Middle Atlantic Conference. The Green Terrors are 2-2 for the year.

The Indians were forced to play without the services of seven regular starters due to injury or illness but made a good effort despite the handicap.

Trailing only 13-7 at halftime, the Indians showed an improved rushing attack throughout the afternoon and were in the game until the final minute.

The offense was frustrated most of the second half as play stayed basically on the Terror-side of the fifty-yard line but never close enough for the Tribe to score. The best chance came late in the fourth quarter.

Following a 45 yard WMC punt, the Indians went from their own 25 yard line to the Green Terror 41 before coming up short on a fourth-and-nine pass completion with just over three minutes left in the game.

It was up to the defense to get the Tribe a final chance to score. They did.

The Indian defense held the Terrors at their own 36 yard line and forced another punt giving the Tribe one last chance to get into the Western Maryland endzone.

Unfortunately, Scott Glouse boomed a 60 yard punt that rolled dead on the Juniata 4 yard line with only 1:36 left to play putting the Indians in a desperately deep hole.

After a one yard gain on first down, starting Sophomore QB Dave Pfeifer was intercepted at the 23 by Terror defensive back Rick Conner who returned it into the endzone for the score to clinch the 20-7 victory for Western Maryland.

The ending of the game was not indicative of how closely contested it was as Juniata showed marked offensive and defensive improvement despite many new faces and a semi-switch back, for the first time this season, to the two-back veer set.

Freshman QB Todd Kaden, who split time with Pfeifer, put the Indians into the lead in the second quarter when he hit Todd Naylor with a 21 yard scoring pass.

The scoring drive covered 51 yards in six plays following a Ron Hall interception of a Western Maryland pass.

Mike Schaffner's extra point kick gave Juniata a 7-6 edge with 5:02 left until halftime.

Western Maryland had jumped out to a 6-0 advantage on field goals of 23 and 30 yards by Rich Johnson.

The initial scoring drive covered 47 yards in 12 plays in the first quarter, while the early second quarter drive went for 53 yards in 10 plays.

The Green Terrors came back late in the first half to take the lead for good when they covered 58 yards in eight plays to score when QB Ray Evans went in from a yard out.

Johnson kicked his first of two successful extra points to make it 13-7 with only 13 seconds left in the half.

The score stayed that way until the interception return iced it with only 41 seconds to go in the game.

Evans proved to be the real factor for the hosts as the Junior quarterback ran the ball effectively throughout the game, rushing 27 times for 172 yards and for several important first downs on third down situations. His passing was much less of a factor, however, as he hit only 4 of 19 attempts for 23 yards and one interception.

The Terror team rushing effort gained 291 yards on 59 carries with tailback Wayne Pollock complimenting Evans well, gaining 89 yards on 17 tries.

For the Indians it was a much different offensive day compared to the past three weeks as the ground game produced 132 yards on 44 carries while the ball went in the air only 23 times all afternoon.

Pfeifer hit 5 of 16, Kaden 2 of 7 passes, for a total of 64 passing yards. Each QB had one pass intercepted.

Marty Kimmel led the running corps with 44 yards on 14 totes, while Carl Fekula caught three passes for 33 yards to lead the Indian receivers.

Juniata hopes to snap the four-game losing skid this Saturday when they host Wilkes. The Parent's Weekend contest gets underway at 1:30 at College Field.

Harrier Action

by Paul Bomberger

Last Wednesday, the Women's cross country team travelled to Shippensburg University for a triangular meet with Division II powers — Shippensburg U. and Millersville State U.

The Indians held their own against the high-caliber competition, even though they did not come home with a victory. The scores of this meet were not indicative of the true performances of the Women.

Carolyn Andre, once again rose to the occasion and blazed her way to a 2nd place finish overall. Chris Schleiden ran a strong race and claimed a 10th place. The consistent trio of Cathy Duffy, Sue Gill and Sue Richards hit the tape with 11th, 16th and 18th place respectively.

When the points were tallied, JC fell short to Shippensburg 20-37, and to Millersville State 23-34.

The Harriers turned the tables versus Dickinson at Memorial Field, on Saturday October 8.

Senior speedster, Carolyn Andre, cruised home alone to claim 1st place with ease. Fellow teammates: Chris Schleiden, 4th, Cathy Duffy, 5th, Sue Gill, 7th, Sue Richards, 9th, added starlet performances to push the Indians over the Red Devils by a 26-29 margin.

The Women will take an even 4-4 record with them to the Allentown Invitational, this Saturday at Allentown. The Indians hope to bring home the team championship as they did last year, behind Cathy Duffy's record setting performance.

The men also tangled with Dickinson at home on Saturday. The outcome was a bit disappointing, as the Red Devils ran away from the Indians, by a 23-32 score.

The lean-mean-running-machine, Mark Royer, led the way for JC, finishing in 2nd place overall. Dave Long added a respectable 5th place. Jim Gandy, Andy Marsh, and Paul Bomberger rounded out the top five for the Indians.

The Men's record now stands at 2-3 with three tough meets upcoming.

Yesterday, the Indians travelled to York College for a dual meet.

This Saturday, the Harriers will put their pride on the line, when they run defending MAC champions, Susquehanna, in front of the Parents' Weekend crowd at Memorial Field.

CROSS COUNTRY NOTES:

The women's premier runner this season, Senior Carolyn Andre, cruises home well ahead of the opposition. The Harriers finished strong to topple Dickenson, 29-26.

(from l. to r.) J.C. Harriers: Paul Bomberger, Mark Royer, Thomas Yokahama (partially hidden), Andy Marsh, Jim Grandy, and Ken Kramer are pushing the pace as they head out to the course. The Indians fell short to the Red Devils by a 23-32 margin.

NFL Outlook

by Paul Bomberger

This Sunday the National Football League swings into the seventh week of play. Looking at the standings thus far, there are a few surprises around the league.

Last Sunday, the game of the week turned out to be the Bills versus the Dolphins in an AFC East dogfight.

Highlighting this spectacular game, was the stellar performance turned in by Bills' quarterback Joe Ferguson. Ferguson threw for a career-high five touchdown passes, and Joe Danelo kicked a 36 yard field goal with just 62 seconds left in overtime to give Buffalo a 38-35 victory over Miami.

The victory for the Bills was their first in the last 17 games over Miami. Buffalo is now tied with the cinderella Baltimore Colts in the AFC East with identical 4-2 records. The Dolphins and the Jets are knotted in second place with 3-3 records.

In the AFC Central, the division leading Cleveland Browns used the foot of Matt Bahr to upend the Jets 10-7, with no time remaining. The Steelers will square off against the hapless Bengals on Monday Night.

Turning to the NFC East, the Cowboys came from behind to tie the Bucs 24-24 at the end of regulation play. Rafael Septien kicked a 42 yard field goal to give the Cowboys a 27-24 victory in overtime. The Cowboys remain atop the NFC East with a perfect 6-0 record.

Ladies Lose in Quarters

by Suzanne Hickle

The Juniata Women's Volleyball team hosted their third annual Juniata Classic this past weekend. In this team tournament, five of the top twenty teams in the nation competed for the championship.

The first round of action began with 8th ranked Juniata playing Grove City who is ranked 18th. The game started out very slow, with four sideouts until Grove City finally got a point. Juniata trailed closely throughout the whole game. They were behind 12-9 when Trish Corl, serving very well, tied up the game 14-14. Under great pressure, Juniata fell to Grove City with a score of 16-14.

Things changed in the second game with Juniata starting out with a lead of 4-1. But Grove City didn't let Juniata have this lead for long. Grove City tied the score up by slamming through Juniata's blocks. This got our team fired up and Ekanong Opanaykul had two consecutive kills with Carolyn Stambaugh following with another kill. This brought the score up to 9-6 and Grove City called a time-out to break up Juniata's streak. The time-out didn't do much for Grove City, because Juniata pushed for a victory, winning 15-10.

The third game was also intense, with the score tied throughout the game. G.C. just wasn't tough enough to overcome Juniata's great playing strategies. Juniata won 15-12, giving them a 1-0 record.

The next game of pool play was against Brooklyn of New York. Brooklyn was a very aggressive and quick team. After playing a tough game against Grove City, Juniata was looking a little tired. But this didn't stop Juniata, beating Brooklyn two games to one. Juniata lost the first game 15-4, but won the next two 15-11, 16-14. Juniata concluded Friday evening with a 2-0 record.

Juniata started out Saturday morning beating Waynesburg, two games to zero. The women played an aggressive game having no trouble, pushing their record to 3-0.

The last game of pool play was against 9th ranked Ithaca. This New York team came into the game with a 2-1 record, getting beat by Brooklyn. Ithaca needed this win from Juniata to be tied for first in their pool.

The first game started out with Ithaca taking a dominant lead over Juniata 6-0. Juniata just couldn't get together out on the floor, losing the game 15-6.

The next game started with Jan Trissler, who served very well throughout the tournament, serving an ace. Mariella Gacka and Trish Corl, spiking very well, raised the score to 3-0. Juniata. Ithaca wanting revenge, serving and passing well, took over, raising the score to their advantage 9-5. Juniata couldn't get it together and lost 15-11. This made Juniata and Ithaca tied for first place in their pool.

Juniata moved to Quarter Finals, coming up against Shippensburg who was 3-1 in their pool. Juniata played very well in the first game, beating Shippensburg 15-6.

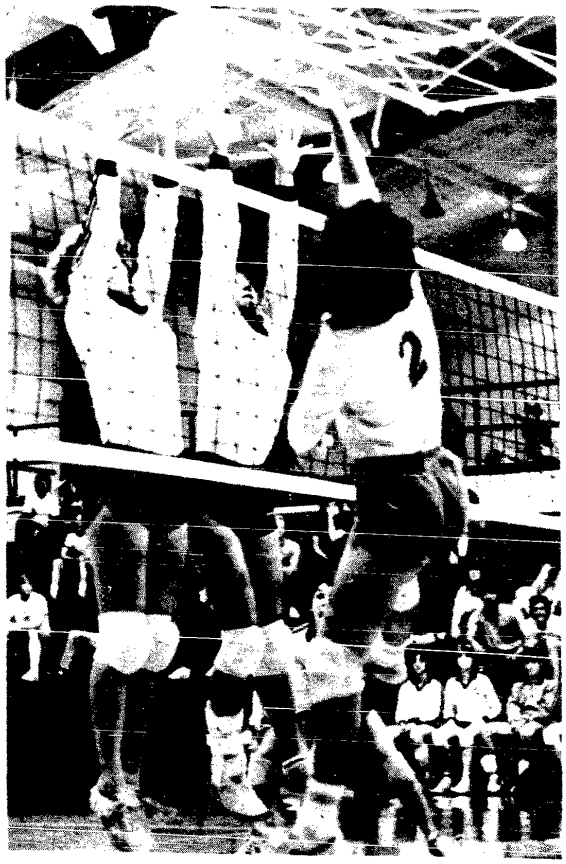
The second game was a different story for the Indians. Juniata started out ahead, but began falling apart towards the middle of the game. The stands as well as the women on the court became very quiet, losing the game 15-6.

Jan Trissler started out the third game with an ace serve. Two team leaders, Tracey DeBlase and Eing wouldn't let one spike go through their solid block. But with many other mistakes on Juniata's part, Shippensburg took the lead 9-4. Coach Bock called a time-out to pull his team together, but Juniata couldn't come back, losing the game 15-8.

This game eliminated Juniata from the tournament, leaving them with an overall record of 17-10 for the season.

The tournament finished Saturday evening with 11th ranked Illinois Benedictine beating Ithaca two games to one.

Juniata will be hosting the Parent's Invitational this coming weekend starting at 11:00, Saturday morning.



Peggy Evans and Ekanonong Opanaykul combine to block an opponent's spike as Tracey DeBlase positions herself for a save.

Kickers Improve

by Kathy Harwick

Last Wednesday the soccer team travelled to Wilkes to begin the second half of their season. Wilkes took Juniata by surprise when they scored a goal within the first 20 seconds of play. Coach Klaus Jaeger thought the teams were very even and played a closely fought match, but Wilkes outscored them by one to end the game 1-2.

Juniata's only goal was made in the first half by Joel Kobsor from 18 yards out. This kept Juniata tied through half-time and all the way through the second half, until 12 minutes before the end of the game when Wilkes came back to score a goal from a free kick while Juniata was still arranging their wall. This loss put the Indians' record at 1-7.

On Tuesday, the Indians faced York at home and on Saturday they will play their last home game against Susquehanna. This will be your last chance to come support the team and see seniors captain Jeff Dougherty, goalie Steve DiMarco and sweeper Gary Steckley play their last home game. Coach Jaeger feels these gentlemen are the backbone of the team, especially Steckley who in his three-plus years has only missed five playing minutes from all the games.

Coach Jaeger commented that the inexperience of his young team has been a hinderance, but he feels that in the six games left, they'll be able to pull out a few victories.

Mariella Gacka, Ekanonong Opanaykul and Jessica Fox are prepared to return the opponent's serve.

"Sport's Corner"

by Mark Shaw

I hope everyone enjoyed my ramblings of last week (actually, I hope everyone understood it — if you did, let me know; I'm not so sure I understood it).

Well, let me get to what I really want to talk about — the World Series and the Philadelphia Phillies. Being a native Norristownian (where Tommy LaSorda, alias Dodgers' manager, grew up and only 20 miles or so from Philadelphia); I was elated to see the Phillies crush the Dodgers in those last two games in Philadelphia. With each run the Phillies scored in those two games I remembered how the Dodgers embarrassed the Phillies the last two times they met in the National League Championship. I remember how all the Dodger fans and Phillies' haters (i.e. those who were mad because Pittsburgh didn't make it) rubbed those losses into the faces of the Phillies fans.

I thought we'd never get the chance to turn around and rub it back into their faces. But, as fortune would have it, we've been given the chance.

Now, would we do that? I mean, would we actually stoop as low as they did (just a few years ago)? Would we point out that the Dodgers struck out at least ten times per game for the last two games? Would we make fun of how many men they left on base or make fun of why Guerro threw to first when he could have easily gotten the man at home? Of course we won't!! Why should we, I think the series spoke for itself. Although maybe we Phillies fans will have to turn up the volume a little bit.

Now, I'll turn my attention to the World Series. By now, two games will already have been played. Who will be in the lead? Who knows. It could be either team. Baltimore has played consistently good ball throughout the whole year; the Phillies, however have been sporadic. But, the Phillies caught fire in September and seemed to keep that fire going against L.A.

Personally, I think that the series is going to go seven games. Hopefully, the Phillies will come out on top. I still remember when they won the 1980 World Series during my freshman year. It was great. The Phillies were the underdogs; they had been the "chokers" in the previous four years. But, Philadelphia proved that they were a winner that year. The Phillies are also proving i this year.

The Phillies were not the "team to beat" in the National League East. In fact, many people considered the team to be too red. Most picked either St. Louis to repeat or Montreal to win; they were wrong. No one, (I don't even think the Phillies) expected Philadelphia to tear apart the National League East in September and finish in first place.

Now, the Phillies are in the World Series for the second time in four years — not bad for a team that can't win.

VOL. XXXV, NO. 5 | Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652 | October 20, 1983

Student Government Welcomes New Senators

Campus lighting, budget, grading system also discussed

by Joy Hadley

Newly-elected Freshmen Senators participated in their first Juniata Student Government meeting, which was held Monday, Oct. 11, in the Faculty Lounge.

Eric Barnes, Tracey Beaver, and Cindy Cordoro, elected October 4 and 5, were welcomed in the opening remarks by Student Government President Rory McAvoy.

Barnes, a Camp Hill, PA resident, who graduated from Cedar Cliff High School, described his first Student Government meeting as ". . . . different from high school. It's more organized." Presently living in the Cloister, Room 107, Barnes says one of the things he would like to accomplish while on Student Government is ". . . . to fix up the dorms." Barnes adds that he would be glad to help any Freshmen having problems concerning anything, so please stop by.

Beaver, also no stranger to Student Government — she was on Student Council all four years in high school — was quite enthusiastic about her first Student Government meeting. An Easton, PA resident and a graduate of Wilson Area High School, Beaver says of Student Government, "It's a good way to meet people and to work for the students." She acknowledges that Student Government at Juniata is ". . . more impressive than high school. It's more formal here and they seemed to know what they're doing."

"I wanted to take an active role in student problems," says Cordoro, as to why she wanted to be a Freshman Senator. Like the other two Senators, Cordoro, an Ebensburg, PA resident and a graduate of Central Cambria High School, has previous experience in Student Government. She too seemed quite impressed with her first Juniata Student Government experience, remarking "They take it seriously. They're out to get the job done."

Along with welcoming the Freshmen Senators, McAvoy congratulated other Senators, specifically Kelly Bauer and Patty Renwick, on their performance and initiative. Bauer has been working on the problem of the washers and dryers in Lesher. Renwick took the initiative and had a telephone installed on the 2nd floor of the Cloister Arch.

Highlighting the committee reports, was Tim McCarthy's Student Concerns Report. At the last Student Government meeting, the question of campus lighting was discussed. After an assessment of the problem by members of the Student Concerns Committee, Rory McAvoy, Dr. Arnie Tilden, Vice President and Dean of Student Services, and James Quinian, Director of the Physical Plant, the problems have been resolved.

Lights will be installed or replaced in the following areas: 1) overlooking South's parking lot, 2) in the area in between Lesher and South, 3) on Ellis, illumniating the basketball courts, and 4) on both bridges running across Muddy Run. In regard to playing on the lighted basketball courts after dusk, the administration asks that students show consideration of the residents of the green house. Also, students should use common sense when walking at night. "Please don't walk alone at night," urges Tim McCarthy.

Greg Kimble, reporting for the Budget and Management Committee, explained that due to a discrepancy by the Accounting Office regarding the yearbook and President Binder's Contingency Fund, the Student Government Budget was overstated by $10,000.00 The mistake was adjusted in a new budget.

Student Government Vice President, Chris Collins reported on the College Governance Committee. The most important issue raised was a motion for all faculty members to use the plus/minus grading system in all classes. Nothing has been resolved.

An IBM personal computer is now available for student use, Nicolee Mengel, Centerboard-Student Government liaison announced. The computer, located in Study Room No. 4 in Ellis is available at any time. At the present time, there is a printout. The key to the room can be obtained at the Information Desk. Only minimal computer knowledge is required and there is an instructional handbook to go along with the computer.

Also available for student use is a button-making machine, and a conference room (where the old T.V. lounge was located). The button machine is easy to use and free of charge, only the materials must be bought and one can buy the materials at the Information Desk.

The next Student Government meeting is scheduled for Monday, October 24, at 8:30 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in Ellis.

Ochiai To Give Lecture

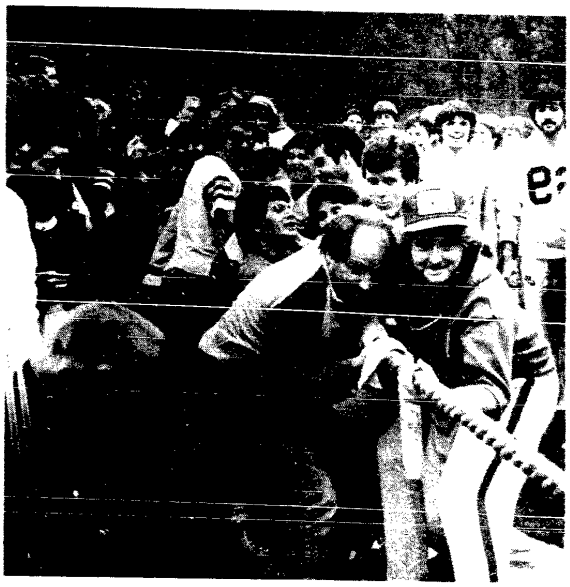
Dr. Ei-Ichiro Ochiai, associate professor of chemistry at Juniata College, will deliver the fourth annual Harold B. Brumbaugh Trustee Lecture on Friday, Oct. 21 at 8:30 p.m. in the Ellis Hall ballroom.

The lecture series is designed to enable faculty members to share their research with members of the college Board of Trustees and the college community. Ochiai's lecture is entitled "The Origin of Life, A Chemist's View."

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1981, Ochiai is the author of nearly 60 publications including two books. He has done extensive research in the areas of biochemistry, environmental chemistry and chemical studies of the origin and evolution of life.

Ochiai received his B.S. degree in engineering, and his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in chemistry, all from the University of Tokyo. Prior to coming to Juniata, he was a senior visiting scientist at the University of Maryland. He also has taught at the University of British Columbia and the University of Tokyo, and was a research associate at Ohio State University.

He is active in numerous professional organizations including the American Chemical Society, New York Academy of Science, American Association for Advancement of Science and the Chemical Society of Japan.



President Frederick M. Binder gets psyched at the tug-o'-war competition as the weather held for Juniata's annual Mountain Day celebration this year. Many students and faculty were on hand for the various events which included football, volleyball, and of course the tug-o'-war.

JC Mountain Day Held at Trough Creek

by Maureen Morrissey

Screams of joy echoed throughout the many halls of Juniata College on Monday as the news spread that it was finally the real Mountain Day and not another false alarm.

The weather was good for the approximately 500 students participating in the activities. According to Carola Gaertner, student representative on the Mountain Day Committee, this is about an average turnout.

Probably the event which was most spirited was the various tug-of-wars between the classes. After the four classes competed with each other at tugging in different combinations, it turned out that the freshmen guys and the freshmen girls were the final winners. It was particularly amusing to watch the senior girls beat the senior guys at the tug-of-war. However, many speculated that it was possible that perhaps the senior guys did not pull quite as hard as they might have been able.

A new event that was added by the Mountain Day Committee was the football game between Cloister and Sherwood. This brought many spectators to the sidelines. It was a very exciting game that ended in a tie score of 8 to 8. Unfortunately, there were many injuries. Mark Shaw, who separated his shoulder during the game said, "It was a good clean game for the most part — but tough." He also added that any game between Cloister and Sherwood would always be competitive."

Another football game held on Mountain Day was the traditional faculty — senior game. This too ended in a tie. The final score being 20-20. There were also many students watching this game as is every year.

This year's three-legged race winners are Wendy Isbister and Robin Smith and the winners of the egg-toss are Stephen Nagel and Mandy Smith. Students also participated in soccer and volleyball games.

Though this year's Mountain Day had some difficulty getting on its feet, the feelings expressed by one senior could probably be used to sum up Mountain Day as it was meant to be. As Alyson Pfister looked out the window of the bus she was riding in staring at all the gorgeous Autumn colors she said, "I needed this."

Guest Commentary

Dr. Jay Buchanan

(Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles written by Dr. Buchanan. Future articles will address timely issues affecting Juniata College students. Comments and suggestions for topics are encouraged.)

Eating disorders have become increasingly prevalent in the nations' colleges and universities. Experts estimate that nearly half of the women on college campuses today are affected by some sort of eating disorder, primarily in the form of anorexia nervosa or bulimia. If that statistic is not enough to support the seriousness of the situation, consider that, according to Janet McClintock, supervisor of the Eating Disorders Clinic at the University of Wisconsin, 15-20% of the women suffering from bulimia and anorexia nervosa will die from these two eating disorders.

This article will attempt to define the two eating disorders. Next week we will discuss why they are so prevalent on college campuses, as well as next week we offer a few treatment efforts which have met with some success.

Briefly, anorexia nervosa presents a very serious health hazard to the individual. It is more emotional than physical with the individual becoming overly concerned with obesity. She just refuses to eat and, in many cases, hospitalization and intravenous feeding are required. It is not uncommon for anorexic women to lose 25% of their body weight.

Bulimia, commonly referred to as the binge-purge disease, involves eating a great deal and then vomiting to rid or purge the body of the food. Bulimics are overly concerned with food and tend to eat a great amount in a short period of time. Both anorexics and bulimics are obsessed with the notion that one cannot be too thin.

Dr. Tim Ring, my counterpart at Albright College, will be on campus today to discuss eating disorders. He is scheduled to speak in the faculty lounge on Wednesday, Oct. 26, beginning at 7:00 p.m. Plan to attend this very important lecture.

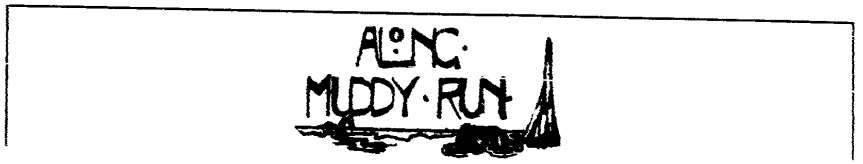
College Press Service



by Alyson Pfister

How many times have you heard the complaints? You know the ones — "this place stinks", "it's too small here", "I can't stand this place" . . . Most of them are too vulgar to print in the newspaper. I've said them too, probably just as many, maybe more times than the average student.

However, reality was mercilessly slapped in my face recently as I was "encouraged to attend" a couple of seminars in the Career Placement and Planning Office. (That's the one downstairs in Ellis across from the Post Office for those of you who haven't had to deal with it yet and forget where it is. It was definitely pointed out to you when you took that very first tour of Juniata. It is, after all, a strong selling point.)

The seminars were for seniors. The first one was for Resume writing. That wasn't too bad. I got to brag about myself and write it all down. Then I show it all to Mr. Martin and show him how neat I am. Then Mr. Martin makes 240 copies and shows it to people in high places all over the country. All kinds of people would then know about me, right? (Yeah — me and the other 30,000 + Communications majors in the honorable Class of 1984. But that didn't hit me until later.)

It was the next seminar that got me. That's the one that drove the final nail into the proverbial coffin. That was the seminar that told me all about how to put together a credential file. I didn't even know what a credential file was, to speak of, before I got there. I almost even blew it off.

Anyway, I went. I walked in late and the room was full of about 20 familiar faces. There were even people sitting on the floor, whose ranks I proceeded to join.

We started by talking about future seminars. Things like "Job-seeking Strategies" and "Interview Techniques". Mr. Martin told us a couple of "war stories", as he calls them. Stories about Juniata grads who call up seven years later and need a credential file. Stories about the 19 to 21 unemployed Juniata grads from last year. Stories, stories, stories, the rule, the exception, the cold hard facts of reality. Right there on the floor of the Career Placement and Planning Office.

It was then that I started thinking about what kind of world we live in here at Juniata. What's the best word? Coccoon? Subculture? Microcosm? How about womb? They all fit.

Personally, I think "womb" is a pretty good description. Think about it — assuming you live on campus and don't pay your own way you are basically given the essentials, food and shelter, from the organism that prepares us for the world. When we are ready we are thrust out of the womb into what we'll have to deal with from now on.

Obviously, I don't remember what life in the womb was like but I can imagine it was pretty similar to college life, at Juniata anyway. Most of us aren't up with the latest world news and development — except maybe the World Series. But that's not really relevant to our world, or microcosm if you'd rather. Don't worry, I'm not going to start going on about student apathy. Provided for us are sustenance, shelter, time to gather our thoughts, and generally a pretty nice time. Okay, so you're not having fun writing that %@¢/ paper or studying for three tests at once or anything like that. But picture yourself in ten years. (shades of SVS)

We can't just blow off work because we were up late partying last night. You've got at least your own mouth to feed and that's tough without an income. You blow off your administrative red tape stuff until the very end. (who doesn't?) No biggie — until they repossess your car.

We ought to enjoy our years here, even if it does "stink." Like your father tells you all the time, "these are the best years of your life." That could very well be. Fellow seniors, we must savour these last few months before life really begins!

The score put the final blow on the staggering Indians.

For the second straight week, it was an opposing quarterback that did the most damage to the Indian defense. Last time, at Western Maryland, it was a runner, this time a thrower.

Colonels QB Rice hit 12 of 23 passes for 179 yards and two TD's to join up with a team rushing effort that produced 130 yards on 49 tries to make it a 309 yard total offense afternoon for Wilkes.

For the Indians, it was again a frustrating scoring day despite some improved offensive statistics.

The Tribe rushed 42 times for 155 yards with Todd Kaden carrying nine times for 69 of those yards. Marty Kimmel gained 54 yards on only five totes.

Kaden, Pfeifer, and then Mike Culver threw 25 times collectively and completed eight passes for 134 yards. Junior tight end Carl Fekula was their favorite target as he hauled in four tosses for 84 yards.

Juniata, in losing five stright, has now lost more consecutive games this season than any other Indian team since 1946 and hopes to halt the skid on Saturday at Delaware Valley. Kickoff is set for 1:30 in Doylestown.

Meet the Librarian

by Sandy Beard

Being a foreign exchange student requires vast amounts of patience: never-ending mix-ups and adjustment to regional habits often tempt one to utilize the flip side of his round trip ticket. Being a foreign exchange professor undoubtedly has similar drawbacks; however, Juniata's most recent foreign faculty member seems very pleased with her stay in the U.S.

Alice Johnson may be found sorting through Martin Brumbaugh's papers, arranging them for the library's Archive Collection. This English college librarian is exchanging her services for those of Juniata's Dr. Eyman during the first school term. Currently, Dr. Eyman is at the College of St. Paul and St. Mary in Cheltenham, England, Mrs. Johnson's home turf. Cheltenham is the base of exchange — for students and faculty — as arranged by the Brethren Colleges Abroad (BCA) program.

Although Mrs. Johnson lived in Canada for ten years and has visited Boston, this experience is her first in-depth encounter with the American small community. Her voyage — which commenced in August with a bit of sight-seeing — was previewed as a "marvelous opportunity" which "extends the mind".

Preconceived ideas about American life as drawn from TV and films are no longer valid for Mrs. Johnson. Rather, she asserts that it is pleasant to discover that the "family, church, and community matter". Moreover, she enjoys being here, citing the scenery as interesting with the added attraction of the crisp Autumn weather a "nice change" from England.

When asked how life differs on the continents, Mrs. Johnson perceived an excitement in our community life, with traditions such as Octoberfest and craft fairs witness to our heritage. The only noteworthy difference as far as college libraries are concerned is the computerized nature of Juniata's library.

Although she misses her family — including three grown children — Mrs. Johnson has a positive outlook. She finds the people compatible and friendly. She graciously thanks everyone for their hospitality.

Birthday of Martin Luther Observed

The 500th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther will be observed at Juniata College Monday, Oct. 24 with a special celebration in Shoemaker Galleries.

The 8:15 p.m. program, sponsored by Juniata's history department, will feature readings, slides and music, and is historical rather than theological in thrust.

Dr. Philbrook W. Smith, Charles A. Dana Supported Professor of History, will open the program with a description of what Europe was like during Martin Luther's life. A discussion of Martin Luther, the man, will be given by Dr. Robert G. Clouse, the 1983-84 J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professor of Evangelical Christianity.

During these two presentations, Mary T. Morrell, instructor of art, will present a slide show to complement the lectures. The Juniata College Concert Choir also is scheduled to perform as part of the program.

This Oct. 24 celebration of Martin Luther is open to the public at no charge. Shoemaker Galleries are located in Carnegie Hall, corner of 17th and Moore streets.

Job of RA is worth considering

by Laura Mumaw

R.A.s aren't just people who ask you to turn down your stereo, or not to slam your door; nor are they merely wet-blankets who restrict parties and write up trouble makers. They're students who are chosen, because of their personalities and abilities, to live among other students and make sure residential life runs smoothly. They're young men and women who are especially qualified for the job and who are capable of handling responsibility to their peers.

This past year 70 juniors applied for 31 positions, giving the College the opportunity to be very selective with the R.A.s they chose.

The potential R.A.s first attend an informational session that explains the job. They then turn in their applications to be evaluated before the Student Services Committee. They are then called in for a group interview.

The placement of the R.A.s is also thought our thoroughly. The students are placed where the administration feels they will complement the atmosphere the most. It is obvious that each residence hall requires different restrictions and the R.A.s play a big part in setting guidelines.

Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life, believes that both the students and the R.A.s benefit incredibly from the experience. She said "Had we not gotten excellent to superior applicants and been able to fill each of our positions with that kind of person, I would have reopened the process because I just think it's that important."

The responsibilities of an R.A. are limitless, yet they fall into five roles. They are counselors, program directors, limit setters, resourcers and administrators. One aspect of their job requires just as much time and involvement as all of the others. Add this to their studies and an R.A. becomes a very busy and involved individual.

When asked what she enjoyed most about being an R.A., one senior replied, "I just think it is so satisfying. There are so many things!! It's just a real good feeling to pull a hall together and make it into one."

Alice Johnson from Cheltenham, England is exchanging her services as college librarian for those of Juniata's Dr. Eyman.

Ex-CIA Official to speak

Worldwide CIA operations, current developments in Central America and parallels between Vietnam and El Salvador will be the focus of attention at Juniata College Sunday, Oct. 23 as former CIA official Ralph McGehee speaks on campus.

McGehee's 8:15 p.m. lecture in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center, will be an autobiographical journey through his 25 years in the Central Intelligence Agency, where he worked in many different places including Japan, Thailand, Vietnam and CIA headquarters in Langley, VA. During those 25 years, McGehee worked as a case officer on covert operations, paramilitary specialist, liaison officer with foreign police and intelligence agencies, and an intelligence analyst.

The author of the book "Deadly Deceits," which outlines CIA blunders in Iran, Vietnam and the Bay of Pigs, McGehee's growing disillusionment began to surface when he began to see deficiencies within the CIA. In his last four years at the agency, McGehee had access to most all information about CIA worldwide intelligence operations. Through these experiences and subsequent research, he contends that the CIA is primarily the covert action arm of the Presidency. He discusses how the CIA shapes its intelligence, even in such critical areas as Soviet nuclear capability, to support Presidential policy.

In his lecture, McGehee will go on to explain the specifics of the agency's deceits and operations that dragged America into and kept the nation in the Vietnam War.

J.C. Drops Another Game

by Scialabba

Illness and injury problems continued to plague the Juniata Indians on Saturday as they fell behind early and could never fully recover in dropping a 24-12 decision and visiting Wilkes before 2200 fans at College Field.

With several regulars already out of the line-up, the Tribe watched starting QB Dave Pfeifer, offensive center Rocco Salomone, and D-back Doug Fleming all leave the game with serious injuries to add more pain to the disappointing hurt of losing their fifth straight contest and dropping to 1-5 on the season and 1-4 in the Middle Atlantic Conference.

The Colonels are now 1-4 overall and in the MAC.

The Juniata Parents' Weekend faithful were shocked as the visitors jumped out to an early 17-0 lead, especially since Wilkes had scored only one touchdown in its first four games, but were pleased in a similar manner when the Indians finally caught fire around halftime.

A touchdown run from a yard out by Bill Buoni put the Colonels on top late in the first quarter and they quickly built on that advantage in the second period.

Quarterback Randy Rice hit a wide-open Tim Frateschi on the left sideline with a short flare pass and the fullback had clear sailing 81 yards for the second Colonel touchdown with 11:06 to play in the first half.

JoJo Matione kicked his second of three successful extra points to give Wilkes a 14-0 lead.

Mantione then capped a big 12 play, 51 yard, drive on the Colonels next possession with a 41 yard field goal to make the score 17-0.

But then the Indians finally got enough pep to wake up and get back in the game.

Freshman Frank Briner capped a 16 play, 74 yard, Juniata scoring march when he drove in from the one yard line with only 20 seconds left until halftime.

Mike Schaffner missed the extra point wide to the left but the Indians had gained some precious momentum. The "Mo" really flowed the Juniata way after the halftime break.

Paul Levengood recovered a Wilkes fumble on the second half kick-off at the Colonels 28 yard line and it took only one play for the Indians to score.

Freshman Marty Kimmel covered the turf around right end and went into the endzone to make the score 17-12 with only 14 seconds elapsed in the third quarter.

The try for two points on the PAT failed, but the Indians were certainly right back in the football game.

But, as in the past few weeks, Juniata could not get enough consistent offense generated to gain command of the game.

Three interceptions and a fumble helped make the Indian second-half comeback effort a futile one.

Juniata reached the Wilkes 35 yard line late in the third period but one of the errant passes stopped the Indians threat and started Wilkes off on a marathon scoring drive to clinch the win.

Converting on two fourth down situations, the Colonels successfully completed a 77 yard exodus in 16 plays to reach the JC endzone when Mike Higgins hauled in a 6 yard pass from Rice.

Tough Losses

by Cathy Harwick

The soccer team took another loss last Wednesday against York here at Juniata. Led by senior captain Jeff Dougherty and sweeper Gary Steckley, the defense played a tough game, but York got past them twice to put the final score at 0-2. The offense also played well, lead by Sophomore Tom Visosky and Sean Ruth, but they couldn't get a ball past York's goalie.

On Saturday, things initially looked better for the Indians. They had a cool, clear day, and many parents were here to cheer the guys on. But the Indians couldn't get a ball past Susquehanna's quick goalie. The Indians' last home game saw them with a 0-2 loss against tough Susquehanna to put their record at 1-9.

Yesterday the Indians travelled to Lebanon Valley. Their upcoming games are Saturday at Albright, Wednesday at Bloomsburg, and they'll end the season Monday, October 31 at Shippensburg.

V-Ball Wins

by Suzanne Hickle

The Volleyball team started out their week on Tuesday by traveling to Messiah College. The women played a tri-match with York and Messiah. Juniata had no trouble beating York two games to zero. But Messiah took Juniata to three games, beating us two games to one.

Juniata's next game was Saturday morning in Memorial Gym, against UPJ. The team hosted their first annual Alumni Invitational. The tournament consisted of six teams, one of which was Juniata alumni.

Juniata's overall record in the tournament was 6-1, losing only to the alumni. The team had a hard time trying to pass back former All-Americans, Colleen Ireland and Sue Barker's great spikes. The loss didn't hurt the women, because they beat UPJ in the semi-finals and became the champs by beating Eastern Mennonite in the finals.

The first game in the final match began with Juniata having a dominant lead over EM. Juniata was ahead 6-1, but losing their pace EM tied it 7-7. With Peggy Evans slamming and serving ace serves, and the rest of the team behind her, Juniata won 15-11.

In the second game, Juniata started out behind by dropping the first four points. The women were behind throughout the game until Tracey DeBlase pulled the team together and won 15-11.

The team will be traveling to Mansfield to participate in a ten-team tournament this coming weekend. The team's record stands at 20-7.

Stickers Win 3-0

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey Team defeated Lycoming 3-0 on Saturday, October 15.

Juniata scored its first goal as sophomore Mary Moynihan put one in with an assist from Laura Babiash at the 14:30 mark of the first half. A minute and a half later, Babiash scored on an assist from Sue Occiano to give Juniata a 2-0 lead.

In the second half, Lycoming played better, but Juniata still held control. Juniata scored its third goal at the 13:00 mark as Babiash scored again, this time on an assist by Polly Oliver.

At the 5:00 mark, Lycoming was given a penalty shot, but the Lycoming shooter missed the goal completely. The game ended with Juniata winning 3-0.

The lady Indians had a game scheduled for Wednesday, October 12 against Franklin and Marshall, but the game was rained out.

The victory on Saturday gave the Indians a 4-1-3 record overall, but they remained 1-0-1 in M.A.C. action.

Their next game will be on Saturday, October 22 at Gettysburg at 10:30. A victory would put the ladies into the M.A.C. playoffs.

Harrier Action

by Paul Bomberger

Last Wednesday, the Men's cross country team ran York College away.

At the halfway point of the race, York was well ahead of JC and looked to have a sure victory in hand. But, the scene changed as Mark Royer led a strong Indian charge to the tape. Royer took first place overall and the Indian Harriers outscored York 27-32.

On Saturday, JC faced MAC powerhouse, Susquehanna. Susquehanna came in riding an 11-1 record.

As expected, it was a clear mismatch. The Indians never came close as Susquehanna finished seven runners in front of Mark Royer to crush JC, 15-50.

Rounding out the top five for the Indian Harriers were: Jim Gandy 11th, Dave Long 13th, Andy Marsh 14th, and Ken Kramer 15th.

The loss put the Indians dual meet record at 3-4.

Intramural Action

Softball

by John Surbeck

A battleground would best describe last Tuesday's field condition in which the fourth place "Save the Whales" team squared off against the undefeated first place team, "The Night Crawlers." It had begun raining two hours before the four o'clock game starting time, and didn't stop until late in the seven inning game. In fact, the weather was inclement enough to cancel all I.M. softball games for the day. This game was played through an agreement of both coaches, Mike Smale and John Summers respectively, and the consent by I.M. head, Rob Ash.

The game opened with the "Crawlers" carefully taking the treacherous field. The "Whales," known for their hitting and aggressive play, opened the first inning in that mode slicing three base hits and scoring two runs. Paul Peditto and Chris Whitcomb combined for back-to-back extra base hits that led to the runs.

The "Crawlers," using their solid defense, ended the "Whales" first inning surge, but could not produce any runs in the bottom of the first.

By the third inning, the game was still two-zero as the slick field prevented both teams from circling the bases. The "Crawlers," mixing base hits with a "Whales" error, put three runs on the board to take the lead going into the fifth inning.

The "Whales" in this inning produced five runs behind their aggressive play. Eric Cutting, the "Whales" man on the mound, led the inning off squirting a single up the middle. John Shields, Smale and Mike Lohr all contributed with base hits in the inning to give the "Whales" a seven-to-three lead.

This is when the "Crawlers" made use of their baseball experience by not getting down on themselves, to surge back in the bottom of the sixth inning to score five runs. James Laphan and Mike Castillani aided the comeback by slapping an extra base hit each.

Thus, the game came down to the top of the seventh inning. The "Whales," down by a run, made a gallant effort to tie the game, only to be halted by the defensive heroics of "Crawler," Dave Crane, who soaked-up the "Whales" bid for an upset. Final score: "Crawlers" eight, "Whales" seven.

Soccer

by Mary Ellen Sullivan

The women's intramural soccer league consists of three tough and aggressive teams; Raid Brigade (3-0), Alley Alley Alley (1-2) and Comp (0-2). The games are played outdoors on the soccer field behind Ellis Hall on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:00 p.m., and believe me it's quite the site to see.

With the Raid Brigade in the lead, the other teams haven't given up yet. In one particular game between Comps and Raid Brigade on October 4, a rather unusual technique of scoring a goal was used. After saving a drilling shot on goal, Missy Luciano (the Comp's goalie) attempted to drop kick the soccer ball when Becky Hostetter faced it in. (Ouch! That must have hurt.) The game ended with a 5-4 victory for Raid Brigade.

Another incident occurred on October 13. After much confusion on whether the game would be played, the ball was kicked off at approximately 6:15 p.m. Both teams had a tough battle against the mud when the skies let out a downpour. The referee, Russ Leberman, explained the game continues according to soccer rules unless it begins to lightning. When the rain and wind became so fierce you could hardly see, the two teams decided to play a second half at a more appropriate time. For some entertaining soccer action, be sure to catch women's intramural soccer.

Co-Rec V-Ball

by Andy Hiscock

Four weeks of Co-Rec Volleyball have been completed and it is still difficult to find four clear powerhouses in each flight. There are three more weeks of inter-team competition before the first round of the playoffs begins on Sunday, November 6th.

On Monday, October 10, the highlighted game was a match between "The 4 Players" and "The Trojan Warriors". "The Trojan Warriors" came out on top by the scores of 17-15; and 15-13. Joe Ruhl and Bordett Porter had some good serving stretches for "The Warriors" while Lori Kelley helped "The Warriors" with a good setting game even though Dan Miller was an ever present force to deal with at the net for "The 4 Players". Other games on Monday were "Who Cares" beating "To Be Announced" (15-9; 14-16; 15-6), "Somewhere over the Net" defeated "Adolescents" (15-6; 14-16; 15-9), "Chokers" beat "The Volleyball Players" (15-7; 15-8), "We'd Rather Be Fishing" beat "B.H. & the P." (12-15; 15-8; 15-5), "The Tight Seals" defeated "Cheekers" (15-1; 15-5), and "Anything's Possible" beat "Natty Bo's" (15-3; 15-6).

In the flight on Oct. 13th, "The Volleyball Players" beat "The Scopers" (15-12; 15-7) with the good teamwork of M. Shipp and A. Wenger for "The Players". In the highlighted Blue Flight game between "The DSA Stumblers" and "No Win Situation," well, no win was exactly what they did. It was L. Hocker and R. Burgan who served up a storm which enabled "The Stumblers" to crush "The Situation" (15-3; 15-4). In other action on Thursday night, "Natty Bo's" beat "Adolescents" (15-5; 14-16; 15-11), "The Tiger Seals" beat "Chokers" (15-4; 15-10), and "Cheekers" defeated "Somewhere over the Net" (11-15; 15-8; and 15-5).

Trustees Propose Tuition Hike (Estimated 7-9% Increase)

by Ron Renzini

A combined total fee increase of between 7-9% for the 1984-85 school year at Juniata has been proposed at this past weekends fall meeting of the Board of Trustees.

This 7-9% increase is for the total package of tuition, room and board. The final percentage will be decided on in January when the Board meets again to review forecasts in the economy for the upcoming year.

Since the college is a non-profit organization, the Board will adjust the rise in tuition (between 7-9%) to accommodate the forecast changes. This total fee hike will affect almost every student here at Juniata College, for 95% of the student body is residential and therefore are involved in the total fee increase.

The student body should be affected in another way by the total fee hike. If the trend continues, as in years past, the average student aid package should also increase. This year's aid package at Juniata has a price tag of $5,200 per student, for students who are eligible for aid. According to President Frederick M. Binder, "aid for the student goes up as pricing goes up."

This year, Juniata College has spent over $1,000,000 on grants from Juniata money, up from $825,000 of grant money spent during the 1982-83 academic year.

Even with this proposed price increase, Juniata is still competitively priced in relation to other Pennsylvania educational institutions offering similar programs. Juniata will in all likelihood maintain its position in 1984-85, near the middle of the pack with these schools in terms of both dollar and percentage values. See figures 1 and 2.

The board members, on recommendation from the administra-

Deception and Covertness Subject of CIA Lecture

by Jason Roberts

Former CIA case officer Ralph McGehee visited the Juniata campus last Sunday night to lecture about the CIA's covert activities and how they are used to deceive the American people.

Most of the one-hour lecture was composed of facts from his book, Deadly Deceits My 25 Years in the CIA, which took three years to write and two years of trying to have the information declassified, a battle which he won except for a few scattered words, sentences, and pages that the Agency insisted deleting.

McGehee graduated cum laude from Notre Dame with a degree in business administration. He played football for four winning seasons under Coach Frank Leahy and was awarded best blocking tackle one year. After failing a tryout with the Green Bay Packers, he joined the CIA in 1952 after receiving a letter which offered him "a government position with duties similar to those of the Department of State".

During his years with the CIA, McGehee worked in Japan, Taiwan, Thailand, the Philippines, Vietnam, and Langley, Virginia. He worked in both cities and rural areas as a case officer on covert operations, as a paramilitary operator, a liaison officer with foreign police and intelligence agencies, and as an intelligence analyst.

When he went to work for the CIA, McGehee was convinced that he would be serving his country by gathering facts that would be instrumental in eliminating the threat of Communism to the free world. He accepted the job at the time when Joseph McCarthy was

Pew Funds Computers

A $250,000 matching grant from the Pew Memorial Trust of Philadelphia has been awarded to Juniata College for the purchase of new academic computer equipment.

The Pew grant is a major step in the college's campaign to upgrade and enhance the academic and administrative computer systems at Juniata. The project will cost $1 million over a five-year period.

In announcing the grant, Juniata President Frederick M. Binder said the computer systems now being installed on campus will provide the college and its students with state-of-the-art equipment.

"There has been a rapid growth in student demand for computer science knowledge and the skills needed for computer applications," Dr. Binder said. "Within the next five years, we can expect to have nearly 1,000 students interested in developing these skills."

The $1 million project includes equipment and the renovation of campus facilities to house the new computer systems. The Academic Computer Center will be located in the former science library in the Brumbaugh Science Center, while the administrative system is installed in Oneida Hall.

The Pew grant will be paid to

Costume Stealing: The Latest Trend

As October 31st approaches, Juniata Campus is not immune to the traditional Halloween activities the season brings. The Lesher/Sherwood Costume Party, the East Houses Halloween party, and private get-togethers highlight Halloween. But in recent years, Halloween activity has been marred by recurring incidents of costume stealing. The Juniatian undoubtedly speaks of the thefts which annually plague the theatre department.

Specifically, last year some "persons" broke into the costume department of the drama club and "borrowed" some costumes for masquerading. In essence, they were borrowed "long term" — that is, many never quite made their way back to the theatre department. Moreover, most of the costumes which were returned were soiled and damaged.

It is The Juniatian's belief that the theatre department would lend out its costumes if it were practical. Unfortunately, it's not. Most of the costumes would be worn to functions where there is food or beverage and would likely get damaged. The drama club doesn't face an unlimited budget to keep replenishing its wardrobe supply each year. So to prevent damage, the costumes are kept under lock and key.

Sad enough, costume damage has not been prevented. Rather, it has increased. With those increases is the increased chance that the costumes won't be replaced. This decline in costume quality will eventually take its toll on the theatre department's quality as well.

The Juniatian would like to believe that the best part of Halloween is creating a costume — not stealing one. Is there any gratification in winning a prize for a costume one didn't make but instead stole? The Juniatian has no choice but to feel those who rely on the creations of others for costumes are, in fact, relying on non-creative, cop-out instincts.

It is with remorse that The Juniatian admits those cop-outs exist on campus. If The Juniatian had its way, it would surely prefer to see the costume stealing trend halted.

ALONG MUDDY RUN

by Kathleen Achor

When it comes to lectures, artist series, and special performances, the average Juniata student needn't ask for the exact time of its occurrence. It's common knowledge: 8:15. We have fondly dubbed this "Standard Juniata Time" and we love to throw the SJT's around to show that we are within the "in" crowd that understands the jargon. But does anyone really know why all these blessed events occur at the strike of the quarter hour? Sure, there are many theories, but perhaps we are overlooking an important aspect of our history.

A long time ago, before any of us were born, perhaps even longer ago than some of our parents were born (yes, Juniata existed then), there was a little old man who lived in the town and worked hard on the maintenance staff of the college. He was basically a kind-hearted old man, but as he grew older he began to see that there was little room for advancement in his position. He did his job well, and he knew it, but lately he just hadn't felt that the fruit of his labors was much appreciated by its recipients. "Those dang college kids," he'd been known to mumble. "Bust my buns off for them and what kind of recognition do I get? Nothin'!"

Deep down, the old man had always wanted to be a cowboy. Dreams of the wild west could still pass the hours of his monotonous days. He wanted to be out riding his horse, roping cattle: out where a man was really a man. Not only that, he wanted to be a famous cowboy, one of the ones with a big white hat. He wanted to save sweet blonde damsels with big breasts from the bad guys with plans of virtue removal. He wanted to shoot the bank robbers in the back as they were running away from him and save the day. He was definitely a ride-into-the-sunset-at-the-end-of-the-day type of guy.

Instead, he walked home to his humble abode at the end of the day, and was greeted not by a horse, but by his faithful dog, Bruce. "Dammit Bruce," he'd mutter as he fried up eggs and grits for supper, "I ain't never gonna get famous at this rate." Bruce would then let out a sympathetic sigh, just as he knew his master wanted him to.

As time went on, the man became more and more obsessed that he was getting old and that he wasn't going to be famous. So he decided that if he couldn't get famous anywhere else, he was going to get famous on Juniata College campus. Yes, he would become a Legend. "Bruce, I'm gonna become a Legend," he'd say.

One night a piano concert was to be given in Oller Hall at 8:00. It was the old man's job to have the place open and ready for people to meander in by 7:30. In accordance with his plan, the man conveniently "forgot" about the performance, and didn't show up to unlock all the necessary doors un-

Students Speak

Question: Would you ever consider being a foreign exchange student?

Jim Kreeger, freshman: "I have to get through this year first. Maybe I'll go to Britain my junior year."

Caron-Lee Cheetham, freshman: "I was seriously considering going to France but my brother is getting married next year so I won't be going."

Elizabeth Radcliffe, freshman: "No. I've been to Europe many times because my father is in the service and I am not impressed by the cultures. They were nice places to visit but I wouldn't want to live there."

Tim McCarthy, sophomore: "Yes. I am going to Marburg, Germany next year and I am really looking forward to it. My parents are not too sure about it because they think there is no better place than the United States to get an education, but I think they're wrong."

Students Evaluate Exchange Program

by Maureen Morrissey

Juniata juniors who studied overseas last year are now back as seniors. After over a month of Juniata some of them have discovered new feelings they have about our college.

All of this year's returning seniors interviewed: Monique Perry (France), Mark Hudson (England), Alyson Pfister (Germany), Al Benson (England), Robin Paulus (France), and Duane Bailey (England) all said they would go overseas to study all over again. All the students agreed the year made them more independent and self-confident. When they went over there they did not know anybody and they had to do many things on their own. Monique Perry, a business major, for instance, had to get her own apartment in France as well as shop and cook for herself. Duane Bailey said that in a way Juniata takes care of its students and he found it very beneficial to be forced to do things on his own in England. He also found it challenging to have to deal with people who just did not like Americans.

All the seniors seemed to be quite impressed with the foreign society they became a part of for a year. Monique, who said studying in France gave her "a nice break from the monotony of Juniata," misses it. She said the majority of French students are not as hung up with the future as we are. Also, she said there wasn't as much academic or social pressure and everyone seemed more easy going.

Pre-Med major Mark Hudson thought it was nice to experience the youth of another culture. He attended Leeds University in England, an institution of about 10-12,000 students, and in spite of its size, he said there was still a personal atmosphere. There were also a lot more clubs and organizations to get involved in. He was also amazed that Leeds students could quit studying at 7:00 p.m., go to the nearest pub and still be prepared for the next day. He found English students to be more concerned with world issues and he feels this attitude has rubbed off on him. Alyson Pfister, a communications major added that she did not realize how close-minded Juniata students were until she heard how students in Germany discuss politics.

The returning seniors also have their opinions concerning the academics of the year abroad. Duane Bailey liked the English grading system of no objective tests but final research essays. He said writing essays instead of studying for tests, "helps develop the thinking process. You can develop a thought and work on it and follow it through instead of studying and studying and regurgitating it all back." He said by handing in research papers instead of taking tests allowed, "the mind to be a thinking machine instead of a tape recorder." "Because you are left on your own to reach your own conclusion while doing an essay, you have more of a desire to learn", he said. He also believes our students cannot communicate as well as the English in both writing and speech.

Al Benson, an ecology major at Leeds last year disagrees. He missed the objective tests because he usually does better on them. He added that he had a hard time getting his courses in the beginning. "I kept waiting for a catalog — like one from Juniata — to show up!" But it never did, he had to go out on his own to see what courses were offered. Robin Paulus, a business major who studied in France last year agreed Juniata is more organized academically. The two also commented that it is alot easier to meet with a Juniata professor than one overseas to talk about a grade or an assignment. Robin said some of her professors actually lived in Belgium or London

The Peace and Conflict Studies Committee has recently purchased a number of books dealing with war, peace, and related issues. These books are currently on display in the peace seminar room of the Humanities Building where students may browse through them. Later the books will be moved to L.A. Beeghly Library where it will be possible for students to borrow them.

Music Assistant Selected

Dianne C. Howard of State College has been named an instructional assistant in music at Juniata College for the 1983-84 academic year.

A graduate of Oberlin College with a bachelor's degree in violin performance, Ms. Howard also holds an M.M.T. degree in music education from Oberlin. She received her M.M. degree in violin performance from the University of Michigan.

Presently a resident violinist at the Pennsylvania State University, Ms. Howard has performed with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center. In 1982 she won the University of Michigan Concerto Competition. She previously won the Utica Symphony Orchestra Concerto Competition.

In addition to giving private violin and viola lessons, Ms. Howard has given master classes at the Eastman School of Music and Yale School of Music. She also has taught at Southern Illinois University and in the Bay Village (Ohio) public schools.

Ms. Howard also has studied conducting and served as conductor of the Lorain County Youth Orchestra. She has made recordings on the Artista and Orion labels.

tion, have also established new rules concerning sabbatical leaves.

In the past, there has been a policy allowing no more than four sabbatical leaves a year for faculty members. This number has now been removed and as many applications that get approved for sabbatical by the Board are as many as can take leave.

This does not mean everyone who applies for sabbatical will automatically get one, but according to Binder, "it gives the administration flexability. I think it's a big plus."

The board also set permanent meeting dates for their two annual meetings. The fall meeting will be every third Friday and Saturday in October, while the spring meeting will be held every first Friday and Saturday in May Binder noted that the Board was happy with Juniata's continued forward progress in the areas of both academics and student activities.

Face Lift in store for Tote

by Linda Ramsay

On the third floor of Ellis College Center is an area awarded the prestige of being called the "hub" of student activities.

However, the Tote is far from being the center of such activities. The dimly lit, checkered walls of Totem Inn have become an area for small meetings and few studiers. This is hardly the student social area that it was once expected to be.

But there is hope in sight for the Tote. Centerboard's Renovation Committee, chaired by Ron Renzini, has claimed the area as part of their jurisdiction. With a budget of $2500, the Renovation Committee has made such decisions as to the new color of the paint for the mini-lounge, and the recovering of the pool tables in Ellis.

The biggest challenge thus far for the committee has got to be the Tote's renovation. The aim of the Renovation Committee, as stated by Ron Renzini, is to "make Tote more of a center for student activities." Walls will be repainted a lighter color to enhance the lighting and the possibility of a jukebox will highlight Tote's development.

Some of the booths will be removed for easier access to pinball machines. An added attraction to the committee's renovation plans is that a new study area will be initialized.

The game room of today will be converted into a center for studying, with divided seating and bright lights. This will allow for the Tote to be less of a study area and more of an area for relaxing and socializing

Along with the new appearance of Tote will come a brand new menu from Hallmark Food Service. Hot dogs competing with Sheetz's at a lower price will be available as well as varied styles of hamburgers and other munchies.

After getting approval for their plans, Renzini noted that the target date for the renovation is set for the first week of winter term. So, along with the computer center in Brumbaugh Science Center, Ellis College Center will see some changes.

According to Renzini, "the Tote renovation has been designed to benefit the campus community as a whole. We hope to achieve this goal in the immediate future."

Baker Lecture Series holds talk next week

US/European Relations to be featured as topic

Relations between the United States and Europe will be the topic of the next Baker Lecture to be held at Juniata College Tuesday, Nov. 1 at 8:15 p.m. in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge.

Dr. Donald J. Puchala, professor of government and international studies at the University of South Carolina, will be the featured speaker discussing "America and Western Europe in Transition."

A graduate of Yale University where he received his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees, Dr. Puchala was a member of the Columbia University faculty from 1966-82. While at Columbia, he served as director of the Columbia Institute on Western Europe and associate dean of the Columbia School of International Affairs. Dr. Puchala has been a visiting professor at Yale, Carleton University, the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard University. In 1961-62, he served as an information specialist with the United States Information Agency.

A leading expert on European foreign policy, Dr. Puchala has been the recipient of numerous honors and awards including the Carnegie Travel and Maintenance Grant, Ford Faculty Research Fellowship and a Rockefeller Foundation Grant to study global food interdependence.

Dr. Puchala has served as a consultant to the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, U.S. Department of State, Central Intelligence Agency, Foreign Service Institute, United Nations and the Educational Testing Service.

The author of several books and articles, Dr. Puchala's writings have appeared in such publications as "International Studies Quarterly," "International Organization," "Journal of Common Market Studies," "European Review," "World Politics" and many others.

The Nov. 1 Baker Lecture is sponsored by Juniata's Peace and Conflict Studies Committee and the political science department. It is open to the public at no charge.

Out & About

by Maureen Morrissey

Yesterday's Restaurant is generally considered for special dinners. However, we found it to be a very nice get-away for lunch for Juniata students as well.

The restaurant which is located inside the Raystown Country Inn on Route 22, does not have a large selection for lunch but my companion and I agreed it is varied enough to please almost anyone. We also found the prices to be quite reasonable. Sandwiches range from $2.00 to $3.00 and include ham and cheddar, ham and swiss, roast beef, and Reubens. The burgers, which are about $2.00 include the cheeseburger, baconburger or the Bermuda burger with blue cheese.

Omelettes could be made to order or one could choose from the cheese omelette, mushroom omelette, the Denver omelette or the Omelette Florentine with creamy spinach and bacon. These ranged in price from $2.00 to $4.00. There is also a hot and cold antipasto plate for $7.00, as well as typical side dishes.

Before the main meal, salad and soup could be ordered. Yesterday's offers a Brutus salad with garlic and a spinach salad along with the traditional tossed salad. Soups include onion soup with cheese or the soup of the day, leek.

For dessert one could ask to see the day's selection of pastries or order a specialty drink from the Brass Rail Lounge upstairs. Offered are Peach, Banana, or Strawberry Daiquiris, Pina Coladas, Pink Squirrels, Grasshoppers, or Brandy Alexanders.

My companion ordered the grilled beef sandwich and I ordered the hot and cold antipasto plate. We sipped ice cold glasses of Riunite Bianco while we waited approximately 25 minutes for our orders to arrive. The grilled beef had cheese, tomato, and onion with the roast beef on grilled bread and it was satisfactory. The antipasto had ham, provolone, olives, beets, onions, tomatoes, and lettuce along with fried cucumbers, cauliflower, and mushrooms.

We enjoyed Yesterday's for lunch. It has a very casual atmosphere and was not too crowded when we were there. We think it should be taken advantage of by Juniata students as a pleasant mid-day break.

JEC starts delivery services

by Cinny Cooper

The Juniata Executive Club is a campus organization for business students and others, designed to give practical experience outside of the classroom. Just recently it has started two projects to raise funds and gain this experience.

JEC is sponsoring a delivery service from the Original Italian Pizza shop in Huntingdon. The service is available Monday through Thursday.

Orders will be taken and deliveries made twice each night. Orders received between 9:00 and 9:20 will be delivered at 10:00 and orders received between 9:20 and 10:00 will be delivered at 10:30. There is a 10% delivery charge.

According to JEC president Deb Hoover, business has been slow for the first two weeks but this was expected. She attributes this to students just not knowing about this new service.

JEC is also selling Sunday editions of the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Pittsburgh Press. These are available in the front lobby of Ellis for one dollar.

Deb explained that JEC only makes about six dollars per week on the newspapers. She considers the project more of a campus service than a fundraiser since Beeghly Library does not receive Sunday editions of newspapers.

Area Woman named to Alumni Post

Juniata College president, Dr. Frederick M. Binder, has announced the appointment of Marjorie J. Love of Shirleysburg as assistant director of alumni relations.

A 1980 Juniata graduate, Miss Love received her B.S. degree in business administration with a program of emphasis in marketing management. After graduating, Miss Love did graduate work at Duquesne University, Pittsburgh.

While at Juniata, Miss Love was business manager and co-editor of Alfarata, the college yearbook. She completed a business administration internship at J.C. Blair Memorial Hospital, Huntingdon, and an independent study in small business management.

As the assistant director of alumni affairs, Miss Love will assist with all aspects of the alumni relations program, especially relating to special events and regional alumni clubs. She also will assume responsibility for certain Alumni Council committees and maintain accurate alumni records.

"As a Juniata graduate, Miss Love will be able to maintain a positive relationship with Juniata's alumni constituency. I know she will be a valuable addition to our alumni office staff," Dr. Binder said.

Her sister, Elizabeth Love Ward, is a 1981 Juniata graduate while another sister, Amy, is currently a sophomore at Juniata.

Students Receive Awards

Three Juniata College students have been awarded Scholars in Education Awards from the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA).

Danielle M. Rupp, a freshman from Red Lion, Susan R. Fuss, a junior from Hanover, and Roxann Binner, a senior from Dillsburg, each received awards amounting to half of their tuition at Juniata. The awards were made to 94 Pennsylvania college students who aspire to become science or mathematics teachers in Pennsylvania secondary schools.

According to Rep. James J.A. Gallagher, PHEAA chairman, "The PHEAA Board of Directors decided to attack the critical shortage of highly qualified science and mathematics teachers with the Scholars in Education Awards program. The Board funded the program with income from $19 million that PHEAA has earned servicing student loans nationwide, and set out to get the 'cream of the crop' among potential teachers by offering them a strong incentive to prepare for and pursue teaching careers."

Miss Rupp, the highest scholastically ranked freshman nominee for the award, received her award from Rep. David R. Wright of Clarion. Also present for the awards was Dr. Frederick M. Binder, JC president, and Dr. Norman E. Siems, associate professor of physics.

PHEAA announced the Scholars in Education Awards program in June and requested nominations from 74 Pennsylvania colleges and universities with appropriate teacher training curriculums. Scholastic criteria for nomination were a combined SAT score of at least 1000 with a minimum of 550 in mathematics. Nominees also had to have been in the top 20 percent of their high school class, and had to have achieved a B (3.0) average in their high school and college courses in science and mathematics.

Counselor's Corner

by Dr. Jay Buchanan

Many experts are suggesting that society itself is partly to blame for the high incidence of eating disorders. Many women are so tuned in to being thin that they will risk their health and emotional well-being to achieve that end. Researchers Judith Cusin and Dale Svendsen at Ohio State University report that over 50% of the sorority women surveyed responded "often," "very often," or "always" to "being preoccupied with a desire to be thinner."

What is it about the higher education environment that seems to contribute to eating disorders? Many psychologists contend that the academic and social pressures associated with college life are partly responsible for many of the difficulties in the eating behaviors of coeds. Other variables associated with eating disorders, according to Dr. Ray Hawkins, of the Austin, Texas, Stress Clinic, are lack of self-esteem and uncertainty regarding educational and career goals. He states further that the conflict between the orientation toward work and dating may add to the eating problems of many women.

Regarding possible treatments, developing a more specific sense of direction and becoming more involved in new activities and projects are two suggestions that Dr. Hawkins offers for combating dysfunctional eating behaviors.

A major problem in dealing with eating disorders is getting bulimics and anorexics to come to counseling. Those suffering from eating disorders must realize that something can be done and that they can in fact change their counterproductive behaviors.

My next article will deal with the important and timely topic of nonverbal communication. We will discuss how nearly 60% of what is communicated during the course of a normal conversation is done so nonverbally.

Euromissile Deployment discussed

On Wednesday, Nov. 2 at 8:15 p.m. in Alumni Hall the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee will be sponsoring a panel of German and American students discussing the pros and cons of the scheduled December deployment of Pershing II and Cruise Missiles in Europe. The panel will be composed of Wolfgang Geissel and Tim Hoch (arguing against deployment) and Ludwig Schwegmann and Robin Smith (arguing for deployment). After the panel's presentation, the audience will be invited to share their views. The event is free and open to the public.

Please make a point to attend what should prove to be a lively discussion of a most crucial, upcoming issue.

the college in two annual installments of $125,000 each, provided the college matches those funds. "This grant is a major incentive as we launch the $1 million campaign," Dr. Binder said. "Over the years, The Pew Memorial Trust has touched every part of our educational program, and we thank them for their continued support."

til almost 8:00. The higher-ups were frantic, but the old man apologized so profusely that they eventually got over their annoyance. Yet under his breath the old man just laughed."No, this place ain't gonna push Samuel J. Tompkins around anymore."

The next week an important speaker came to Juniata, and old Sam pulled the same trick again, this time with the excuse that Bruce had suddenly taken sick. The speaker didn't begin until fifteen minutes after the presumed time.

On the next occasion an important government official was to grace the grounds of our fine campus. Sam was there to get the place in proper order, but right before the crowd would normally begin to show up, he locked the doors, leaving a sign proclaiming "I'll be there when I get there-SJT." The administration was furious, and would have fired Sam right there if the government official hadn't commented on the man's obvious spunk.

Soon Sam added the finishing touch. He and Bruce decided to sabotage the bells at Stone Church so that they rang a quarter of an hour later than the actual time. That night everyone showed up at 8:15, thinking it was 8:00. When they arrived, discussing among themselves their fast watches, they discovered that somehow they'd all had the same problem.

The next day the president called Sam into his office. "Sam," he said, "what's all this insistence about performances in Oller starting a good quarter hour after they're supposed to? I don't want to fire you, you're a good worker. But we just can't have this anymore. What is it you want? More money? Fewer hours?"

Sam smiled. "Just change starting time to 8:15," he said, "and tell everyone you're doing it because of me."

"And you won't cause anymore trouble?"

"No more trouble. Just from here on in, I want Samuel J. Tompkins to be synonymous with 8:15."

And that is what happened. All the people were alerted that because of Samuel J. Tompkins' schedule, all performances and speeches would hereupon be scheduled at 8:15. People jokingly began throwing the term SJT around — meaning Samuel J. Tompkins, of course — and this became tradition until somewhere along the line the meaning was warped into the Standard Juniata Time version.

But Samuel J. Tompkins was happy. Everyone at Juniata knew and respected him now. And he enjoyed the whimsical way the social page of the Huntingdon paper threw his initials around, announcing the upcoming campus events 8:15, SJT.

"Ya see that, Bruce?" he'd drawl. "I'm a Legend."

Rupiper gets new position

Russell D. Rupiper, associate director of alumni relations at Juniata College since July, 1982, has been named assistant director of college advancement/director of annual support fund. Dr. Frederick M. Binder, president of Juniata made the announcement last week.

A native of Carroll, Iowa, Rupiper is a 1979 graduate of the University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls, where he received a B.A. degree in business administration.

Prior to coming to Juniata, Rupiper spent three years teaching business and typing in the Oelwein (Iowa) Community School District, and was treasurer of the Oelwein Community Education Association.

In his new position, Rupiper will be responsible for the coordination of the annual giving program, research on individual, corporation and foundation prospects, and the management of development recording keeping.

Racism discussed

A consciousness-raising discussion on race relations and racist symbols will be presented by Helen Stark Tomkins and Mrs. Orrin Evans.

Helen Stark Tomkins is the Associate Director of Fellowship Farm, Pottstown, PA (an education center on human relations). Her special emphasis at Fellowship Farm is intercultural education: Africa, Black History, and Native American contributions to American life.

Mrs. Orrin Evans is a retired school teacher from the Philadelphia public school system. She is now living in Kennett Square, PA. Her husband was the first black reporter for the Philadelphia Record.

Following the discussion by Mrs. Tomkins and Mrs. Evans, there will be a question and answer period.

The discussion will be held in South's Rebels' Den on Monday, October 31 at 8:15.

This Saturday night, October 29, SNAP (Saturday Night Alternative Program) will be sponsoring Autumn Fest at Camp Blue Diamond. Autumn Fest includes square dancing (no experience required) to the live music of the Allegheny String Band and the caller, Bob Doyle, hayrides, apple-bobbing, hot cider and doughnuts, and perhaps a hike in the woods. All staff, faculty, and students are welcome to meet at Ellis Hall at 6:45 P.M., and then proceed to the lodge at Camp Blue Diamond. The cost is only $1.50 after signing up at the Ellis information desk.

initiating efforts to supposedly purge the U.S. of internal Communist threats. During his lecture he said, "I would tolerate no criticism of the CIA."

An assignment he had while in Thailand involved the training of 50,000 Thai police in intelligence-gathering techniques. The result of his work was that he discovered Communists in rural areas of Thailand with guerilla training and indoctrination camps in the mountains. The Communist Thais came down to the villages and covertly recruited residents, mostly farmers, into the Communist party under organizations such as the Farmer's Liberation Association and Women's Liberation Association. Membership in these organizations numbered in the tens of thousands.

McGehee received high praise from the Directorate for Intelligence (an arm of the CIA involved in collection of covert intelligence), the State Department, and from the Thai intelligence agency, all saying that his was the best work they had ever seen. When the report on his work was disseminated among U.S. policy makers, it cited that the Communists in Thailand numbered no more than 4,000; that they were isolated in the mountains and made no contact with other people.

McGehee's superiors told him that his "disruptive activity" had "jeopardized any future promotions." Soon after, he was presented with a service award and a cash bonus for his work in Thailand.

McGehee was frustrated by these proceedings but volunteered in 1968 for duty in Vietnam. The CIA sent him to Saigon where he experienced frustrations similar to those in Thailand. At the end of his time in Saigon, he was convinced that the CIA dealt specifically in lies and continued to gather factual data as a form of protest. The results of his work were never accurately reported to Washington and much of his work was never reported at all. He finished his employment with the Agency at a do-nothing desk job where he would no longer be a menace.

The CIA of today, according to McGehee, ". . . is not an intelligence agency. It is the covert action arm of foreign policy." Of his work he said, "The Agency obviously believed me because they weren't going to let me say what I wanted to say." He said that the CIA in the past 10 years has illegally opened more than 30 million pieces of mail coming into the United States for photographic recording and filing.

It has made more than five attempts to assassinate Cuba's Fidel Castro, hiring the Mafia for one of these attempts. It has initiated the overthrow of governments in Iran, Cuba, Libya, Chad, and Nicaragua. It has worked with national student organizations and college professors to recruit case officers among U.S. students and foreign agents among exchange students. It has reported on student dissident organizations ("Political dissidence is anyone who doesn't think like they should," McGehee said). The CIA has also trained members of no less than 50 U.S. police departments in clandestine (concealed for illicit purpose) techniques for intelligence gathering. According to McGehee the CIA probably has at least been in contact with your hometown police department.

President Reagan has issued an executive order allowing covert operations within the U.S. The CIA has hired 1,000 covert operators and has had its budget expanded by 17% each year since 1981. In the past, the CIA has owned and operated airlines for intelligence-gathering operations, it has had a foothold in the media, and has operated businesses to provide cover and bases of operation for case officers. This budget increase has allowed the CIA to resume many of these operations.

Today, McGehee says that the primary function of the CIA is getting rid of democratic governments, suppressing the wishes of the people in places like Latin America, and supporting military dictatorships which favor U.S. policies. "We're in Nicaragua killing people who only want their own form of government," McGehee said.

Before taking questions from the audience, McGehee proposed a solution to the problem of the CIA. "The U.S. is the most dangerous and belligerent country in the world. We need to keep covert actions to a minimum and to create a pure intelligence agency. We can't do it with the people we have now. We have to start from the ground up."

and merely came to the school to give lectures.

As far as taking courses in their majors, the students had different opinions. Robin Paulus wasn't able to take the French business courses because she felt she wasn't prepared for them. She did take courses she found interesting but they weren't in her major.

On the other hand, Mark Hudson was able to take courses at Leeds that he found to be very helpful in his major of pre-med that he would not have been able to take at Juniata. He said he misses being able to have a course of study, "that interested me completely — one which pertained to my future vocation totally", instead of having to take a lot of requirements.

After spending a year at the University of Munster, Alyson Pfister now sees how limited the communications department at Juniata is. She said, "There are twice as many people in Munster's communications department as there are in this whole college." Alyson also feels the exchange program at Juniata as a whole needs help academically. "I think if they are going to send people overseas they ought to have a set form of grading. They told me last October they would accept certain types of grades and when I came home in July they had changed their minds about it."

Even though the students had some academic problems they all agreed that the exchange program is a very worthwhile program to get involved in.

I.M. Volleyball

by Andy Hiscock

Well this year's edition of fall Co-Recreational Volleyball is winding down. No, I won't be making any predictions on who will make the playoffs or be the champion, because at the beginning of the season I thought that my team would be in the hunt for a play-off position, but as it stands right now, we would be happy to have our first victory. But we're having fun so I guess that is all that counts.

This week I covered the game between "The DSA Stumblers" and "The Esmereldas". DSA was able to stumble to another win over Esmerelda with the good teamwork of L. Hocker and J. Shriver at the net. Tina Snowberger was able to return a couple of deep baseline shots but it was all for nought because The Stumblers came up with the win (15-9) and (15-8). Also on Sunday October 23, I was able to catch a Green Flight game between the division leading "Lord Marvel and the Principles" and "Rob's Rejects". The Rejects came out dejected knowing that they had to face an undefeated team, but they gave it their best shot or shots depending on how you looked at the game. Lord Marvel had his team stick to the principles of volleyball and came up with a quick two-game match win (15-5) and (15-4). Two noteworthy performances were put in by D. Strong and T. Kelley for Lord Marvel. In other action on Sunday night, "We're Closed Now" defeated "N.L.S.A." 15-4; 9-15; and 15-1 . . . "The Far Side" beat "A Fresh Start" 15-5; 15-9 . . . "Anythings Possible" beat "Adolescents" 15-7; 4-15; and 15-7 . . . "Somewhere Over The Net" defeated "The Volleyball Players" 5-15; 15-12; and 15-7 . . . while "The 4 Players" handed "The Maniacs" their final loss by forfeit. ("The Maniacs" have dropped out of the league.)

In Green Flight action on Thursday October 20, "Midnight Madness" took on "Adolescents". With Jeff Fox encouraging the players on the court, he and Diane Matlesky, who was able to set up the front line players fairly well, teamed up to help defeat "The Adolescents" in two straight games (15-10) and (15-6). Other matches that went on Thursday were — "B.H. and the P." defeating "Staff Infection" 15-12, 15-17, and 16-14 . . . "The Scopers" and "Natty-Bo's" picked up a win each by means of forfeits by "Somewhere Over The Net" and "Chokers" respectively . . . "The Tight Seals" beat "The Volleyball Players" 15-11, 16-14 . . . "Who Cares" defeated "North American Destroyers" 15-8, 14-16, and 17-15 . . . "To Be announced" beat "The Spiggots" 16-14, 6-15, and 15-11 . . . and last but not least "Cheekers" were able to pull out a win against "Late Comers" 12-15, 15-10, 15-13. Next week will be the last full week of competition.

"The Sports Corner"

by Mark Shaw

Hello again. I'm sorry I missed you last week (I know you weren't — ha ha), but due to a "sports" injury I was in no mood to write a Sports' Corner. I didn't feel like doing anything, except sleep maybe.

As I write this, I'm waiting for the Women's Field Hockey M.A.C. playoff game to begin. It's the first time they have been in the playoffs. In fact, last year, they only won one game; this year they have only lost one game. Quite an accomplishment.

Well, I'm back now. (The field hockey game began and rudely interrupted my writing, can you believe the nerve of them — only kidding girls.) Actually, I really enjoyed the game. It was very exciting with the game going into triple overtime and then the flick-offs.

In watching the girls over this year and last year, I have seen the Field Hockey Program become greatly improved under the guidance of coach Roslyn Hall. I have enjoyed covering their games this year; and, hopefully, they will have defeated F&M, and I can continue to cover their games.

On Mountain Day, the two key football games of the year were held: The Cloister — Sherwood game and the Senior — Faculty game.

Now, a few weeks ago I made predictions about these two events (actually, I was hoping not predicting). Well, neither prediction was correct; but they were not absolutely wrong either. Both games ended in a tie: Cloister 8, Sherwood 8; Seniors 20, Faculty 20. (Unfortunately, my third "hope" for this year, that the Phillies would win the World Series, was soundly crushed by the Orioles. Let's see, that leaves me 0-3, that's about as good as the Phillies batted in the Series.)

The Cloister — Sherwood game was intense. Both teams struggled hard for the ball; there was a lot of hard hitting (resulting in many bruises and injuries on both sides — unfortunately, or some would think fortunately, I was one of the injured). Cloister put points on the board first but failed to make the extra point. The score was 6-0.

However, Sherwood was not about to be shut out. They came roaring back to score their own touchdown, but, they made their extra point. That gave them an 8-6 lead. Things were looking pretty bleak for Cloister, as neither team could really find an offensive surge.

Then, luck struck Cloister. Sherwood's center centered the ball over the quarterback's head. He recovered in his endzone, but was tackled for a safety. The safety tied the score 8-8, which it remained for the remainder of the game.

Next was the Senior-Faculty game; a game we should have won. However, compared to other senior classes in the past, I think a tie was an accomplishment. Thanks to the efforts of defensive coordinator Bob Maruca and offensive coordinator Kip Benko and Mark Murdoch, the seniors were not to be embarrassed.

Going into the final minute of play, the Seniors were leading 20-14, and it looked as though we had it wrapped up, but, being faculty and administration, they pulled some strings and got possession of the ball. With 20 seconds left, the faculty scored and were in a position to win. The senior defense tightened up however, and withstood the Faculty rush. The game ended in a 20-20 tie.

Tribe Plays Better

by Joe Scialabba

Despite playing its best football of the season last Saturday, Juniata could not escape the big play of hosting Delaware Valley in losing a frustrating 14-7 decision to the Aggies in Doylestown.

The Indians were victimized by two bad bounces; one that turned a possible interception into a touchdown for the winners, and a second that turned a potential scoring drive into a loss of possession and momentum.

"It was our best game of the year, by far," said a disappointed Indian Head Coach Rob Ash, "but it wasn't as good as it could have been because we didn't win. They got the two big plays when they needed them."

The first came with Juniata leading 7-0 in the final moments of the first half.

With only 43 seconds left until halftime, Delaware Valley QB Tom O'Neill let fly a bomb down the left sideline that was slapped up in the air by Indian defender Grady Paul and most likely going to land harmlessly incomplete, but not so. The free ball floated into the arms of fleet-footed Aggie receiver Dan Glowatski who raced untouched to the endzone for the tying score. The play covered 78 yards.

The play blemished what had been "an almost perfect half," according to Ash, for the Indians.

The Tribe, however, refused to give-in, and stormed out of the locker room after halftime to totally dominate the third quarter, running 25 offensive plays to just seven by the Aggies. But a second bad bounce became a fatal one late in the 3rd Period.

Juniata was on the tenth play of a drive that covered 38 yards to the Delaware Valley 16 yard line and was "in certain scoring ground," thought Ash, when QB Todd Kaden and RB Dave Hornberger couldn't connect on an option pitch and Clay Funk recovered the fumble for the Aggies.

"It was a second down play; all we had to do was hold on to the football and we'd get at least a field goal, take the lead, and really put the pressure on them. It was a big, big play and allowed them to control the rest of the football game."

After an exchange of punts, Delaware Valley covered 45 yards to score the game winning touchdown.

A big 21 yard reception by Glowatski highlighted a six play drive that ended when O'Neill rolled left and threw a 10 yard wobbler to Roger Kennedy in the endzone for the score. Joe Cox kicked his second extra point to make it 14-7 with 7:15 left.

Juniata never threatened down the stretch but did manage to bail out from its own two yard line with about one minute left to finish the game, as time ran out, near midfield.

Despite the loss, Coach Ash was pleased with the effort of his squad in saying that although "we (the Indians) were rock-bottom a week ago (a 24-12 loss to Wilkes) we had enough to pick up the pieces and play very well — it's a really good sign."

The Indian offense showed signs early in the game that Kaden, returning at quarterback for injured Dave Pfeifer could lead the team quite well.

Juniata scored its only touchdown of the day in the first quarter with Kaden running option plays to backs Hornberger and Frank Briner, (Marty Kimmel missed the game with a sore hip), and Briner throwing an air-sick halfback option pass good for 21 yards and a first down to Carl Fekula along the way, in a scoring drive that followed a DV turnover.

Kevin Boyle fumbled a Juniata punt and Henry Coyne recovered to keep the Aggies from great field position and start the Indians on their way from the JC 30. It took nine plays to cover the yardage.

Kaden slipped through the left side of the Aggie defense on an option-keep and sprinted 20 yards for the TD and the early Juniata lead. Mike Schaffner kicked the extra point.

The Indians could never reach paydirt again, however, and dropped their sixth straight game this season, falling to 1-6 on the year. Juniata is winless in all six MAC tries.

Del Valley is 4-3 overall and 3-3 in the conference.

A balanced Juniata offense gained 128 yards on the ground and 109 in the air. Del Valley rushed for only 96 yards but threw for 219 and two touchdowns.

Glowatski was the Aggie offensive star, hauling in five passes for 159 yards. Kaden led the Indian effort with 79 yards on 18 carries.

Juniata will travel to Lycoming on Saturday afternoon.

Spikers Qualify for M.A.C.'s

by Suzanne Hickle

The Women's Volleyball team played at Elizabethtown last Tuesday night, qualifying themselves for MAC's by beating E-Town three games to zero. E-Town could never get ahead, losing the first game 15-0, and the next two, 15-9 and 15-7.

Juniata traveled to Mansfield this past weekend to participate in a ten team tournament, consisting of mostly Division I and II teams.

Juniata started the evening off with a victory against Fairleigh Dickinson, winning two games to zero.

After this match, the women had a hard time keeping up their winning streak. The team played Division I University of Akron, losing two games straight, 5-15 and 7-15.

The next morning began with Juniata playing against another Division I school, Youngstown State. The scores were close, but Juniata lost 9-15 and 12-15.

Juniata needed the next game to remain in the tournament, but C.W. Post wanted Juniata to head back to Huntingdon. C.W. Post beat us two games to zero, 15-5 and 15-7.

Coach Bock felt that it was a very tough tournament consisting of very good volleyball teams. "If we would have played up to potential, we would have done very good; our passing, serving and blocking was not good," said Larry Bock.

Juniata's overall record is 22-10 and is ranked 9th nationally. The team has this week off to prepare for MAC's, which are held at Juniata, November 4th and 5th.

More I.M. water basketball action is shown here as the ball handler apparently has just "ripped down" a rebound.

Kickers Win

by Cathy Harwick

The soccer team got back on their feet last Wednesday when they brought home a 3-0 win over Lebanon Valley. The first goal came with a click between sophomore Tom Visosky and freshman Mike Smith, which started off the game. Visosky brought the ball down the left side of the field with a pass to Smith, who fired it past Lebanon Valley's goalie. Later on in the first half, Juniata saw their second goal as freshman Chuck Kreutzberger came up the middle to send the ball into the cage from eight yards out. The final goal was made during the second half of the game when sophomore Joe Kobsar used a penalty kick to Juniata's advantage.

Sophomore Sean Ruth felt the Indians played a more offensive game this time, with the front line playing well and moving more together than they had in the past. He credited better communication and hard practice as the determining factors in the win.

On Saturday, Juniata didn't have the same good fortune when they travelled to Albright. Sophomore goalie Russ Leberman felt that it was one of their better games, but that luck was not on their side. He didn't think they were as aggressive as they should have been and that a breakdown in defense cost them the goals. They left Albright with a 0-3 loss, which brings their record to 2-10.

Yesterday the Indians played at Bloomsburg and will play the last game of their season Monday at Shippensburg.

Lady Stickers Get to Semifinals

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey team advanced to the semi-finals of the MAC playoffs by defeating Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU) 2-0 on Monday afternoon.

The lady stickers achieved their victory during a flick-off against FDU after both teams played scoreless for the 70 minutes of regular play and the three 10 minute overtimes.

In the first half, the game appeared as if it was going to belong to FDU. Juniata had the initial surge but was thwarted by the FDU defense. The tide of the half then began to change as FDU controlled the ball more. FDU was passing well and were getting their sticks on the ball. The lady Indians, on the other hand, were not playing very aggressively. It seemed as though they were laying back and waiting for FDU to make the play.

Fortunately, for the Indians, goalie Therese Libert was having an outstanding game; defensively, she kept them in the game. On offense, the lady stickers made a few surges but failed to capitalize on their many opportunities. The signs of playoff anxiety were definitely present.

The second half saw a different Juniata team. The ladies opted to wear shorts instead of the traditional kilts — a request made by the referees because the two teams' colors were very similar. In addition to looking different, they also played differently. The ladies' offense came out storming with the second half becoming a complete turn around from the first half. On one occasion, the ball laid motionless for a split second in front of the FDU goal with the FDU goalie out of position; fortunately for FDU, the lady stickers hesitated for a second and a FDU player cleared it.

Sue Occiano, Laura Babiash, and Polly Oliver led the second half offensive surge; but Juniata still could not score. At the end of regulation time, the score remained 0-0.

In the first overtime, Juniata, who won the coin toss, received the ball first. Both teams made initial offensive surges, then Juniata seemed to gain their momentum. Lisa Wilson played well for the Indians, making numerous clearing passes.

In the second overtime, there was a lot of middle field play. Occiano made a great play getting the ball into FDU territory, but the lady Indians couldn't penetrate the FDU goal. The lady stickers could have lost the game when it appeared that FDU had scored; but the goal was refused because an FDU player knocked it in with her body.

The third overtime consisted of many anxious moments for the good crowd that had gathered for the game. For the Indians, Oliver drove the length of the field, past a couple of FDU players, only to have her shot miss by inches. Then, the action switched to the Juniata end for the remainder of the overtime. FDU had a strong offensive surge in the closing minutes, but Libert held them off with some great saves. The game remained tied and scoreless at the end of official time.

Both teams played 100 minutes of scoreless field hockey — a tribute to their defenses.

With the end of official time comes the "flick-off". Each team is allowed five shots by five different players on goal. The shooting player has to flick the ball from a designated spot and the goalie has to save it. Each team alternates its shots.

FDU shot first and Libert made a diving glove save to her right. Oliver shot first for JC but her shot was saved by the FDU goalie.

FDU's second shot missed the goal completely; things were looking good for the lady stickers. Terry Sagan was next; her shot hit the left post and bounced out. The game was still scoreless.

FDU's third shot was again saved by the right glove of Libert. Then, Laura Babiash came up; her shot beat the goalie to the left and everybody heard the sweet sound of the ball hitting the goal; the crowd went wild!

But, FDU still had a chance. Their fourth shot bounced off the right post. Juniata could now put the game away, and they did as Deb Barker scored to the goalie's right. For a second, no one knew if she scored; then the referees signaled a score and the ladies went wild.

It was a tough game for anyone to lose, for both teams played well. The loss meant the end of the season for FDU, while Juniata continues on the playoff road. The game winning scorer Laura Babiash, said it well: "I didn't want this to be my last game!"

Senior Laura Babiash tries to give her team the lead, but the F.D.U. goaltender has another idea as she prepares for the save. Babiash eventually scored in the flick-off.

In getting to the playoffs, the Indians had to defeat or tie Gettysburg; they tied 1-1. The game didn't look good for Juniata as Gettysburg scored at the 23:00 mark on a penalty stroke. Time seemed to be running out on JC, but with three and a half minutes left, Jill Loomis scored to tie the game and give Juniata full possession of first place in its league.

The lady stickers went up against F&M at F&M yesterday. The Indians had been scheduled to play them during the regular season but the game was rained out. A victory would put the Lady Indians into the MAC finals.

Harriers Split

by Paul Bomberger

Last Saturday, the Women's and Men's cross country teams ran their last regular season dual meet versus Western Maryland away. Both teams were fired up to come home with a victory in the final dual meet of the season.

All the JC deserve commendation for a fine race. As it was all season, Carolyn Andre led the way for the Indians with a second place finish overall. Right behind Andre were: Cathy Duffy, Chris Schleiden and Sue Gill, claiming 3rd, 4th and 5th places. Two seniors, Sue Richards and Denise Cutillo, who ran consistently throughout the season, finished in 8th and 11th places. Freshman, Linda Sample added a strong race to earn 12th place. The Indians came out on top 22-33. The win gives the women a 6-4 dual meet record.

The Men gave it their all and also deserve applause for a fine season. Mark Royer led the Indian attack with a 5th place. Freshman superstar, Jim Gandy, powered his way to the line, claiming 6th place. Andy Marsh, Dave Long and John Burr each gave another consistent performance, garnering 8th, 9th and 10th places. Ken Kramer and Andy Kortyna showed a lot of desire placing 14th and 17th.

When the points were tallied, JC fell short to Western Maryland, 17-38.

Both the Men and Women will travel to Dickinson College on Saturday to run in the Dickinson Invitational, which will consist of ten teams.

NFL Action

by Paul Bomberger

In a special Sunday night football game, the comeback kids, the Dallas Cowboys, failed to come from behind against the Los Angeles Raiders. A 26-yard field goal in the final minute of play by Chris Bahr gave the Raiders a 40-38 victory.

Many fans felt this game was going to be a preview of the Super Bowl. If indeed it was, it will be a Super Bowl of turnovers. The Raiders committed six turnovers, and the Cowboys committed three turnovers.

The win for the Raiders put them alone at the top of the AFC East, with a 6-2 record. The loss for the Cowboys was their first loss on the season. They still remain atop the NFC East with a 7-1 record.

Homecoming Activities Scheduled at Juniata

Theme: "Fantasy — May All Your Dreams Come True"

by Linda Ramsay

The Juniata College campus will become a fantasy world Nov. 4-5 as thousands of alumni return to College Hill for the 1983 Homecoming celebration. This year's theme, "Fantasy — May All Your Dreams Come True," will appear in a number of events throughout the weekend.

The exciting weekend begins with the arrival of alumni and the MAC Volleyball Tournament commencing at 4 p.m. on Friday afternoon. The top teams within the MAC's, including Juniata's women, will compete for the title. The tournament continues Saturday morning in the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center at 10 a.m. Semi-finals are scheduled for 4 p.m. with finals following at six.

With spirits rising in anticipation of the next day's activities, the Juniata cheerleaders and band will hold a pep rally at the Detwiler Plaza immediately following the volleyball tournament on Friday night.

Oller Hall will claim some of the action as the play "The Trojan Women" is presented by Theater Juniata. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. The play promises to raise a crowd of Greek Mind students and an enthusiastic audience.

Saturday morning, November 5th, the Homecoming festivities get into full swing with the start of the parade at 10 a.m. All four classes will present their floats as they travel through town beginning at Sears, following Washington Street to Sixth, from Sixth to Mifflin, and from Mifflin to Eighteenth Street.

Along with the floats will travel the homecoming candidates from each class. At 1:30 p.m., the Juniata football team, with the support of the home crowd, will raise their sights toward a win against Susquehanna University. At halftime, the class floats will reappear in the winning order and the homecoming queen and her escort will be announced. Bonnie Benner, last year's homecoming queen, will award the crown to one of the senior candidates. After the game, there is a Homecoming Reception in Gibbel Lobby in the Sports+Recreation Center.

Winding up the weekend events is the Homecoming Dance in the Sports+Recreation Center at 9:30 p.m. The fantasy of a lifetime may just come true by participating in these gala events.

Theater Juniata Performs Euripides "Trojan Women"

by Kathy Manzella

A powerful Greek drama set in the aftermath of the Trojan War will be staged in Juniata College's Oller Hall Nov. 3,4,5 and 6 by Theater Juniata, the college's theatrical company.

"The Trojan Women" by Euripides tells the tale of the women of Troy, the only survivors of the war, as they huddle together on a remote hillside waiting to find out which of the Greeks has won them as slaves and concubines.

Written in 415-416 B.C., the play grew out of the militaristic spirit that gripped Athens at that time. In an atmosphere darkened by fears for the future, Euripides' tragedy was produced at the annual drama festival in Athens.

The play is distinctive in Greek drama, not only for its horror of war, but also for its study of the victims of war. Here, the "enemy" is portrayed sympathetically as a people whose suffering confirm the dignity of the human spirit.

Wendy Whitehaus leads the cast in her role as the Queen of Troy, Hecaba. Cheryl Kimbrough has been cast as the leader of the Trojan Women. The Trojan Women include; Beth Davidson, Sheri Kidd, Kari Dubbel and Martha Kuder. Sally Deluca plays Cassandra while the Character of Andromache is played by Jocylun Fowler. Karen Krasznauolgyi has been cast in the part of Helen of Troy.

The first performance of the play will be tonight at 8:30 in Oller Auditorium. Additional performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. A special matinee performance will be given on Sunday at 3:00 p.m.

Other members of the cast include Stephen Meyer as Talthybious, the messenger. Rob Boyer portrays Menelaus, the King of Sparta. Jim Younkin and Kirk Fleck share the role of Poseidon, the Sea god. Bob Adams and John Bookwalter Jr. will appear as Greek soldiers. Sharon Dotts has been cast in the role of Athena.

Germans and Americans To Debate Missile Deployment

The planned deployment of U.S. Pershing II and Cruise missiles in Europe was the subject of a debate at Juniata College Wednesday, Nov. 2, as American and German students at Juniata gave their views on the subject.

The 8:15 p.m. debate was held in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center, and centered on the pros and cons of the planned December deployment.

Arguing against the deployment was sophomore Timothy L. Hoch of Harrisburg and Wolfgang Geissel, an exchange student from the University of Marburg, West Germany. Presenting the case for deployment was senior Robin A. Smith of Quakertown and Ludwig Schwengmann, an exchange student from the University of Muenster, West Germany.

Following the panel discussion by the four students, audience members were given an opportunity to share their views on the missile deployment plan. The program was free and just another opportunity afforded Juniata students to voice their opinions to the college community.

Frosh Slaves Sold

by Ann Cameron

Talk about INFLATION! Prices were high at the Freshman Slave Auction. Over 90 freshmen were auctioned off to upperclassmen to clean, type papers, do laundry, and perform other odd jobs.

Auctioneer "Pud" Chris Coller worked an hour and a half selling freshman slaves on Oct. 25. The prices grew higher and higher as the evening wore on. When the last slave was sold, the freshman class had earned $506.61, more than any other freshman slave auction. The money will be used for the Homecoming float, class parties, and other class activities.

Mystery Slave Arnold Tilden, Dean of Academic Affairs, was sold at $10.00. The highest bid for an individual slave was $29.00 for Tom Marshall. A group of three girls were auctioned off at $30.00. The upperclassmen certainly dug deep into their pockets on Tuesday night. If the high prices are any indication of the tasks to be done, the freshman slaves are going to be busy, busy, busy.

Let Students Decide

Can you remember when your parents would let you be "independent and mature" and allow you to make your own decisions? You were a grown up and had a good head on your shoulders. Of course, that changed when you stayed out late on a date and they thought their experience and wisdom was just a bit more "grown up". Then you graduated from high school.

Well, welcome home students of Juniata College. You have just been adopted by the college's Student Government. How? Why?

It seems that starting first day back winter term, students are going to be required to wear protective eye wear when playing on the handball/racquetball courts. If this rule is not followed, the individual in question will be suspended from the courts for either two weeks or until they get the required protective eye wear.

The Juniatian realizes and believes that eye wear is an essential piece of equipment for racquetball and handball players and we would encourage all the students who use the courts to wear the gear.

The Juniatian also realizes though that students, if ever caught in a lightning storm on the paths from their classes to their dorms, should have rubber soled shoes on.

Should Student Government perhaps pass a bill requiring students to wear/carry sneakers to class the day of the expected rain? Maybe daily weather forecasts could be announced during lunch and dinner, with a weekly forecast even being printed in The Juniatian.

The point is that The Juniatian has always believed that "the college considers students to be mature perons; . . . it wants students to learn to use freedom and to demonstrate discretion in exercising their own responsibilities," (1983-84 Pathfinder, p.3). This philosophy is not the case though with the new protective eye wear regulation.

If the student government feels they need to make the common sense decisions of the students of Juniata, perhaps they have misinterpreted their duties. With this regulation, they are not allowing the student body they represent, and are part of, to "demonstrate discretion" and we believe are thus stifling the students' growth.

"BUT THIS THREATENS OUR SECURITY! SHOULDN'T WE INVADE SOMEBODY? CALL IN AN AIR STRIKE SOMEWHERE?"

Along Muddy Run

by Alyson Pfister

Quite an interesting thing was recently brought to my attention. If you're not a senior you might not know this (I never knew it before this year), but we go through four years of college totally blind to a very unusual fact that affects each and every one of us.

As all of the seniors just found out, our POE titles can't be any longer than 32 letters. Thirty-two letters. And that includes spaces!

Why 32 spaces and not 31? And why not 33? I don't even want to get into 34 and 35. Maybe it was 31 last year. On the same token I wonder if it'll be 33 next year. And if the system does run like that, what would've happened 28 years ago? I guess students could only major in "Math." (Excuse me — I mean have a POE in "Math." You know, even after four years of dealing with the "Program of Emphasis" system, I still say "major".)

There must be a reason for this restriction. I guess they could prescribe 32 spaces if it had anything to do with the line on the diploma where the title goes. Maybe 33 spaces just don't fit. It really doesn't matter though, because, from what I've heard anyway, our POE title doesn't even go on our diploma. I guess, even if the number of letters is actually the result of an eccentric whim of some aging Juniata dignitary, it can be rationally explained.

They ought to put the fact that POE titles are not to be any longer than 32 letters in the brochures, though. Now suppose you came to Juniata and Studied "Business Administration and Communications" for three years, only to find out via a small blue envelope just when you were beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel, that your POE title can only be 32 letters long. What do you do? Not even a slash instead of "and" will save you.

Maybe they'd treat it like they do on those standardized tests we took all through elementary and high school. Like SAT's or GRE's or any of the rest of them handle it — they just cut it off when it gets too long. Elizabeth Grabowski had that problem all the way through grade school. She always ended up "Elizabe Grabows". That would make you certified in the field of "Business Administration and Comm". Comm what? Comm could be the beginning of a good many words.

Would a perspective employer hire someone with a degree in something they never heard of? They probably would, because they want to keep up with the times, you know. Maybe they'd think they were getting something new and innovative. Then again maybe they'd be intimidated by it. Who knows? I don't know diddly squat about what goes on in a perspective employer's mind, but that's another story.

Maybe after four years of deliberation you finally decide on the POE title "Human Physiology with an emphasis in Anatomy." Then after all the sweat and anguish involved in deciding, you find out that you're twelve letters

Letters to the Editor

Letter to the Editor:

It has been brought to my attention in recent months the danger of accidents occurring to the eyes of players while playing in the handball/racquetball courts. I have completed some research on this subject and feel we must change the protective eye policy as it is written in the Kennedy Sports+Recreation Center Procedures Manual.

On each court door, there is a sign which states: "eye protection is recommended for everyone". I have talked with S.A.C. (Student Affairs Council) and a local optometrist, Dr. John Cook, concerning the importance of proper eye protection. By concensus, S.A.C. has determined that protective eye-wear in the handball/racquetball courts be made mandatory. This action is being taken before we have a serious eye injury to an individual using our courts.

The Athletic Department in cooperation with Dr. Cook will place safety glasses in the equipment room to be signed out to those individuals who don't own safety glasses. We ask students using the college glasses to buy your own head band for easy exchange of glasses.

The glasses sold in the book store may be used, but the kind with safety lens are the type recommended for use in our courts.

Therefore, at the beginning of the winter term, November 27, 1983, everyone using the handball/racquetball courts must use eye protection. Anyone failing to play with a protective eye apparatus will forfeit playing privileges for two weeks or until appropriate eye-wear is procured.

If you have any questions, please contact me in my office.

Sincerely,
William F. Berrier
Athletic Director

Information on Mono

Infectious mononucleosis is an acute disease that is most prevalent in children and young adults. This disease is generally one characterized by fever, sore throat, and enlarged lymph nodes. The exact cause of the disease is thought to be viral.

The disease occurs world wide. It does have seasonal variations, and early fall and early spring are periods of high frequency. It can show clusterings in student populations, especially those who share common dormitory facilities.

The mechanism of the disease is not fully understood. In some studies it appears that secretion of the respiratory system is the transmission means. The disease is not considered "highly" contagious and is usually spread by close personal contact.

In studies that have been performed, the ratio of those patients who have clinical or obviously recognizable symptoms, either by themselves or a physician, to those who have what is termed "subclinical or inapparent" infection, is approximately 1:4.

This means that many persons have mononucleosis with nonspecific vague feelings of tiredness, scratchy throat, or discomfort but do not seek medical attention and in many cases do not even realize they have the disease. Further evidence of this is that serologic studies of antibody production against viral agents thought to be related to mononucleosis in the adult American population has been as high as 90 percent. In more simple terms, this means that most Americans have had mononucleosis at some time in their lives.

When the disease becomes clinically symptomatic, the usual signs are headache, a tired feeling, sore throat and enlarged, tender lymph nodes.

The spleen, an organ in the upper left section of the abdomen, can also be involved in this disease. When enlarged, the spleen loses its normal protective defense and is susceptible to rupture. This can present a true medical life-threatening emergency.

The disease is diagnosed by the physician's findings of the appropriate signs and symptoms. Its presence can be confirmed by laboratory testing. Laboratory testing, however, is only an aid to the physician and provides supportive evidence of his findings based on his education, training and experience.

Other diseases, including related viral and bacterial disease, and other immune disorders of the body can mimic mononucleosis closely, not only clinically but in the laboratory. No absolutely specific test for the disease exists.

Most cases are mild or moderate, last a few weeks and recovery is uneventful. Complications can occur. They are infrequent but do require the attention of a physician. No effective treatment other than relief of symptoms is available. No effective prevention exists.

In summary, if you have signs of a fever, unusual tiredness, sore throat or abdominal pain, you should seek the advice and counsel of health professionals. They can, on the basis of clinical symptoms, order certain laboratory tests to further support the diagnosis, but no specific diagnostic test exists and no specific preventative measures or therapy exists.

Tri-Beta Holds Lecture

The Lambda Epsilon Chapter of Beta Beta Beta, Juniata's Biological Honor Society, sponsored a lecture on October 25 by Dr. Ari van Tienhoven on "Human Reproduction and Society; A Reproductive Physiologist's Sermon." Dr. van Tienhoven, Professor of Physiology at Cornell University, spoke on political implications of birth control, trends in population growth, abortion, and test tube babies, and stressed the meaning and value of human life.

On October 28, Tri-Beta inducted students in a Halloween theme ceremony, held at Juniata's Field Station. Some of the most imaginative costumes included 3 students dressed in beta pleated sheets (for Tri-Beta) and another group of 3 decked out as a transfer RNA molecule. One highlight of the inductions was a series of one to two minute extemporaneous lectures by inductees on assorted biological topics.

Any student interested in joining Tri-Beta should check the society's bulletin board opposite Room B-200 in the Brumbaugh Science Center.

Lecture Series Begins

Juniata College's J. Omar Good Lecture Series will begin Tuesday, Nov. 8 with a program entitled "Human Suffering and Divine Goodness."

The 8:15 p.m. lecture in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge will be delivered by Dr. Bruce R. Reichenbach, professor of philosophy and chairman of the philosophy department at Augsburg College in Minneapolis.

A member of the Augsburg faculty since 1968, Dr. Reichenbach received his B.A. degree in philosophy and religion from Wheaton College, and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in philosophy from Northwestern University.

Dr. Reichenbach is a specialist in the area of philosophy of religion, and in 1976-77 was a visiting professor of the New Testament at Morija Theological Seminary in the African nation of Lesotho.

The author of three books, Dr. Reichenbach's numerous articles have appeared in such publications as "The Christian Scholar's Review," "The International Journal for Philosophy of Religion," "Religious Studies" and "Evangelical Missions Quarterly."

The J. Omar Good Lecture Series was established with funds from the estate of the late J. Omar Good, an 1896 Juniata graduate and Philadelphia printing executive who left the college $1 million, the largest gift ever made to Juniata.

An active member of Philadelphia's First Church of the Brethren where he served as missionary treasurer, clerk and trustee, Mr. Good died in 1969 at the age of 92.

The public is cordially invited to attend the Nov. 8 lecture. There is no admission charge.

Stud. Govt. Review

by Joy Hadley

Eye protection will be mandatory for all students playing on the handball/racquetball courts, announced Rory McAvoy at the October 24, meeting of Student Government.

Bill Berrier, Athletic Director, made the eye-protection proposal at a recent Student Affairs Council meeting. The type of goggles/glasses currently being sold in the bookstore are apparently not safe, however Student Government does intend to buy safer ones. The new goggles will be available in the equipment room, so it will not be necessary for students to buy them. Anyone violating the rule will be barred from using the handball/racquetball courts for at least two weeks.

Residential Life Committee Co-Chairman, Jan Herhal, gave the latest report on the ice machine. The committee received the new prices on different machines and is now in the process of determining which machine to buy and how to fund the machine. After a meeting with Jack Linetty, Herhal assured the Senate that the improvements for on-campus housing are still in progress.

Greg Kimble, in his Budget and Management report, stated that 27 clubs/organizations (up from 18 last year) asked for a total of $16,245.56 in funding. However, Student Government has only a little more than $5,000.00 to offer.

Also discussed at the Student Government meeting was the proposed tuition increase of between 7% and 9%. Although the increase will not be voted on until the January Trustee meeting, if the increase should pass, at least 35% of the students will be paying in excess of $9,000.00 a year (the other 65% will be receiving some kind of financial aid). "However," McAvoy said emphatically, "this was the first time I've ever seen Trustees actually oppose a tuition increase."

The last Student Government meeting of this term is scheduled for November 7, at 8:30 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in Ellis.

too long. Naturally the next move is to shorten it, right? Okay. How?

You could change it to "Human Physiology/Anatomy" but then you have to take a whole bunch of upper levels in Anatomy and its already the end of fall term senior year. You've barely got time for Human Physiology so that's no good. Maybe you could change it to "Human Physiology with Anatomy emphasis." Too long. Maybe you could use the little bit of German you learned: "Human Physiology mit Anatomy emphasis" Still too long. By this time you're going nuts trying to figure something out, so in a blind frenzy you write down "The Bod". Wonder what would happen?

Another possible foul up would be if your POE title were "Written Communications in French". No problem, right? Exactly 32 letters, right? Maybe, but what about the W? In printing circles it takes up to 50% more space than your average letter. Does that mean that they'd cut off half your last h? Maybe they'd move two of your words together. That's no good.

After days and days of obsessive concentration on my 32 spaces, I finally came up with one. Mine's 25 spaces long. I figure that leaves plenty of room for any technical difficulties that might come up. I don't know how I did it, but I did. I finally came up with a conclusive description of the last four years of my life in 32 spaces or less.

Lyco Downs Indians 20-7

7th Straight Loss

by Joe Scialabba

Two first-quarter touchdowns, only 49 seconds apart, gave Lycoming enough to hold off Juniata 20-7 on Saturday in windy Williamsport.

The Warriors are now 6-1-1 for the season and 5-1-1 in the Middle Atlantic Conference. The Indians fell to 1-7 overall and 0-7 in the MAC in losing their seventh straight game.

Lycoming got on the scoreboard with 6:47 left in the first period when QB Domenic Pacitti hit wide receiver Bill Simonovich in the endzone for a 26-yard touchdown. It capped a 12 play, 87 yard drive on the Warriors opening possession of the game.

Lance Spitler nailed his first of two extra point kicks for a 7-0 Lyco edge.

The ensuing kickoff left Juniata pinned-in at its own seven yard line thanks to a clipping penalty on the return. Two plays later, it looked as if it could really be a long afternoon for the Tribe.

Lycoming's Jim Hunt intercepted Todd Kaden's errant roll-out pass and waltzed 12-yards to the JC endzone to put Lyco on top 14-0 with only 9:02 gone in the game.

Juniata, however, hung tough the rest of the first half; surviving an apparent interception return for a Warrior touchdown, (called back due to a clipping penalty), and dodging a big bullet close to halftime when Tom Wilkinson intercepted a Pacitti pass at the Juniata 12 to stop a Warrior threat.

Although outgained 237 yards to 75 in the half, the Indians trailed only 14-0 at the intermission.

Lycoming pulled-out to a 20-0 advantage in the third quarter when Pacitti ended a four play, 30 yard, drive with a fourth down scoring pass to Joe Noone. Noone needed only two yards for a first down but ended up with twenty more and a TD.

The extra point was blocked.

The Indians brought the crowd to their feet on the ensuing kickoff return as Frank Briner took the ball at the JC 3 and handed-off on a reverse to Dave Duncan who weaved, and worked, his way 75 yards to the Lyco 24 yard line.

After losing two yards and the football on downs, Juniata got it right back via a Brian Warren interception of a Pacitti pass.

Six plays, and 29 yards, later the Indians scored when Kaden faked an inside handoff to Dave Murphy and lobbed a swing pass to his left, that Marty Kimmel hauled in for the seven-yard TD.

Mike Schaffner added the extra point to set the score at 20-7 with 2:54 to go in the 3rd quarter.

Juniata entered Warrior territory only twice more, one resulting in an interception at the LC 37 and the second an interception at the Lyco 10. The second interception followed a four first down drive, engineered by Mike Culver at quarterback, that went from the Indian 15 yard line, 69 yards, to the LC 16 before the pass was picked-off with less than a minute left.

The Indian defense, despite giving up two touchdowns and almost 400 yards to the Lycoming offense, played steady throughout the game and came up with several key plays to stall Warrior drives and keep the game close. Gino Perri got credit for 20 tackles, (8 solo, 12 assists), and Ken Osiecki had 12 stops, (8 solo, 4 assists), to lead the Tribe defense.

The thorn in the Juniata defense's back all day was Lyco QB Pacitti. The senior completed 23 of 35 passes for 284 yards and two touchdowns. He did throw two interceptions.

Simonovich was his favorite receiver, grabbing eight passes for 91 yards. Noone caught seven for 89 yards. They each had one touchdown reception for the Warriors.

Lycoming was less effective on the ground, the Warriors rushed 38 times for an even 100 yards. Joe Schmid was the leading Lyco rusher with 42 yards on 17 carries.

The Indian passing attack netted 120 yards on an 11 for 25 effort. Culver completed 5 of 8 for 69 yards and one interception; Kaden hit 6 of 16 for 51 yards, one TD, and three interceptions; plus Dave Hornberger's halfback-option pass was picked-off.

Murphy caught six JC passes for 71 yards to lead the receiving corps.

Kaden gained 56 yards on 19 rushing tries to lead the Indians, who gained 74 on 34 carries for the afternoon.

The touchdown by the Indians was only the second TD scored against the Warrior defense this season. Lycoming has been among the national leaders in "D" all year.

This Saturday, unbeaten Susquehanna, 6-0-1 and in first-place in the MAC, comes to College Field for a Homecoming weekend kickoff at 1:30.

Upsala comes to Juniata November 12, to end the 1983 campaign.

Kickers 3-1 loss

by Cathy Harwick

The soccer team faced Bloomsburg last Wednesday to play the second last game of their fifth season as a varsity sport.

The first half of the game saw the Indians ahead 1-0. Sophomore Tom 'Rat' Visosky sent the ball into Bloomsburg's cage that became the only goal made for the Indians Wednesday afternoon. Up until the last 20 minutes of the second half, it looked as if it would be the only goal of the game. Then Bloomsburg took Juniata off guard and put three balls into the Indians' cage within a seven-minute time span, to put the final score at a 1-3 loss to Juniata.

With an overall record of 2-11, the Indians played Division II Shippensburg on Monday for the final match of the season.

Ladies take First

by Paul Bomberger

Last Saturday the Women's and Men's cross country teams ran in the Dickinson Invitational, which was held at Carlisle High School. Nine colleges fielded teams in the race. The teams included: Juniata, Dickinson, Western Maryland, Messiah, York, Elizabethtown, Lebanon Valley, Washington, and Lycoming. Medals were awarded to the first 15 runners in both the women's and the men's races. Plaques went to the top three teams in each race.

The one-two punch of Carolyn Andre, 3rd overall, and Cathy Duffy, 5th overall, paced the Indians. Running their usual superb races were Chris Schleiden, claiming 11th place, Sue Gill who hit the tape in 17th place, and Sue Richards who notched 20th place. This tremendous team effort gave the women 56 points and the team championship. Dickinson finished in second place with 63 points and Western Maryland was third with 69 points. Medal winners for JC were Carolyn Andre, Cathy Duffy and Chris Schleiden.

Turning to the men, team captain Mark Royer earned a medal with a 10th place finish. Jim "sports plus" Gandy ran an excellent race, giving him 19th place. Andy Marsh, 26th, Dave Long, 30th, and John Burr, 31st, completed the top five finishers for the Indians. As a team, the Harriers totaled 116 points, putting them fourth out of nine teams.

This Saturday, November 5, the women and the men will be running in the MAC Conference Championship at Lebanon Valley College.

Running for the women will be: Carolyn Andre, Cathy Duffy, Chris Schleiden, Sue Gill, Sue Richards, Denise Cutillo and Linda Sample.

The men who are running include: Mark Royer, Jim Gandy, Andy Marsh, Dave Long, John Burr, Ken Kramer and Andy Kortyna.

M.A.C.'s Held Here

Juniata College will be hosting the M.A.C. volleyball championship tournament on Friday, November 4th and Saturday, November 5th. All students, faculty and staff will be charged $1.00 per day upon presenting your I.D. card.

Juniata's volleyball team is scheduled to play at 4:00 and 6:30 p.m. on Friday, and at 12:30 and 1:45 p.m. on Saturday. Finals are scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday. Come and cheer our team to victory.

Playoffs to Start

by Andy Hiscock

The I.M. (Co-Rec) Volleyball season is winding down. The only set of matches that have not been played at the time of publication are scheduled for Halloween night. The play-offs are scheduled to take place as follows: First Round of Play-offs on Sunday, November 6; Quarter Finals on Monday, Nov. 7; Semifinals on Wed., Nov. 9; and the FINALS are scheduled to take place on Thursday, November 10.

On Thursday, October 27, I watched a Gold Flight game between two teams with previously unscathed records. Going into the match, "The Trojan Warriors" and "Lord Marvel and the Principles" had 7-0 records. Of course, one team had to lose, and it happened to be "Lord Marvel" coming up on the short side of the court. Sue Silvestri played an all-around strong game (literally) for "The Warriors" by being in the right place at the right time. Bill Crause had a pretty good game serving the ball for his Lord, but they lost (15-4), (5-15), and (15-10). Both of these teams will make the post season play-offs. In the Gold Flight on Thursday, "The Tight Seals" were able to remain undefeated by defeating "Somewhere over the Net." Nancy Fieldman and Mike Ferello were a major force in holding the opposing team to only 9 points over the games. Captain Holly Snyder for "Over the Net" continuously encouraged her team, but they just couldn't get the points. In other action on Thursday night: "Natty-Bo's" defeated "The Volleyball Players" (5-15), (15-11), (15-12). . . . "Cheekers" beat "Anything's Possible" 15-8, 14-16, 15-8. . . . "N.L.S.A." beat "Rob's Rejects" by forfeit. . . . "The 4 Players" defeated "We're Closed Now" 15-12, 15-10. . . . and "The Far Side" beat "Merlin's Minstrels" 15-12, 7-15, and 15-4.

On Sunday, October 30, I recorded a match between "Who Cares" and "The DSA Stumblers." "Who Cares" decided to take interest in their situation and defeated their stumbling opposition. Craig Fernsler served up a couple of points, and Suzanne Hickle was able to clear the ball well for "Who Cares," even though Steve Lecrone had a strong game at the net. In other action on Sunday: "To Be Announced" beat "B.H. and the P." 15-8, 16-14. . . . "Trojan Warriors" defeated "The Far Side" 15-9, 13-15, 15-13. . . . "Midnight Madness" beat "Chokers" by forfeit. . . . "North American Destroyers" beat "The Esmereldas" 15-7, 15-11. . . . "Lord Marvel and the Principles" defeated "N.L.S.A." 15-11, 15-13. . . . "The Scopers" defeated "Late Comers" 3-15, 15-6, 18-16. . . . "North American Destroyers" beat "The Spiggots" 18-16, 1-15, 15-9. . . . and "We'd Rather Be Fishing" defeated "Staff Infection" 9-15, 15-6, and 15-10.

Softball

by John Surbeck

The season for softball turned out to be productive, showing a large amount of evenly matched competitive games. The season has also produced a final championship game between the two teams with the best records in the league, "The Night Crawlers" and the "Pigeons III."

Both squads made their way through the season winning the close games, exploiting their trump card experience in those games. "The Night Crawlers," a team crawling with baseball players finished an undefeated season by handling the wild-card ? team 14-3 in the semi-finals.

The Pigeons, defending their championship of last spring, coasted into the playoffs with a steady seasonal effort. The "Pigeons III" will put to use their championship experience in the final game in hopes of beating the favored "Night Crawlers."

Stickers Beaten

in semifinals

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Women's Field Hockey Team was defeated by Franklin and Marshall by the score of 2-0 in the M.A.C. semi-final championship game last Wednesday.

The lady stickers faced a very tough F&M team. F&M was ranked first among Division III teams in Pennsylvania and was ranked fourth in the nation.

The Indian defense fought off F&M's strong offensive charge in the first half. F&M had 14 penalty corners in the first half; however, they failed to score. Meanwhile, Juniata's offense was having a tough time adjusting to the high-grassed field. The score was 0-0 at the end of the first half.

In the second half, Juniata played much better, but, unfortunately came up short. About 16 minutes into the second half, an F&M player scored the game-winning goal. An insurance goal was added with about 10 seconds remaining in the game.

Overall, Juniata had a very fine year in field hockey. Their season record was 4-1-4 and they were 1-1 in the M.A.C. playoffs. This year's team was much improved over last year's squad which only won one game. Next season, Coach Hall is hoping to attain higher goals.

VOL. XXXV, NO. 8 | Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652 | November 10, 1983

Royer Mansion Studied

After playing key roles in the archaeological and use study of the historic Royer Mansion near Williamsburg, two Juniata College alumni have donated a copy of the recently completed document to the college's L.A. Beeghly Library.

Margaret J. Goodman of Altoona, a 1963 Juniata graduate, and George J. Drobnock of Mt. Union, a 1971 Juniata graduate, joined forces with archaeologist Margaret Fields and Mrs. Goodman's husband, architect A. Raymond Goodman, to undertake the eight-month study. Mrs. Goodman is a member of the board of the Blair County Historical Society, the group that commissioned the study, and assistant director of Fort Roberdeau Park. Drobnock, a preservation consultant, has worked for several area historical societies as well as state agencies.

According to Drobnock, the study, which was funded by the Blair County Historical Society, Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission and the National Trust for Historic Preservation, includes a complete history of the house and its occupants, an archaeological report, and recommends future uses for the mansion.

The structure currently belongs to the Pennsylvania Fish Commission, but the report recommends that ownership be transferred to the Blair County Historical Society. Legislation to accomplish this is now being considered in Harrisburg. Once ownership is transferred, the report proposes that the mansion be renovated and used for housing, office space and a museum for the Blair County Historical Society.

The historic mansion, home of Samuel Royer who was a prominent businessman and ironmaster at nearby Springfield Furnace, has been the target of restoration efforts recently. Drobnock noted that Juniata's archives were used for the research project, as were the talents of Dr. J. Peter Trexler, professor of geology, Paul M. Heberling, associate professor of anthropology, and several student volunteers.

In accepting the 136-page report on behalf of the college, John P. Mulvaney, technical services librarian, noted that it is a valuable addition to the college archives and an important resource volume for individuals researching local history.

Homecoming Activities Highlight Weekend

Margaret Guerrini selected as this year's queen

by Mumaw

Despite the cold weather, Juniata College's 1983 Homecoming Weekend was an eventful one for all involved. Alumni, several who graduated nearly 50 years ago, returned to campus to take part in the festivities. A large crowd of students, faculty, alumni and parents attended the football game to see the crowning of this year's queen, Miss Margaret Guerrini, escorted by Robert Maruca. Juniata's 1982 Homecoming Queen Miss Bonnie Benner, escorted by President Binder, turned over her reign during the halftime celebration.

A female representative from each class reigned along with Miss Guerrini throughout the second half of the game. The Freshman Representative was Miss Joan Jackson escorted by Dennis Mehigan. The Sophomore chosen was Miss Kelly Mehigan escorted by John Shields. The Junior Representative was Miss Margaret Evans escorted by Jeffrey Ostrowski, and Marie Glendenning, escorted by John Makdad, was the chosen Senior Representative.

Although the cold weather cancelled the Homecoming Parade through downtown Huntingdon, floats from each class got the chance to parade around the track during halftime. The Sophomore Class' "Puff the Magic Dragon" took first place. The Juniors claimed second place with "The Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe."

The tricycle races that took place on Friday afternoon proved to be a different means of entertainment for many Juniata students who never really grew up. Sherwood displayed their abilities on three wheels and succeeded in winning the races. Cloister and South took second and third place respectively.

The Homecoming Dance, held Saturday night in the Memorial Gym, entertained a crowd of nearly 300 students. The crowd danced to music provided by the top 40's band, A.K.A.

Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band

Returns to Juniata in December

Hugh Borde's World Famous Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band returns to perform at Juniata in December.

When the band was here last year they had everyone in Oller Hall dancing on the seats or in the aisles. This year the performance will be held in Juniata's Memorial Gym on Friday, Dec. 2 at 9:30.

From Port-of-Spain, Trinidad to a world tour, this amazing group of performers from Trinidad plays a repertoire of music that ranges from classical to rock and roll . . . on oil drums. This feat has astounded audiences not only because of its oil drums, but because of the unbelievable fidelity and artistic accomplishments with which they render each concert or dance number . . . whether it be modern, classical or their native Calypso. The Calypso and Reggae numbers are in a class by themselves, combined with exciting dancing and chanting as only the natives of Trinidad are capable of doing. Vocals by The Buzzing Bee, Trinidad's National Calypso Queen runner-up and the new Reggae sensation Emile.

Born from the desperate days following World War II when it was not possible to get their instruments or money to play their beloved Calypso music, the natives of Trinidad discovered that abandoned oil drums could be used for musical tunes. Thus began the original band of which this is the present day outgrowth into an organization that has played such pockets of sophistication as the Rockefeller Plaza, Central Park and Lincoln Center Mall in New York City, the Pan American Union in Washington, D.C., the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts and many more.

Through the efforts of Liberace, the band was invited to tour with him for two years. Throughout this time they gained the much needed exposure for advancement in their field and now extensively tour nine months of every year.

Hugh Borde, Maestro of the band, led them to victory at the 1964 Steelband Music Festival in Trinidad. He also led the National Steelband of Trinidad and Tobago at the Commonwealth Arts Festival in Great Britain. Borde is a recipient of The Humming Bird Medal, a national award in his native Trinidad for his development in the field of Steelband music. He is one of the founders of the Steelband Movement in 1950 and has been vice-president of the movement for three years.

The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band has many accomplishments behind them. They have had command performances for the last two presidents of the U.S. and two command performances for the Queen of England. The band has performed at over 40 major state fairs as well as 325 colleges and universities. And they received a 1972 Grammy Award for their gold album, "Liberace Presents."

Homecoming '83: A Poor Choice

The decision to have Homecoming on the weekend before the last week of classes was an exceptionally poor decision. Many students were unable to participate in the pre-Homecoming festivities, not to mention the Homecoming festivities themselves, due to the immense workload that tends to build up at the end of the term.

There are a number of reasons why Homecoming was so poorly timed. The most basic reason was that the weekend took place before the final week of classes. This is a time when many papers are due and final tests take place. With so much work to do who could afford to take time to enjoy Homecoming? And, if you decided to enjoy Homecoming, how many courses did you have to drop as a result?

Not only was the timing of Homecoming unfair to the students who wanted to participate, but it was unfair to those students who had to work on Homecoming. These students became involved in Homecoming because they enjoy it; however, there was very little enjoyment in this year's Homecoming preparation. One of the purposes of Homecoming should be to enjoy it; that purpose was rarely fulfilled.

Also, Homecoming was late on the calendar year. As the entrants made final preparations for a parade that never was, snow was falling from the sky. It was too cold to enjoy yourself. Even if the football game was better, The Juniatian seriously doubts if anybody would have watched the entire game. The Juniatian wonders how many colds were caught by float people as they paraded during the game in their costumes in the 40° weather. It was quite ridiculous.

Now, the argument has been that this was the only weekend in which Homecoming could be held. But, why is that so? It is understood that Homecoming is selected on the basis of having a home football game while Penn State has an away game. Yet, for the next two of our three Homecomings, Penn State has a home football game. So, there goes that argument.

Next, it should be understood that this year's football schedule was not the best to work with. Four home games does not leave much to choose from. Why did we only have four games? Don't we have any control over when we have home games and when we don't? The Juniatian understands that the schedules are selected a couple of years ahead of time; but, does that excuse those who decide when Homecoming is from the responsibility of ensuring a proper time for Homecoming to take place? The Juniatian thinks not!

Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Letter to Editor,

We will not even give a counter argument to last week's editorial titled "Let the Students Decide" until the facts are straight. We believe that this would be beneficial to all involved.

First of all, the decision regarding protective eye-wear was decided by the STUDENT AFFAIRS COUNCIL. This is a college committee which sets policies for all non-academic procedures and rules. It is chaired by the Dean of Student Services and comprised of the Director of Programming, two faculty representatives, Chairperson of Centerboard, President of Student Government and two dorm senators. We never realized that these people constituted Student Government. We were under the impression that Student Government consisted of students across campus.

We will not deny that there were Student Government representatives on this Council. However, to lay the responsibility of the protective eye-wear decision solely on Student Government is ridiculous. Especially when the EDITOR-IN-CHIEF of the Juniatian was informed prior to the publication of last week's issue, who and what organization made the decision.

We would certainly hope that The Juniatian is not purposely MISREPRESENTING facts in order to stir up a controversy. A vital organization such as the newspaper has a responsibility to the students and entire campus audience of handling its affairs with responsibility, accuracy and maturity. We have failed to see this done in last week's editorial.

This "common sense" decision of S.A.C. is not an unusual nor unreasonable request. This policy is found in professional racquetball clubs and numerous colleges and universities. For example, Albright College and Penn State University have this policy.

There are many reasons for this policy. We will just highlight the two most important ones:

1. For the protection of all people who use the racquetball courts. The policy is not aimed solely at the students.
2. In case a legal suit was brought against the school because of a very serious injury. The school as a private institution has a right to protect its interests.

Finally, if The Juniatian does not want Student Government to misinterpret their duties, Student Government would appreciate The Juniatian not MISREPRESENTING the facts.

Sincerely yours,

Letter to the Editor:

This letter is in response to the editorial of Nov. 3, 1983 and the newly accepted policy of requiring eye protection for those who make use of Juniata College's Racquetball facilities.

It can be implied from your editorial that there is a great discrepancy on campus between what the students want and what the Student Affairs Council thinks the students need.

Without a doubt, an individual is many times faced with a situation in which what one needs outweighs what he wants, but we feel that under the present circumstances this sentiment does not apply. We stand in full agreement with the points made in the editorial of Nov. 3, as do a great number of people that we have spoken to around campus.

We find it very difficult to accept this ruling passed down by Student Affairs Council, since it was done without first informing the student body of the proposed regulation that it was considering. Had the decision of the Student Affairs Council been based on some kind of evidence, some kind of student poll or survey, or had it been explained to the student body that the administration was concerned about the possibility of becoming involved in litigation concerning injuries, then we could accept any decision rendered by these organizations. Yet there was no such information made available to the student body.

Our point is that Student Affairs Council has been established to work with our best interest in mind and yet when a rigid regulation is passed in this manner, we have no input into the decision making process despite the fact that the decision that is reached may greatly affect me.

Perhaps the Student Affairs Council should consider some of the more pressing problems that lie a little closer to the heart of this institution of learning. Since it is the tenth week of the term and final exams are much closer than anyone would care to admit, maybe Student Affairs Council should examine the shortage of study space on this campus rather than improving the atmosphere of our recreation facilities.

Of course, recreation is an essential part of our life-style here at Juniata, but we find the need for a place to study a great deal more urgent since we are here to gain a diploma, not a gold medal. It is our feeling that the Student Affairs Council has over-stepped its bounds by imposing this regulation on the student body of Juniata College without first having

by Kathleen Achor

It has been brought to my attention that the title of the column that I am responsible for biweekly, carries a misnomer. Along Muddy Run, I am told, has become obsolete. True, at one time this title was very appropriate — back in the days when the sewage-infested water ran right through our campus, giving us all that "back to nature" feeling. But I wouldn't be surprised if there were freshmen, or maybe even some sophomores, who haven't the slightest idea what Muddy Run really is. I will not address that here. If you don't know, ask an upperclassman.

The point is, Muddy Run just isn't that central to our lives anymore. Sure, we get a glimpse of it at East House, or maybe on our treks to Weis Market. But this column is supposed to be somehow related to life at Juniata College, no matter how abstractly (as admittedly some of my columns have been and will be). Muddy Run has become peripheral. Secondary. That which was once important enough to have a weekly column named in its honor has been wiped from the daily view of most of us. And yet, in accordance with the political conservatism to be found in abundance within our student body, we cling to an old title, standing firm in the face of the winds of change.

Okay, so now you're probably thinking "Great. Everyone complains, but no one ever has any solutions. What do you propose we do about this dilemma? It certainly isn't important to us."

Well, I have given it some thought. It's tough, you know, because at first I was grateful that all my columns would be pre-titled and I wouldn't have to spend half an hour struggling, trying to think of something appropriately witty to catch the eye, to make Juniatians want to read me on their way to dinner. Titles can often be an asset, but when they turn out wrong you feel really stupid and then there isn't that much you can do about it. So for my sake, as well as yours, I still agree that we should stick with a regular, easily identifiable title.

At first, I began trying to think of something that all of we diverse Juniata students have in common. Along Beeghley Library came to mind. No, too academic. Along Baker Refectory. No, too many negative connotations. Along Line at the Post Office. Sorry.

Suddenly, it came to me. Like a blinding flash of light across the sky. Well, maybe more like a light bulb above my head. Okay, so it was just your average idea.

What was it, after all, that our section of Muddy Run sacrificed its life for? What was it that made our friend go underground? When we sacrificed our bit of nature for progress, what was it that we got in return?

Yes friends, I am talking about the Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center. Our pride and joy. Our potential-student seducer. Our dedicated shrine.

For indeed, is this not central to our campus? Is it not true that when the construction crews came in, Muddy Run ran out? No, I do not propose to call this column Along the Kennedy Sports and Recreation Center. But I do suggest that we call it Along Fred's Gym.

Everyone knows what Fred's Gym is. Everyone knows where it is. Even we off-campus seldom-seen folk usually travel by That Building at least once a day. Only the most naive of freshmen haven't figured this one out yet. But ask them about Muddy Run.

Now you may argue that this title, too, may one day become obsolete. Even if Fred turns out to be

Grenada Students Take Loss

Students "rescued" from St. George's Medical School on Grenada by the multi-national invasion force last week in the middle of their terms may not get their tuitions back, and may have to continue their schooling elsewhere, if they can at all.

"Right now, we're concentrating on making sure all the students who left (the island) arrived here safely," says Mildred Eckhoff, a spokeswoman at St. George's headquarters in Bay Shore, New York. "Then we'll assess the situation of what to do about their schooling."

"We're trying to make alternative plans for them to complete their semester, at least, but we don't know where that will be," she adds.

It probably won't be at any U.S. med schools, though.

"Most of the 17,000 med school openings each year are pretty well filled up in advance," says Dr. Ira Singer of the American Medical Association's (AMA) Department of Undergraduate Medicine.

Singer speculates the 650-some students from St. George's might end up at one of the other off-short med schools "set up to attract Americans."

The AMA, Singer says, "discourages students from going to medical schools abroad, and we tell them that if they must do so, to pick a country as developed as our own so they are technically at about the same level."

But Americans do go to such "off-shore" med schools "because they had so much trouble getting into U.S. medical schools," Eckhoff says.

She adds that students typically spend two years at St. George's, which opened in 1977 and runs under a private trusteeship based on Long Island, and "then transfer to

Sisters Share Academic, Extracurricular Activities

by Ron Renzini

It is not unusual for siblings to attend the same college. For the three Palmer sisters, it seems to be the natural thing to do.

This year, Cynthia, Dorothea and Deborah Palmer of Bel Air, Md., transferred to Juniata College as members of the junior class. Their selection of Juniata as the place to further their education is not the only common link for the three sisters.

Cindy, 22, and her twin sisters, Dodie and Debbie, 21, all came to Juniata from Garrett County College, Md., where they graduated with associate degrees in math sciences.

All three sisters are interested in outdoor activities and have all declared environmental science as their program of emphasis at Juniata. Their common interests also have led them to enroll in astronomy this term.

Raised near the coast for part of their childhood, the Palmer sisters have always shown an interest in natural and marine sciences. Debbie and Dodie both worked part time at an environmental center during their high school years.

They followed this interest in sciences through high school and into their two-year associate degrees at Garrett. "We decided that we wanted to further our education in the sciences," says Dodie, "so we all started looking at different college's to get our bachelor degrees."

"We didn't originally decide to attend the same college for our bachelors, but Juniata was recommended to us by several different sources," says Cindy.

One of the principal people who influenced the women was their biology professor at Garrett County College, who according to Debbie, had heard of Juniata's "fine science program and overall academic excellence."

So after looking at different college's in Maryland and Pennsylvania, the women applied to Juniata. "Cindy was accepted first and then we applied and were accepted a few months later," says Dodie.

It should come as no surprise that all three women are living in Question: What do you think of the Freshman Slave Auction?

Wendy Isbister (senior): "I think it's a good way for freshman to make money before Homecoming. And it doesn't cost them anything."

Debbie Sandage (freshman): "I was a slave. It was fun! I felt silly standing there, but I had a good time. I was bought for $4.00 and I have to type. I also bought a slave."

Patty Renwick (junior): "I've never gone to it, but I know it's good for the freshmen. I'm on Student Government so I know the freshmen need money to get their class started. It helps them get united also."

Phil Farrugia (senior): "I went to it and it was interesting as usual. The crowd was excited. Our apartment tried to buy a slave to clean our bathroom but we couldn't afford the price."

A "Trojan" Success

by Kathy Manzella

As the curtains opened for the Theater Juniata's Fall production of "The Trojan Women", the hard work of Director Lu Van Keuren and the set crew could immediately be seen.

The play opened with Poseidon, in a role shared alternately by Jim Younkin and Kirk Fleck, standing among the ruins of Troy against the red glowing sky before dawn. In this powerful opening scene, Poseidon amidst thunder, lightning, and wind, proclaimed the doom that has come over his city. Overtaken in battle by the Greeks, he fears for the fate of the women and children who have been captured.

The cast members were led by the excellent acting skills of Wendy Whitehaus. In her role as Hecuba, Queen of Troy, she captured the attention of the audience with her first lines, and kept them captivated until the final scene. Stephen Meyer portrayed the Greek messenger Talthybius in a very authoritative, yet sensitive manner, as he informed the women that they have each been assigned to different men. Strong performances were also given by Cheryl Kimbrough in her role as the Leader of the Trojan Women, and by Kari Dubbel as one of the Trojan Women.

Although there were some particularly slow scenes, the play was especially heightened in a few places. Jocelyn Fowler gave a strong performance as Andromache in the scene when she learned that her son by Hector was to be killed. The final scene brought a climax of emotions as the women boarded their ships to the home of their captors.

gained some input from the students at large.

Since a large percentage of the student body makes use of the college's Racquetball facilities, we feel that it is only fitting that the students be allowed to have some input into a decision of this type.

Perhaps we should all just sit back and take a close look at the Student Affairs Council and see just where their priorities lie and who is influenced by these priorities.

Letter to the Editor,

Your editorial denouncing the new protective eyewear requirement conveys the idea that the administration is losing faith in the habits of students to make responsible decisions on their own.

Unfortunately, this must be true. Our eyes are the tools through which we acquire most of the information which our environments have to offer. Certainly, we value our eyesight. We all realize that studying computer science and pre-medicine will be of little use if our eyes are permanently closed by errant racquetballs.

There are, however, times when we all take the gift of stereoscopic color-sensitive vision for granted. Although one of these times may be when we step into the court, the decision to wear eye protection must be made by the individual.

I believe that it is wise to provide eye protection for racquetball players, but the administration need not be present to place goggles on the players before a game. Aside from the fact that this requirement could make the administration liable for subsequent eye damage, I somehow am reminded of parents at the beach telling their children not to go in water over their knees.

Jason Roberts

Letter to the Editor,

Regarding last week's editorial concerning the Student Affairs Council decision to require eye protection on the racquetball court:

I have always held the opinion that the Student Affairs Council was designed to represent and act on the behalf of the J.C. student body. If so, why didn't the Student Affairs Council look to Juniata students for input in this decision? Instead they legislated a decision that is affecting a major portion of the student body without any consultation as to our desires or feelings in the matter.

Perhaps the Student Affairs Council should review their objectives and the representative power that was appointed to them.

Furthermore, I quite agree with The Juniatian's view that wearing goggles should be left to the student's discretion. I feel that the Student Affairs Council's action has demeaned my sense of judgment and responsibility for my own person.

the same residence hall on campus. Dodie and Debbie are even rooming together. And according to Cindy, "It (living in a residence hall) is different from having your own room at home, but you feel a lot closer to the college, like you're an important part of it. Living in a residence hall has been a real positive experience."

All three women have found extra-curricular activities on campus to match their hobbies and interests. All three women have joined Laughing Bush, the college's outing service, and are looking forward to the whitewater rafting trips planned by the organization. Both Dodie and Debbie are certified river raft guides for the Cheat River in West Virginia, not far from their home.

The women also participate in intramural sports, an activity in which more than 80% of Juniata's students take part. They are trying their skill at intramural volleyball this term.

Asked to sum up her feelings about her experiences at Juniata to date, Cindy says, "I'm really enjoying myself here." Dodie and Debbie both smile while agreeing with Cindy. That shouldn't come as a shock though, for the Palmer sisters seem to enjoy everything they do together, and Juniata gives them the chance to do it in a close, personal setting which serves as a catalyst for their mutual interests.

Prisoner's Enrollment Raises Questions

Starting in January, a convicted killer may be starting classes at the University of Northern Colorado, and UNC President Robert Dickeson doesn't like it.

Many other college presidents and campus security officials probably won't like it either, but there are probably "thousands" of convicted criminals out on work-release programs on the nation's campuses, suggests Dan Keller, head of the University of Louisville's police and the nationwide Campus Crime Prevention Programs.

Dickeson protests that having Thomas Courtney, convicted last year of negligent homicide in the killing of two people, on campus without being consulted before he arrives raises "serious questions" about being able to maintain campus security.

UNC found out about Courtney's enrollment "through the media and the campus radio station," says university spokesman Tom Barber.

"Once a person has paid his debt to society, I'm not sure it's appropriate" to inform a school of a student's criminal record, Keller says. "But when they're on work-release, I think campus law enforcement should be informed, and I think the responsibility (for informing) should be in the corrections facilities."

Keller adds prison officials don't always want to tell schools about work-release students because it might hurt the prisoner's re-integration into society.

"Convicted felons don't have many rights," agrees Darrel Semler, an attorney with the National Organization on Legal Problems of Education, "but they do have rights of privacy. If you did tell (administrators) about these prisoners, you'd violate their privacy rights."

But Keller also points out that "a lot of students, including these people, are often employed by colleges in sometimes rather sensitive areas" where valuables are stored, drugs may be kept, or even in dorms, where people are often vulnerable.

Keller also figures he may have students out on work-release from a prison 25 miles from the Louisville campus. "I'm confident I've got work-release people on this campus right now who I don't know about."

UNC's Barber wants legislatures to "make this (placement of work-release prisoners) a little smoother, like finding out about it before the judge makes a decision."

immortal, sooner or later he will tire of this campus and want to move on. After all, with the exception of a few die-hards, most of us only last about four years. Eventually there will be a freshman class having no idea who Fred is.

And perhaps, readers, you are correct. And then my argument would remain, you gotta roll with the times. And if a dyed-in-the-wool nonathletic type like myself can see the need, under the circumstances, to change the column title to Aiong Fred's Gym, I would think that it would be obvious to most everyone else.

Then again, as someone who rather likes the title Along Muddy Run, perhaps I should try for the more difficult, but perhaps more appealing option. Who needs to change the title if we can change the circumstances? Why not start a Muddy Run Restoration Project? Perhaps the murky waters could be rerouted to be visible once more across our increasingly concrete campus. If this project could begin immediately, we seniors could still be around to get nostalgic about it, and the underclassmen would have a chance to experience Juniata the "natural way." We could even dedicate it.

Chances are this project could be completed by the start of winter term. Muddy Run could be restored while we're on our term break. Hell, whole buildings have been known to disappear in that time.

Think of it, readers! We could stamp out student apathy with this one! Combining our forces we could initiate a mass propaganda campaign in support of our cause. Muddy Run t-shirts, buttons, posters, demonstrations! The powers-that-be would have no choice but to give in. But to have this injustice reversed by the start of next term, we'll have to work fast. And that means — you guessed it — your financial support as well as enthusiasm.

Send contributions and pledges to: MUDDY RUN RESTORATION PROJECT, Box 1052. Every penny counts . . . don't be cheap.

Kingston Medical College on St. Vincent's Island or to a hospital in the U.S. or Great Britain for clinical training."

Before practicing medicine in the U.S., St. George's graduates must pass the Education Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates' test.

Only 82 percent of the school's grads have passed the test over the last three years, Eckhoff points out.

The American medical establishment frowns on schools like St. George's because "they're strictly for-profit, business operations," Singer says.

"A medical school in this country," he points out, "is an academic institution, usually part of a university."

Among "these so-called offshore schools," Singer says, "there are several in the Dominican Republic, one in Dominica, one at St. Lucia, and a number in Mexico" to which the displaced St. George's students might transfer eventually.

Eckhoff says St. George's has made no decision about what, if any, refund it will make to its rescued students, and won't make a decision until it figures out what alternative it will furnish them.

Tough Homecoming Loss; J.C. Loses 34-14

by Joe Scialabba

The Juniata Indians were on the right track for three quarters on Saturday, but Susquehanna steamed to twenty points in the fourth quarter to derail the Tribe 34-14 before a bundled-up Homecoming Weekend crowd at College Field.

With the victory, the nationally-ranked Crusaders gained at least a tie for the Middle Atlantic Conference championship as they raised their league and season record to 7-0-1. Juniata is now 1-8 on the year and 0-7 in the MAC.

Leading only 14-6 through three quarters, the Crusaders put-away the Indians with three scores in the fourth period.

After Steve Miller intercepted a Todd Kaden pass at the Juniata 24 yard line and returned it to the JC 6, Susquehanna scored with 11:29 left on a 5-yard run by Bob Shaara.

On their next series the Crusaders traveled 50 yards in eight plays. Staying on the ground for all but the final 14 yards they went into the end zone when QB Earl Fullerton passed to Tom Bartiglio. The visitors took a 27-6 lead with 5:14 to go.

Fullerton went to the air only one time in the next Susquehanna possession but it again reached the endzone. Jeff Miller caught the 21-yard scoring toss to cap a four play, 52 yard, drive with 2:54 left.

The offensive success of the Crusaders was not as easy as they may have liked it to be as the Juniata defense played stingy and tough all day long. However, the inconsistent Indian offense failed to hold the ball long enough to give the JC defense much of a break in the second half and the Susquehanna offensive locomotive simply plowed-through the tired Tribe in the fourth period as a bruising Susquehanna running attack teamed with an efficient passing game to end any hope of what was a solid JC upset try.

The visitors jumped out to an early 14-0 lead on touchdowns on their first two possessions of the game.

The first score followed a 13 play, 70 yard, march to paydirt with 6:57 left in the first quarter. Hank Belcolle, the Crusader rushing workhorse all day in gaining 146 yards on 30 carries, dove in for the touchdown from a yard away. Todd McCarthy, who made four of five extra point kicks, added the seventh Crusader point. McCarthy would later miss a 22-yard field goal try in the 3rd quarter plus have a 35-yard attempt blocked by Dave Murphy just before halftime.

The score was quickly 14-0 when Fullerton rolled right and then scampered 27 yards for the second Susquehanna touchdown. It came with 3:36 left in the first period.

The cold November air finally awakened the shell-shocked Homecoming hosts and let the Indians put a scare into the favored guests.

Juniata got great field position on its first second quarter possession as an intentional grounding penalty and a 30 net-yard punt set up the Tribe at the SU 32. It did not go to waste.

Kaden hit Murphy with passes of 14 and 11 yards to get Indian first downs and then finished the five play scoring drive on a three-yard option-keep to the endzone.

Mike Schaffner missed the placement try but the lead was cut to 14-6 with 11:58 until halftime. The Indians had a great chance to get closer later in the half but came up empty.

Steve Haley deflected a fourth down Crusader pass to stop the visitors on downs at the Juniata 19 yard line to start an impressive Indian drive that covered 60 yards in 12 plays but ended without a score.

With Kaden throwing a pair of passes to both Murphy and Morgan Johns and a single connection with Frank Briner, the Tribe marched to the SU 20 yard line before a confused fourth down play ended up three yards short of the sticks.

The Indians' failure to score may have been the key to a less confident showing the second half.

The Tribe offense, in a scoreless third period, never gave their defense a breather, fumbling on the first two possessions and punting on the next two. An interception on the first fourth quarter try was the beginning of the end.

Mike Culver, in at quarterback for Kaden, and Murphy did connect for a 75-yard touchdown with 5:14 left in the game but it was too little, too late. Kevin Welch, the extra point holder, rolled with the fake kick for the two-point conversion to make it 27-14.

An onside kick effort was covered by the drawn-up Crusaders, who then added their final score to pad the winning margin.

Susquehanna rolled for 269 rushing yards on 62 efforts with bruising Belcolle the main man. The winners picked-up 110 yards in the air on an eight for 14 day. Fullerton had both TD tosses.

Juniata rushed for only 57 yards on 26 tries but gained 207 through the cold wind, putting the ball in flight via 31 passes. The Tribe completed 14 throws.

Kaden was 11 of 24 for 117 yards and suffered three interceptions. Culver hit on three of seven attempts in relief for 90 yards and the long touchdown to Murphy.

Murphy was the top receiver in the game, catching seven for 148 yards and one TD. Johns caught two for 31 Juniata yards.

The Indians' five turnovers to Susquehanna's single fumble was a very big key. Also, the Crusaders ran 76 plays to the Tribe's 57 offensive tries in eating up over 35 minutes of possession time and effectively wearing-down the brave, but bruised, Juniata defense.

The Indians finish-off the season on Saturday at home against Upsala. Kickoff is set for 1:30 at College Field.

V-Ball Playoffs

by Andy Hiscock

The First Round of Fall Co-Recreational Volleyball was started on Sunday, November 6. The top four teams from each of the three flights made the play-offs. The First Round will be completed on Sunday, Nov. 6, and from there the remaining teams will compete in the Quarter Finals on Monday, Nov. 7. On Wed., Nov. 9, the four remaining teams will meet up in the Semifinals and the two winners will enter the Finals on Thursday, November 10 at 7:00 P.M. All are encouraged to attend.

I was able to catch the four First Round Matches by running back and forth between the two courts. Two of the four matches went down to the third and final game to decide a winner. "The DSA Stumblers" from the Blue Flight were able to defeat the Gold Flight's "Lord Marvel and the Principles" in two games (15-4); (15-12). The scores don't give a true account of the games. Both teams were working hard to set each other up and place the ball where the other team wasn't. L. Hocker and L. Shriver were able to work together well for "The Stumblers" and Bill Craure put up a valiant effort for B.H. In another game "We'd Rather Be Fishing" (Blue Flight) played "Natty-Bo's" (Green Flight). Todd Graybill was serving well for "The Fishers" and Laura Treese was able to set up the front line during the three game battle. Trish Hocker had a few good serves for "Natty" but they were unable to overcome the "Fish", losing in three games (15-1), (14-16), (15-11). "We're Closed Now" defeated "Anything's Possible" on Sunday night also. Mary McDougal and Andy Frishkorn both held their own at the net for "Closed Now" which helped them to defeat the possibilities (14-16), (15-5), (15-13). Mike Derk should get honorable mention for his effort for "Anything's Possible." In the last Playoff game played on Sunday the Blue Flight's "To Be Announced" met with "A Fresh Start" from the Gold Flight. Lee Ann Arden had her team "Announced" and ready to go because they were able to beat Kirk Fleck's team "A Fresh Start" (15-11), (15-4). Dave Wagner and Kim Detwiler seemed to be all over the court for "To Be Announced" which pumped up their teammates. Pam Geenaur showed some good bumping ability for "A Fresh Start" but it was all for naught.

There will be other volleyball and Intramural Leagues started during the school year and I would encourage all those who have some spare time to get involved. Look for registration sheets upon return from Thanksgiving vacation.

MAC Champions Again

Girls take 3rd consecutive title

by Suzanne Hickle

For the first time in history, Juniata proudly held the Mid-Atlantic Conference Volleyball Championship tournament this past weekend. Ten teams from the conference participated in this tournament, trying to receive the M.A.C. championship title.

Juniata began action Friday night against Moravian, beating them two games to zero, 15-9, 15-2. In the first game, Juniata started out behind, but came back by playing an excellent offensive game. Jan Trissler started out the next game by serving eight consecutive points. With this dominant lead, Moravian could not overcome the Indians.

In the next game of pool play, Juniata played against highly competitive Gettysburg. Juniata, fired up and ready to play had no trouble winning 15-7 and 15-5.

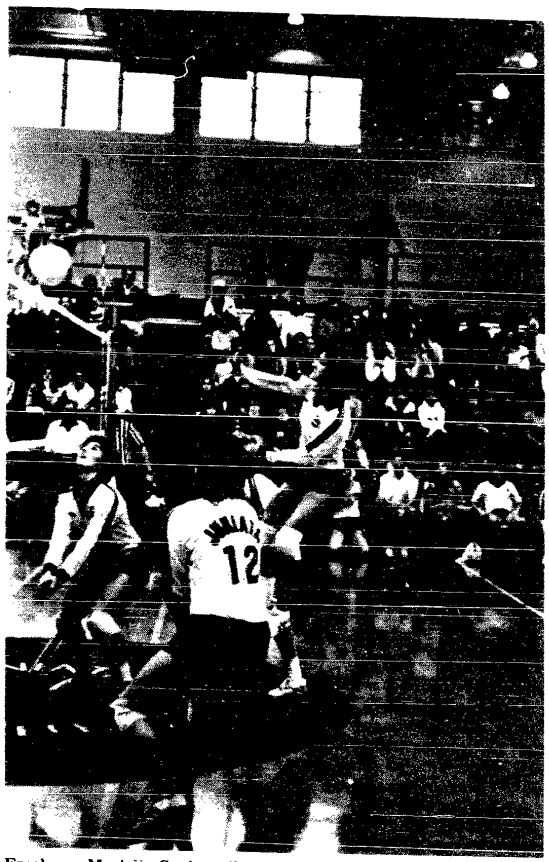
Action started Saturday morning with Juniata playing Scranton University. Juniata spiked right through the Lady Royals winning 15-3 and 15-5.

Pool play ended Saturday afternoon with Juniata playing Muhlenburg. Juniata again came out on top beating the Mules 15-7 and 15-11.

With Juniata coming out of pool play with an undefeated record of 4-0, they entered the Semi-Finals playing against Elizabethtown. After a short period of play, Juniata took two easy games, 15-9 and 15-2.

The championship match began at 6:30 with two teams out of the same pool Juniata and Gettysburg met again at the net. The first two games were easy wins for Juniata with scores of 15-3 and 15-5. The match was the best of five, so Juniata needed one more win to become the M.A.C. champs for the third consecutive year. Gettysburg under great pressure gave Juniata a hard time, but they still couldn't defeat the Indians. Juniata took the M.A.C. title by winning the game 15-12.

Going into the tournament, Juniata was ranked 13th nationally, which will be changed in the new rankings. Juniata now has an automatic bid to the NCAA Division III regional play-offs, which will be taking place soon. Juniata's overall record is 29-11.



Freshman Mariella Gacka spikes the ball as Carolyn Stanbaugh (in the middle) and Tracey DeBlase (No. 12) prepare in case of a block. The women went on to win their third consecutive M.A.C. Championship.

Sports' Corner Editorial

by Mark Shaw

Well, here we are at the end of another term. These terms seem to fly faster, the older you get. Just think, you only have to put up with my babblings for one more term. This week I guess I'll try to deal with a very touchy subject — our "football" team. Yes, I have had to succumb to popular demand and, more or less, write an editorial about the team.

I do not know why the football team has evaded public criticism before this, but I guess we were all hoping for some kind of miracle to happen — like maybe we were having a nightmare. Unfortunately, however, this is not the case. Yes, we must admit it, our team is 1-? (who really knows); and the team we beat isn't worth mentioning!

Now, what has been the problem? Is the team really that bad? It is understood that there are many underclassmen and that the team is a little inexperienced, but is that a viable excuse for such a poor season? What about last season's flop? Why did a team, which had been playing quite well suddenly fizzle out? Who is at fault?

There are two basic groups associated with the team: the players and the coaches. Apparently, one or both of these groups are not doing very well. Let's take the players first. It is widely known that some players go out and party the night before their games; is this any way to behave? I don't think so. As far as I know, drinking does not improve sports ability, what do you think? In fairness, it should also be noted that there have been many injuries, they do play an important role.

Next is the coaching. Has it been what it should? What about the number of players who have quit the team — why? The current players are the recruits of the current coaching staff, yet they have failed to produce results. Apparently, the coaching staff is not properly motivating their players to maximize production. I think the football program needs to evaluate themselves to see where they've gone wrong.

Kickers at 2-12

but season not a loss

by Cathy Harwick

The Indians travelled to Division II Shippensburg University, Monday October 31, to play the final match of the season. Coach Klaus Jaeger described Shippensburg as being the more experienced and faster team, causing Juniata to be mostly on the defensive. Shippensburg took the Indians into halftime with a 0-2 score and came back to score one more goal before sending Juniata home with a 0-3 loss.

Jaeger was very pleased with the season, which he considered a learning experience for his young team, who he felt pulled together and played smarter, more intense, soccer toward the end of the season. Even though this year's team did not improve the overall record of 2-12 from last year's record, Jaeger doesn't overlook the fact that this season made strides for further improvement and that this year's team was the best team yet in the five years soccer has been a varsity sport.

Next year Jaeger hopes for another strong freshman force t add to the eleven starters which will be returning. The team will greatly miss seniors captain Jeff 'Doc' Dougherty, Gary Steckley, and Steve DiMarco, who have made a tremendous contribution to the team and were, in essence, the backbone of the team.

The team, however, did not stay idle Homecoming weekend. Friday, they saw action against the international students. Everyone had fun, but the Indians beat the foreign students 4-1.

This was not the end of Juniata's post-season action. Saturday marked the first annual alumni match and the season's finale. Fourteen alumni returned to take the Indians into two five-minute overtime periods to have the end result of a 1-1 tie.

The soccer team would like to send its thanks to all the fans who have supported them throughout the season.

MAC's a Loss

by Paul Bomberger

On Homecoming Weekend, the Women's and Men's cross country teams ran their most important meet of the season — the MAC Championship at Lebanon Valley. It was damp and rainy, not ideal race conditions.

"We did the best we could under the circumstances," Coach Latimore commented.

His comments were exemplified by the performance of his "ace" Carolyn Andre. Andre ignored the cold and wet weather and cruised to a 4th place out of 98 runners. Carolyn earned a much deserved medal for her heroics.

The other Indian runners also gave their best efforts: Chris Schleiden, Sue Gill, Sue Richards, Denise Cutillo and Carol Tendall, finishing in that order.

This Saturday, the Harriers will return to Lebanon Valley and face much of the same competition in the Eastern Regionals, which is the qualifying meet for the National Championship being held at Newport News, Virginia, on November 19.

In Men's action, Mark Royer paced the Indians, covering the five mile course in 26:45. Freshman, Jim Gandy was right behind Royer with a 27:02 clocking. The other JC runners finishing behind Royer and Gandy were: Andy Marsh, John Burr, Dave Long, Ken Kramer and Andy Kortyna.

Coach Brown remarked on the meet, "Our runners ran in a pack, which pleased me. I believe we improved over last year."

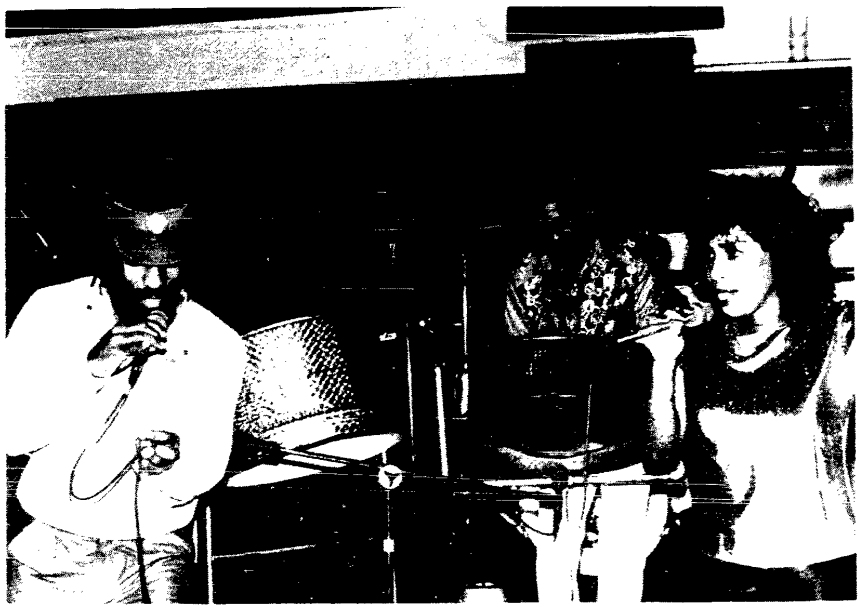
The JUNIATIAN

VOL. XXXV, NO. 9 | Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652 | December 8, 1983



The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band performed to about 375 receptive students and professors last Friday. The calypso and reggae band was so successful that they were also asked to perform on Saturday night and possibly come back this spring.

Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band

May return in the spring

by Kathy Manzella

Traveling amidst a heavy snow storm en route from Toledo to Huntingdon, the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band arrived late Friday night to find many people anxiously awaiting their performance.

The performance, sponsored by the Concert Committee proved to be very successful. About 375 people, young and old alike, showed up to enjoy the Calypso and Reggae band perform. Moving the event from Oller Hall to the gym was very worthwhile as students enthusiastically danced the night away to the various music performed on the oil drums. "The Reggae Man" was especially well received by the audience during the performance. For their encore performance, the Steel Band performed a rendition of the best Calypso song of the 1983 Mardi Gras entitled "Rebecca."

The Trinidad Tripoli Band left the stage followed by a trail of Juniata students expressing their thanks and inviting them to return next year. The band members enjoyed themselves performing here at Juniata so they agreed to perform on Saturday during the Volleyball game. The band helped drum up school spirit in support of our Women's Volleyball team by performing before the game. Students "Reggaed" across the mezzanines and danced in the stands in unison to the beat of the band.

Concert Committee Chairman Rick Burgen reported that the band enjoyed performing at Juniata and they found the people to be very receptive. Plans are currently being discussed for another performance by the steel band to be held sometime this spring. A return concert will be held depending upon funds, and the availability of the band. Upon a return in the spring, the band will perform a teaser at lunch, possibly play the soccer team in the afternoon, and then give a concert at night.

Originally from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, the band has toured with Liberace, and received a Grammy Award in 1972 for their album, "Liberace Presents." They have

by Maureen Morrissey

A record number of Juniata students pulled all-nighters last week as they waited in line for a table for the Madrigal Dinner.

The dinner, which is tomorrow, is said by some to be the "must attend" event of the school year. It is held in Baker Refectory and Tote and there is not enough room for all students. Thus, the long line.

Carola Gaertner, who was in charge of the table selection this year, thought the competition for tables was comparably stiff. One reason for this she thought was the actual sign-up time. This year's sign-ups were at 11:00 a.m. instead of past years' 1:00 p.m. This was for those students with afternoon labs.

Carola remembers how the person first on line last year arrived at 5:30. If anyone arrived at 5:30 this year, they would have found themselves a considerable distance away from the front. People started to arrive at 3:00 and there was a long line already by 5:00.

If these hours seem outrageous,

The Tensions in Lebanon Discussed by Randall Elliott

by Cinny Cooper

Tension in the Middle East, specifically in Lebanon, was the topic of discussion at a lecture Tuesday night, November 29.

Randall T. Elliott, a political and military analyst with the Bureau of Intelligence and Research, U.S. State Department, discussed "American Foreign Policy in the Middle East and Lebanon" at the 8:15 lecture in the faculty lounge.

Elliott served with the U.S. Army in Germany and Vietnam. In Vietnam he was company commander with the 101st Airborne Division and the 25th Division in Vietnam. Elliott has received the Bronze Star for Valor, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and the Purple Heart.

In the U.S. Elliott has worked for the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He joined the Foreign Service in 1976, and recently was assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Israel where he served as a political-military officer.

While in the Middle East, Elliott participated in negotiations for the Sinai withdrawal, airbase construction talks in Israel and the establishment of the Multi-national Force and Observers in the Sinai.

Prior to his lecture Mr. Elliott spoke to Professor Vocke's Intro to Politics class Tuesday afternoon on the making of American foreign policy. In his half hour lecture he explained the process of making foreign policy through governmental departments, agencies, and bureaus. In an hour long question and answer period he elaborated on this process, commented on various government jobs and policies, and further explained the job of the State Department.

In his lecture Tuesday night Mr. Elliott spoke to approximately 100 professors, students, and others on Lebanon and the Middle East.

Beginning his lecture Mr. Elliott addressed U.S. involvement in Lebanon and jokingly remarked, "I don't have any idea". why the U.S. is in Lebanon. More seriously he went on to site the removal of foreign states and influences as the chief reason for U.S. involvement.

Elliott explained four levels of conflict in Lebanon. There is a "deep, bitter" inter-religious conflict that has been going on for centuries. Secondly, there is an ethnic conflict between the Turks, Armenians, Arabs, and other ethnic factions in Lebanon. Also, the number of international players in the Lebanese game has created conflict. Approximately 10,000 Israelis, 50,000 Syrians, 8,000 United Nations representatives, 10,000-15,000 Palestinians, and numerous multi-national forces are presently in Lebanon. The last level of conflict is the intranational business dealings or "thugism" as Elliott described it. The violent, "mafia" mode of persuasion used in Lebanese business dealings is "a powerful influence" in Lebanese affairs.

Commenting on the power of the PLO, Elliott said "no one is very afraid of the PLO at the moment." With its forces out of Beirut the PLO is suffering a wane of influence and its power was described by Elliott as "very marginal."

Elliott discussed U.S. foreign policy and feelings regarding Lebanon. He emphasized that the U.S.

Stealing Dampens Christmas Spirit

As winter term begins, Juniata's campus is filled with various holiday activities. East Houses Tower parties, the Madrigal Dinner, South's Semi-Formal, and countless other get togethers highlight the season. For many, these three weeks before Christmas are among the best at Juniata. Finals' pressure is off and generally speaking, every one is in the Christmas spirit.

In years past, the holiday spirit which prevails has been marred for some neighboring home owners. These homeowners have fallen victim to annual vandalism. While their cars and homes have weathered the storm, very often their landscaping has not.

The Juniatian staff has all too frequently seen the stumps and bare lawns of those home owners whose pine trees were turned into campus Christmas trees. We have a great deal of trouble understandiing why these trees must be cut down and stolen; we don't believe live Christmas trees are necessary to enjoy the holiday season.

Practically speaking, it's against housing regulations to have live Christmas trees in any of the residence halls. Common sense tells us that they are a fire hazard to everybody, especially those in East Houses.

But aside from the practical considerations, there are moral considerations, too. Cutting down someone's pine tree is a violation of personal property. Though it may never occur to the stealer, that pine tree may have sentimental value to the owner — value which cannot be replaced by merely planting another tree.

So far this year, pine tree damage around neighboring houses has been minimal, though not obsolete. A tree along the East Houses path is missing already.

The Juniatian hopes this will be the only damage this year. Those surrounding Juniata's campus are at least owed the consideration not to have their property damaged.

May the Juniatian remind everyone that Christmas is a time of giving, not taking. That includes Christmas trees.

Madrigal weekend is upon us. It is appropriately known as one of the biggest and best weekends that our institution has to offer. Some may even apply the term "madrigal" to the first three weeks of winter term! (Well, the first two and a half weeks anyway.)

Before I incriminate myself any further, let me get to the point. The point is actually a question. The question is, "Is the location of your table at the Madrigal Dinner really worth getting up at some ungodly hour of the morning to stand in line for five or six more?" Why should people have to sleep on Ellis' steps in the cold of late November to get a good seat? If sign-up starts at 11:00, why can't we just go to Ellis Ballroom at 10:45? Or 10:15 if you're energetic? I suppose it's just human nature to try to avoid a crowd by starting one early.

Did you ever notice that? Why are we always doing that kind of stuff? It's just like pre-registration. I'm a senior and I was in line behind masses of juniors and even a sprinkling of sophomores. I went upstairs 20 minutes before it all began. I figured that was plenty of time. Oh well. I got to go ahead because of my "seniority". There were actually lots of us back there and we all got in and took care of our classes on schedule so it worked out fine in the end, but that's not the point.

The point is the Madrigal Dinner table sign-ups. As I recall, when I was a Freshman, if you were in line at 8:00 you were guaranteed a good spot. (That's 8:00 a.m.!) It looks like the times really are a-changing!

As you've probably already heard, a couple of Freshmen slept on the steps of Ellis the night before sign-up. They got there around 1:00 a.m. That's ten hours before sign-up. You count 'em. Ten hours. Don't you think that's taking things a little too far? May-

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

The Huntingdon County United Way would like to thank the faculty and employees of Juniata College for their continued support of our organization and the 15 member agencies the United Way supports.

The staff and Board of Directors of the United Way have appreciated the support of Juniata College over the years. Through your contributions we have been able to continue to serve those less fortunate in Huntingdon County.

Again, many thanks for the generosity and support you have shown your local United Way.

Sincerely,
Jody R. Huston

Question: Are you looking forward to the Madrigal Dinner?

Susan Kipp: Sophomore: "Yes. We have a really good table and good people are going. Our first shift got in line at 5:30, but it's worth it."

Chris Schleiden, Junior: "Yes. We waited in line starting at 5:00 and we have a good table. It was fun the past two years so this year should be fun, too."

Carolyn Saulnier, Junior: "Yes. I can't wait to hassle my profs!"

Chip Austin, Sophomore: "I'm not going. I just ran out of time to get a table together. But, I will go to the dance afterwards."

Rape Awareness Prevention Program

Editor's Note:

The Juniatian believes that rape is a serious matter that all students on this campus should be made aware of. The following test is the first installment in a series of articles to be published during the next three weeks.

It is not the intention of this paper to offend any one, but instead we hope to shed some light on this subject matter. It should be noted that this series could not have been made possible without the help of the Student Service Office on campus, especially Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life.

As always, The Juniatian welcomes all concerns and ideas from its readers.

Rape Awareness/Prevention Program Test Your Knowledge

TRUE OR FALSE

_____ 1. Rape is a crime of sex — in other words, the primary motive of rape is sexual.
_____ 2. Rapists are ususally strangers to their victims.
_____ 3. Most rape victims are not physically abused beyond the act of rape itself.
_____ 4. Most rapists use either a knife or gun to coerce their victims.
_____ 5. About 30 percent of all rapes occur in the victim's home.
_____ 6. It is good advice for a woman to fight back and use physical strength to avert a rapist's attack.
_____ 7. Most rapists are repeat offenders and have raped more than one person in their lives.
_____ 8. Approximately 50 percent of all rapes go unreported.
_____ 9. In the state of Pennsylvania, a sexual act is considered rape if the victim is unable to give her consent because of intoxication.
_____ 10. Most rapists are sexually inactive in their everyday existence.

Rape Awareness/Prevention Program Answer Sheet

1. FALSE — Rape is a crime of violence.
2. FALSE — According to recent studies, in about 35% of the rape cases, the woman was assaulted by her date. About 35% of the time the rapist is at least an acquaintance or someone even more familiar — friend, neighbor, boss, co-worker, friend of a friend, etc. Finally, about 30% of the time the rapist will be a total stranger. Thus, 70% of the time, the rapist and victim know each other.
3. TRUE — Approximately 76% of rape victims were not physically abused beyond the rape itself. 17.7% were not hurt with weapons — but rather with blows or kicks.
4. FALSE — In approximately 85% of all reported rapes, the rapist used only verbal coercion.
5. TRUE — It is a fallacy that rapes mainly occur in remote places such as dark parking lots, alleys and country roads.
6. FALSE — Frederic Storaska (Executive Director of the National Organization for the Prevention of Rape and Assault) recommends the following five principles to save oneself from rape and bodily harm:
   1) retain — or regain — your emotional stability
   2) treat the rapist as a human being
   3) gain his confidence
   4) go along until you can safely react
   5) use your imagination and good judgment

   As the majority of rapists are physically stronger than their victims (and, they often planned it and are not coping with shock as the victims are), physical resistance is not recommended. This oftentimes provokes the attacker to go beyond the act of rape.
7. TRUE — The majority of convicted rapists admit to raping more than one victim.
8. FALSE — Actually, the statistics are much more alarming. Because of "date" or "acquaintance" rape and the stigma often surrounding it, it is estimated that only 3.5% to 10% of rapes are reported (according to an aggregate of surveys done by the U.S. Census Bureau, the FBI and the National Opinion Research Center).
9. TRUE — If the victim is unconscious or so "mentally deficient" that she cannot give effective consent to intercourse, the situation is considered rape.
10. FALSE — Most rapists have wives or girlfriends and are not sexually deprived. Rape is often committed for power and aggression. It has also been found that rapists are sexually naive and hold conservative sexual attitudes.

Literary Critic Visits J.C.

by Jason Roberts

Dr. Stanonik visited Juniata last week to lecture about Yugoslavia.

Dr. Stanonik lectured to individual classes and also gave a general lecture in Ellis Hall last Thursday night. He discussed the ancient history of the country, focusing on invasions and occupations of the land by foreigners and touched on the resulting cultural implications.

Yugoslavia is technically a unified country, but separate nations of people still exist, each one identifying with various cultural heritages such as those of the Serbs, Croations, Macedonians, Slovines, and minority nations of Hungarians and Albanians. Dr. Stanonik is of Slovine heritage.

Dr. Stanonik also discussed the geology and topography of his country. Yugoslavia is characterized by dramatic coastal scenery where the Balkan mountains rise from the Adriatic Sea. In the east are fertile plains which constitute Yugoslavia's major agricultural region; in the central areas are mountains similar to our Appalachians; to the north lies the southeast corner of the Alps.

Dr. Stanonik discussed the development of industry and transportation since World War I, the time of Yugoslavia's organization into its present state. Dr. Stanonik said that the government has provided money to underdeveloped areas to help them keep up with the steady rate of modernization in the rest of the country.

Dr. Stanonik concluded the lecture by showing pictures of Yugoslavia and taking questions from the audience.

Dr. Stanonik is a linguistic historian and studies English and Germanic languages in general. He has held professorships at various Yugoslav institutions and was at one time Dean of the University of Lubiana. He has done extensive research on Moby Dick and other works by Melville. He is currently affiliated with the Slovine Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Security of ones' personal belongings is one of the themes behind this year's security force on campus.

According to Jack Linetty, Director of Housing, "Juniata's security patrol have been given stickers to place on items that a thief would probably take if given the opportunity."

These "If I Was A Thief" stickers are carried by all security patrol just like parking tickets. If upon their rounds of residence halls or parking lots they see an

Hirsch Concert A Success

A recital of songs by such composers as Brahms, Schubert, Rossini, Mozart, Verdi and others was presented by Bruce and Marjorie Hirsch Dec. 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the Stone Church of the Brethern.

Using the theme, "Songs We Like to Sing," the Hirsches performed music by composers they admire and melodies they enjoy singing. Within the program, the song literature of the bel canto, German Lieder, Operatic Aria and the Chanson are all represented. Also included are songs of folk traditions, the spiritual and novelty songs.

The beginning of the program was marked by two powerful romantic duet settings by Brahms, "Die Meere" (The Sea) and "Weg der Liebe" (The Path of Love). Concluding the first half of the recital were two Mozart duets from the operas "Don Giovanni" and "The Magic Flute," both light and semi-serious songs of love. The program closed with a group of folk songs.

Bruce A. Hirsch, associate professor of music and director of Juniata's choral organizations, joined the college faculty in 1965. He received his bachelors and masters degrees from the Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J., and has completed additional graduate work at the University of Southern California. Hirsch has conducted choral literature from the 12th through 20th centuries, and was choral conductor for the 1986 National Conference of the Church of the Brethern.

Marjorie Hirsch is an instructional assistant in music at Juniata where she teaches performance, history and pedagogy. A graduate of the University of Southern California, she also has studied at El Camino College and the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Hirsch has studied voice with Mme. Budrow, William Vernard and Irwin Windward, and opera theatre with Hans Beer and Walter Ducloux.

The Hirsches were accompanied by Katsuko Ochiai on piano and Bruce Schettig on guitar. Both are instructional assistants in music at Juniata.

Mrs. Ochiai holds a bachelor of music degree from the Musashino Academy of Music in Tokyo, and has a diploma and associateship from the Royal Conservatory of Toronto, Canada. She has taught piano at the Nagoya School of Music in Japan and given private lessons in Japan, the United States and Canada since 1966.

Schettig holds an associate degree in retailing from the Pennsylvania State University and a B.S. degree in performing arts from Indiana University of Pa. He teaches guitar at Mt. Aloysius Junior College and gives private lessons. In addition to his teaching experience, Schettig has performed with several area jazz, country, easy listening and rock bands.

Any student interested in entering his/her room in this year's room decorating contest should submit a form to the Housing Office no later than December 16. Applications are in the back of the booklet, "Your Room Is Your Home," or can be picked up at the Housing Office. Prizes of $15 will be awarded to the best room in each dorm and a grand prize of $50 will be awarded to the best room on campus.

Movie Review: Tootsie

by Soraya Morgan

"Tootsie" is a film about a forty-five year old strong-headed female, Dorothy Michaels, portrayed by an aspiring male actor, Michael Dorsey. As Michael (Dustin Hoffman) was unable to find work in New York, and was told by his agent (Tony Polla) that because of his bad temper no producer would hire him, he decided to change his image by dressing up as a woman.

He auditioned as Dorothy for a part in a soap opera, and because of his/her aggressive mannerisms was given the role. The character was a hospital administrator whom Michael portrayed as strong-minded, uninhibited, and up-front. Dorothy Michaels became an immediate success by soap opera fans all over the States.

Michael's metamorphosis not only changed his physical appearance but also his mental attitude. To be able to perform his new sex role convincingly, he had to think "female" even when he was not acting.

Unfortunately, his roommate, Jeff (Bill Murray), the only other person aside from the agent who knew Michael's identity secret, had to listen to the many problems attributed to it. And what were some of these new dilemmas? One was that Michael fell in love with Sandy (Jessica Lang), one of the actresses he was working with. Sandy was fond of him too, but not as Michael of course, rather as Dorothy who represented a mother figure to her. And to complicate matters even more, Sandy's father Lester (Charles Durry) had strong feelings for Dorothy and wanted to marry her.

These were only a few of the antics which emerged because of Michael's unique idea for finding a job. "Tootsie" is a funny and at times hilarious film. And aside from not knowing what it could be like as a pregnant woman, Dustin Hoffman sensitively conveyed the understanding of the frustrations, anxieties, and responsibilities today's females must confront.

consider those 2 freshmen, Guy Lehman and Steve Walsh, who actually set up a tent in front of Ellis in order to get a prime table. Helped by some girls at their table who brought them hot cocoa, they were first in line this year.

Barbara Iszard, one of those helping the campers, insisted that they did it, "Just for the fun of it — not only for a table."

During the morning many students complained to Carola as to why things had to run that way. It seems Baker Refectory is the only facility which can put out such a dinner and it simply cannot accomodate all students at the same time.

Some have suggested that only seniors be permitted to go. But Carola says the Madrigal is for the entire campus.

Others have brought up the idea of a lottery system to Carola. But she feels this would be unfair to those students who really want a great table for the Madrigal and are willing to stand in line at those hours to get it.

If there is anyone who happened to sleep in last week there are 8 empty tables of 4 in Tote left.

Baxter Named Chairman

Dr. Craig Baxter, professor of politics and history at Juniata College, has been named chairman of the Founding Committee of the American Institute of Bangladesh Studies.

Baxter, who met in Washington recently with Gen. H.M. Ershad, Prime Minister of Bangladesh, says that the committee is currently having discussions with the government of Bangladesh aimed at establishing academic exchange programs similar to those already existing with India and Pakistan. The exchange program would be designed for senior scholars and graduate students in the United States and Bangladesh.

The five-member Founding Committee met Nov. 5 in Madison, Wis. at a conference on South Asia sponsored by the University of Wisconsin. In addition to discussing plans for the American Institute of Bangladesh Studies, Baxter delivered papers on the foreign policies of Pakistan and Bangladesh, the latter based in part on his forthcoming book on Bangladesh.

A member of the Juniata faculty since 1981, Baxter was a State Department official for 25 years, stationed in such countries as Pakistan, India and Afghanistan. From 1976-78, Baxter was political counselor at the U.S. Embassy in Bangladesh, and is considered an expert in the affairs of that Asian nation.

Baxter's expertise will be utilized later this month at a meeting of the Northeast Political Science Association in Philadelphia. As a

Swigarts Recognized

In recognition of their many years of dedicated service to Juniata College, Elizabeth Weeks Swigart, John W. Swigart and William E. Swigart, Jr., all of Huntingdon, were honored during the annual Founders Club luncheon Saturday, Nov. 5.

Noting that the Swigart family has been an integral part of Juniata College since its founding, President Frederick M. Binder praised the three for carrying on the family tradition of service.

"Over the years these three individuals have made important contributions to Juniata College. Their efforts led to the establishment of Swigart Hall as the college's music center, and later to its maintenance and renovation. The creation of the Eva Workman Swigart Memorial Scholarship Fund for music students and the W. Emmert Swigart Treasure Room in Beeghly Library have enhanced Juniata's academic program," Dr. Binder said.

William J. Swigart, grandfather of John and William, was one of Juniata's first trustees, serving from 1878 to 1939. He also served as college treasurer and a member of the faculty. William Emmert Swigart, John and William's father and Elizabeth's husband, graduated from Juniata in 1906 and also served on the Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Swigart, a 1922 Juniata graduate, has served the college as a member of the home economics department faculty and as Dean of Women. In addition to her support of the Friends of the Juniata College Library, the hundreds of volumes of rare books she has donated to Beeghly Library are housed in the W. Emmert Swigart Treasure Room, a memorial to her late husband.

John W. Swigart, a 1930 Juniata graduate, has been a member of the Board of Trustees since 1950, and currently serves as its secretary and treasurer. His numerous contributions to Juniata were recognized in 1976 when he was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree. As the former president and current chairman of the board of Swigart Associates, John Swigart is a prominent Huntingdon business and civic leader.

Also a well-known business and civic leader, William E. Swigart, Jr. is a 1937 Juniata graduate and president of Swigart Associates. Over the years, he has served Juniata as chairman of the President's Development Council, president of the National Alumni Association, president of the Huntingdon Area Alumni Club, chairman of the Annual Support Fund, Class Fund Agent and chairman of numerous campaigns. In 1973, he was presented with the National Alumni Association Service Award.

Many members of the Swigart family, all long-time Juniata supporters, attended the Founders Club luncheon.

Juniata's Circle K club has released details on their annual marathon for multiple sclerosis. The 24-hour marathon will begin Jan. 6 at 8:00 p.m. and continue until Saturday evening. Participants can play volleyball, board games and card games. Other options are rocking in a rocking chair or dancing for 24 hours.

Anyone interested in participating in this year's marathon should pick up information and sponsor sheets this week. They will be available at lunch and dinner or at the information desk. Sponsor sheets should be turned in by Jan. 4. They may be sent to Circle K, P.O. box 1027, or Sally Gurekovich, P.O. box 75.

Hot Wax

Rainbow's latest album, Bent out of Shape, emphasizes the same type of rock and roll as their more recent albums. With original Deep Purple members Ritchie Blackmore (guitars) and Roger Glover (bass, percussions), the album's melodies and guitar solos have a familiar sound. The tempo and vocals of the music closely follow their "I Surrender" off Difficult to Cure and their remake of "Since You Been Gone."

With songs like the popular "Street of Dreams" and "Desperate Heart" the light rock beat of Bent out of Shape is accentuated by vocals by Joe Lynn Turner. Turner's voice is less aggressive than former Deep Purple singer Ian Gillan, and produces a sound which will please rock fans who recognize and appreciate good vocals. The album also includes upbeat songs such as "Drinking With the Devil" and "Firedance."

Bent out of Shape does have a lot of zest. Blackmore's screaming guitar solos and high pitched introductions are prevalent throughout the album. Blackmore gets a chance to air his world acclaimed 'axe grinding' especially in "Make Your Move." Glover, original Deep Purple mixer and present producer for Rainbow, keeps the album moving and accents Turner's singing with his fast and clairvoyant bass jamming.

Other group members include David Rosenthal on keyboards and Chuck Burgi on drums. These two added to the previously mentioned, form a group with exceptional talent and many good ideas.

Overall, if you like rock and roll, this album will fit nicely in your record collection. It cranks for a few songs, then slows the pace down. This is a well rounded album which I would rate as 'moderate' rock with more emphasis on guitar, drums, and slightly less on vocals.

This is the first in my weekly series of newly released album-oriented rock and roll reviews. Every week I'll be screening a new album to give you insight on new music. See you next week!

Pre-med Fund at Juniata

A new scholarship to aid pre-medical students at Juniata College will serve as a memorial to the late Dr. Clarence R. Pentz of North Coventry, a 1926 Juniata graduate.

Established by his wife, Dorothy Saylor Pentz, the Clarence R. Pentz Pre-Medical Scholarship will be given annually to the Juniata senior who, in the judgment of the pre-medical committee and the Dean of Academic Affairs, has given evidence of a humanitarian attitude, scholarship and character that will contribute to success in the practice of medicine.

In announcing the scholarship, Juniata President Frederick M. Binder praised Dr. Pentz as an individual dedicated to the medical profession, and as a loyal Juniatian. Dr. Pentz, who died Aug. 2, was a member of the President's Development Council for 30 years. He also served the college as president of the National Alumni Association and a member of the Alumni Council.

A Fellow of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Dr. Pentz received his M.D. degree from Thomas Jefferson Medical College and his M.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

be it's just because they're Freshmen.

It was probably some upperclassman's idea of a joke. A sort of initiation, if you will. In that case, it's pretty funny. Freshmen are so guilible sometimes. But here we are, going off on another tangent.

I guess now an almost "sit-in" type attitude has been adopted regarding the table sign-ups. Unfortunately, this behavior may repeat itself in the future, now that it's started. Can you imagine lining up at 9:00 a.m. for a lentil-patty lunch? I say 9:00 because that's when breakfast closes. It would be just too silly to line up for lunch before breakfast closes. Can you imagine Steak and Shrimp night? It could grow outrageously out of proportion.

I don't know. Maybe getting that psyched about something right here on our campus is the beginning of the end of the much talked about problem of chronic student apathy. Students may actually be beginning to care about something. That would be the dream of every college's administration. Maybe sleeping on the steps of Ellis is the first sign of a new breed of student here at Juniata. (You may have noticed that there is a brand new breed here, it seems, but that's another tangent.)

Is student apathy on the decline? I doubt it, but it doesn't really matter. They've been dealing with apathy for years. Geez! I wonder if they'd even know what to do with a whole college full of enthusiastic involved students. We wouldn't have the facilities to hold it all. There's probably not enough money in the budget to handle it. The Centerboard people would go nuts.

I'm never going to have to worry about standing (or sitting) in line for the Madrigal Dinner again. Not that sitting there being bored wasn't fun. Everyone was bored so it was okay. As they say — misery loves company. If you could've

New Club On Campus

by Paul Bomberger

The Juniata College Admissions Association was organized last spring in order to assist the admissions office in recruiting prospective Juniata students.

David John, the Executive Chairperson of the committee, explains the objectives of the club.

"We strive to make prospective students feel at ease with what college life is like when they visit Juniata. To accomplish this, we give them our own students' point of view. In addition, we have a committee for making phone calls to high school students who have expressed interest in Juniata."

The club was formed by Molly McKibbon, who is the advisor. Forty people were selected through an interview process. Those selected then voted for an executive chairperson and subcommittee chairpersons.

The subcommittee chairpersons are: Karyn Cable, phone campaign chairperson, Tracey Stough, open house and visitors' day chairperson, Cinny Cooper, publicity newsletter chairperson and Deb Maue, overnight visit chairperson.

College Newspapers in Trouble

As much of the college press struggles through what may be its toughest year yet, a federal court has ruled that the University of Minnesota paper can return to its old method of collecting student fees.

The ruling could help set a precedent for making student funding of campus papers a First Amendment issue.

After the Minnesota Daily published a wild "humor issue" in 1979, the university's regents made student fee funding of the paper optional for students.

But last week the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled the regents had interfered with freedom of the press, and actually were trying to influence the paper's editorial content by changing the fee system.

But the long-awaited Minnesota fee decision is about the only good news for college newspapers so far during the 1982-83 school year.

Scores of papers are struggling with budget cuts, while others actually are folding under the weight of budget problems and student apathy.

Smaller weekly and less-than-weekly papers appear to be suffering the most.

Papers at Illinois Eastern Community College, Lakeland College, Harford Community College, Glen Oaks Community College, and Western Wyoming Community College, among many others, had deep budget cuts this year.

Campus Papers

Some aren't even that lucky.

At Phoenix College, "we took a look at the cost of the college paper in relation to the information we have to get out to students, and decided it was too cost-prohibitive for a student body of 13,000," reports Jim Hughes, head of the school's public information office.

Phoenix College, consequently, has no student paper at all this year.

Administrators plan to produce a monthly calendar and newsletter instead, for "considerably less than the $700 per issue we were spending on the paper," Hughes says.

Kendall College in Evanston, Ill., also has replaced its monthly student paper with a p.r. newsletter.

"We didn't pick up (funding for) the student paper again this year because of lack of interest and cuts in student services funding," says Janice Glor of Kendall's student services office.

She estimates Kendall will save $2250 by merging its news operations with the public relations department's newsletter. Students are left to get news from "a campus calendar posted in some of the classrooms."

Sometimes apathy is to blame as much as money.

At Phoenix College, where enrollment has been climbing steadily for three years, "we just didn't have a lot of student interest," Hughes says. "The staff was volunteer, and during finals a lot of people stopped coming in and working."

Kendall's newspaper staff was "down to one or two students last year really working on the paper," Glor says. "We haven't had any complaints from anyone who wants the paper back."

"It's very easy for an administration to do away with a paper if there're no students interested enough to work on it or fight for it," notes Dick Sublette, president of the College Media Advisors, the trade group for campus newspaper advisors, and publications director at UCLA.

But lack of staff "coincides with what's happening with journalism school enrollment generally," says Len Franko, director of the American Society of Journalism School Administrators and a journalism professor at the University of South Carolina.

"We've had a bulge in journalism majors for the last 10 to 12 years," he explains. "Now, after doubling in the last ten years, enrollment has finally leveled out" to about 80,000 majors nationwide.

The decline, coupled with campuses' general money woes, has pitted many papers against their administrators.

Administrators gradually have been forcing larger campus papers to pay more of their costs by generating more of their own revenues through advertising sales.

As a result, some papers have become successful enough to cut most of their formal fiscal ties to their schools.

"But a lot of smaller universities, where the papers didn't move out on their own, the universities have been picking up the tab for increased salaries, equipment, space, and other subsidies," Franko says.

Fewer schools are willing to keep doing so. More administrators, Franko maintains, are telling students, "If you want a newspaper, you pay for it."

If no students respond, Sublette adds, "there goes the paper."

At Pepperdine University in Malibu, California, administrators "asked us to contribute more advertising revenue toward our own production costs," says Steve Ames, director of student publications.

Although the paper is "financially very solid," it has had to tighten its belt to jump from 16 to 20 pages per issue this year."

UCLA's Daily Bruin, Sublette says, has benefitted from such forced fiscal responsibility. Since being told to pay its own way, the paper now operates "totally in the black, and even helps support some of the school's other publications."

But The Observer at Notre Dame is protesting a university effort to assume greater responsibility for the paper's budget, which finished $7000 in the red last year.

Administrators threaten to withhold $70,000 in student fees from the paper if it refuses to hand over budgetary control, but the editors, in a recent front-page editorial, claim that "if the university can refuse to sign our checks, then it can dictate our policy."

As the Minnesota case illustrates, some academicians can be tempted to try.

At Illinois State, a professor wants the Daily Vidette cut off from school funds because it published a "racist" account of alleged Israeli torture of Palistinians.

And at Emory University in Atlanta, former President Jimmy Carter showed up in the newspaper office to protest the Emory Wheel's coverage of the Carter Library Center proposed for the campus.

The Wheel's editors, however, ran a series of articles on the plans anyway.

had no interest in Lebanon as a location for naval bases or for other military purposes. He noted that some U.S. government officials are pessimistic about the Lebanese situation, but he believed that "we can get the Israelis out of Lebanon."

When asked how the U.S. would like to deal with Syria, Elliott offered a two part solution. First, Syria should sever political ties with the Soviet Union, and second, Syria should remove troops from Lebanon.

Elliott described the present Lebanese system of government. The Constitution of Lebanon provides that the president will always be a Christian and the Prime Minister always a Moslem. At the time the constitution was written, the Christians in Lebanon outnumbered the Moslems, but now the roles have reversed. This has created part of the religious conflict in Lebanon.

Kent State Students Finally Memorialized

by Tom Jennings

KENT, OH (CPS) — Thirteen years after four of its students were killed at the climax of the anti-war movement, and after 13 years of almost unrelieved confrontation between students and administrators over how to remember the tragedy, Kent State University trustees finally voted last week to work with students to concoct and build a campus memorial to the dead students.

KSU's unwillingness to accede to student and faculty requests to build a memorial was arguably the last vestige of the anti-war movement of the sixties and early seventies.

The trustees voted to join community groups and the May 4th Task Force — the student-faculty group that has led the long struggle to memorialize the tragedy — in a committee to find an appropriate physical memorial to the slain students.

The students were killed on May 4th, 1970. Students nationwide had declared a national strike to protest President Richard Nixon's sudden invasion of Cambodia, which marked the first widening of the war in Vietnam. The reaction at home was marred by occasional violence, some of which occurred in the town of Kent. Ohio Gov. James Rhodes called in the National Guard to maintain order on the campus. But on May 4th, Guardsmen abruptly opened fire on a peaceful campus demonstration, killing four and wounding nine.

Ongoing lawsuits against the university and the National Guard, and the university's often-bungled efforts to downplay the tragedy's significance in subsequent years often exacerbated the tensions.

Among the more notable confrontations over the last 13 years was the university's 1977 proposal to build a gym annex in the area of the shootings. The proposal led to large protests and sit-ins to try to stop construction workers from starting. The gym was finished in 1978 despite the protests.

Also in 1978, a Cleveland foundation commissioned world-renowned sculptor George Segal to build a memorial for the campus.

But when Segal presented the finished sculpture to KSU administrators, they rejected it.

Segal's sculpture depicts the biblical story of Abraham and Isaac, showing an older man holding a knife over a kneeling youth, whose hands are tied.

"It was inappropriate to commemorate the deaths of four persons and the wounding of nine with a statue which appears to represent an act of violence about to be committed," then-KSU President Brage Golding explained at the time.

Princeton quickly asked to take the sculpture, and placed it on its campus in 1979.

Golding then proposed to build a Roman arch as a memorial, but met almost unanimous disapproval. Critics noted the traditional military connotations of the arch, while others complained it looked like a fireplace.

Golding withdrew the proposal, and no substantial memorial proposals emerged for years afterwards.

About the only official acknowledgements of what happened at Kent State were a library room dedicated to the victims' memory, a small plaque at the campus Hillel Foundation, and an annual candlelight vigil on May 3rd and 4th.

But last week's meeting indicates times have changed.

"I feel there is a more receptive climate on campus now, and there is a general feeling that we need some kind of public memorial, some kind of physical thing," says Dr. Jerry Lewis, a sociology professor and advisor to the May 4th Task Force, the student-faculty group that unsuccessfully has pressed the trustees for a memorial for 13 years.

"We've been through this before," says Thulin, who used to be a task force member. "But for the first time, all the concerned groups — students, faculty, administrators, alumni — seem to be on the same general wavelength."

Faculty President Calkins attributes the change of heart "to the time that has passed, a new administration (Michael Schwartz succeeded Golding in 1981), and new people on the board of trustees who don't feel as closely involved with those events."

Lewis attributes it to the unveiling of the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C. last year. Once the nation has begun to put the war in perspective, the logic goes, it can put the domestic convulsions over it in perspective.

The trustees' willingness to find an appropriate memorial isn't official yet. Last week's meeting technically was of a board committee, not the full board. The full board, however, is expected to approve the proposal to build an appropriate memorial at its next meeting in mid-December.

Women to Rely on Speed

by App

Juniata's young women's basketball team opened its season last week with 3 games. The women opened on the road Monday night at Lycoming and came away victorious 71-66. On Wednesday, they were defeated at home by a strong Elizabethtown club by the score of 84-55. Then, on Saturday the girls were defeated by a tough Grove City team at home 55-41. This left the girls with a 1-2 record.

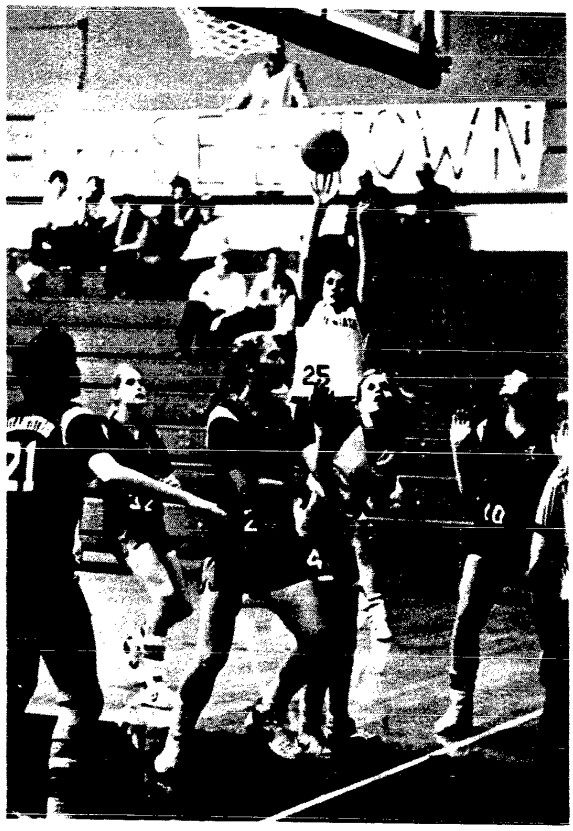
This year's team is quite young with the top 6 players consisting of 2 juniors, Patti Ryan and Holly Crable, sophomore Karen Fonner, and 3 freshmen Paula Hillagass, Debbie Rahm and Allison Kellock. The team isn't tall but is fast, so it will rely on its speed to generate points by the fast break. The Lady Indians will rely on the inside-outside combination of Ryan and Crable to produce a large percentage of the team's scoring. The ladies are scheduled to play 20 games this year, a majority of which are against their MAC rivals.

The Lycoming game was a tale of 2 totally different halves being played with Juniata coming out on top. In the first half, the Lady Indians shot only 36% while Lycoming was scorching the nets at a 58% clip from the field. At halftime, the Indians trailed by 9 points, 36-27. The second half was a reversal of the first half. The Indians fought back led by the scoring of Crable and Ryan. In the second half, the team shot 52% from the field while holding Lycoming to 39%. The Indians outscored Lycoming by 14 points to pull out the victory. Ryan led the tribe attack with 24 points with Crable adding 21. Kellock also scored in double figures as she tallied 12. The Indians held their own on the boards as they outrebounded Lycoming by 5. Ryan led the board effort with 12 while Kellock and Rahm each pulled down 8 caroms. The Lady Indians forced 30 Lycoming turnovers which was very instrumental in the victory.

In the Elizabethtown game, the Lady Indians hung tough early as they trailed only 14-10 with 15 minutes left in the first half. However, Elizabethtown overwhelmed the Indians on the boards due to their height advantage and slowly pulled away. Elizabethtown built their lead to ten at the half point of the first half and at intermission held a 48-32 lead. Elizabethtown shot 60% from the field in the first half thanks to their strong inside game which led to several easy baskets. Meanwhile, the Tribe was forced to shoot from the perimeter and could hit on only 41% of their shots. The second half was more of the same as E-town scored the first 10 points of the half. This increased their lead to 26 points and Juniata never threatened. For the game, E-town beat the Indians on the boards 53-30. Ryan led the board effort with 11 rebounds. Crable was the only Indian in double figures as she scored 21 points.

Although Juniata lost to Grove City by 14 points, the game was much closer than that. Despite a definite height disadvantage, the Lady Indians held them on the boards as Grove City hauled in only 2 more caroms than Juniata. The game was a defensive struggle from the start as neither team shot well for the game. The Indians led 11-8 early thanks to 8 straight points by Crable. It was a see-saw battle the remainder of the half as Grove City took a 22-20 lead into the locker room. In the second half, Grove City took a 6 point lead but Juniata quickly recovered to lead 29-28 with just under 15 minutes left in the game. However, Grove City went on a 11-2 streak which gave them an 8 point lead. From that point on, Juniata got no closer than 6 points and Grove City put the game away with an 8-2 spurt which gave them a double digit lead. Ryan and Crable led the Indians in scoring with 12 points each while Ryan led the board effort with 12 rebounds.

The Lady Indians take their 1-2 record into a 3 game schedule this week. On Monday, they travelled to Washington and Jefferson, tonight they host Gettysburg, and on Saturday they travel to Franklin and Marshall. Good luck to them!!



Juniata's Patti Ryan takes a jump shot as a fellow teammate is surrounded by a swarm of Elizabethtown rebounders. Juniata lost 84-55.

open door or window, then they simply place a sticker on a valuable item to let the student know how easily that item could be taken.

According to Linetty, "This action should not be taken by the students as an invasion of privacy, but instead, as a reminder to be more careful with personal belongings."

Men Playing Better

by Joe Scialabba

Week one of the 1983-84 Juniata men's basketball season may have ended with only one win in three games but it ended on an upbeat note. This has hopefully set a tone for Coach Dan Helm's squad that will lead to substantial improvement upon last year's disappointing 6-16 finish.

After opening with two late November losses the Tribe started the month of December in a better way by beating FDU-Madison 66-59 at Memorial Gym.

Trailing by two points at halftime 26-24, a situation they had faced in the home opener on Nov. 30 with Elizabethtown (down 30-28) before an early second half lapse led to a 73-58 loss, Juniata took it to the Jersey Devils in the second half with a solid shooting effort and a powerful rebounding day to earn victory number one.

Junior Mark "Rufus" Rucinski was the Juniata "force" against FDU as he hit for 17 points (7 of 9 at the foul line) and crashed the boards for 23 rebounds. Dan Feruck hit for 14 points, Jeff Ostrowski 13, and Paul Kardish 10 to add to Rucinski's double figure effort.

The Indians dominated the boards 47-31; outshot the Devils 45 percent to 34 percent from the floor; and overcame a 12 point field goal deficit by hitting on 24 of 37 foul tries to FDU's 5 for 7 effort.

Juniata also survived 26 turnovers in the FDU game. It was turnovers that cost the Tribe the E-town game and the season opener at Lycoming.

The trip to Williamsport to open against the Warriors was a very disappointing one. Juniata never got untracked, fell behind early, and lost 83-59.

The Indians were never really in the game as a Lyco press led to numerous JC turnovers and easy Warrior scoring chances. The Tribe faced an early deficit on the scoreboard and could never recover.

Feruck had 18 points, Ostrowski and Rucinski 11 apiece in the losing cause. Rucinski also had 11 rebounds before fouling out.

Juniata fell to 0-2 with the Elizabethtown loss but played a better game against the Blue Jays than they did in the opener. Turnovers, however, 24 to be exact, again did-in the Tribe. Rucinski was the only Indian in double figures with 15 points. He also had 13 rebounds before fouling out for the second straight game.

The two losses, both Middle Atlantic Conference games, led to concern, but not panic by Coach Helm.

"We started slow this season but have improved in each game," said Helm. "It is unfortunate that each team we have played early in the season has already played two or three games more than we have but that's just the way it worked out and we'll just have to adjust to things like that. I think we have made some progress in the first week in many of our problem areas."

One area Helm is not happy with is the turnover department. "We need, and must, handle the ball better," he stressed. "We will not win many games with over twenty give-aways. I hope we can continue to improve in every game, and we must cut down on turnovers to be successful."

The Indians were at Washington and Jefferson on Monday and are at Gettysburg tonight before a home MAC date with Messiah on Saturday night. All three of this week's opponents are tough tests for the Tribe.

team is a mixture of all of the different grades, which means that we will still be a power to reckon with for time to come, and I know that I am not the only one looking forward to next year's season already. That old saying, "It doesn't matter if you win or lose, it's how you play the game," still stands true. As far as I am concerned, "We may have been outplayed, but we will never be outclassed!"

S.D. Too Tough

by Suzanne Hickle

This past weekend Juniata was proud to host the 1983 Mid-Atlantic Regional Volleyball Championships in our gym. Four competing teams attended this tournament based on their volleyball achievements. The winner of the tournament will move on to the NCAA Division III championship tournament held in La Verne, California.

The four competing teams in the tournament were Juniata, Brooklyn College, Western Maryland and University of California at San Diego.

The first game consisted of Western Maryland and San Diego with San Diego taking an easy win of 15-7, 15-8 and 15-3.

The next game played was between Juniata and Brooklyn. With the fans supporting Juniata and the J.C. women playing an excellent game, Juniata won 15-4, 15-10, 13-15 and 15-3. After these games Friday night, Juniata and San Diego went on to play the final game Saturday evening.

With the gym packed with rowdy fans and the Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band playing music, Juniata and San Diego warmed up for an important game. With both teams playing with great intensity, Juniata just couldn't get a lead over the California women. After an hour of play, Juniata lost 15-4, 15-4 and 15-2.

After this tournament, three of our Juniata players were named to the All-Tournament team. Trish Corl, Carolyn Stambaugh and co-captain Tracey DeBlase were those selected.

Juniata finished their season with a 35-14 record.

Juniata's co-captain, Tracey DeBlase, sets the ball to a fellow player as Peggy Evans (5) looks on. DeBlase was later named to the All-Tournament Team along with Trish Corl and Carolyn Stambaugh.

Fan Perspective

by Andy Hiscock

I would like to talk briefly about our Varsity Women's Volleyball team and their season from the perspective of a spectator. I may include a number of points discussed elsewhere in this edition, but I feel that the girls did a great job. I know that I am not alone when I congratulate the girls and their coaches on a great season. I tried to make it to as many home matches that I could and I always found a good sized crowd on hand. I think that the NCAA-Division III Quarterfinals this past weekend helped to sum up the student body's feelings towards the girls and the hard work that they put in throughout the year. Coach Larry Bock had the team ready for the Brooklyn College team on Friday night. The Indians did what they do best, and worked together to defeat the opposition in four games.

This is my first year at Juniata, and I couldn't believe the size of the crowd that turned out for the match. The student body was in full-force as we cheered the girls on. I noticed that our girls seem to be relaxed and enjoying themselves more than other teams, which I'm sure allows them to work better together. Their team spirit helped the crowd to become more excited for that next "kill." I know that we have many other athletic teams here at Juniata, and we support them all, but I saw football players, basketball players, baseball players, students, parents, and faculty in attendance on Saturday night for the final game before qualifying for the Finals. Our team took on the team from The University of California at San Diego. The crowd was led through an "INDIAN" cheer and we were up for the game. Things didn't go as planned that night for the Indians, with the team losing to another tough squad. Throughout the match our girls showed their continual poise and talent and broke the opposition's serve a number of times and fought for every point as we knew they would. They never lost their spirit and the crowd pulled for them right up until that final point. We knew that the girls were disappointed that they didn't reach the finals, but we rose to give them a standing ovation because we appreciated all that they had done. I think that they definitely helped to bring the school a little bit closer together those two nights, and we were all very proud of them.

When I give this "congratulations" to the team I am giving it to all of the girls, not just the ones that we saw on the court, but the girls on the bench because we all know that they will be out there fighting for the team in the years to come. As it stands now, our Juniata's Tracey DeBlase spikes the ball as Brooklyn tries to block it. Teammate Mariella Gacka awaits the possible block while Jan Trissler looks on. J.C. defeated the Brooklyn team 15-4, 15-10, 13-15, and 15-3.

A Rebuilding Year

by Joe Scialabba

Inexperienced is the best way to describe the 1983-84 Juniata College Indian wrestling team.

Coach Bill Berrier, in his 24th season, feels it could be "very difficult" to better last year's 8-3 dual meet mark. "But," he adds, "if some empty spots in the upper weights are filled and the young wrestlers in the lower weights improve as the year goes on, we could surprise people come February and the Middle Atlantic Conference championships."

Berrier looks to open up the campaign with a very patchy lineup. "We have a bunch of freshmen in the lower weights and no one at 190 or unlimited. I don't expect too much right away."

Berrier says he does expect good leadership and performances from veteran seniors Rick Noll of Nazareth, Dave Sloan of Wayne, and Mark Murdoch of Camp Hill, probably at 134, 150, and 158 pounds respectively.

The schedule is a very demanding one with the Lebanon Valley Invitational opening the slate December 2-3. The MAC tournament will close the nine-date ledger that includes several multiple dual meets. The Juniata Invitational is set for January 14.

"We have a pretty tough pre-Christmas schedule," says Berrier. "Hopefully by the time we host the invitational tournament we will be set the whole way up the line-up and be very competitive."

"We are very young and inexperienced," concludes Berrier. "The success of this season depends upon how quickly we can adjust to the lack of experience and start to improve every meet. How much we can, or will improve throughout the season is going to be the key."

The complete schedule: Dec. 2-3 at Lebanon Valley Invitational, 7 WESTERN MARYLAND, 10 SUSQUEHANNA, WASHINGTON & JEFFERSON, and WIDENER; Jan. 14 JUNIATA INVITATIONAL, 18 at Gettysburg, 21 at King's, 25 at Lycoming, 28 PENN STATE — ALTOONA: Feb. 1 at Penn State — Altoona, 4 Messiah, Lycoming, at Elizabethtown, 11 MUHLENBERG, ELIZABETHTOWN and SCRANTON, 17-18 MAC's.

appeared in the Ed Sullivan, Mike Douglas and David Frost television shows and given command performances for Queen Elizabeth II and several U.S. presidents.

Soccer is the national sport in Spain and the band members travel to various colleges competing against their soccer teams. The Trinidad Tripoli Steel Band played 86 games this past year winning 84, losing one, and tying one.

The Concert Committee and Centerboard were pleased with attendance and would like to thank all those who helped make the performance a success.

Top MAC Goalie

Juniata College junior Therese Libert has concluded the 1983 field hockey season as the top goalie in the Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC).

Libert, in only her second year of field hockey play, amassed 56 saves and allowed only six goals to further Juniata's cause in 1983.

The Juniata squad finished the season as the first place team in the Southwest League of the MAC Southern Division.

"Therese worked very hard last summer," said second year coach Roslyn Hall. "She put a great deal of time in on her own to improve her game and it showed this year."

"For a girl to perform as well as Therese has this season, with only two years of field hockey experience, is quite an achievement."

"It's even a greater achievement when you consider how tough a conference the MAC is. With the likes of Franklin & Marshall, Dickinson, Scranton and Drew in the conference, it could be one of the toughest conferences anywhere," Hall concluded.

Madrigal Surf 'N Turf Dinner

Long Wait Worth It

by Kathy Manzella

This year's Madrigal dinner lived up to its reputation as being one of the most enjoyable events of the year. Many students felt that the long hours of waiting in line were worth it.

From the moment students entered Baker Refectory, the Juniata Brass Ensemble helped to set the mood for the event by playing traditional Christmas carols. The Juniata College Concert Choir then gave a fine performance singing the Latin lullaby "Jesu Parvule," followed by a medley of carols entitled "Christmas-Day."

The dinner officially began as Madrigal Committee Chairperson, Nikki Mengel welcomed all those in attendance. The Reverend Andy Murray then said the grace. The traditional Wassail Toast was given by Ron Renzini. Renzini chose to give a toast in Italian which is said traditionally at his family Christmas gatherings.

The faculty and administration then served the best meal of the year to the anxious students. Students feasted on lobster tails and steak filets.

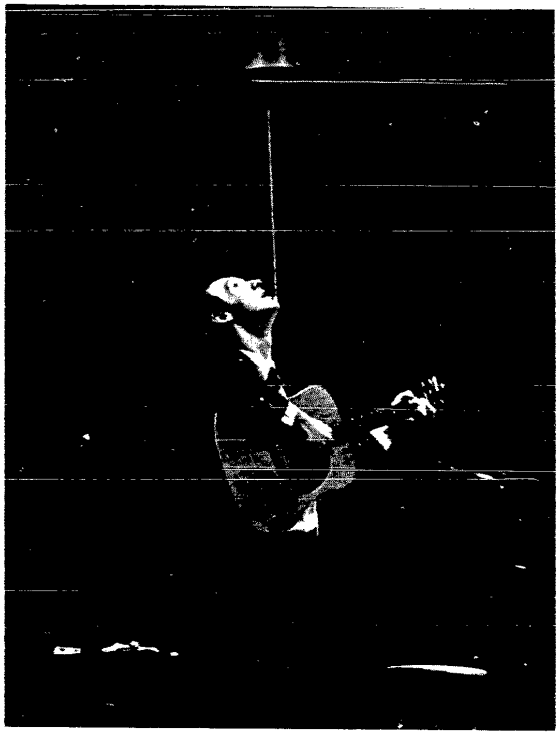
Steve de Perrot and Dan Vukmer led the entertainment immediately after dinner by performing various Christmas selections. Christmas tales were then performed by dramatists Wendy Whitehaus and Chris Collins.

The unquestionable entertainment highlight of the dinner was the performance given by Andy and Terry Murray. They tipped off their performance inviting the audience to participate in singing Jingle Bells accompanied by glasses and spoons. Next Murray led in the singing of Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer.

He then sang three original songs which were composed just for the Madrigal Dinner. The Surf 'n Turf song was a unique way to show appreciation for Norm Gopsill and the Food Service workers for serving such a fine meal. Upon request Murray performed a song he had written for last year's dinner, "Happy To Be Your Man." His final original song was entitled Merry Christmas Juniata.

The dinner ended with the traditional passing of the Light.

The night was far from over as many students then attended private parties before the Madrigal Dance. The dance turned out to be the most successful one of the year. Over 470 students danced to the music of The Front.



Michael Davis performed many balancing and juggling acts, he said, "simply for your amusement." Along with his juggling routines he sang and did comedy. Davis has been seen on Saturday Night Live and the David Letterman Show.

Davis Juggles Oller

by Maureen Morrissey

Michael Davis, comedian juggler, received two standing ovations during his performance at Oller Hall last week.

The performer, who has appeared on "Saturday Night Live" and The "David Letterman Show," sang, juggled and did several comedy routines. His act on December 6 proved unique in the way he mixed all of his talents.

He opened the show by talking about a generic airline whose aircraft is simply called, "plane". He then went into a balancing ball routine which concluded with Davis showing that the ball was stuck on his nose the whole time. He had several acts like this, yet, he did prove that his juggling was not always a joke. During the course of the evening, he juggled 5 balls and caught one on his neck; 3 bowling balls; a bowling ball, an egg, and an apple and ate the apple while juggling them all; an ax, a cleaver, and a knife. Davis specified that he would not try the neck catch with the last combination.

Davis said during his show, "I have an unusual philosophy on juggling. I don't care how many." He then picked up several objects to juggle. Whenever he dropped something he was very clever in the way he made it out like he had planned the object to drop. If a ball flew into the audience he would start talking to the person who caught it. These moments proved to be just as entertaining as the juggling act itself.

Another entertaining aspect of Davis' performance was the manner in which he handled the hecklers. It was impressive to watch him respond to each one with an amusing putdown with such timing that it almost seemed rehearsed.

New Debate Club To form at Juniata

by Mark Royer

The Juniata College Debate Club invites any interested students to join, no experience necessary. The club is just getting under way after an absence from the college campus of fifteen years.

A meeting will be scheduled for the first week after Christmas break, and club President Karrie Bercik urges students to attend. Very few students have any debating experience so students should not be intimidated. While most other colleges have debate clubs, Juniata's pre-law students and communications majors especially should find the club useful.

The club is planning to go to Penn State on January 27 to observe a college debate. Later they hope to participate in debates at the University of Pennsylvania and Shippensburg College. On campus they are planning to sponsor a debate during Winter Week open to all students.

If anyone is interested in joining, they may also contact the club officers: Vice President Rob Yelnosky, Treasurer Dave Wagner, or Secretary Randy Smith along with Bercik.

Faculty who will be helping with the club are Tom Baldino and Janet Lewis.

Walkman Give-away Scam at V103

by Alyson Pfister

Juniata's radio station, WKVR-FM (V103) was the victim of a practical joke Saturday afternoon. According to Program Director Dave Peters, an unidentified male staged a Sony Walkman give-away.

The prankster called residents from over a 10-mile radius of Huntingdon and told them that if they could identify a song in 10 seconds, they would win a Sony Walkman which was to be picked up at Ellis Hall.

Peters, obviously surprised by the appearance of the "prizewinners", immediately had a disclaimer read over the air. The disclaimer was read five times between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday. Five misled winners, came to claim their prizes until approximately 6 p.m., some from over 10 miles away & out of V103's range. There were no apparent connective ties between the five. All were of different ages and from different areas. None, however, were Juniata students.

According to Peters, some of the victims questioned the validity of the contest because the male voice never took the name of the winner. Some of the victims, however, reported that the contest sounded authentic. "Luckily," Peters stated, "no one was upset. They were actually pretty nice about it."

Mark Kirchgasser, the station's business manager noted that V103 doesn't "have enough money to give away five Walkmans anyway."

Hello . . . I've Won What?

Short-sheeting someone's bed; pennying your neighbor's door so he can't get out of his room; spraying shaving cream in your roommate's face. These are just some of the many classic practical jokes which have come down through the years of college. Sure, they're a riot at the time they happen. After all, who can't take a practical joke?

This time the practical joke was taken too far. This weekend, a telephone prank left the managers of V103 in hot water when three people from town showed up to collect the SONY Walkmans they had supposedly won from a fake telephone give away. Needless to say, the practical joke turned into a nightmare for those managers who had to talk their way out of this one.

All for what? So that some person or persons could get a big laugh from making a fool out of both V103 and the "winners"? If there is even a bit of humor in this joke, The Juniatian fails to see it.

As of yet, the pranksters have not been identified. Sad but true, the joke seems to be one which was probably carried out by JC students, not townspeople.

The Juniatian thinks everyone, especially the pranksters, should be aware of a few things about their "harmless" joke. Aside from the embarrassment and inconvenience caused to V103, the "recipients" must be considered, too. We are almost sure that the pranksters never stopped to consider that one of the homes they called was occupied by an elderly couple over seventy years old. Or what about the people who drove over 10 miles for their prize? At best, The Juniatian considers this joke thoughtless and rude.

Fortunately for all involved, this particular prank resulted in no harm. However, because it didn't happen this time does not take away from the fact that this telephone prank could have caused harm to the elderly couple or anybody else for that matter.

Practical jokes are only practical when they are both funny and harmless. The Juniatian is unable to classify telephone pranks as either.

With last night's arrest, Juniata's "If I Was a Thief" campaign has become somewhat controversial.

The new security measure is said to work something like this: campus security guards now carry with them stickers stating "If I Was a Thief". If they discover an open door or window on their rounds, they place this sticker on a valuable item to let the student know how vulnerable his possessions are to theft. Surfacely, this appears to be a good idea. Yet flaws have already been discovered.

Kris Kringle, a robust man with a full white beard, was arrested last evening when caught following the security guard on duty. He was carrying a sack in which several items were found, bearing the telltale mark of "If I Was a Thief". Kringle was escorted to the Huntingdon police station, where anxious reporters were eventually allowed to interview him.

Kringle (who also goes by the alias "Santa Claus") claims to be quite in control of his senses and motives. "Christmas," he said, "has simply become too commercial. Commercialism makes for good Christmases for the materialistic rich, while the poor have to rely on the spirit of the season. Frankly, I think the poor have the right idea. But those at the top of the capitalist system make them feel like they're missing something."

Admitting to becoming rather cynical in his old age, Kringle went on. "I'm growing weary of giving gifts to kids that already have everything. They're grateful for an hour, or maybe even a day, then forget me as they incorporate my presents into their selfish little worlds. It's the smiles of the children who have so little — those to whom even a small token can mean so much — that can touch my heart. This is where my concentration shall lie from here on. Any gifts bearing my name in rich households will have to be forged by the parents."

Upon Kringle's arrest, found in his sack were three new albums, a down jacket, a portable radio, a pair of skis and a box of cookies. The cookies were not marked with "If I Was a Thief", but being Archways, Kringle claims, "They should have been."

When asked the reason to resort to stealing this year, Kringle denied the existence of a singular cause. He did, however, relate that his "elves went on strike. Higher wages. They already earn an above-average living. I can't believe they're giving up the cause for money, they know what we're to stand for. So essentially, production has halted, and I have access to relatively few toys. The Robin Hood method seemed to be the way to meet the obligations of my job. Juniata College has helped me immensely in pointing out with these catchy stickers just what commodities are in demand. I'm sure they will make fine gifts."

It was pointed out to Kringle that he sounded rather socialist, and what about the American Way?

"You Americans forget that I am not American myself, but live at the North Pole. If I were to live the American Way as pushed com-

Question: What do you want from Santa Claus?

Steve Helm, Sophomore and Elizabeth Radcliffe, Freshman: "Twenty feet of snow — each!"

Mark Murdoch, Senior: "A hundred people to show up at our wrestling matches."

Sheri Kidd, Freshman: "A 4.0 — without studying."

David Sweitzer, Senior: "A car."

Melynda Davis, Senior: "What a question! I can't even tell my own mother what I want from Santa!"

Rape Awareness Prevention Program

Editor's Note: Rape is the most serious, frightening and violent of all crimes against women. Victims find the experience painful, humiliating and emotionally disturbing. The most important thing to remember is that the rapist frequently plans his crime. He often looks for the right chance and the easiest victim. The best defense is to eliminate his opportunity to attack. Play it safe and follow routine precautions.

The second in a series of four, the following gives a list of safety precautions for a variety of situations. The Juniatian would like to thank Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life, and the Student Services Office for providing the information for this series.

How to Avoid Assault Situations in the Residence Halls

- Before you go to bed at night, make sure your door is locked
- Always lock your door when your room is not occupied
- Don't admit someone you aren't familiar with to your room
- Report unescorted/unfamiliar guests in your residence hall to your Resident Assistant or Residence Director
- Report any maintenance/safety problems, i.e., lights burned out, faulty door locks, untrimmed bushes

How to Avoid Date/Acquaintance Rape

- Openly communicate with your date
- Don't accept rides with people you just met at a lounge, party or bar
- Avoid "private locations" such as one's apartment during the first few dates
- Don't invite a date in afterwards until you're very familiar with each other
- Get to know your date prior to spending time with him alone — double dates or luncheon dates are comfortable "beginnings"

How to Avoid Assault Situations in Your Car

- Have the car key in hand when you go to your car
- Before getting in, check the floor of the back seat for intruders
- Have house keys in hand when getting out of your car at home
- If it's late (dark), don't go to your car alone if you can avoid it
- When parking in a lot, choose one with an attendant if possible — otherwise, park in well-lit areas and always lock the car
- Keep your car doors locked and windows up when driving
- Never pick up hitchhikers — of either sex
- If you suspect your car is being followed, drive into a busy, well-lit business establishment and call your law enforcement agency
- Avoid stops at poorly-lit or out-of-the-way places, even for car service
- If you have car trouble, signal for help by raising the hood or tying a white handkerchief to the door handle — remain inside car with doors locked until identified help arrives — should another motorist offer to help, roll down window only an inch and ask him to call police or sheriff's department
- Make sure you have enough gas for your entire trip before you start
- If you want to help the driver of a disabled vehicle, don't stop and get out of your car — report it and send help

Avoid Assault Situations While Walking

- Avoid walking alone as much as possible — your best defense is having other people nearby
- Avoid poorly lit streets, unpopulated areas, alleys, vacant lots and buildings
- Walk on the side of the street facing traffic — that way, you can see all automobiles approaching you
- Walk briskly with an air of self-confidence and purpose
- Look as if you know where you are heading even if you are a bit lost — if you are lost and need directions, seek help from a police officer, a store clerk, or a gas station attendant
- Keep your distance from alleys, curbs, business entrances and shrubbery — walking in the middle of the sidewalk as opposed to on either side is a good safety precaution
- Be alert — an awareness of someone as soon as he begins following you will give you an extra few, very vital, minutes to react appropriately
- Change your routine periodically

Student Government Talks Money

by Joy Hadley

Discussion involving money was the highlight of the December 5 Student Government meeting.

Rory McAvoy, Student Government president, opened up the meeting with remarks about the possibility of a new student loan whereby students might receive up to $7,000.

Boston College initiated a lobbying group to go to Washington to try to establish an endowment fund with the federal government. Under the terms of the fund, undergraduate as well as graduate students would be able to apply for a loan regardless of parents' income. Repayment would be through a payroll tax based on the salary of the loan recipient. With this method the loan would not be an undue burden.

Clearly the program is in its experimental stage; however, Juniata has been asked to support the organization by becoming a charter member of the lobby group. In this way, Juniata students would be assured of receiving information about the loan. The motion was passed by the Senate to join the organization provided that Juniata takes a "wait and see" stance on the project.

McAvoy, and vice president, Chris "Corky" Collins attended a meeting with William Alexander, Vice President for Business Affairs, to discuss "Why tuition goes up?" Collins reported that Alexander opened up the discussion immediately by allowing them to ask any questions they wished. After urging the Senators to get input from the student body Collins asked whether there were any immediate questions. Linda Fultz (Off Campus College Senator) responded by asking "What kinds of steps are they taking to keep the costs down?". Peggy Evans (South Dorm Senator) followed with "What is the breakdown of actual tuition?", that is, on what do they spend the money. Tim McCarthy (North East Dorm Senator) added, "What about the administrative costs?" The only restriction on questioning was the individual salaries of the faculty, but nevertheless there were some requests for general figures. Student Government strongly urges that the students give their Senators input and ask questions about these matters.

Heading the list of the Student Concerns Committee report was the possibility of initiating a consistent policy on how late a student can drop a course. At the present time, the decision is up to the discretion of the professors. In addition, there were discussions about buying the washers and dryers, creating an alternate meal plan, and developing some type of uniform quiet hours.

Under the heading of "New Business" Greg Kimble wanted something done about the lack of hot water in East Houses, specifically Flory-Kline. Kimble stated that the Maintenance Department has been notified, but the problem still persists.

Fall Dismissal Breakdown

by Sandy Beard

There has been growing concern over a situation which could affect any Juniata student. Specifically, students may be dismissed from the campus, or withdraw of their own free will. The 1983 Fall trimester is of particular interest: as of December 2, campus enrollment was down 3.9% (less 48 students), whereas the 1982 figure for the same time period was 2.3% (29 students). Despite this sizable increase, a twelve year trend indicates that since the implementation of the term system the average Fall term attrition rate is 3% (36 students). Thus, 1983's figure hovers between the 12-year high of 4.2% and the low of 2.2%.

Several reasons account for student attrition. Factors uncontrollable by the college administration include illness, financial difficulties, and a mismatch between students and the curriculum. However, Mr. Kevin McCullen, Assistant to the President for Planning and Research at Juniata, cites low grade point averages as the single largest cause of withdrawal this term. Last term, 35 dismissals were attributed to academics, compared to 10 in the Fall of 1982. Thirteen students appealed this dismissal successfully, with 12 actually re-enrolling, whereas six appeals led to readmittance in 1982.

Despite the large number of students not returning, the number of Juniatians on Academic Probation remains at its 1982 level of 86. Administration policy on Academic Probation and dismissal (v. PATHFINDER pp 21 49-50) becomes increasingly demanding as units are progressively accumulated, thus exemplifying the faculty and Academic Standards Committee's desire to maintain high academic standards. McCullen believes that the situation is not alarming. First, Fall term in itself does not necessarily indicate a trend. More importantly, dismissal is based on the accumulation of four terms of academic probation, or two consecutive terms of "Ac Pro".

Usually a student withdrawing from Juniata is either a freshman or a sophomore. Last term's breakdown was as follows: two Seniors, 7 Juniors, 10 Sophomores, and 5 Freshmen. Obviously, most Freshmen have not accumulated enough credits to be dismissed on the basis of unsatisfactory academic performance, while students who achieve Junior status generally choose to complete their studies at Juniata.

Relatively speaking, the Administration's recruitment record is good. Entering students who eventually graduated with Bachelor's degrees comprised 60% of the student population at Juniata during the 1970's. McCullen is encouraged by the fact that this number is increasing steadily. Sixty-two percent of the entering class of 1977 graduated with degrees in 1981. This figure is now approaching 70%. The message seems to be that although high educational standards are sought by faculty, administration and students, the college has a marked stake in providing effective support systems which ensure student success. This support is more than rhetoric. Operationally, it includes quality instruction and counseling services. Faculty and advisors are readily accessible outside the classroom for students who need academic help. Moreover, the Registrar's Office monitors student performance with the intention of identifying "problems" not targeted by instructors and advisors. In conclusion, the main responsibility is the student's.

Canadian-US Relations to be Discussed

U.S.-Canadian relations will be discussed tonight as Juniata College's Baker Lecture Series continues.

The 7 p.m. program in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge will feature Dr. David V.J. Bell, professor of political science and dean of graduate studies at York University in Toronto. His lecture is entitled "On Living Next to an Elephant: Reflections on Canadian-U.S. Relations."

A native of Toronto, Dr. Bell attended York University as an undergraduate and earned his Ph.D. in political science from Harvard University. Among his many publications is "The Roots of Disunity," a book about Canadian Volunteers are needed for the Annual Support Fund Campaign Phonathon to Alumni to help raise money for scholarships, athletic competition, building maintenance and general college expenses.

Prizes will be awarded to the residence hall and caller that receive the largest dollar amount in pledges. South placed first and East Houses ran a close second in last year's campaign, stated Russ Rupiper, Director of the Support Fund Campaign.

There will be a short training seminar before each calling session. Students will be advised how to handle almost any phone conversation before actually making the calls themselves, said Rupiper. If students do not wish to make the calls, there are many other jobs connected with the Phonathon which need to be filled.

Sign up sheets will be posted by R.A.s the second week in January. Each residence hall will be asked to make calls for one night out of each of the two weeks of the campaign, January 22 thru February 9. Calls will be made Monday through Thursday nights from 6:30 till 9:30 in Shoemaker Galleries.

Yugoslav Prof. Impressed

Cheering fans supporting the women's volleyball team has become quite common at Juniata College. But for one person watching last weekend's NCAA Regional Tournament, it was a unique experience.

"In Yugoslavia, the teaching of sports is emphasized at the university level, not sports competition between schools," says Dr. Janez Stanonik, head of the English department and former dean of the University of Ljubljana. The Yugoslav educator has been visiting Juniata since Nov. 30 as the guest of President Frederick M. Binder, and is lecturing to several English, history and political science classes.

Stanonik was impressed by the spirit of the students at the volleyball tournament and by their classroom performance. "Our classes are all lectures. The students are trained to listen and take notes on what the professor is saying. There are no seminar classes as such and little opportunity for discussion. I think this is unfortunate."

According to Stanonik, the main purpose of universities in Yugoslavia is to train teachers. "Right now however, there are too many teachers, so students are going into other fields." All education in Yugoslavia is free.

A member of the Ljubljana faculty since 1959, Stanonik teaches English literature and is particularly fond of 19th century American writers, especially Herman Melville. "I became interested in Melville after I heard a Princeton University professor give a lecture on the author," Stanonik explains. American literature became popular in Yugoslavia between the first and second world wars, but books were often difficult to obtain. In 1973, Stanonik published a book on Melville that took him 10 years to write, including a year in the United States researching the author of "Moby Dick," "Billy Budd" and other American classics.

"In recent years, there has been a large influx of students studying the Humanities, and this has many educators in Yugoslavia worried," Stanonik notes. "We need people in other fields such as science and math."

Regardless of what field of study a student pursues however, the courses will be clearly laid out. "Our students do not have the flexibility in course selection that American students have. The requirements are specific and leave little time for courses outside their program of study."

Although Yugoslavia is a Communist country, it is clearly independent from direct Soviet influence. "We maintain contacts with both east and west, and U.S.-Yugoslav relations are good. The people of Yugoslavia perceive the United States as a friendly nation," Stanonik says.

Since World War II, English studies have increased in popularity in Yugoslavia. Students are required to take eight years of foreign language study in the primary and secondary schools, and English is the most popular language. "At the University of Ljubljana, the English studies department is much larger than the Russian studies department," Stanonik points out.

Although the English language is studied extensively, most Yugoslav Universities offer few, if any, courses in American history, geography or government. "This is unfortunate, but we do not have individuals trained in these areas, and it is difficult to get American professors to come to Yugoslavia because of the language problem," Stanonik says. However, this is precisely how Stanonik met Juniata's president. In 1967, Dr. Binder became the first Fulbright lecturer in American history assigned to Yugoslavia.

Stanonik will remain at Juniata until Dec. 16, and there is little doubt the visit will leave a lasting impression on him. "This visit has been a wonderful experience for me, and I will return to Yugoslavia with fond memories of Juniata College, its students, faculty and staff."

The photography exhibit in Beeghley Library's lobby was compiled by this year's and last year's Photography I students.

"The prints are very good," remarked David Tait, Juniata's Professor of Photography. "They show a good assimilation of basic photographic techniques and embody emotional and spiritual qualities."

As a teacher, Tait tries to get students to see beyond the everyday world and maximize their creative talents.

"I try to keep students out of the 'memory jog' trap when they are photographing only objects that are familiar or important to them — like Rover, Aunt Sally, or their boyfriend/girlfriend at the beach."

A familiar or bothersome object can be generated into a theme, however. For example, Tait's own photographic exhibit An Experience in American Social Dancing emerged from his own sense of discomfort in large crowds.

Both the photographer and audience feel connected to pictures, believes Tait. "That's why photography is so popular," he claims, "it is accessible and everywhere."

Hot Wax

by Tom Hildebrandt

YES's 90125 debuted at number 3 on the album charts 4 weeks ago and has made a steady climb to number 1. Featured on the album are original YES members Jon Anderson (vocals) and Chris Squire (bass guitars and vocals) along with former YES member Alan White (drums, percussion, vocals). Missing from the group are Steve Howe and Geoff Downes who left YES in the 80's to form ASIA, whose first album debuted in 1982. 90125's producer, Trevor Horn, is a former YES member and helped write 2 songs on the new album.

The popular cuts on the album are "Owner of a Lonely Heart" and "It Can Happen." These two songs are not typical YES but have an upbeat melody and appealing lyrics. More mellow and "YES-like" songs include "Our Song" and "City of Love" in which keyboard solos and somewhat overpowering drumming is prevalent.

The vocals on the album have a sort of electrified sound to them and it seems as though YES has used a voice echo or synthesizer to enhance Jon Anderson's vocals on many of the tracks. Another hint that YES has discovered the age of extravagant electronics is found in their use of an Apple computer to create the design for the cover of 90125.

As unique as the album's content is its title 90125 which is derived from the Universal Product Code (UPC) symbol of the album. YES still hangs on to the oddities that made them what they are today, atypical.

Exceptional production and sound quality make the album very listenable. I would rate this album as "light" rock with an almost sporadic sound typical of older YES on some cuts. The new and old are mixed throughout the album and make the album great for background at parties or for easy listening.

South's Semi-formal Grosses Record Amount

by Michele Bartol

The annual South's Semi-formal held in both South Hall lounges was a huge success this past weekend. All 525 tickets were sold before 3 p.m. Saturday.

The 1983-84 RHA president Fran Fry noted that this year's party was more successful than last year's in both profit earned and student co-operation.

The RHA of South grossed 1250 dollars. This represents a profit of approximately 250 dollars. According to Fry, this figure surpassed last year's by almost 50%.

All residents of South were encouraged to help make decorations during the week. Final decorating of the two lounges used began Saturday morning. Ken Kramer, RHA treasurer, was pleased with the turnout of help. "It was a lot of work, but well worth it when you see so many people having such a good time."

A lot of the excitement centered around this event was due to the limited amount of students that can take part in the festivities. Only 525 tickets, the entertaining capacity of South Hall, were available for sale. Each resident was given three tickets. Anyone not living in South had to obtain tickets from a resident. Any tickets left were sold to the public Saturday morning beginning at 10:30.

Students weren't the only participants. Complimentary tickets were given to faculty and staff members as well. Among the many attending were Professors Sue Esch and Thomas Nolan, along with Coach Bill Berrier.

The Semi-formal is a special activity for most students that comes only once a year. After all, how often do students go to parties in something other than jeans? A lot of the fun is just dressing up and seeing everyone else dressed up too. It helps everyone appreciate this very special time of year.

One student remarked, "It was my best weekend here. Everybody had a good time dancing, socializing and taking lots of pictures." All in all, the atmosphere and the people made for an enjoyable evening.

RHA officers would like to thank all those who helped make the party a success.

As the holiday season approaches, many of us will soon be thinking about and making those traditional new year resolutions. For some it will be an attempt to quit smoking or take off extra pounds, while others will resolve to be a better person, make new friends or something similarly important. Many students will do those things that good students are supposed to do. For those of you who find yourselves in this latter category, please read on. What follows is an attempt to help you keep your new year resolutions.

A key to being a successful student is time management. Research in the area of study behavior suggests that the single most often reason given by students for not doing well academically is poor use of time. It is my opinion that most of us can learn just about anything if we give ourselves enough time. How do we, then, give ourselves enough time?

A generally accepted rule of thumb is that students ought to study at least two hours outside of class for every hour spent in class. Since most JC students carry three units, one would expect to spend at least six hours a day in study. Remember, this is just a rule of thumb, and you may have to make some adjustments. If you devote 30-35 hours per week to effective study, you should be meeting with some success.

Another suggestion is referred to as the principle of distributed practice. In other words, do not allow work to pile up. Break tasks down into manageable parts. A 60-page chapter in psychology may very well be broken down into three, 20-page sub-tasks. It only seems reasonable that one can handle smaller tasks more efficiently than larger, more overwhelming tasks.

If at all possible, review your lecture notes immediately following class. Since the material is still fresh in your mind, retention is greatly enhanced by devoting as little as 10-15 minutes to review right after the lecture. Do not wait until the exam is a few days away to begin to review your lecture notes.

Next time we will discuss some additional ways to achieve academic success including ways to create an effective study environment. Have a wonderful holiday and see you next year.

mercially, I would give a home computer to a rich ten-year-old instead of a solid meal to a child who might need it. Christmas isn't about things, but about meeting needs, and love between people. Unfortunately, there are a lot of parents out there who are signing my name to home computers. I realize I am being connected to the system. I'd like to take this opportunity to publicly denounce my support for this."

Kringle's trial is set for January 4. It is rumored that Santa Sympathizers are trying to raise the $1000 bail necessary for Kringle's release during the Christmas holiday. A countermovement, the KKK (Kan Kringle Kampaign) seems to be developing as well, made of concerned Americans who don't want "any damn subversive for Santa Claus."

When asked to comment, Kringle merely laughed, "Hohoho. As if it's an office to run for."

In response to the request for a statement, Kringle said, "I just want people to know that I'm here, and why. If I don't get out of here before Christmas, I hope my friends don't hold it against me. Independent of my release, I ask that people try to care about and appreciate each other this Christmas. Maybe it will rub off onto some of the other days of the year. Then you might find that you really don't need me that much at all."

Kringle wishes everyone a very merry Christmas.

Juniata students will receive their stolen items after the trial.

LAGNAF Benefits Ski Club

by Linda Ramsay

Entertainment was the key to success last Tuesday night. After a hilarious two hours with comedian-juggler Michael Davis, the crowds swarmed into Sherwood's basement for musical entertainment with the debut performance of Chris "Corky" Collins and the LAGNAF Band.

Before a packed coffeehouse, the LAGNAF Band filled the air with tunes from Robert Hazard, the Cars and many others. Not only was the band successful, but the coffeehouse earned the ski team, which sponsored the event, over $400 to pay travel expenses for away races. Jack Makdad, president of the ski team, said that he was happy with the success of the coffeehouse. He also noted, "the band drew such a capacity crowd that we wished Sherwood was bigger."

The main reason for the success of the coffeehouse was the LAGNAF Band. Backed up by members Eric Barnes, Dan Vukmer, Tom Welch and Steve De Perrot, "Corky" Collins' appearance as lead singer drew the crowds. It was the band's first coffeehouse of the year. According to Jack Makdad, the band is looking forward to future engagements.

To top off the night's activities, the ski team held a drawing for their raffle at the stroke of midnight. Two grand prizes were awarded which included a complete ski package including four trips to Blue Knob with the ski club. The first prize was a pair of goggles and the second prize was a Bota ski bag.

The ski team expressed its gratitude to all involved with the coffeehouse including Tom Welch, Nancy Briggs and John Lynch who helped with advertising. Special thanks should be noted for the LAGNAF Band which donated its talents towards the success of the ski team's fund raiser.

Chris Corry, Dave Hostetter and Lucy Heggenstaller, 1983 Juniata graduates, are a part of the Church of the Brethren Volunteer Service program. After a 4-week orientation, these volunteers are to work a one-year assignment related to peace and justice goals. They have already departed for their assignments. Corry is with the International Fellowship of Reconciliation in the Netherlands. Hostetter is the Washington office director for the National Coalition on TV violence. Heggenstaller is an assistant to the Central America team of the Washington Office on Latin America.

AT&T Breakup May Triple Campus Phone Bills

"The cost of living in the residence halls will rise," predicts Allan Slagel, a junior at Indiana University.

"Billing will be horrible," adds freshman Mark Kurowski.

They're probably right, for when students return to campuses nationwide in January they'll be facing the brave new world of telephone service brought on by the breakup of AT&T. Kurowski, a business major who actually has tried to calculate the impact on student phone bills, estimates his own dorm bill of $20 to $50 a month may rise to $35 to $65.

Some observers think basic campus phone services may triple in cost.

In early December, a group of higher education associations predicted the higher phone rates caused by the breakup could "devastate" research libraries that use phone lines to tie into shared data bases.

The National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges estimates some schools may pay up to $500,000 more a year in phone bills.

While no one yet knows the exact impact on students themselves, Kurowski concludes the breakup will "make dorm life harder."

The event, of course, is the breakup of giant AT&T. As of January 1st, 1984, AT&T will spin off into eight separate companies: a massive long-distance phone and communications company still called AT&T, plus seven regional companies that will handle local telephone service and any other kinds of businesses they can develop.

The breakup will mean a number of changes in phone costs as well as in the way people get phone service.

In the past, AT&T kept residential and local phone rates low by charging artificially-high long-distance rates. The profits from long-distance calls went to help pay for local service.

But after the breakup, the regional phone companies will have to charge customers enough to make a profit off local service, too.

After January 1st, when the actual breakup becomes official, students can get the hardware — the actual telephone — from any equipment seller, Berryman adds.

Students with their own phones will be subject to the same residential rates as everyone else.

In an interview after the show, Davis said he had a good time at Juniata and enjoyed performing at colleges because everyone is "young and enthusiastic and they don't know any better." He's performed at about 60 colleges, he said. He did not like to in the beginning of his career because they would put him in the cafeteria and the students would be cruel because they didn't know him. It took them half the show before they realized they liked him, but by that time Davis was out of patience.

Davis went to clown college and started performing in San Francisco 10 years ago and was only "discovered" in New York about 2 or 3 years ago.

Davis will now go to New York, where he lives. His next performance is at the White House.

Govt. Stalls Grants

Washington, D.C. (CPS) — The program that allowed students to consolidate all their school loans and stretch out the payment times for them "has gone the way of blue suede shoes" for the moment, aid officials in Washington report.

The Senate recessed in November without passing a bill that would have continued the program through the next three years, and political considerations probably will stop the Senate from passing it when it reconvenes in January, says Dennis Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

Students who already have lumped their school loans together under the Student Loan Marketing Association (usually called Sallie Mae) program won't be affected by the program's ending.

But Martin says no more students will be able to consolidate their loans with Sallie Mae until Congress comes up with some kind of replacement in the future.

Under the new bill, students would have had to pay nine or 10 percent interest on their loans, compared to the seven percent they now pay. Moreover, they would have to pay the loans back over 15 years instead of the 20 year period they now have.

In addition, the new bill would have prohibited state loan agencies from making consolidation loans to students.

"There are some real differences of opinion (in the Senate) over allowing state agencies to participate (in making consolidation loans)," Martin says. "It probably won't pass this time."

In that event, "the people already in the program will continue in it, but (the program) won't be available for any new people" after it expired in November.

But Martin is "hopeful the program will be passed as part of the (new) Higher Education Reauthorization Act," which may not come to a vote until late 1984 or early 1985.

But students who use phones provided by their schools may face even higher rate hikes.

To minimize the problem, some schools are asking the government for a special break.

The group of higher education associations worried about the "devastating effect" of the higher phone costs in early December asked the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to exempt colleges from certain new fees for at least five years.

The group, in a written plea for exemption from the fees, said the access charges would punish campuses with Centrex systems, which centralize campus lines through one switchboard. Under the new FCC rules, each and every phone line on campus going into the central switchboard would be subject to an access charge.

Higher Education Cuts Back

(CPS) — An analyst of how state legislatures fund colleges says states nationwide are cutting back on their support of higher education, that the long-term outlook is gloomy, and that they ought to consider closing some state colleges in order to save others.

Tax cuts and the recession have forced many states to slow the growth in the amount of money they give to colleges, says Steven Gold, who analyzes government financing for the National Conference on State Legislatures.

As a result, Gold foresees ongoing cutbacks on public campuses, schools charging students higher tuition to help compensate for funding cutbacks, and even some "small private colleges" who will ask state governments to contribute money to help keep them alive.

"With the number of college graduates expected to decrease in most states and with the fiscal outlook fairly gloomy," Gold says, "I think higher education will continue to take its lumps in most states."

But the man on whose research Gold bases his prognosis disagrees strongly.

"The implication that (state funding of colleges) is about to fall on its face is simply wrong," says Dr. M.M. Chambers, an Illinois State University professor who compiles higher education funding statistics from all the states.

"There has been no cutback," he says. "The rate of growth (of funding) has declined by two percent, compared with the prior two-year period. But we've always had gains. The net gain has been 11 to 12 percent in the past two years."

Chambers points out that the rate of growth in state funding of higher education has been slowing since the 1960s, when state funding increased by 40 percent in one period.

But Gold insists the long-term decline will continue "partly due to the fact that most states cut their taxes in the wake of the tax revolt" and "the depressing effect" of the recession on state revenues.

Although many states have passed increases in the last year, "the tax increases of 1983 in general are less than the tax cuts that preceded them," he says.

He says the relationship between taxes and personal income is "still lower than it was five years ago."

As a result, "the prognosis is not very bright," he concludes.

With less money to spend, Gold thinks "school closings is an option that ought to be considered. In many states, we don't need the number of institutions that we have now by a long shot."

"States," he says, "will have to choose whether they want a small number of strong institutions or a large number of somewhat-weaker institutions."

In closing the meeting McAvoy told the Senators to "take the initiative". However, it's not just up to the members of Student Government; students who have concerns about Juniata should also take the initiative. Student Government meetings are opened to the entire campus. The date and time of the meetings are posted outside the Student Government office downstairs in Ellis.

Co-Rec V-Ball

by Kathy Harwick

Well, here we are back for another academic term and yet another round of intramurals. This term there has been a slight differing of the rules. Now teams have the choice of playing in either an A league or a B league. The A division is for those teams who are really serious and want to play competitive volleyball, whereas the B division is for teams who are just out to play fun, recreational volleyball. Once again the winter intramural season has received a good turnout of Co-Rec volleyball teams, with fourteen competitive teams and fourteen recreational teams fighting to claim their division's championship and a chance to get an intramural t-shirt or hat.

The first matches were played on Wednesday, December 7. In the competitive division A, Les Enfants Terribles, headed by Jumping Jim Donaldson, defeated the Woo, 15-4, 15-9. Other victories went to Phase 9, 15-2, 15-6, against Merlin's Minstrels, to Geriatric Ward with a 15-13, 15-11 win over "Send in the Clowns," and to the Invaders, 9-15, 15-9, 11-2, who battled against Rappin' Jim Laphan and his 407 and Buddies. The Flattii handed a win to the Mixed Nuts by forfeiting their first game. (Not a good start, Flattii.)

The recreational division B also saw some action Wednesday night. Out to Lunch was out-to-lunch when they lost the first game of the match to "The Other Team", 9-15, but came back to win 15-13, 11-0 with Joey Ruhl serving an awesome, third game shut-out. "Serving No Purpose" and B.H. and the P. seemed evenly matched with one game a piece, when time ran out and "Serving No Purpose" was defeated 11-15, 15-6, 2-3. Rob Yelnosky and the Bumpin' Humpers II bee bopped the Bee Bopps, 15-13, 15-6, the Happy Jacks beat the Den of Degradation 15-1, 15-12, and Ginny Krall's team defeated Julie Buckley's team 15-9, 15-1 to conclude the first night of Co-Rec play.

Sunday, December 11 also saw some tough Co-Rec play. In division A, Dave Dann had a long night of serving when he popped fifteen consecutive balls over the net to shut-out Merlin's Minstrels 15-0 in the first game and then completed the win 15-7 in the second game. In other team play, The Woo defeated "Send in the Clowns" 11-15, 15-7, 11-6, while Send in the Clowns II lost to N.D.T.L.O.C. (what does that mean?) 19-17, 15-4, and the Blood Clotters beat Great Expectations 15-6, 12-15, 11-6.

In division B play, TCR Bites Back bit back Miller Time 15-11, 12-15, 11-5 and "the Other Team" jumped the Bumpin' Humpers II 15-11, 8-15, 12-10. Something I hate to see is forfeits, but the Quantum Leaps were forfeited a win by Extra Deep Pockets (I think you should stop playing in your pockets and start playing some v-ball), and Julie Buckley's team was forfeited a win by Den of Degradation. (Come on guys, get out of your hole. What are you, hermits?)

Even after my previous sarcastic remarks, so far it looks like good, fun Co-Rec volleyball is being played, but it's hard to say who looks like they'll wind up on top so early in team play. I'd like to wish all the teams good luck and remember, it doesn't matter if you win or lose, it's how you play the game. So keep up that I.M. enthusiasm and sportsmanship, let's cut out the forfeiting, and have a Merry Christmas.

Women's B-ball

by Michelle Bartol

Flipper Five, a veteran team from last season, began this year's action with a big win against the Dribblers, 57-24.

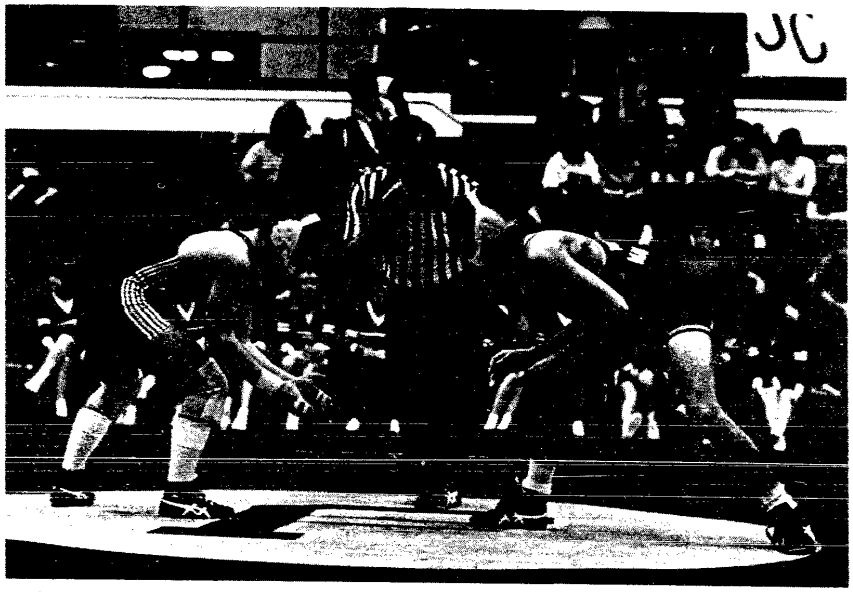
Suzanne Hickle and Cindy "Bird" Bowman connected for sure-point fast breaks. Working together, the two totaled 14 points. Karie Bercik and Therese (all-star goalie) Libert played tough defense for the Dribblers but couldn't capitalize on any Flipper mistakes. The rebounding power of Linda 'Scoop' Ramsey and Kathy Harwick made any Dribbler second-attempt shots far and few between.

Michelle Bevard was easily the defensive player of the game with 8 steals.

Karie Bercik, captain of the Dribblers, is looking forward to playing them again. Bercik contributes their poor performance to inadequate practice time. "Next time we'll give them more of a battle."

This year's Girls I.M. basketball league consists of five teams playing a round-robin tournament. The next game is scheduled for Tuesday of this week at 8:30. The Varsity vs. Bock's Babies will be pitted against each other in this game.

Future games will be scheduled for after break.



Juniata's Al Kruezburg prepares to take on a Western Maryland opponent during last Wednesday's match.

Men's I.M.'s Begin

by Andy Hiscock

The Intramural Basketball season has begun. I will be giving you a weekly account of every "slam", "rejection", "swish", "in your face" move and any other adverbs that I think are necessary to give you a good feeling of the intensity of play throughout the season. Each week along with all of the scores, I will highlight two teams from each of the three Divisions ("A", "B", "C") to give some of the guys playing well a chance to be known. This year Intramural Basketball is broken up into three individual Divisions that will be at three different levels and will hold their own playoffs at the end of the season.

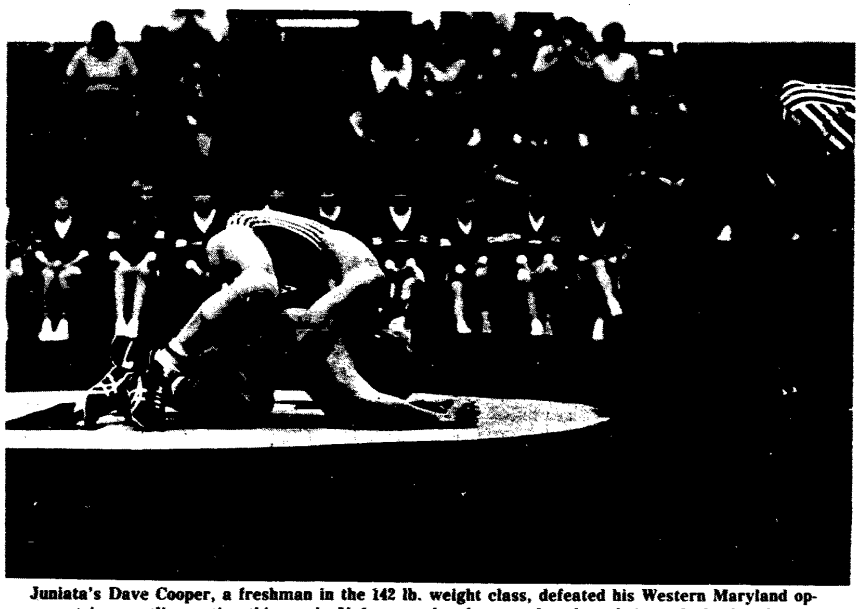
Division "A" is considered "competitive" and it is composed of seven teams. Each team will play every other team in the division twice to complete their twelve game season. The top four teams at the end of the season will then advance to the play-offs. The play-offs will pit the 1st place team against the 4th place team and the 2nd and 3rd place teams will play each other to determine the two teams earning a trip to the finals. Division "A" games will be played on Mondays and Thursdays with games scheduled to begin at 8:30 and 9:30 P.M. At the time of printing, no games have been played.

Division "B" will be considered the "Recreational" Division and is composed of thirteen teams. Each team will play every other team in their division once to complete their twelve game season. The top six teams in the division at the end of the regulation season will reach the play-offs and the 1st and 2nd place teams will receive a first round bye. Division "B" will begin their season on December 8 and will have their games on Mondays and Thursdays at 8:30 and 9:30 P.M.

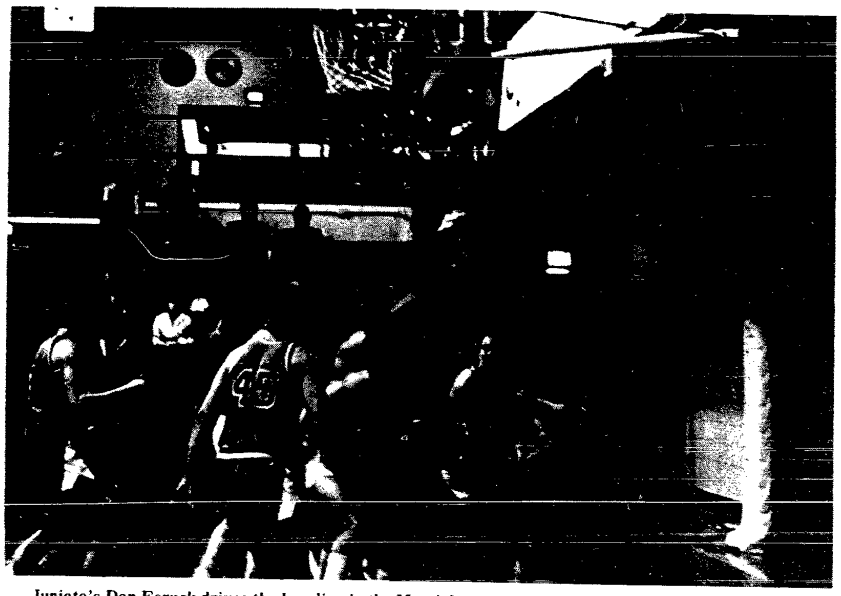
Division "C" will be considered as "just for fun" even though I'm sure that everyone will be out to win. Division "C" is made up of six teams with the top three teams reaching the play-offs. The first place team will receive a first round bye. Each team will play all other teams in their division twice to complete their ten game season. Games will be played on Sundays and Tuesdays in the Memorial Gym with games scheduled for 5:30, 6:30, and 7:30 P.M.

On Thursday December 8th, Division "B" began its season. The highlighted game was between the "Running Rebels" and "Alex's Hit Men." The Rebels were able to keep Alex in hand and won the game 58-41. Randy Ketchum was playing well underneath and Tom Wilkinson was able to crash the boards effectively for the Rebels even though Steve Lecrone pulled down a few rebounds for Alex. In other "B" Division action on Thursday, The "Greek Rimmers" had a pretty good day as they destroyed "The Spoilers" 63-25. It's still very early in the season, so I hope that "The Spoilers" have enough time to regroup. "Babylon by Bus" defeated the "Goon Squad" 55-46 . . . "While Corky's Creampuffs II" beat "Pat's Red Cockadades" 29-26.

On Sunday December 11th, "The Cripples" were able to overcome "The White Man's Disease" 41-21 . . . and the "Sturgeon Lips" played "The Lust Brigade" but no scores were reported. The Highlighted game in Division "C" this week was a game between "The Big Ganglers" and "B.A.M.F.'s." Jim Frye was hitting from medium range and Jim Fralik was feeding his teammates well, which enabled the Ganglers to win a close game 48-41. Everyone is welcome to attend any scheduled game.



Juniata's Dave Cooper, a freshman in the 142 lb. weight class, defeated his Western Maryland opponent in wrestling action this week. Unfortunately, the grapplers lost their early lead and were defeated 26-18.



Juniata's Dan Feruck drives the baseline in the Messiah game. Feruck had 12 points in the game. J.C. lost 59-50.

Men Drop 3

by Joe Scialabba

The Juniata men's basketball team lost three straight games last week to drop to 1-5 heading into the final week of the December schedule. In all three losses last week the Indians trailed at halftime and could never fully comeback in the second half despite desperate efforts to do so.

After road losses at Washington and Jefferson and Gettysburg, the Tribe returned to Memorial Gym to host Messiah. The visiting Falcons, like the Presidents and Bullets earlier in the week, used the foul line to gain victory.

Going 15 for 16 at the charity stripe, Messiah beat Juniata 59-50. The winners led 29-22 at intermission and used the foul line in the second half to assure the victory.

Both the Indians and Falcons hit 22 field goals on the night but the Tribe made only six of nine from the line to make the final margin nine points.

The winners had three starters finish in double figures with Andy Hartell leading all scorers with 20 points. Dan Feruck and Mark Rucinski had 12 points apiece for the Tribe. Rucinski led the Indians to a 30-20 rebound advantage with 12 bounds.

At Washington and Jefferson, the Indians again lost at the foul line as the Presidents made 30 of 39 free tosses to Juniata's 14 of 22. The Tribe had only one less field goal than the winners but lost 76-58. They pulled close in the second half, but the Indians never fully covered a 37-25 halftime deficit.

Rucinski and Feruck again led the Indian scoring with 25 and 18 points respectively. Rucinski also had 11 rebounds. W & J boasted four of five starters in double digit scoring.

The road problems continued at Gettysburg as the Indians dropped a 79-64 decision. The Tribe trailed 36-27 at halftime and pulled close in the final twenty minutes only to have the Bullets parade to the foul line and pull away.

Gettysburg led only 29-28 in field goals but won at the charity stripe by making 21 of 29 to JC's 8 of 12. The Bullets had all five starters in double figures.

Feruck had 20, Rucinski 14, and Dick Moses 10 points in the losing Indian cause. Rucinski led the board effort with 14 rebounds but Juniata lost the team battle 42-31.

In losing the two road games last week the Indians have now failed to win on the road this season, which goes along with a winless road effort last season. Considering this season's slate features 15 road appearances it is obvious that for Juniata to become more successful overall they will have to win on the road.

Coach Dan Helm summed-up last week in one, softspoken word, "disappointing."

The Indians, and Coach Helm, hoped for better fortunes this week. They traveled to PSU-Capitol Campus on Monday and finished off the 1983 games last night by hosting Susquehanna.

The squad leaves campus tomorrow for a holiday tour of Belgium. The team will play six exhibition games during the 12-day stay in Europe.

Women Are Now At 2-4

by App

In the conclusion of a busy week, Juniata's women's basketball team traveled to and defeated Franklin and Marshall on Saturday by the score of 46-36. This raised the Lady Indians' record to 2-4. Earlier in the week, the Indians dropped games to Washington and Jefferson on Monday by the score 50-47 and to Gettysburg 60-44 on Thursday at home.

Against W & J, Juniata was involved in a tough defensive game which caused both teams to have cold shooting nights. Throughout the first half, the game was very close with W & J holding a slim 23-22 lead at the half. In the second half, W & J broke out of the gate fast and took a commanding 16 point lead late in the game. However, the Indians didn't quit and reeled off 15 consecutive points to close the lead to 1 point, 48-47. However, the Indians frustrated themselves by blowing several easy shots from the field and missing several front ends of one and one foul shots to end up losing by 3. The Indians had very balanced scoring with 3 players leading the way with 12 points each. The players were Holly Crable, Patti Ryan, and Debbie Rahm with Paula Hillegass chipping in with 11. Rahm and Ryan led the Indians board effort which held its own with 15 and 12 caroms respectively.

In the Gettysburg game, the Indians started slowly and never recovered from the initial deficit. The Indians fell behind early by 8 points because it took them over 4 minutes to get on the scoreboard. Gettysburg led by as much as 14 but Juniata went in at halftime down by 11, 30-19. The second half was more of the same as the Indians couldn't make a threatening run on Gettysburg. Turnovers and poor rebounding led to the Indians' downfall. The Indians committed 22 turnovers and were outrebounded 48 to 23. Ryan was the only Indian in double figures with 15 points and also led the board effort with 8.

The Indians rebounded well from the two early losses to soundly defeat Franklin and Marshall. The Indians played tough aggressive defense as they held F & M to 25% shooting for the game and a paltry 14% in the first half when the Indians spurted to an 18 point lead at the half. F & M made somewhat of a comeback in the second half but couldn't make up such a big deficit. Ryan had an outstanding game for the Lady Indians as she scored 17 points and hauled in 15 rebounds. Crable chipped in with 12 points and Rahm helped the board effort with 10 caroms.

The Lady Indians play only one game this week as they took on Susquehanna on Wednesday night at home as their last game before the Christmas holidays. Happy Holidays J.C.!!!

"Sports' Corner"

by Mark Shaw

Hello, sports fans. It's been quite a long time since I've been with you. (O.K., you can stop the applause and the "It hasn't been long enough" — believe it or not, somebody did miss my column; and, no, that wasn't supposed to relate to the T.V. show!) Anyway, as you may recall, my last "Sport's Corner" was on the serious side (unfortunately, there were no replies and, presently, I'm debating upon whether to make this serious or not. So, I think I'll try to mix the two.

I'm going to try to convey a philosophy of sports (a practical impossibility for just one article, but, I've been known to be impractical before, so, why not now?) Well, back to the subject at hand: sports' philosophy. I'm going to try to relate what has been conveyed to me as the objective of sports.

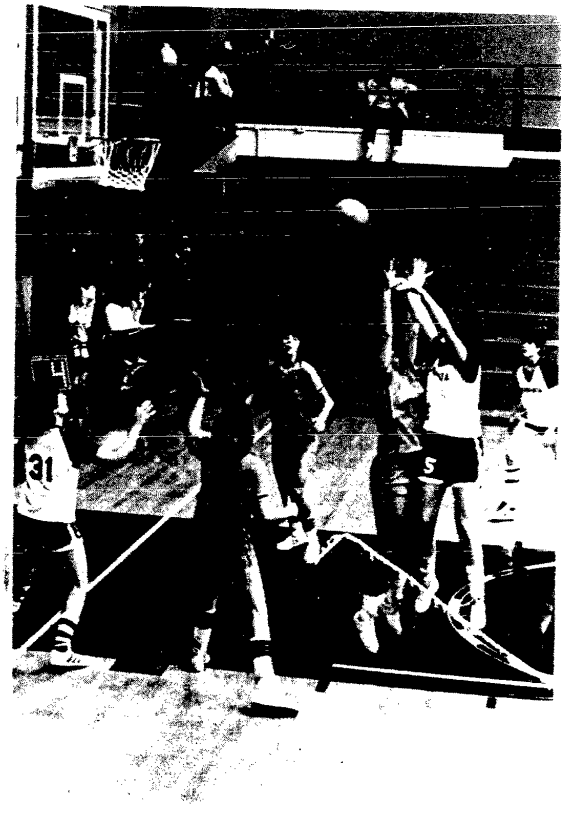
Has anyone really reflected upon the concept of sports? Why do we participate in sporting events, or at least, why are we supposed to participate? (The two, I think, often get scrambled in the blind ambitions of players and coaches alike.)

To me, the answer should be, "to better ourselves." Unfortunately, this is not always the answer. A person should learn and mature as a result of playing sports. He (or she, for the ladies) should have fond memories of games past. I often remember with pride my Little League baseball teams. I learned a lot from these experiences as I think all of us at one time or another have. However, the days of Little League sports pass too quickly.

Next we find ourselves in high school, and suddenly, some of the fun gets lost. It is in high school when you meet THE COACH. Yes, that's right, the almighty coach. (At this time I must admit that there are many good coaches, and for some unknown reason, these coaches are also the successful ones!) It is the bad, unsuccessful coaches who make sports lose their fun and educational value. It appears that as soon as some coaches begin to get paid for their services, they lose sight of the goal: helping their students to learn more about themselves and others.

Worse yet is college, for the pressure put on the coaches by their schools to win is often transferred to the players. It's an unfair situation for all involved in situations like I've described. Coaches begin to care more about winning than they do about their players; as a result, many players are left with bad memories. Regrettingly, this situation appears to be unavoidable due to what some people think sports are for: to make money. Hopefully, here at Juniata, money-making is not our philosophy; sometimes, I'm not sure.

P.S. Merry Christmas.



Juniata's Patti Ryan takes a jumpshot against Gettysburg in a losing cause as J.C. dropped the game 60-44. J.C.'s record is now 2-4.

The JUNIATIAN

Vol. XXXV, No. 11 | Juniata College — Huntingdon, Pa. 16652 | January 12, 1984

Mummenschanz Mime Group Comes to J.C.

The universal language of masks and mime came to the Oller Hall stage Jan. 11 as Mummenschanz, the Swiss mime company, performed as part of Juniata College's 1983-84 Artist Series.

Mummenschanz derives its name from the German "Mummen" meaning game or play, and "Schanz" meaning chance. During Medieval times, players of games of chance frequently wore masks to hide their facial expressions during play.

Mummenschanz creators Andres Bossard, Bernie Schurch and Floriana Frassetto have broken through the barriers of conventional pantomime to create a fanciful new manner of theatrical expression based in part upon the ancient Swiss Theater tradition of "The Masks."

Garbed in fantastic wrappings, the members of Mummenschanz became beings without faces, amphibious animals and caterpillars, monsters which were viewed on both sides. Animal heads changed into human faces through the pantomime which moved them. Various parts of the body became transformed: arms into legs, heads became necks, the back became the belly.

Sometimes playing with gray putty and with their mobile bodies, they created new, evermore entertaining phenomena while the audience alternately gasped with astonishment and roared with laughter at their acts.

For almost a decade, Mummenschanz has been delighting audiences in North America, South America, Europe and Asia. The "New York Times" said Mummenschanz is "for children pretending to be grown up, and for grown-ups who can still imagine being children." The "Boston Globe" added, "When an entertainment comes along which is witty and wise and original and classy, it deserves a fanfare. Mummenschanz is just such a show."

In 1977, Mummenschanz opened at the Bijou Theater on Broadway and ran for nearly three years to unprecedented critical acclaim. Their unique interpretation of life in theater and theater in life is still fascinating all people, of all ages, of all walks of life, in all corners of the world.

Annual M.S. Marathon Goes "All Night Long"

by Dee Zimnock

"All Night Long" was a fitting theme for the M.S. Marathon sponsored by Circle K. The annual event was held from 8 p.m. Friday to 8 p.m. Saturday in the intramural gym and Gibbel Plaza.

In addition to the traditional events of volleyball and board games, two participants created new activities. Dave Peters, of V103, provided music for 24 hours, and Esther Compher attempted to read for the duration. Many marathoners felt that they were helping a good cause. When asked why she was there, Amy McCartney, a second year participant, stated simply but enthusiastically, "I like volleyball!"

In preparation for the event many people took naps or drank a lot of coffee. After 45 minutes of play, they were allowed a 15 minute break, with half an hour for meals. Food was provided by local organizations and food service.

"Although participation was low, the enthusiasm remained high," stated Sally Gurekovich, President of Circle K. The club encouraged each player to obtain $24 in sponsorships. The original goal of $500 was surpassed by $400.

All marathoners completing the 24 hours will receive a t-shirt. In addition, prizes are awarded on the basis of sponsorships. Prizes include a black and white television, walkmans, and cameras, all donated by M.S. to Circle K.

"Third Stream" Coming to JC

Band brings Jazz to Juniata College

The jazz sound of the Palmyra-based band Third Stream will be featured in concert Monday, Jan. 16 in Juniata College's Oller Hall at 8:15 p.m.

In 1972, Tom Strohman and Jim Miller had a dream of assembling a group of musicians to play jazz, the music they love, and communicate this love to their audiences. Both felt they could combine the creative aspects of jazz and still provide entertainment and an exciting experience for their audiences. Hence, Third Stream was born.

Over the years, the group has accomplished its goal by playing the full spectrum of jazz: Dixieland, swing, be-bop, avant-garde, fusion and even a rendition of Rossini's "William Tell Overture" that never fails to bring the audience to its feet. Since 1972, the quartet has blossomed into the finest contemporary musical group in the Mid-Atlantic region.

Third Stream has appeared in numerous concerts and night-club performances as featured artists, and also shared the bill with such performers as Herbie Hancock, Tower of Power, Jeff Beck, Livingston Taylor and other well-known groups and individuals.

In 1979, the group recorded the single "In Remembrance," and in 1980 released its first album, "Gettin' It Together." Three members of Third Stream also are included on "Just Friends," a 1982 album featuring the talents of eight Central Pennsylvania jazz musicians.

Strohmnan, a songwriter and composer who plays saxophones, flutes and keyboards, was the winner of the 1974 Louis Armstrong Outstanding Musician Award. He has performed with Al Martino, Sonny and Cher, Eddie Fisher, Della Reese, Patti Page, Johnny Winter and many others.

A former member of both the Harrisburg and Hershey symphony orchestras, Miller plays acoustic and electric basses. He has toured the United States with various bands, and has been a guest soloist with the Lebanon Valley Jazz Band and the Bellport (N.Y.) High School Jazz Band.

The other two members of Third Stream are John Peifer on drums and Steve Giordano on guitar.

Peifer has studied drums with Paul Patterson, James Blackley and Sonny Igoe, and has toured the United States and Canada with various bands. He has played with Buddy Greco, Carl Fontana, Eric Kloss and other top artists.

The composer of "Time Corridor" commissioned by Philadelphia's Fels Planetarium, Giordano has recorded his own album "Daybreak," and other albums with Richard "Groove" Holmes and Trudy Pitts. He has toured Europe, Bermuda and the United States with a variety of well-known performers.

Third Stream's Jan. 16 concert at Juniata is open to the public. Tickets may be purchased at the door. The Ellis College Center Board Concert Committee is sponsoring the event.

Alcohol Laws Getting Stricter

Alcohol, its uses and misuses, seems to have been a topic of debate by students and administrators since its conception. A ruling earlier this month by the PA state Supreme Court can now be added to this list of discussions.

By a 6-1 ruling, the court stated that a company which had served one of their 18-year-old employees with alcoholic drinks was to be held liable for the injuries he suffered in an auto accident on the way home from their party.

In the past, a violation of the liquor code, (i.e. selling liquor without a license or providing liquor to persons under 21 years of age) was simply a misdemeanor which resulted in fines of $100 to $300 for each infraction.

Today, however, the ruling takes on a different meaning for the Juniata College community and its students. According to a UPI report in the Jan. 5, 1984, Philadelphia Inquirer, "The decision means that companies and private individuals who serve alcohol to underage drinkers may be sued by the underage drinkers if they are injured as a result of their consumption of alcohol."

How will this ruling affect parties and social gatherings on campus? It is the hope of The Juniatian that sponsors of parties will take their responsibility and possible consequences seriously.

The college has assumed The Juniatian that it will continue to provide updated information to the sponsor concerning their responsibilities and obligations before any event or social function.

Wayne Justham, Director of Programming, has already added an additional sheet concerning this new ruling to the material potential sponsors are required to read and sign before any social gathering.

Like it or not, The Juniatian wants its readers to know this new ruling has been established and that the abusers of this alcohol policy have been, and will continue to be, prosecuted as the law breakers they are presently seen as in the eyes of the courts of this state.

Along Muddy Run

by Kathleen Achor

Saturday night I found myself going out to eat for the third night in a row. One of my new year's resolutions had been to cut back on this delicacy, especially as I made note of my already-dwindled funds post-Christmas season. But all of a sudden there were unexpected visitors everywhere — friends, alumni — and the temptation became too great. Social eating. I succumbed.

"This is it," I told my eating partner-in-crime. "I can't afford to go out anymore after this. I'm going to have to start eating what I have at home."

"You're absolutely right," he told me. "After tonight, this is absolutely it. The End of Fun."

He said it just like that. With capital letters. I heard them.

The End of Fun started off all right. The restaurant we wanted to go to was closed, so we ended up driving a bit further. The meal I had wasn't the best ever, but I figured I was having Fun. Being on a fixed budget, we then went to the arcade to play video games. Well, actually I only watch video games, as I possess the dexterity of a turtle in even this area, and hate to use my quarters for a 30-second frustration. And they didn't even have Frogger, my favorite one to watch, so we left almost right away; but I figured I was having Fun and that this was the last there would be of it for a long, long time.

We got home early, which was kind of sad for someone knowing it was The End of Fun. And even sadder for a Saturday night. I thought about studying, but decided it was best to ride out The End for all it was worth. I socialized a little bit and sang ballads about The End of Fun till the wee hours. Finally exhausted, I dropped off into a deep sleep, knowing the fate of the new dawn.

By the white glow that filled my room, I knew that it was snowing. I had that safe, womb-like feeling one gets of being warm inside a soft bed. My bliss was soon in-

Letters to the Editor

Letter To The Editor:

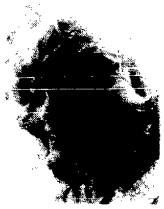
We would like to show our appreciation to all of the students, faculty, and administration who supported us throughout our 1983-84 season. Your attendance and enthusiasm during our entire varsity season contributed to the success of our team.

We would like to particularly acknowledge those who were present at the NCAA play-offs. The interest that you showed in our team gave us an emotional lift that was much needed after losing to San Diego. Having such enthusiastic fans gives us the incentive and desire to work harder to prepare for next year. You played an important role in an event that will always be a special part of our memories . . . thank you.

Sincerely,
The Juniata Women's Volleyball Team

Students Speak

by Maureen Morrissey
Question: What is your New Year's resolution?



Joanne Jackson, Freshman: "To eat a healthy diet and get in shape for track season."

Chris Collins, Senior: "Not to be apathetic."

Duane Bailey, Senior: "To have a happy marriage."

Wayne Bevan, Junior: "To finally get my Social Security check from the government."

American Security to be Discussed

"Nuclear Proliferation and American Security" will be discussed Thursday, Jan. 19 as Juniata College's Baker Lecture Series continues.

Dr. Rodney W. Jones, senior fellow and director of nuclear policy studies at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) in Washington, D.C., will deliver the 8:15 p.m. lecture in the Ellis Hall faculty lounge.

A 1964 Juniata graduate, Dr. Jones received his Ph.D. from Columbia University. Before going to Georgetown, Dr. Jones was an assistant professor in the political science department and the Institute of War and Peace Studies at Columbia.

Dr. Jones is a specialist on nuclear technology and weapons proliferation, and on security problems in the Third World, especially Asia and the Middle East. He is the author of "Nuclear Proliferation: Islam, the Bomb and South Asia" and "Next Steps After INFCE: U.S. International Nuclear and Nonproliferation Policy."

In addition, Dr. Jones recently completed a CSIS project on the defense planning implications for the United States of small nuclear force proliferation in the Middle East and South Asia. Two books on this subject recently appeared, one edited by Dr. Jones entitled "Small Nuclear Forces and U.S. Security Policy," and the other written by Dr. Jones called "Small Nuclear Forces."

The Jan. 19 lecture is open to the public at no charge. Juniata's Baker Lecture Series is sponsored by the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee and the political science department.

Theater Auditions

Residents of the Juniata College and Huntingdon area communities will be coming together to present Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale" to be staged in the college's Oller Hall.

Theater Juniata, the college's student theatrical company, is inviting interested residents to audition for roles and sign up for the production staff on Jan. 16, 17 or 18.

"Young theater enthusiasts from area high schools are especially encouraged to participate," says Dr. Luise Van Keuren, assistant professor of English at Juniata. "Roles are available for a wide range of ages and types, and assistance is needed in all aspects of production. An Elizabethan theater interior will be built as a set for this romantic tale of kings and distant lands, minstrels and rogues, shepherds and a sheep-shearing festival, a lost princess and an adoring prince."

"The Winter's Tale," described as a story of love, jealousy, fury and repentence, will be staged April 5, 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. and April 8 at 3 p.m. Dr. Van Keuren will direct the production.

All auditions and production staff sign-ups will be held in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center from 7 to 9 p.m. Jan. 16, and from 4 to 6 p.m. on both Jan. 17 and 18. Individuals who are interested in participating, but can not attend one of the auditions should contact Dr. Van Keuren to make other arrangements. Scene scripts will be provided and no preparation is needed for the auditions.

Dr. Van Keuren notes that there are 14 roles for men, both serious and comic, including roles for older men and one role for a young prince who must appear to be 10 years old or younger. One role for a person of any age requires singing.

In addition, there are six speaking roles for women, including one role for an older woman and several young shepherdesses. Nonspeaking roles also are available.

Male and female dancers and singers are welcomed as well as musicians. Individuals who play the recorder, cello or flute are desired, but any instrumentalists are welcome. All rehearsals and production meetings are arranged around the participants' schedules.

"The Winter's Tale" will be part of the Shakespeare Celebration taking place at Juniata from March to May. Films, readings, concerts and other events will be held during the celebration.

Foreign Families

American host families are needed for 255 French exchange students and 8 teacher-chaperones who will arrive in the U.S. for a one-month homestay with an American family: JULY 17-AUGUST 13, 1984. The students, ages 14-18, carry comprehensive medical insurance, speak English, and have their own spending money. The ability to speak French is not necessary as the students are coming to improve their English. The only real obligation of the host family is to share family life with the student and to treat the student as a participating member of the family. Families who plan to travel may take the student with them on vacation. Appropriate transportation to the host family will be arranged.

NACEL CULTURAL EXCHANGES is a non-profit organization which is listed with the National Association of Secondary School Principals, is a participating member of the President's Internation Youth Exchange Initiative, and is officially approved by the French government. The program is coordinated by Dr. Dominick DeFilippis, a college professor of French. For more information contact: Dr. D. DeFilippis, R.D. No. 1 Box 117, Hickory, PA 15340 or telephone 412-356-7359.

Troy to Show Slides

The scenery and wildlife of New Zealand will be the topic of a slide show and talk to be presented at Juniata College Wednesday, Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in Alumni Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center.

Jack G. Troy, part-time assistant professor of art at Juniata, will present the slide show in conjunction with the monthly meeting of the Huntingdon County Bird Club. Featured will be scenes from the Milford Track, a 32-mile backpacking trip through rainforests, over an alpine pass and into Fiordland National Park.

Troy recently returned from New Zealand where, as a guest of the New Zealand Society of Potters, he taught a series of workshops from September to early December.

According to Troy, New Zealand has the highest concentration of potters per capita of any nation in the world. An estimated 40,000 of the country's 3.1 million residents are involved in ceramics professionally or as an avocation. "Abundant high-quality clays and a keen interest in cultural events have created a well-developed appreciation for ceramics as well as for the arts in general," Troy says.

The eight workshops Troy conducted while in New Zealand were aimed primarily at professional potters. However, he did conduct a ceramics program for 60 students in the public schools on Stewart Island, the southernmost and smallest of New Zealand's three islands.

A one-man exhibition of Troy's work was featured at the Govett-Brewster Gallery in New Plymouth, coinciding with the Society of Potter's annual conference. Troy demonstrated a variety of pottery techniques and presented slide talks on early American and German salt-glazed ceramics, as well as current developments in wood firing in North America.

"A large anagama-style wood burning kiln, similar to the one we have at Juniata, had been built as a community project by 40 potters in Christchurch prior to my arrival," Troy says. "My workshop there featured the first loading and firing of this kiln which is more than 40 feet long and an average of five feet high." Troy added that the 650 pots in that first firing contained a wide variety of New Zealand clays to be tested. "The firing took 96 hours, consumed four cords of wood and was a great success, producing a high percentage of fine pieces."

Troy's work from the Christchurch kiln was featured at Pots on Ponsonby, a gallery in Auckland. Work from both exhibitions was purchased for the permanent collections of the Auckland War Memorial Museum, Auckland Studio Potters Association, Fletcher Brownbuilt Collection of Contemporary Ceramics and by several private collectors.

Troy's Jan. 18 slide presentation on New Zealand is open to the public at no charge.

Skiers Head North

by Mark Royer

With the arrival of ski season, the Juniata College Ski Club is sponsoring another trip to Vermont.

Last year's trip, which saw 35 skiers heading north, was very successful. Co-Presidents Steve De Perrot and Tom Welch expect to have an even better turnout for this year's excursion. The "ski and party week" takes place during the February term break and a $40 non-refundable deposit is due by January 30. A final payment of $158 will be due around February 20, which includes a $25 refundable security deposit. De Perrot said that the condominiums will be right on the slopes this year and are available for 6, 8, or 10 people. If you have friends at home interested in going the price is the same with any valid college I.D., otherwise it is an extra $26. Along with a week of great skiing there will be other activities every night to keep people entertained. An informational meeting will be held next week and other meetings to organize car pools will be coming up. If you have any questions, contact Steve De Perrot at Pink Palace or 643-3615.

The ski club's annual trips to Blue Knob are underway. Starting Tuesday and for the next three Tuesdays 50 skiers are taking to the slopes. Blue Knob is under new management this year and they have made improvements. The trails are less icy and in better condition, they have also added 15 new snow guns.

A ski equipment sale and swap put on by the club was a disappointment. De Perrot blamed the timing (day after Madrigal) for the poor turnout. There was an excellent variety of skis and clothing at great prices, but few customers. Much of the equipment was supplied by The Locker Room in Holidaysburg. If there is enough interest shown there may be another swap held later this year.

The ski club raffle was a success, featuring two winners of free passes to Blue Knob, a pair of Scott Goggles, and a wine flask.

terrupted, however, by a voice shouting militaristically through a megaphone.

"All right, you off-campus radicals. If you think you're all privileged, you're wrong! The new rules apply to everyone!"

I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.

There, lined along snowy 18th Street, was an army. They were donning blue and gold uniforms. Suspiciously Juniata-inspired, I thought. The leader of this quite organized assembly had the megaphone. Despite the cold, I opened by storm window and leaned out.

"What's going on?" I yelled down.

Hot Wax

by Tom Hildebrandt

Billy Idol's latest album Rebel Yell is typical of his rock and roll and new wave style prevalent in his previous releases. These have appealed to many listeners from a variety of music backgrounds.

Several years ago, Billy Idol was appearing with the group Generation X. Such favorites as "Mony Mony" and "Dancing with Myself" were born here but did not have the popularity that they received after his first album with his own group. This album included the hits "White Wedding" and "Hot in the City." Later, when "White Wedding" was made into a video, Idol became practically a household word along with the rest of the group: Steve Stevens (guitar), Phil Feit (bass), and Steve Missal (drums).

It's hard to pinpoint the success of Billy Idol. His music comes across as a mix of dance music and rock music. Idol has a relatively deep voice and, except for an occasional scream or yell to stress certain parts of songs, stays mainly at a low growl.

As an album, Rebel Yell has several songs with potential. These include "Blue Highway", "Crank Call", and "Stand in the Shadows". One song that is a bit different is "The Dead Next Door." It is simply keyboards and vocals and puts a mellow touch to the album's upbeat style.

Of course the most popular song and the title cut "Rebel Yell" is destined to be a chart topper. It contains the fantastic guitar work of Stevens and Idol and an upbeat drum part into which Idol blends his vocals.

The group has made a few changes since 1982 and their first album together. Steve Webster (bass) and Tommy Price (drums) have replaced the two previous instrument players and Judi Dozier (keyboards) has been added to the line-up. Idol and Stevens are still present of course, and write all but one of the songs on Rebel Yell together.

The quality of Rebel Yell is excellent with good separation between vocals and background music. Most of the percussion parts are simple and consistent and provide the backbone to Idol's lyrics. Cymbals are used extensively which mesh well with Idol's style of singing.

With Rebel Yell's spontaneous and outstanding guitar work and heavy percussion, I would rate it as a heavy, moderate rock album and congratulate the group on another potentially successful album. With Rebel Yell, Billy Idol is destined to attain even more world recognition as a rock and roll animal. (Billy Idol, Rebel Yell on Chrysalis Records)

On a scale of 1 to 5, I give Rebel Yell a: 3½.

Out & About

by Mark Shaw

This week's Out & About was not originally planned the way it turned out; however, it turned out to be great.

Initially, my date and I were planning on going to the Brass Rail Lounge (located in the Raystown Country Inn) for happy hour, and then have dinner at the restaurant, Yesterdays, located downstairs. Unfortunately, the restaurant was closed, but the night was not to be ruined.

Let me start with happy hour (well, at least what I can remember about it — only kidding). Happy hour at the Brass Rail starts at 4:30 with drinks at half price. On Friday night there was a large crowd (about 25) of seniors taking advantage of the happy hour prices.

The only obvious problem was the service, but I think that was caused by the unexpected crowd. The lone barmaid did her best to wait on us as soon as possible.

After about twenty minutes we got waited on (unfortunately we were one of the last ones to arrive), we placed our order and soon after that got our drinks. The drinks were well made and worth waiting for. Surprisingly, the happy hour prices included top-shelf liquors; something many bars do not do.

Overall, the happy hour at the Brass Rail was very good. It looks like it is going to become a new senior pre-dinner hangout.

Now, after having a couple of drinks, my date and I decided to go downstairs for dinner. Much to our surprise, the restaurant was closed. It was a perplexing situation. We didn't know where to go. Finally, we decided to go to Louie's, a restaurant about 15 miles west on Rt. 22.

We found Louie's not to be crowded, due I think, to the poor weather conditions. Louie's has a comfortable atmosphere with the lights at a perfect brightness. It is set up with booths along three of the walls and tables filling the center. A bar composes much of the fourth wall.

Soon after we were seated, the pleasant waitress gave us the menu. The menu was very extensive; it was divided into three basic sections: Italian Specialties, Seafood Platters and Dinner Entrees. The prices seemed to be reasonable throughout the menu.

My date chose the Fresh Trout Dinner with salad, baked potato, and lima beans, while I chose the 12 oz. T-Bone steak with salad, french fries and corn. Both meals were absolutely delicious. The portions given in each meal were healthy; both of us were quite full after the dinner.

After finishing our meal we had some tea while we waited for the check. The check at Louie's is nothing to worry about. The prices are very reasonable. Our dinner bill came to about $18.

In conclusion, I would recommend both the Brass Rail and Louie's. The drink prices during happy hour at the Brass Rail are just too good to pass up. And, the meal, atmosphere and prices make Louie's a wise choice for dinner.

Juniata Seeks Director

by Paul Bomberger

The search is underway for a Director of Conferences and Internships. Dean Tilden, in connection with Mr. Martin, Director of Planning and Placement, are in the process of interviewing prospects for this new full-time position.

Dean Tilden expressed great optimism about the benefits Juniata will gain from hiring an individual who will administer summer conferences here at the college to various interest groups and handle student internships.

"Summer conferences will generate extra revenue for us. We want to utilize our facilities here at Juniata all year round," Tilden commented.

Presently, internships are arranged through faculty members in various departments and personnel contacts with various companies.

Dean Tilden said, "We would like to gradually phase this person into that process and expand the internship possibilities for our students."

The goal of the administration is to hire a Director of Conferences and Internships to begin working this summer.

Prof Gets Ph.D.

Harriet E. Darling, assistant professor of education and director of the Early Childhood Education Center at Juniata College, has been awarded a Ph.D. in human development from the Institute for Child Study/Department of Human Development at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Darling's dissertation, "The Relationship Between Gender Constancy and Piaget's Concept of Qualitative Identity," assessed how children between the ages of 3 and 5 relate gender constancy to an individual's appearance and changes in appearance. Constancy has been reached when a child can indicate that a person's gender stays the same even if that person changes clothes or adopts actions usually associated with the opposite sex.

In her study of 98 children, Dr. Darling concluded that "children in the preoperational stage of development do exhibit gender constancy, and that the appearance of gender and non-gender identity constancy increases as the age of the preschool population increases."

A native of Mitchell, S. Dak., Dr. Darling received her B.S. and M.S. degrees from South Dakota State University. She is a specialist in child development and family relations, and has conducted several workshops and lectures on child development topics.

Prior to coming to Juniata in 1980, Dr. Darling was a family day care provider trainer with the Fairfax County (Va.) Office for Children. She also has taught at the University of Maryland and South Dakota State University.

Enrollment Grows

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPS) — The great migration of private college students to less-expensive public schools apparently is not happening, according to a new study of some 1200 private colleges by the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (NAICU).

After losing about 20,000 students last fall, full-time freshman enrollment at private colleges nationwide rose by 1.7 percent, says NAICU's Julianne Thrift.

"The picture in general is quite uncertain," explains NAICU Executive Director John Phillips, but "the overall trend is at least more stable than last year, with a generally positive tilt to the data."

Last year's decline was the first for private schools since NAICU began keeping track in 1977.

It was not supposed to be the last, either. Many college observers predicted the first round of federal student aid cuts made in 1981 would begin driving students to less-expensive public campuses by 1983.

The cuts "will most likely cause a shift in enrollment patterns from more expensive private schools to public colleges," Dallas Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators predicted in August, 1981.

Martin's and others' worst fears appeared to be coming to pass last fall.

Thrift now attributes last year's enrollment decline to uncertainties about the long-term prospects for federal student aid, to the poor economic climate, and to a small demographic decline in the number of 18-year-olds in the population.

But in light of this year's growth in the number of freshmen at private colleges, Phillips says, "I think we've passed through the worst of the political downdraft."

Congress kept aid funding intact for 1981, and even increased it this year in some areas.

But "it is still too early to draw any conclusions" about long-term private college enrollment trends, he cautions.

Regionally, the South's private schools' freshman class increased by 4.01 percent. Freshman class enrollment in midwestern independent college rose by 2.39 percent and on Mid-Atlantic campuses by nearly one percent.

But private colleges in the Northeast lost 1.31 percent of their freshman enrollment, while western schools lost .17 percent.

The effects on individual schools of the enrollment fluctuations may not be very dramatic. Marquette's increase of 42 students, for example, amounts to "just a drop in the bucket," says Registrar Dr. Roman Gawkoski.

Bowl for Breath

Juniata students are invited to bowl a strike against Cystic Fibrosis.

Although coordinated by the Western PA Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, the Social Services club at Juniata is actively seeking participants for the 6th Annual Bowl-for-Breath. Bowlers will bowl three games and will have people sponsor them for the total number of pins knocked down. Prizes, based on the number of sponsors a bowler has, will be awarded. These prizes include a Sony WALKMAN and a $25 Radio Shack gift certificate.

The Bowl-for-Breath takes place at the Holiday Bowl, located five miles east on Route 22 from Jan. 14 to Jan. 21. Participants can choose any day during the week to bowl. Various local merchants are also sponsoring the event.

Cystic Fibrosis is a genetic disease which affects the lungs and digestive system of children. It is currently the leading genetic killer of Caucasian children. The Association works to find a cure for Cystic Fibrosis. Money raised may give those Cystic Fibrosis children a chance to live a normal, healthy life.

"The End of Fun," was megaphoned back. "Can't you read?" And suddenly there was a band marching off of Moore, onto 18th, carrying a huge banner which read exactly that. Some people behind the band were throwing white confetti, which seemed rather superfluous due to the weather conditions.

"All right everyone!" the leader squeaked. "Get to class!"

"But it's Sunday," I pointed out. "We don't have classes on Sunday!"

"Young lady, this is The End of Fun. There is no longer such a thing as a day of rest."

"I didn't say I was going to rest, I just said . . ."

"Get to class!"

"But I don't have one until 10!"

"Everyone has class at 8!"

It seemed futile to argue. Especially when everyone seemed to be taking things quite seriously.

I went to Good Hall without breakfast. There was a guard stationed at the door, who, as I suspected he would, stopped me.

"And just where do you think you're going?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. I don't have SVS till 10."

"Kathleen Achor," (how the hell did he know my name?) "your classes will be located in the science center from now on."

"The science center! But I'm a humanities major! I'll die over there!"

"I'm sorry, but today marks The End of Fun. You will now be taking science courses."

"What is this, somebody's idea of a 1984 practical joke?"

The guard became angry. "Ungrateful wench, do you think you're spending thousands of dollars to have a good time here? Proceed to the science center for your Organic II class!"

"Organic II? But I haven't had chemistry since 11th grade. . ."

The guard uttered a few choice obscenities at me and sent me on my way. I noticed several trembling computer sicence majors heading for Good Hall.

The closer I got to my destination, the more nervous I became. I could feel my throat tightening. Anything but chemistry! I was sufficating . . .

I awoke to my alarm blaring beside me. Shutting it off, I rushed to the window. Snow . . . but no army. Relieved, for a fleeting moment I thought it had only been a dream. But turning to my desk, I saw the stack of work that I had yet to finish before Monday morning . . . including dreaming up yet another column. Yes, it was time to take my responsibilities seriously, and get used to the food I'd already bought. With a sigh, I got out my typewriter. The End of Fun.

Dr. Jay Buchanan

The last article before the break delt with the importance of managing time, particularly as it relates to study time. We discussed a number of ways to help insure academic success by being more aware of how we use and misuse one of our most precious resources.

Now that we are aware of the need to manage our time more effectively, let's examine ways to maximize positive outcomes from time spent in study. In other words, why is it that someone can study for two hours and realize greater benefits than someone who has devoted twice that amount of time? At the risk of being overly simplistic, may I suggest that quality far outweighs quantity. Creating a positive learning environment addresses the question of quality study time.

In behavioral terms, we want to begin to control the environment in which study takes place. The residence hall or the library may or may not be conducive to study, depending on your ability to keep noise and other distractions to a minimum. The point is that you should strive to avoid situations that are certain to produce undesirable behaviors, that is, behaviors that compete with effective study. Arrange the place where you study so that it is supportive of effective study behavior.

Just as overweight people and those desiring to quit smoking must limit the places where they eat and smoke, respectively, we should limit where we study to those places most supportive of study behavior. Monitoring your study behavior as to where, when, and how much you study will go a long way in helping to achieve academic success.

One final note for those of you who like to listen to music while you study. The research is inconclusive regarding the effect music has on study behavior. You guessed it, it depends on the particular task and the individual. You might want to do some experimenting yourself on this matter.

Computer Fad

Three months ago freshman accounting major Jackie Pouliot "wasn't really sure" how she'd be using the new Zenith Z-100 she and over 800 other entering freshmen were required to purchase as they entered Clarkson College.

Now, "I'm using it at least three-to-five hours a week and don't know how I'd get along without it," she says.

"The first paper I had due I did on the typewriter I brought to school with me," she recalls. "But it's just too much work and too slow after using the computer's word processing system. I do all my papers on computer now."

Pouliot's experience isn't uncommon at Clarkson, which, along with the Stevens Institute of Technology in New Jersey, was the first school to require all entering freshmen to buy microcomputers.

Three months later, despite unfinished wiring and coursework that's not yet integrated into a fully-electronic campus, students are in fact not letting their machines gather dust.

Judging from the pioneer schools' initial experiences, the personal computer's entry into higher education is not the multi-million dollar white elephant some observers feared it would be. Among all the expensive language labs and "curricular relevancy" fads that have seized administrators in recent times, this one actually seems to be working.

"A few years ago, there was a lot of proselytizing regarding the personal computer's impact on higher education, and a lot of people were wondering if it was just a passing fad," notes Kim Wiley, research coordinator for the EDUCOM Computer Literacy Project, a consortium of colleges studying the campus computer revolution.

Now, she observes, "computers have become academically respectable and accepted."

The question most colleges are asking today isn't "if" the computer will become a vital part of campus life, but "when" and "how," she adds.

Colleges' computer ambitions run the gamut from Carnegie Mellon's multi-million dollar joint venture with IBM to set up an entire campus computer network by 1985, to Iowa State's modest plans to offer students microcomputers at special discount prices.

Brown University, MIT, Drew, the Rochester Institute of Technology, Vassar, Dartmouth, Pepperdine, and many others have announced plans to require students to purchase micros.

Drexel University will be the next school to require students to come with personal computers under their arms when they return to classes this winter.

"We have well over 750 institutions participating in the Computer Literacy Project, and each is already offering some sort of program on computers," says Wiley. "And I don't think that 750 is anywhere near the total number of schools offering such programs."

At Stevens, where over 700 students are now using new DEC Professional 325 microcomputers — freshmen paid a one-time, $1800 fee for the machines in addition to this year's $7400 tuition — "things so far are going very well," reports Joseph Moeller, dean of educational development.

But among other things, he says, "the amount of time devoted to coordinating things is very substantial. It's not the kind of thing you just initiate and five days later it's done.

"Students have initial trepidations and problems learning the computers, and once you've got the system in place and students familiarized with it, they have constant questions about software, additional equipment, and so on."

Students can get answers from Moeller's new Personal Computer Assistance Program on campus. Teams of computer science majors make regular visits to dorms to make sure students are "comfortable" with their machines. And frustrated students can even dial a hot line to talk to other specialists about their machines.

Clarkson officials, too, have been beseiged by questions and "a few technical problems" regarding students' microcomputers.

"But all in all, it's going better than we ever expected," says Helen Chappel, Clarkson's public relations director.

In fact, she asserts, some of the problems administrators and faculty worried about the most haven't even occurred.

"We were rather concerned that the computers would make kids (isolated), but instead it has given all the freshmen something in common. They all get together at their machines and assist and learn from one another."

Clarkson frosh are using their new computers in "all their classes," Chappel adds, although in liberal arts courses they're used "pretty much for word processing and for short quizzes."

"In one case, a humanities instructor is actually requiring students to turn in diskettes instead of printed papers," says Stevens' Moeller. "He looks over their work, inserts comments and grades it, and then gives the diskettes back to the students."

Recruiting Rises

(CPS) — After months of issuing gloomy forecasts, college placement officers around the country have grown more optimistic in recent weeks about students' job prospects this year.

"I think recruiting is going to be up by 15 to 20 percent nationally from last year," says Victor Lindquist, placement director at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., and author of the Endicott Report, a national survey of student placements.

"That's still down from what it was two years ago, much less three years ago," he adds. "I don't see any sudden turn. This is going to be a gentle turn."

Lindquist and others have little hard data on which to base their optimism, but they take heart from the trickle of recruiters moving back onto campuses as recruiting season starts.

"The big thing is that we've been on a downward curve for some time," says Jack Shingleton, Michigan State University placement director and author of another annual national student job survey.

"I think we've bottomed out, and we've started back up," he says.

It would have been hard for student job prospects to sink much lower. "I don't know how it could get any worse than it was in '83," Lindquist observes. "Hiring of graduates was off by 41 percent nationally last year."

Shingleton says the number of firms recruiting at Michigan State is about the same as last year, but that the companies plan to hire more graduates this time.

"One of the Big Eight accounting firms was telling me that it was planning to hire 10 percent more people than last year," he reports.

At the University of Texas-Austin, "it looks better than last year for sure," says Dr. Glen Payne, associate placement director at Texas' business school.

"Last year 490 firms came to campus," he recalls. "This year we're back up to 600, and so far they're not cancelling at nearly the rate they were last year at this time."

One of five firms that signed up to recruit at the University of California-Berkeley last fall cancelled, Berkeley placement head James Briggs says. He says the number of scheduled interviews is up slightly this year, and the firms he's talked to are more confident.

"People finally believe that we're in a recovery," he says. "They're more optimistic, and companies anticipate a return to growth."

"Last year was the worst we'd seen since the early seventies," concurs Don Wood, education placement director at the University of Northern Iowa. "This year remains difficult, but recruitment is up."

It seems to be rising most significantly among business and marketing majors, and from high technology companies.

The hard-hit energy industry's recruiting is still off. It hit bottom last year when Dallas-based Dresser, Inc., a supplier of oil exploration equipment that is ranked 83rd on the Fortune 500, told more than 100 Michigan State students that they had jobs, but then had to renege on the offers.

Rape Awareness Prevention Program

Editor's note: Rape is the most serious, frightening and violent of all crimes against women. Victims find the experience painful, humiliating and emotionally disturbing. The most important thing to remember is that the victim seldom is to blame for the crime.

The final article in a series of four, the following gives advice on what to do if you are the victim of a rape. The Juniatian would like to thank Julie Kechner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life, and the Student Services Office for providing the information for this series.

In General . . .

— Be alert — particularly when you're alone
— Always avoid dark or isolated places
— Avoid deserted laundromats at night — and be careful even in daylight — it's best to have someone with you, if possible — Be discreet — don't broadcast details of your personal plans to casual acquaintances
— If you're out late, let a friend or relative know where you are and when to expect you

What to Do if You Are Attacked

Think. Don't panic. Most women escape a rapist by talking their way out of it . . . few escape by fighting. Getting him to talk may also give you the opportunity to escape.

Frederic Storaska, the Executive Director of the National Organization for the Prevention of Rape and Assault, cites three basic, common-sense laws of assault safety:

1. Don't antagonize the attacker. This will only serve to make the attacker angry and more violent.

2. Don't commit your behavior. In other words, make sure that anything you do is reversible. If you struggle, scream, kick, use weapons or practice self-defense methods, the ground rules you establish start with violence. And, the winner in a situation like this is who is better at violent action. Fainting also commits your behavior. When you faint, you are from that moment on totally defenseless.

3. Do nothing that can hurt you. Whatever you do, make sure that either it will work all the time, or if it happens not to work, at least it won't make things worse.

In summary, use your ingenuity . . . claim an illness, act crazy, act bored, etc. Whatever you try, don't risk your life . . . make sure that if it doesn't work, you leave yourself the option to try something else!

Be alert for an unexpected opportunity to escape from the situation. Learn your strengths (physical and psychological) but also be aware of your limitations. In most situations, the potential victim should not physically threaten, mentally harass or otherwise provoke the rapist. Sometimes the best alternative may be to go along with the rapist's demands in order to save your life.

If You Are the Victim of a Rape

If you are the victim of a rape, concentrate on identity. Memorize the description of the rapist, noting what he was wearing, e.g. jewelry, belt, shoes, shirt, pants, coat, etc. Try to get a good description of his face, look for possible scars, marks or tatoos on his body. Listen to his voice and try to remember what he said to you and how he said it, noting any unusual speech characteristic like accent, lisp, impediment or any unusual phraseology. If a vehicle is involved, attempt to note the make, color, number of doors, interior features — and remember the license number.

Following the attack, always report any rape or attempted rape to prevent this man from victimizing other women in the future. While waiting for the police . . .

DO NOT CHANGE YOUR CLOTHING

DO NOT CLEAN YOUR CLOTHING OR PERSON

DO NOT APPLY MEDICATION

Although this would be your natural reaction, it would destroy evidence. This physical evidence will be important in the prosecution of the attacker.

In conducting a thorough investigation, the officers will ask you questions and will go over the details of the crime. Subsequent interviews are often necessary as you will frequently recall additional information and details as time goes on. You will also be allowed/encouraged to have a friend or professional counselor with you for support during questioning.

When the suspect is arrested, you will have to testify in open court. A lawyer trying to defend the accused rapist will explore every possible means to help the client and will attempt to discredit your testimony. It is important for you to take a firm stance as only your testimony can convict the rapist.

Social attitudes tend to discourage women from testifying — the attitude of the husband, the boyfriend, the family. However, this is the only way we can reduce the chances of another woman being raped.

Recruiters

"Dresser will never come on this campus again," Shingleton seethes.

"Those were entry-level jobs in remote, rural areas," explains James Papalexsis of Dresser's personnel office. "Rather than have people relocate and then impose reductions in the work force, we decided not to bring them on board."

Dresser, which used to hire about 800 new graduates annually, still has "a few thousand" employees laid off and so will keep this year's campus recruiting "very limited," Papalexsis says.

Some energy firms, however, are starting to show up again at Texas, Payne says.

Phillips, Gulf, Conoco and Shell have returned after a year's absense.

Energy recruitment "almost ceased to exist" last year, Payne says. "Banks and accounting came through the recession almost like there wasn't one." He observed a minor slowdown in recruiting by high technology companies.

"IBM had been sending 25 interviewers," he says."Last year it was down to about 12 or 15. It's back to 20 this year."

The market for teachers still appears to be sluggish, despite the rash of new proposals for higher teacher salaries and more teacher hiring.

Yet "the school population is still declining, and budgets are still tight," says Northern Iowa's Wood. "I think that things will pick up dramatically in a few years, though. They have to. So few people are going into education, and more children are coming along. Already, enrollment is up for kindergarten and first grade."

Berkeley's Briggs says some recruiters are returning with a greater appreciation for liberal arts majors. They show increased interest in hiring generalists, and are softening their formerly-strict requirements for technical training.

He says liberal arts majors are having good luck among management, financial services and retailing recruiters.

But some of the placement officers' tentative optimism rests on timing.

Lindquist, for example, believes the 1984 presidential elections will inspire "a lot of economic pump priming in the next few months. If we get a sense of euphoria about the economy out of that, it will improve Reagan's chances, and it will improve campus recruitment."

"If you really want a good handle on what's going to happen, talk to (Federal Reserve Chairman) Paul Volcker," Lindquist advises. "It's going to depend on whether the basic industries perk up, and if we see construction of new plants. It's like dropping a pebble in a pond. One of the ripples of economic recovery is college recruitment."

Was He Asking For It?

Recently, Harper's Weekly carried an item from the American Bar Association Journal declaring that few rapists are punished for their crimes. In a dialogue to demonstrate why most rape victims prefer not to press charges, the article asks us to imagine a robbery victim undergoing the same sort of cross-examination that a rape victim does:

READ THIS & THINK ABOUT IT
Reprinted from
Ms. Magazine

"Mr. Smith, you were held up at gunpoint on the corner of First and Main?"

"Yes."

"Did you struggle with the robber?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"He was armed."

"Then you made a conscious decision to comply with his demands rather than resist?"

"Yes."

"Did you scream? Cry out?"

"No. I was afraid."

"I see. Have you ever been held up before?"

"No."

"Have you ever given money away?"

"Yes, of course."

"And you did so willingly?"

"What are you getting at?"

"Well, let's put it like this, Mr. Smith. You've given money away in the past. In fact, you have quite a reputation for philanthropy. How can we be sure you weren't contriving to have your money taken by force?"

"Listen, if I wanted —"

"Never mind. What time did the holdup take place?"

"About 11 p.m."

"You were out on the street at 11 p.m.? Doing what?"

"Just walking."

"Just walking? You know that it's dangerous being out on the street that late at night. Weren't you aware that you could've been held up?"

"I hadn't thought about it."

"What were you wearing?"

"Let's see — a suit. Yes, a suit."

"An expensive suit?"

"Well, yes. I'm a successful lawyer, you know."

"In other words, Mr. Smith, you were walking around the street late at night in a suit that practically advertised the fact that you might be a good target for some easy money, isn't that so? I mean, if we didn't know better, Mr. Smith, we might even think that you were asking for this to happen, mightn't we?"

Everyone awaits John Mesko's shot during a recent co-rec I.M. volleyball game.

I.M. Co-Rec V-Ball

by Cathy Harwick

While some people were busy preparing for Christmas vacation, some others were still involved in intramural co-rec volleyball. In division A, Tuesday, December 13 proved to be victorious for 407 & Buddies against Great Expectations (15-9, 15-9), for Les Enfants Terribles against N.D.T.L.O.C. (15-8, 15-8), for Geriatric Ward against Mixed Nuts (15-10, 15-12), and for the Blood Clotters against Send in the Clowns II (15-11, 15-7). In division B play, wins went to B.H. and the P. (8-15, 15-9, 11-5) over Miller Time, to TCR BITES BACK (15-4, 15-12) over Extra Deep Pockets, to Out to Lunch (15-12, 15-8) over Den of Degradation, and to Quantum Leaps over Bee Bopps (15-2, 15-13) with Stephanie Ristvey pulling out some awesome final serves to win the game for the Leapers.

Other pre-Christmas action was seen on Wednesday, December 14. In division A, 407 & Buddies saw another win (15-4, 15-8) against Send in the Clowns II, while N.D.T.L.O.C. took another fall (3-15, 5-15) against "Send in the Clowns." In other division A play that night, Phase 9 phased Great Expectations (15-12, 15-1), the Woo wooed the Flattii (15-7, 15-9), and the Invaders conquered Merlin's Minstrels with a score of (15-8, 15-9). In division B, wins went to Serving No Purpose over Julie Buckley's team (15-11, 15-7), to Happy Jacks over Bumpin' Humpers II (15-13, 11-15, 11-8), to Miller Time (7-15, 15-3, 11-5) over Ginny Krall's team, to the Other Team over the Quantum Leaps (15-2, 15-6), and to B.H. and the P. over Extra Deep Pockets (15-9, 14-16, 11-6).

Undefeated Geriatric Ward came back from break to remain undefeated during the first games of the new year on January 3. They defeated the Flattii (15-6, 12-15, 8-4) in division A play, while the Invaders dropped to Phase 9 (15-6, 10-15, 6-11) and Send in the Clowns II beat the Woo (15-12, 15-8). In division B, Rob Yelnoski's Bumpin' Humpers II defeated Extra Deep Pockets (15-2, 15-13), Out to Lunch beat Happy Jacks (15-10, 4-15, 9-7) and Serving No Purpose beat Ginny Krall's team (15-13, 16-14).

On Wednesday, January 4, division A wins went to N.D.T.L.O.C. (15-11, 7-15, 11-2) over the Flattii, to the Invaders (15-5, 15-9) over the Mixed Nuts, to the Blood Clotters (12-15, 15-8, 11-8) over Les Enfants Terribles, and to Geriatric Ward over the Woo (15-3, 15-5). In division B play, Serving No Purpose defeated Den of Degradation (15-6, 15-3), Bumpin' Humpers II beat Out to Lunch (15-8, 11-15, 11-1), and Kelly and Denny Mehigan helped the Happy Jacks beat the Quantum Leaps (15-10, 15-12). Two wins were forfeited to TCR BITES BACK from the Bee Bopps and to Julie Buckley's team from Miller Time.

Sunday brought victories to division A teams 407 & Buddies from Send in the Clowns (15-8, 7-15, 11-3), Les Enfants Terribles from Phase 9 (15-11, 10-15, 11-7), The Blood Clotters (15-4, 15-7) from the Flattii, Send in the Clowns II from Merlin's Minstrels (15-2, 15-0) Geriatric Ward (18-16, 16-14) from N.D.T.L.O.C., the Invaders (15-4, 7-15, 11-3) from Great Expectations, and the Mixed Nuts from the Woo (15-9, 12-15, 11-4).

In division B play on Sunday, wins went to Ginny Krall's team (15-10, 15-2) against the Bee Bopps, to Happy Jacks (15-5, 6-15, 11-9) against TCR BITES BACK, to Serving No Purpose (15-13, 15-12) against Miller Time and to Bumpin' Humpers II against Den of Degradation (15-1, 15-9). Once again we had some forfeits (I guess everyone was watching the Seahawks lose). This time wins were handed to B.H. and the P. from the Other Team, to Out to Lunch from the Quantum Leaps, and once again to Julie Buckley's team from Extra Deep Pockets, who have now eliminated themselves from play due to forfeiting.

Men's I.M. B-Ball

by Andy Hiscock

Week No. 4 of the Men's Intramural Basketball season has just been completed, and the three divisions are beginning to spread out as far as team records are concerned. As it stands now, only one team in Division "A" ("One Leg Up") and one team in Division "C" ("The Big Ganglers") have unscathed records, and two teams in Division "B" ("Hustlers" & "Greek Rimmers") have been able to dodge the bullet in this young season. The competition has been fierce in all three Divisions, and many of the games have not been decided until the final minutes.

In Division "A" action on January 5, 1984 "We-can't-a-jama" was able to dim their opponents "The Brighton Blur" in a close 48-42 game. John Surbeck and John Summers had good all around games for the jama's who are currently in second place. In other Division "A" action on January 5th, "Tarnished Heels" had a tough time walking over "Just For Fun" in an action-packed game which ended with the heels on top 86-84. "One Leg Up" was able to climb on top of their game, and handily defeated their opponents "Raj."

This past Sunday, January 8th, in Division "B", "J-Town" was able to defeat "Smegs II" 42-38. Captain of the Town Dave Duncan and Mike Azar made good offensive showings and were able to crash the boards effectively. "J-Town" is currently in second place in Division "B".

In Division "C" competition on January 8th, "The Lust Brigade" was able to take advantage of the opposition's handicaps and beat "Cripples II" 46-37. Brett Basom was hot in close and Douglas Matz had a good day on the defensive boards, which enabled the brigands to win. Four other Division "C" teams were in heavy combat on Sunday. "The Big Ganglers" remained undefeated by defeating "Sturgeon Lips", and "B.A.M.F.'s" won with the help of "White Man's Disease's" forfeit. Mark Hudson had another good week for the Third Cloister team.

Women's B-Ball

by Michele Bartol

Girl's Basketball action was limited this past week. Between cancellations and forfeits, the league only managed two of its regularly scheduled four games.

The first day back from Christmas vacation brought losses to the VARSITY and Flipper Five. Bock's Babies shocked an unprepared Flipper-Five and the Slammers took an easy victory from a "no show" VARSITY.

Sunday, January 8th marked the recording of another Bock's Babies win. This brings their record to 3-0. They're the only undefeated team in the league. The VARSITY took its first win by forfeit as the Dribblers failed to show.

Hopefully in the coming week, all teams will be fired up and ready to play.

Upcoming girls I.M. games will be played Tuesday, January 10th at 6:30 p.m. and Sunday, January 15th at 4:30 p.m.

J.C. Grad Top Coach

by Barry Miller

Chuck Knox, of the Juniata class of 1954, was named UPI's American Conference Coach of the Year for 1983.

Knox, who took over the Seattle Seahawks this season and led the franchise to its first playoff berth, was an easy winner in the UPI balloting. Knox received 23 of the 56 total votes from the panel composed of four writers from each of the conference's fourteen cities.

Knox left the Buffalo franchise, after five years of coaching the Bills, at the end of last season.

The award is new to Knox in the AFC conference, however it represents his second Coach of the Year honor. He received the first while with the NFC Los Angeles Rams in 1973.

Knox has earned his reputation as a team builder during his eleven-year head coaching career. Taking over as head coach of the Rams in 1973, his first club finished at 12-2 on the season and won the NFC West title. In his next five years with the Rams, Knox compiled a record of 54-15-1 and won the division title all five years.

In his eleven years, Knox has led his teams to eight playoff berths and six division titles. He began the 1983 season with a .636 winning percentage which ranked third among active coaches.

Belgium Excursion

by Joe Scialabba

The Juniata College basketball team recently returned to the Huntingdon campus after a 12-day holiday tour of Europe. The Juniata team played seven scheduled games while abroad, against various Belgium national teams.

The Indians, having struggled through the early part of their regularly scheduled season, played inspired basketball against some tough Belgium competition to finish with four wins and three losses.

The Tribe took a second place spot in the Namur (Belgium) Christmas Tournament, losing 87-71 to the host team from Namur in the finals.

Playing against international competition and using the rules of international basketball play was a valuable experience according to Indian mentor Dan Helm.

"We were very pleased with the way everyone contributed to our playing success in Belgium," Helm said. "Both Jim (Zauzig, assistant coach) and I noted improvement in many of our players. We saw our team play with much more confidence than in the past, and we should be ready to play against a tough post-holiday schedule."

While in Belgium, the 23 member party was housed in the dormitory of the A.D.E.P.S. Sports School in Jambes, Belgium, a suburb of Namur.

It was not all work for the basketball team, however. The group visited Brussels, Waterloo and the North Sea port of Ostende in Belgium. The group also traveled to nearby Paris and Aachen, Germany during their visit.

"I must say," said Coach Helm, "that the trip was a successful one. Other than an occasional wrong turn by our bus driver and delayed plane flights, we were on schedule and things ran smoothly.

"For Juniata College," Helm said, "the trip was very successful because there are many people with a high regard for Juniata who may never have heard of the college were it not for our trip. It was a fine experience all around," Helm concluded.

Women Lose 75-42

by App

In what seems so long ago, the lady Indians dropped their last basketball game of 1983 just before Christmas break to a tough, top-ranked Susquehanna squad. The Indians played host but were beaten handily 75-42. This loss dropped the Indians record on the year to -.

The Indians hung tough early, but Susquehanna slowly took control of the game. Juniata was hurt by its cold shooting in the first half as they could only connect on 16% of their shots from the field. Meanwhile, Susquehanna shot 45%. The taller visitors also dominated the boards by 19 to 11 in the first half and 44 to 27 for the game. A total of 31 turnovers for the game also hurt the Indian cause. Susquehanna led 39-18 at half, thanks to spurts of 8 to 1 and 19 to 4. The second half was more of the same as Susquehanna never looked back. In the second half, the Indians were outscored 36-24. Patty Ryan led the Indians in scoring with 21 points and also led the team in rebounding with 11. Susquehanna was able to shut down high scoring Holly Crable as she was held scoreless on the evening.

The lady Indians get back in action this week with two away games. On Thursday they travel to St. Francis, and on Saturday they make a visit to nationally-ranked Scranton. Let's hope for a fast, fresh start in 1984. Good luck!!

Indians Win 49-40

by Joe Scialabba

Fresh from a successful holiday tour of Europe, that included a 4-3 exhibition record in Belgium, the Juniata men's basketball team put together a solid effort Saturday night in beating Albright 49-40 and starting 1984 on a good note.

Coach Dan Helm's Indians are now 2-7 overall and 2-3 in the Middle Atlantic Conference with consecutive road games tonight and Saturday night against tough league opponents, Susquehanna and Scranton respectively. "It will be a very important week for us; they are both very good teams," said Helm.

The Albright game was also very important as the Tribe ended a five-game losing skid by leading the visitors from start-to-finish.

The Lions fell to 2-7 as well, but are 0-3 in the MAC.

Juniata led by as many as 13 points (19-6) in the first half, but saw the lead dwindle to 23-21 before two late free throws made it 25-21 at halftime. A seven-for-seven foul line effort in the first twenty minutes helped the Indians stay in front.

The second half saw the Tribe continue their exodus to the charity stripe, but a chilly 37.5 percent (6 of 16) at the line made the game closer than it should have been. Fine field goal shooting, however, (18 of 35 for 51.4% for the game and 60% in the second half) allowed the hosts to retake firm control and hold on for the win.

The Lions were frigid from the floor, managing only 17 of 56 for a dismal 30.4 percent. Albright was 6 for 10 at the foul line.

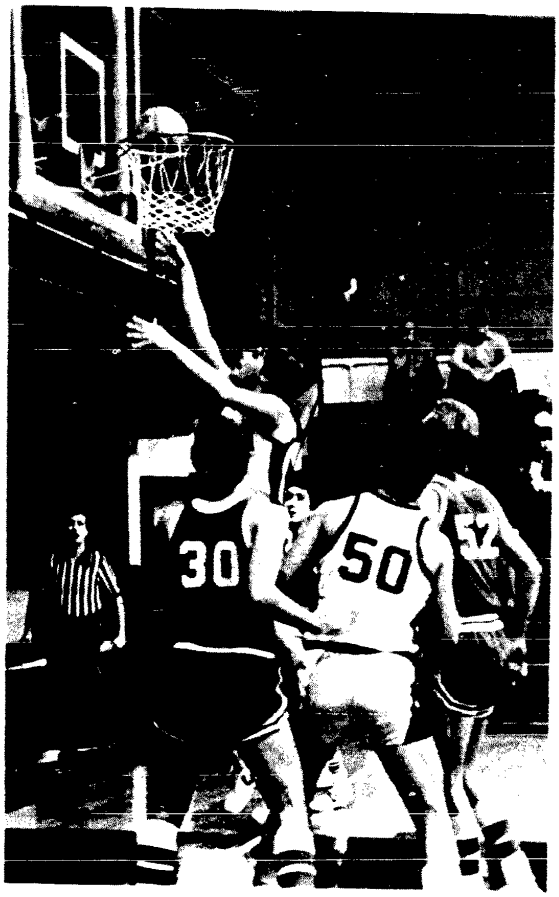
Dan Feruck led all scorers with 16 points, including 12 in the second half. Both Jeff Ostrowski and Mark Rucinski added ten apiece, as did Roger Yoh and Dave Hornberger for Albright.

Rucinski had 13 rebounds as the Indians took a slim board edge 31-30. Paul Kardish had six assists to lead the Tribe, who had 17 as a team for the game. Ostrowski was credited with five passes that led directly to scores.

Coach Helm was pleased with his teams' victory. "We played well on both ends of the floor," said the victorious coach. "I was happy with our shot selection on offense. We took good shots because we moved the ball well, especially against their zone. We passed the ball well. We also worked hard on defense and that attributed to their poor shooting percentage."

Helm added that he was a little concerned with the fact that the Albright man-to-man defense forced the Indians into a couple turnovers and let the visitors back in the game. "Their man-to-man defense flustered us a little bit, but fortunately we had the poise to recover," concluded Helm. "It was nice to win. I think we might be starting to get some confidence in ourselves."

The Albright game was the final Saturday home game this season. The Indians host Lebanon Valley on Tuesday the 17th.



Indian Dickie Moses goes for the layup as teammate Rucinski (No. 50) looks on. Juniata went on to defeat Albright 49-40.

Wrestling Action

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Wrestling team was 1-2 in a quadrangular meet held at Juniata on December 10. The Indian grapplers defeated Widener 34-19, but lost to Washington and Jefferson (29-15) and Susquehanna (27-18).

In the Widener victory, two Indians, Al Kruzenburg and Bill Hinchman pinned their opponents. Dave Cooper won 15-7 and Dave Sloan won 11-1. Both Rick Noll and Randy Smith won by forfeit, while Craig Stafford tied his opponent 8-8 in a tough battle.

In the Washington and Jefferson contest, four Juniata grapplers were victorious. Kruzenburg once again pinned his opponent. Noll shut his man out 5-0, and Steve Feltenburger and Smith won 8-3 and 9-4 respectively.

In their match against Susquehanna, Juniata won the first two weight classes (118 and 126) by forfeit. But, unfortunately, Susquehanna held Juniata to only two more victories. Sloan won his match 6-3 and Stafford also defeated his opponent 6-3.

Juniata has had about a month layoff since their last meet due to the differences in breaks between semester and trimester schools.

The Indians' next meet will be the Juniata Invitational at 12:00 on Saturday, January 12 in the Kennedy Sports and Rec Center. The teams to be participating will be: I.U.P., Messiah, Upsala and Juniata. Two teams, V.M.I. and Baptiste Bible, withdrew from the meet.

New Off-Campus Housing Policy

More Students Mean Tougher Restrictions

by Kathleen Achor

Those students wishing off-campus housing will be facing tighter restrictions for the 1984-85 school year.

The new policy, which is really only "new" to the current generation of Juniatians will put restrictions on the number of people allowed to move off campus (Hess, Mission House, and 1925 Moore St. excluded), giving priority to seniors.

Until four or five years ago, this was standard procedure. With the influx of students, however, the extra space in the dorms was needed to accommodate everyone. Basically, no one was denied off-campus residency during this time. The number of off-campus students has now grown to 150: the highest in Juniata's history.

Jack Linetty, Director of Housing, emphasizes that, as stated in the catalogue, Juniata is a residential campus. In coming to this school, students have in essence agreed to support this philosophy (see current catalogue, pp. 28, 39).

Plans are to reduce the 150 figure to roughly 125. The reduction is based on spaces available on campus at this time (35-40). There are still about 20 triples whose occupants have chosen to remain together.

Linetty says that the majority of off-campus students are off the meal plan as well, often due to the distance of their homes to the campus. But he claims that the meal plan is still the best deal — where else can you get all-you-can-eat for $5.65 a day?

Few can dispute this. But many off-campus students pay their rent, get more than enough to eat, and still end up spending fewer dollars than they would for the "convenience" of Juniata. This leads many to believe that restrictions are simply Juniata's way of tightening their control of student money. Finances are often a major factor in choosing to move off campus, and some simply would be unable to afford to move back.

Aside from cost, the ability to control one's environment is important in choosing to move. Some students simply cannot deal with the lack of privacy and/or the noise level of dorm life. The off-campus dweller has the advantage of being able to live as he/she chooses, while maintaining ample access to campus life.

Once experiencing the freedoms (as well as the responsibilities) of off-campus living, those who enjoy it would have a tough time readjusting to dorm life. Linetty admits foreseeing the greatest problem in denying some sophomores currently living off

Hall of the Year Competitors Close

Cloister and North lead race

by Dee Zimnock

Points toward Residence Hall of the Year were tabulated at the Residential Life Committee meeting held last Thursday.

The points are based on whether the project is hall or floor oriented. Bonus points are awarded for creativity or difficulty. Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services stated that the residence halls are doing riskier projects requiring more involvement and commented that she was "quite proud" of the efforts thus far. Standings are compiled from Fall term projects and those submitted thus far in the winter.

The first place is "The Cloister" with 288 points. Weekly movies, football games and cookouts kept the residents busy during the first months. The highlights of Cloister activities was the organization of the Cloister Country Club formally opened at an inaugural ball which was a semi-formal party. Members wear green and white shirts which show "they are proud to be associated with Cloister," stated Keehner. Cloister RHA has many ideas currently in progress, including the "Men and Women of Juniata Calendar."

North Hall is in second place with 213 points. Many North activities are social — parties. The residents held a foreign exchange seminar to share experiences with foreign students and do aerobics to keep in shape.

Following close behind with 210 points is Lesher. Residents have had the opportunity to attend a variety of seminars on such topics as study skills and time management. Also a piano bar was held for residents to relax and mingle with their guests.

Next with 157 points is South Hall. Residents hosted a pre-volleyball tournament social. A racial awareness seminar and CPR course were informative educational projects. The popular South Christmas party, wine and cheese socials round out a balance of activities.

In fifth place are the Off-Campus residents with 115 points. They have been involved in a wide range of activities including exam breaks, suicide prevention seminar, aerobics and an open house with their neighbors.

Sherwood comes in close with 109 points. RHA president Jim "EP" Duffy stated that the Sherwood residents enjoy social activities rather than educational ones. The hall sponsored several well-attended seminars on gay awareness and study skills. "Assassin," a game played with dart guns was one of the best ways to get the residents acquainted, according to Duffy. The annual post-Madrigal party and Halloween party went over well also. As a warning, Duffy added, "We will win at Spirit Week football, no more ties, no more ties!"

Rounding out the standings are East Houses with 100 points and Tussey-Terrace with 92 points. East House projects include semi-formal Christmas party, and a question-and-answer session with Dean Tilden on policy. Tussey-

Admissions Outlook Promising

by Tracy DeBlase

The Admissions Office outlook for the 1984-85 academic year looks very promising for Juniata College.

Kevin McCullen, Director of Institutional Planning and Research, is "cautiously optimistic" about the 1984-85 academic year. He said, "Inquiries about Juniata are higher now than ever, 8% to 11% greater than last year." There has also been a 10% increase in students applying to Juniata and visiting the campus.

Recruiting high school students is an ongoing process for the Admissions Office. According to McCullen, "The number of high school graduates is diminishing each year and competition between colleges is as great as ever." Due to this statistic, the Admissions Office cannot become complacent. They must continually search out and recruit those students that will be able to handle the work load at Juniata.

Once a student inquires about Juniata, there are several follow-up contacts made depending on the amount of interest shown on the part of the prospective student.

The Logical Choice

Juniata College has reached a decision to eliminate the general education requirement of Logic and Language. This decision, in the wake of countless pleas from the student body, was reached earlier last week by the Curriculum Committee. The decision was reached by a majority vote of 44 to 24. During the meeting, Freshman Composition, as it has been known to Juniata College, was also dissolved.

The Juniatian believes that the Curriculum Committee's decisions were wise. The Juniatian believes that there were a number of good reasons for eliminating the two courses.

We think that one of the main reasons for elimination of the courses was the realization that neither course was benefitting the students of Juniata College. It is a widely-held perception that no one learns anything from either Freshman Composition or Logic and Language. Courses in which someone spends 10 weeks and does not learn anything are absurd. What is the sense of taking a course just to say that you filled a requirement?

Another way in which the students were losing out by taking the two courses was that neither course transferred credit if you did not happen to find J.C. to your liking. In other words, you would spend roughly $1,300 for two courses which no other school would accept as academic entities.

Another major reason for deleting the two courses was the lack of universal structure in the teaching and grading processes. Learning from either course was often a function of who was teaching. For example, a person getting a "C" from one professor could also get an "A" from a different professor for the exact same course. This seemed to be a rather irrational system for courses which were meant to teach writing structure and logical arguments.

The Juniatian, however, recognizes that there needs to be some form of required English course(s) which should be taken. We commend the committee for continuing to strive to meet these needs. Presently, they are designing writing courses in addition to present writing courses to help fill the vacuum created by the Logic and Language and Freshman Composition deletion.

The Juniatian hopes that these decisions will lead to a more suitable and effective writing program for future Juniata students.

Letters to the Editor

"The Juniatian" welcomes letters from our readers. Letters should not exceed 350 words and must be received the Monday before the date of publication. All letters are subject to consideration by "The Juniatian" for space reasons. Anonymous letters will not be considered for publication.

Letter to the Editor,

For four minutes shortly after 11 a.m. on Wednesday, January 4, a computer informed us that Pennsylvania was to brace itself for a nuclear attack. What were you doing? I was in Linda Goodman's Beauty Shop enjoying the surprise and excitement of my two year old daughter getting her hair curled for the first time. I suppose if I were to be blown away that would have been as good a time as any to go. However, most likely I would have survived — for a while. All that Huntingdon would have gotten out of it would probably have been the radioactive fallout and with it, the ultimate pollution and the protracted, sickened death of most of us, our vegetation, and animal life.

Government officials claim to have been dismayed by the lack of response of people in Allentown where sirens went off. In my opinion, these people reacted appropriately. There is no meaningful shelter in a nuclear attack. And even if there were, it would hardly be adequate for thousands of panic-stricken people.

According to remarks made a few years ago here at Juniata by Senator Mark Hatfield, such computer error is chillingly commonplace. One of these days we or the Russians may be retaliating against a first strike that never even happened. And then it will be too late. I, for one, would thoroughly resent dying because of "computer error."

In my opinion, neither politics, nor science, nor erudite debates, nor anything else has been successful in getting us out of this situation. The only thing that holds any promise is a change of heart of all of us — to dare to refuse to rely primarily on nuclear weapons to protect us and instead to learn the way of cooperation and yes, love for our enemies. What is desperately needed right now is for every one of us to urge our President to establish meaningful, personal dialogue with the Russians as soon as possible. I know this sounds idealistic and many will cry, "We can't trust the Russians!" But as for me, I'd rather trust the Russians with their feelings for family, friends, and vodka than some computer that doesn't care whether we push the button or not.

Sincerely,
Debra Kirchhof-Glazier

Question: Are you a victim of the Juniata Winter Blues?

Karen Brown, Junior: "No, because I have Jesus Christ in my heart. He brightens up my every day."

Jennifer Ray, Freshman: "Yes. It makes me cranky. I hate the snow. We're all cramped in and everyone gets on each other's nerves."

Chris Haines, Sophomore: "I think everyone is to an extent. There's nothing else to do in the winter but get drunk every night."

Marcia Serio, Junior and Debbie Cole, Senior: "No. We make the most of the snow and take advantage of it while it is here by traying at Roundtop at midnight."

Hot Wax

by Tom Hildebrandt

Eddie Money's latest, Where's the Party? comes even closer to attempting to mix rock and roll with dance music than his last album No Control. With a melody similar to that of Billy Idol, and a somewhat lighter rock sound than Loverboy, Where's the Party? disappoints the older Eddie Money fans. Songs like "Two Tickets to Paradise" are gone forever from the lineup. Instead, replacing guitar work that had its own unique squeal, is a back beat and vocals which are accentuated on the forward beat. This comes across as a kind of sporadic pulsating sound.

Money's vocals make much of the album good. He can give every word he says a kind of exasperating sound, and it seems that every note he hits is done under the influence of self-inflicted pain. The drumming is simple and creates a good beat for the guitars to follow. The old guitar work of the group is prevalent in only a handful of songs on Where's the Party?.

There are enough musicians contributing to the album to make the New York Philharmonic Orchestra look like a bar band. Where's the Party? includes 3 or more people playing the following instruments: guitar, rhythm guitar, synthesizer, percussion, background vocals, and drums. One each on piano, saxophone, and bass are also part of the conglomeration.

The two most popular songs on Where's the Party? are the title track and "The Big Crash." These again have a danceable beat and could be almost mistaken for Billy Idol without vocals. Guitar work in the latter of the two definitely makes the song more appealing than the first. Some other tracks to experience are "Bad Girls" and "Back on the Road."

It seems as though Eddie Money has discovered that money making, for the most part, is synonomous with dance music and not rock and roll. Where's the Party? earns a light moderate rock title and suggested uses include light listening or dancing.

Out of possible 5, Where's the Party? gets a * * *.

ACN Visits Future

by Tom Cancelmo

When each of the classes takes the stage for All Class Night, this year's theme will be All Class Night Visits The Future.

The ACN Steering Committee, headed by Wayne Justham and comprised of class officers and Faculty Advisors, discussed many ideas but finally came up with the future idea.

For the first time ever, Centerboard will give each of the classes $125 in funds to aid their plays. Information on tickets and other All Class Night activities will appear in future Juniatians.

Come on Juniata, now's your chance to show us what you've got by participating in the upcoming Talent Show.

The talent show is open to all faculty and students at Juniata. Three prizes will be awarded; First Prize: $25, Second Prize: $15, and Third Prize $10. All acts are welcomed for the show which will be held on Saturday, January 28 at 7:00 P.M. in Oller Auditorium.

Registration forms are available at the Ellis Information Desk for all those who are interested. The talent show registration ends January 21 so get your acts together.

Seniors for Sale

by Alan Benson

A lot of seniors put themselves up for sale last week to help out the senior class.

Approximately 50 "slaves" participated in the first Senior Slave Auction, held last Tuesday evening in Ellis Hall Ballroom. Sold at prices ranging from one to nine dollars per slave, they netted approximately $240 dollars for their class.

Many of the slaves saw the auction as a chance to do something for their class. "I thought it was a good opportunity for the senior class to make money, and I wanted to help," said Rich Townshend.

The money raised by the auction will go toward the costs of Senior Week and buying a class gift, according to Patty Depra, Senior class treasurer. With the money from the auction, the class has about $1000, but expenses might be as high as $3000, she added.

Many of those who bought slaves weren't sure what they would do with their purchases, but some did have definite plans. One buyer was looking for a slave that could build lofts. Slaves that owned cars or who typed were in demand.

JC Calendar Upcoming

by Jackie Oldani

The annual "Men and Women of Juniata" calendar, sponsored this year by Cloister, will be available soon.

The calendar has had some major changes. In years before, there have been two separate calendars, one of the men and one of the women. This year it was decided to combine the two, using six men and six women, alternating the months. Other ways were considered but this seemed to be the best. When asked if he thought the change would hinder sales any, Cloister RHA Vice-President Darin McLean commented, "Given the size of this college, it seemed to be the most appropriate. The guys will still be willing to buy the calendar, as will the girls. They'll know the people on the calendar and be able to point to friends of both sexes when asked about it by others."

It will also be less expensive this year. The price has dropped from $1.50 to one dollar. Cloister is donating half of the profits to the United Way.

The voter turnout was deemed excellent. About one quarter of Juniata students cast their ballots. Over 100 men and nearly 100 women were nominated to fill the 12 months.

McLean declared the group effort made by Cloister residents very successful. Mike "Satch" Sachais brought the idea from North when he moved to Cloister. Due to his past experience on the "how to's", he had the advisory position. Other Cloister residents participated in all stages of the process.

Five hundred copies of the calendar will be available within two weeks. Initially, they will be sold at lunch and supper. Copies will also be sold in town. Huntingdon residents have proven themselves receptive to college projects. Last year, over half of the calendar sales were made in town.

McLean said if all goes well, there may be a second printing. Many last year missed the chance to buy a calendar and later wished they had.

Twenty businesses were willing to advertise on the calendar. Four places were reserved for campus organizations — Cloister, V103, the Juniatian and Centerboard.

Gym Plans on Display

The architectural plans for Juniata College's new Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center have been selected by the American Association of School Administrators (AASA) for display at their annual convention Feb. 24-27 in Las Vegas.

The Altoona firm of Hayes, Large, Suckling and Furth, architects of the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center, submitted the plans to the AASA jury which in turn selected the project for the prestigious exhibit.

According to architect Thomas C. Large, the AASA jury selects only a small percentage of the projects submitted by architectural firms from throughout the United States. "The projects selected for this exhibit represent the state of the art in architecture," Large said.

Juniata President Frederick M. Binder said, "We are all very proud of the structure, and are pleased that it has received the national recognition it so richly deserves."

Ground was broken for the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center in July, 1981 and the building was completed in January, 1983 at a cost of $4.5 million. The official dedication ceremony was held on Juniata's Founders Day, April 17, 1983.

Watt Tours Campuses

Former Secretary of the Interior James Watt is hitting the campus lecture circuit this month, commanding as much as $15,000 in honoraria and fees for one night appearances, his New York booking agency says.

"(Watt) will begin lecturing as of January, 1984, at colleges including the University of Miami, Texas A&M, Fordham, and Marquette," reports Don Walker with Harry Walker, Inc., the booking agency which is scheduling Watt's tour.

"Watt is one of the most sought-after speakers in the country right now," Walker says. "I won't divulge exactly what he's getting paid, but several newspapers have reported he collects $15,000 plus expenses for a standard honorarium."

The former secretary, who resigned last fall after a controversy over his characterization of the people he'd appointed to a government panel, hasn't always been one of the "most sought-after speakers" on the nation's campuses, of course.

Organized by environmental groups, students at Yale, Western State College, Baylor, Arizona and the University of Washington, among others, participated in a number of "Dump Watt" rallies and petition drives from September through November, 1981.

Student newspaper editorialists at Missouri, Michigan, Penn, Alabama, Texas Christian, Southern Cal and Oregon State, among others, regularly targeted Watt for criticism during his tenure.

Ohio State students' plans to picket a Republican fundraiser scheduled at OSU's union building last February forced the then-secretary to move the banquet off campus.

Now that Watt is out of office,

'Stripes' Review

by Maggie Gregory

Two hundred and twenty students left the cold weather and entered warm Oller Hall to view the hilarious movie "Stripes," on Friday night.

The sarcastic humor of Bill Murray took the tension off of the students after a week of papers, reading and studying. Murray's luck ran out at the beginning of the movie when his girlfriend leaves him and he walks away from his job as a taxi driver. Along with Murray, his friend Russell, played by John Candy, joins the funniest army you will ever see.

The two madmen set out to bootcamp with the intention of turning the army upside down,which is exactly what they did. They got involved with the police, drinking, and women: the three things you don't usually associate with the word "bootcamp." The witty songs that were chanted by the marching company were familiar to the Juniata campus as the students sang and tapped along.

After bootcamp, the movie seemed to drag on a bit and became ridiculous as the company was assigned to a mission in Italy to watch a huge top secret van. Murray and Candy stole the van to visit two beautiful military policewomen in Germany. This episode turned out to be a kidnapping and bombing adventure.

The ending was a little farfetched, but then again Bill Murray and his movie roles are usually as unrealistic as "Stripes." The Juniata campus loved the madcap antics and walked back into the snow with a smile on their faces.

however, some schools are willing to pay him to visit for both educational and financial reasons.

"We scheduled him because we wanted somebody to come in and speak on environmental issues, and we expect his appearance to generate a lot of local interest," explains Judy Schields, Marquette's assistant dean of students.

Watt "won't actually be giving a speech" when he appears at Marquette on February 16th, Schields says, "but will participate in more of a 'Meet the Press' forum, responding to questions from a panel of students and faculty."

"We expect a good deal of media coverage, and strong attendance from students, the general public, and special interest groups."

Schields won't say how much Watt's appearance will cost the school, but she does think it will easily sell out the 1200-seat theatre where Watt will speak. Students "probably" will pay $2 to $3 a ticket, she adds.

Students Donate Blood

by Marcie Serio

The turn out for the winter term Bloodmobile, held last Thursday, was much smaller than originally expected.

Of the 86 donors which turned out, six were refused because of sickness. Despite the abundance of colds keeping students from donating was the fact that many did not know about the blood drive. "There weren't too many signs posted," commented one senior. "I was not aware of the blood drive until it was over."

The Bloodmobile was sponsored by the Residential Life Committee this year rather than the usual Circle K sponsors. Committee member Beth Yaskovitch feels that the next Bloodmobile that Residential Life sponsors will be more successful now that the committee has experience and can get better organized. "It was brand new to us," said Yaskovitch. "I'm sure we will get a better turn out next time."

As usual the residential hall with the largest amount of donors received dorm points for their effort. Off-Campus won with a majority of 14 percent while North Hall came a close second with 10 percent. Tussey Hall finished third with 8.2%. Twenty-five, 15 and 10 points were awarded respectively.

Terrace has held ping-pong tournaments, sponsored children in foreign countries and viewed a slide show by H.B. Brumbaugh.

The RHA concept was started to add structure to the residence halls. RHA handles projects open to the entire hall or campus. RA's handle projects that are for floor residents. Keehner defined a project as an organized activity.

She emphasized a difference between a 'dorm' (sorry Julie!) and a residence hall. A dorm is a place to eat and sleep and a residence hall is a "living, learning environment." Students spend "75% of their time outside the classroom," stated Keehner. Thus there is a reason to program. The RHA and RA's add the structure. As a result of programming, there is less damage because the residents take pride in their environment and are proud to be recognized as a part of their residence hall.

Residence halls will have a chance to add more points during Spirit Week scheduled for the second week in February, according to Residential Life Committee Chairperson, Beth Yaskovitch. Details will be available soon.

Student Government Looks At Changes

by Joy Hadley

On Tuesday, January 10, 1984 Student Government held its regular meeting in the mini-lounge of Ellis College Center.

President Rory McAvoy opened the meeting by informing the Senate about notices she received regarding various upcoming conferences, which may be of interest to students. Elizabethtown College is sponsoring an "idea sharing" session for the Student Government Associations of different colleges. In February, the University of Pennsylvania is organizing a conference, in Harrisburg, on state aid for students. Finally, between February 10-12, the National Student Conference on Voter Registration is meeting at Harvard University; students will have a chance to meet with presidential candidates and hear their thoughts on various issues.

Beth Yaskovitch (Northwest Senator), representing the Residential Life Committee, reported on a meeting she had with Jack Linetty, Director of Housing, regarding an energy conservation program. Consideration is being given to having the students buy their own window screens.

Arnie Tilden, Vice President and Dean of Student Services, explained, "the problem is largely that they (window screens) are abused." Since the window screens are rather cheap ($3-$4) said Yaskovitch, by having the students purchase them, at least they will be assured of having screens, especially since the college does not have enough.

Buying new washers and dryers continues to be the main topic of discussion for the Student Concerns Committee. The suggestion is that the college simply buy their own washers and dryers and the students pay one lump sum for the use of the machines.

Kelly Bauer (Lesher Senator) stated that in a meeting with Bill Alexander, Vice President for Business Affairs, he reminded her of the possible problem of outsiders using the machines. Also Juniata's contract with the company who owns the present machines still has a few years left on it. The problem with the washers and dryers remains unresolved.

"To give the people who missed out a chance," Greg Kimble, treasurer, said his Budget and Management Committee will have another round of funding; there is $750.00 left to be distributed, so clubs should submit their budgets. Kimble also noted that for those who would like to rent refrigerators, Student Government now has some available.

Reporting for the College Governance Committee, Chris "Corky" Collins, said the Academic Planning Committee may drop the Logic and Language requirement as well as revise Freshman Composition, orienting it more toward specific fields of studies. Collins also reminded the Senate that the committee is in the midst of rewriting the Constitution, so any suggestions should be made immediately.

Secretary, Laura Babiash, gave the Centerboard report. Centerboard is still discussing the possibility of combining Homecoming and Parent's Weekend.

ASF Names Chairman

Glenn P. Holsinger of Huntingdon has been named chairman of the 1983-84 Annual Support Fund (ASF) at Juniata College, and will launch the ASF telephone campaign Jan. 23.

Holsinger noted that the 1983-84 ASF campaign goal is $225,000. The telephones will be manned Sunday through Thursday evenings until Feb. 9, with student and alumni volunteers calling Juniata alumni and friends. During the 14-year history of the ASF, gifts to the college have totaled some $2.5 million.

The retired vice president, claims of Swigart Associates, Inc., Holsinger is a 1947 Juniata graduate. At the time of his retirement, he also served as vice president of the Mutual Benefit Insurance and Select Risk Mutual Fire Insurance companies. He currently serves as a director of those two companies, as well as Swigart Associates and the Credit Club Consumer Discount Company.

Long active in local organizations, Holsinger is a former Huntingdon Borough Councilman and member of the Tri-County Borough Association. He has served as president of the Kiwanis Club, Huntingdon Music Club and the Juniata College Huntingdon Area Alumni Association. He is an active member of the 15th Street United Methodist Church and the Huntingdon Community Chorus.

"Juniata has always emphasized the importance of the Annual Support Fund," said President Frederick M. Binder. "By naming Glenn Holsinger ASF chairman, we are assuring the successful completion of the 1983-84 campaign."

Holsinger and his wife, the former Virginia Minor, a 1950 Juniata graduate, reside in Taylor Highlands. They have two sons.

Changes in Tote Planned

by Mary McDougall

A change from a study atmosphere to an activity-oriented area is being planned for the Totem Inn by the Centerboard Renovations Committee.

"There is no other place on campus that was designed for a student's social interests," said Ron Renzini, Renovations Committee chairman.

Plans for Tote, located on the second floor of Ellis Hall, include the rearrangement of the layout to create more of a party atmosphere. The center bank of booths will be removed to allow more use of tables. The walls will be painted and lighting improved.

Other changes may be the addition of a juke box and stage area. The Renovations Committee hopes to make Tote more of a social center for the campus by scheduling entertainment. A students activities bulletin board informing students of upcoming events is included in the plans.

Renzini noted that more study space will be created on the second floor of Ellis by moving the booths into what is now the game room. The pinball machines will be located in Tote.

In planning the changes, the committee has examined the student centers of Penn State, University of Scranton, and Marywood College.

"We've tried to combine their ideas of what their students appreciate with what Juniata students could use to their best advantage," said Renzini.

Some steps have already been taken in the revitalization of the Totem Inn such as a new menu and refurnishing the pool tables. However, no money has yet been spent for the renovations pending finalization and approval of the committee's plans.

College Enrollment on the Rise

Despite a shrinking number of 18-year-olds, the college population may have increased this year to 12.7 million students, an increase of 1.1 percent, according to a new national survey.

The enrollment increase, though slight, comes at a time when observers expected a drop because there are fewer 18-year-olds — who traditionally are the new college freshmen who keep enrollments up — in the population at large.

But college enrollment went up this year largely because of an increase in the number of part-time students, according to the study, which polled 3259 campuses. It was performed by the Association Council for Policy Analysis and Research, a coalition of Washington-based higher education groups.

Part-time student enrollment went up 1.6 percent this year, compared to a full-time student enrollment that stayed virtually steady, the study found.

"More people are finding reasons to go to college," explains Elaine El-Khawas, vice president for research at the American Council on Education and one of the survey's overseers.

The enrollment increases "have something to do with the economy," El-Khawas speculates, adding that many people opt to attend or stay in college when jobs become scarce.

The number of first-time students remained steady, the study found, despite the diminishing population of 18-year-olds.

In fall 1982 the number of first-time freshmen dropped 3.3 percent. This fall it dipped only 0.3 percent.

"The number of 18-year-olds is an increasingly poor indicator of college enrollment," El-Khawas says. There is "no fixed percent-

Did you know we can find a breast cancer as small as the head of a pin?

Such a tiny cancer can almost always be cured. A cancer of this size can best be found by mammography —a technique of low-dose breast x-rays. Using far less radiation than ever before, mammography can detect a cancer long before a lump can be felt. While the cancer is still highly curable.

Not every woman needs mammography. But for those women over 50 or with special reasons to be concerned, like those with symptoms or a strong family history of breast cancer, mammography can find a tiny cancer before it has spread. Ask your doctor about mammography.

Measles Cause Panic on Campuses

IOWA CITY, IA (CPS) — Students returning to the University of Iowa this month will have to show something else besides a check to get back into classes: proof they've been vaccinated against measles.

Stanford is also requiring students to show proof of immunity to rubeola and rubella this month.

And though they're not holding students back from classes now, Notre Dame, Indiana, Illinois and Houston, among other schools, are making measles shots available to students and urging them to get immunized. In mid-epidemic last spring, Indiana kept non-immune students from returning from spring break.

Some groups — most notably the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and the American College Health Association (ACHA) — now want all schools to force students to prove they're immune before even being admitted to college.

The CDC's Dr. Kim Farley, for example, strongly "encourages universities to adopt policies of proof of immunization prior to entrance."

The reason is that measles is making a comeback among college-aged people. In 1981, there were 101 student measles cases around the country. That grew to 115 in 1982, and then ballooned to some 282 student cases in just the first six months of 1983, an ACHA report found.

Many student cases, moreover, were clustered on certain campuses. Thirty-three of the cases were at Houston last spring. One hundred and seventy-nine University of Indiana students fell ill during the scare. As a result, "things came to a halt" in Bloomington, recalls Dr. MarJeanne Collins. Collins heads ACHA's immunization program and is a director of the University of Pennsylvania's Student Health Center.

Last spring's epidemic spread across six campuses in the Midwest, Texas, and Florida, according to the CDC in Atlanta.

Since the outbreaks typically arrive in February and March, many schools are increasing their vigilance at the start of this term.

Some believe that, left unchecked, the problem could spread farther during the upcoming measles season.

"Measles," points out Dr. Harley Feldrick of Iowa's student health service, "is probably the most contagious of communicable diseases."

An airborne virus, rubeola — "hard" or "red" measles — announces itself to the victim with a spotted rash, fever, a cough and stuffy head. It is most contagious three-to-four days before the person actually feels sick, Feldrick says.

As many as one out of every five college students in the U.S. may be susceptible to the disease, Collins estimates, because people in the 17-to-25-year-old age bracket received a "killed" vaccine when they were in grade school in the 1960s.

The "killed" vaccine gives people a temporary immunity to measles. "Live" measles vaccine, on the other hand, provides people with life-long immunity, Collins says.

Those numbers translate into huge swarms of susceptible students on individual campuses. Purdue has immunized 7000-to-8000 students, says Patricia Boardman, who was Purdue's state health representative during last spring's epidemic.

In preparation for this month's new registration requirement, Iowa began a campus-wide immunization program in November that eventually attracted 12,000 students.

Iowa's Feldrick says the immunization program cost the university itself $7500. But the state Health Department and the Centers for Disease Control picked up the tab for the vaccine and the extra people hired to administer the shots.

The full costs can be prohibitive. Indiana's statewide vaccination program last spring cost over $500,000, Boardman says.

"It's hard to move in to immunize everybody," Collins concedes. "The cost in that kind of thing is very high."

The costs are high enough to keep some schools from undertaking any kind of immunization program.

A program like Iowa's, notes Dr. C. Briefer of the University of Michigan's health center, is "logistically very hard to do."

"We haven't seen the justification for the tremendous expense of a (vaccine) program," adds Dr. Eugene Flipsey, head of the University of Miami's Student Health Services.

In some places, schools have spent a lot of money on an image of teenagers going on to college." Now only about half of high school graduates proceed to higher degrees, and more older people are going or returning to school, she points out.

Enrollment

Private college enrollment remained the same after last year's decline in the number of first-time, full-time students. But four-year public schools continued to lose first-time freshmen, down 3.6 percent from last year, the study reports.

El-Khawas feels, however, that the difference "is not significant enough to try to interpret." She points out that some public schools have had to limit enrollment because of budget problems and state plans to contain university size.

At the graduate level, the survey found a 1.3 percent enrollment increase in the public sector. And independent campuses, with typically higher costs, registered a 2.9 percent rise in graduate student attendance.

Accounting for the boost, El-Khawas says it is "likely that more students are staying in a program" (past college) and pursuing degrees instead of stopping to get a job.

The increases, moreover, have helped colleges take in more tuition revenues, adds M.J. Williams of the National Association of College and University Business Officers.

Williams also attributes the increase to the economy. "In times of recessions, people start going back to college and upgrading their skills."

But if the current economic recovery trend continues, Williams guesses people may turn again to the job market instead of seeking education. He says to avoid a monetary squeeze, colleges will have to do some planning for that recovery.

campus the same privilege next year.

The procedure for applying for off-campus housing is as follows: applications will be made available in the Housing Office (206 Founders) on January 23 for the class of 1985 only. Permission slips will then be sent out, along with a list of suggested housing (made up of 30-35 Huntingdon residents expressing interest in renting to students; students may look on their own as well). The procedure begins early so that those unable to find off-campus housing can opt to participate in room drawing.

If an insufficient number of applications are received from seniors, the process will then open up to juniors, then sophomores. Once permission is granted, the Housing Office will be glad to advise students on their renting situations.

A reminder to all students using the van service to Penn State:

— There will be no refunds on all 7:00 a.m. van trips.

— If you change your plans about taking a van, you must let the information desk know before 6:00 the day before.

— If you sign up for a particular van to take you back to campus, you must take that van.

— It is up to each driver whether or not he/she will drive in bad weather.

Superbowl '84 Is Here

by Andy Hiscock

The Superbowl is just around the corner, and it marks the end of the NFL 1983-84 season. The game is scheduled to be played on January 22, at Tampa Stadium, Tampa, Florida with the kickoff at 4:45 p.m.

This year the AFC representative will be the L.A. Raiders and, their opponents, the Washington Redskins will be trying to capture their second Superbowl win in two years for the NFC. These two teams have had great years and have fought hard to reach the title game.

The two teams are so evenly matched that it will be difficult to point out all of the key match-ups. Both offenses are high powered, Washington's behind QB Joe Theisman (3714 passing yards with 29 TD's) was ranked No. 1 in the NFL and the Raiders were ranked No. 3 in the NFL under the resurgence of veteran QB Jim Plunkett. The Raiders have won 8 out of their last 9 games but Washington was able to edge them out during the regular season with a 37-35 win.

The Raiders defense will most likely not stray from its intimidation-like tactics from their strong defensive line with members Lyle Alzado, Howie Long, and Reggi Kinlaw doing battle in what announcer John Madden would call the "pig pen" because they will be up against the enormous "Hogs" offensive line of the Washington Redskins. Defensive cornerbacks Lester Hayes and Mike Haynes for the Raiders will have to be on their toes all day long because of Washington's good offensive passing attack, but they have both had outstanding years and with a good pass rush from the defensive line should be able to hold Washington in check. The L.A. Raiders will most likely try to get the ball to their outstanding running back, Marcus Allen, who has great pass catching ability out of the backfield and has a slashing/cutback running style which is hard to stop in the open field. Raiders QB Jim Plunkett has had one of his best years as a pro after regaining his starting position as a result of an injury to QB Marc Wilson. Plunkett has a good arm, but has thrown more interceptions than QB Joe Theisman. Although Plunkett is not known for his mobility, he is not afraid to run for the first down.

The Washington Redskins' defensive line led by Dave Butz has been able to apply a good pass rush all year. For this final game, they will have to try to take advantage of Plunkett's lack of mobility and get some sacks or force Plunkett into throwing before he wants to. Washington's key defensive objective would be to shut down Marcus Allen, and may key a linebacker on him in an attempt to throw a blanket over him. If the defense can do its job, then Washington's offense can go to work. The offense is well balanced with running back John Riggins who ran for 1347 yards during 1983-84 and scored a NFL record 24 touchdowns, and Joe Theisman's passing attack to deep threats Charlie Brown and Art Monk. It will be crucial for Mark Mosley to pull his kicking game together for Washington, especially if the game is close.

This is the way the Superbowl was meant to be. Two teams that are so evenly matched that no one can safely predict who will be the winner until the final gun sounds. As an added incentive, the winning players will receive $38,000 each, with the losers getting a measly $18,000 to drown their sorrows. For those of you who may be interested, the line score has Washington favored by three.

I.M. Co-Rec V-Ball

by Linda Ramsay

Exciting co-rec volleyball finished off its fourth week of intensive play Sunday with both divisions in the midst of heavy action.

Last Tuesday, January 10, meant wins for Division A teams; Phase 9, The Blood Clotters, 407 & Buddies, and Mixed Nuts. Phase 9 ran up against stoic competition from Send in the Clowns II (15-5, 10-15, 11-5) in Phase 9's win. The Blood Clotters did their job against Send in the Clowns I (15-10, 15-8), while Jim Laphan came through with key serves when his team, 407 & Buddies, beat Les Enfantes Terribles (12-15, 15-12, 11-6). Division A play finished it off Tuesday night with Mixed Nuts taking it all over Great Expectations (15-4, 15-8).

Division B games included wins for TCR Bites Back (16-14, 8-15, 11-1) over the Other Team, B.H. and the P toppled the Bee Bopps (15-7, 6-15, 11-5) and Miller Time took the case over Den of Degradation (15-6, 15-13).

Wednesday also saw a lot of action from both divisions. NDTLOC shocked The Woo (15-12, 10-15, 11-1). Send in the Clowns II tumbled two nights in a row as they lost to the Invaders (15-11, 15-11) in Division A. Due to a forfeit by Merlin's Minstrels, Les Enfantes Terribles captured a win and 407 & Buddies beat Flattii (15-8, 15-4).

Division B watched the Bumpin' Humpers stifle Quantum Leaps in two straight (15-6, 15-10), and a forfeit by B.H. and P enabled Happy Jacks to tally a win on Wednesday.

The Sports + Recreation Center was bouncing Sunday as a full slate of co-rec intramural volleyball was in progress. Winners coming out of Division A on Sunday included Mixed Nuts, Send in the Clowns II, The Blood Clotters, Les Enfantes Terribles, Phase 9, Send in the Clowns I and Geriatric Ward.

With both teams coming off wins earlier in the week, Mixed Nuts put it to NDTLOC (15-8, 15-9), while Send in the Clowns II gave Great Expectations another loss to think about (15-6, 17-15). The Blood Clotters continued their strategic clotting of the first place position with a win against The Woo (15-1, 15-9). A near invasion by the Invaders just wasn't enough against Les Enfantes Terribles as the Terribles won in three (15-3, 9-15, 11-1). Phase 9 continued its winning trend with a victory over The Flattii (15-1, 15-6). Send in the Clowns I put one over Merlin's Minstrels (15-6, 15-3) and the Geriatric Ward flattened 407 & Buddies (15-12, 8-5) in a hotly contested match.

Sunday's action in Division B included wins by Quantum Leaps, Bumpin' Humpers, Serving No Purpose, Happy Jacks, The Other Team and Out To Lunch.

In the first game Sunday, Quantum Leaps soared over Den of Degradation (15-3, 15-10) and Bumpin' Humpers II took a bite out of TCR Bites Back (15-2, 14-16, 11-3). The Bee Bopps fell to Serving No Purpose (15-2, 16-14) as did Ginny Krall's Team against Happy Jacks (15-7, 15-8). The Other Team came out of nowhere to surprise Julie Buckley's Team (15-9, 15-4) and Out to Lunch bagged B.H. and P (15-11, 15-0).

Mid-term standings are now out for both leagues and all other intramural activity. The standings are posted on the intramural board in the Sports + Recreation Center.

Ladies Split 1-1

by App

Juniata's Women's basketball team split a pair of away games last week. On Thursday, the Lady Indians defeated St. Francis 69-57 and on Saturday they dropped a 77-43 decision to a highly ranked Scranton team. This leaves the Indians with a 3-6 record on the season.

At St. Francis, the Indians built a 17 point lead early in the first half only to see St. Francis close the gap to 3 points, 38-35, at halftime. St. Francis stayed in the game by shooting at a 50% clip. In the second half, however, Juniata's defense took over. The Indians full court press led to numerous steals and easy buckets which allowed the team to rebuild a double digit lead. The Indians held St. Francis to an ice cold 24% from the field in the second half. The Indians had a well balanced scoring attack. Carol Stambaugh led the scoring effort with 21 points and Holly Crable and Patty Ryan each chipped in with 16 points apiece. The Indians controlled the boards as Ryan hauled in 16 rebounds and Stambaugh pulled down 11 rebounds. Point guard Karen "Cheese" Fonner also played a key role in the victory as she dished out 6 assists.

Unfortunately, the Scranton game was a different story. The Indians held their own early as Scranton failed to score in the first 4 minutes. The Scranton women held only a small lead late in the half when they reeled off a few late baskets before intermission to take a 34-23 lead into the locker-room. In the second half, hot outside shooting and a strong inside game from a pair of 6 footers allowed Scranton to take control of the game and run away with it. Scranton controlled the boards 53-37 and shot 47% from the field for the game as compared to 28% for Juniata. Ryan led the Indians with 13 points and 11 rebounds while Stambaugh chipped in with 12 points.

The Lady Indians played host to 2 games this week. On Tuesday, Lebanon Valley made a trip here and on Saturday Wilkes makes a visit to Memorial Gym. Good luck girls!!

Tough J.C. Loss

by Joe Scialabba

The Juniata Indian men's basketball team did not win a game last week, but they did win some respect. After a crushing 85-64 loss on Thursday at Susquehanna, the Tribe got it all together at Scranton, taking the defending Division III national champions to the brink of an upset before succumbing to the hosts in the final minute, 81-71, in front of over 1700 fans in the Royals' Long Center.

The pair of losses dropped the Indians to 2-9 overall and 2-5 in the Middle Atlantic Conference.

Thursday's thrashing at Susquehanna left Coach Dan Helm almost speechless. "We just didn't play well," sighed Helm. "Susquehanna was a good team, but we didn't give them much of a fight. It was important that we didn't get stuck in a really deep hole — we had to, and did, play well at Scranton."

In the Susquehanna loss, Dickie Moses led Indian scorers with 16 points. Mark Rucinski hit for 13 and had 13 rebounds.

Larry Walsh led four Crusaders in double figures with 18 points.

The winners led 40-27 at halftime and used a 9 for 13 foul line effort in the second half to pull away from the Tribe.

The long Saturday trek to Scranton turned out to be the best medicine the ailing Indians could have taken. Facing a foe that featured a high-powered offensive attack and an harassing pressure defense, Juniata matched the challenge with sizzling shooting and gutsy defense. Despite a ten-point difference on the scoreboard after forty minutes, it was a superb effort by the Indians that made the Royals reach down deep to pull away in the final minute.

After trailing by as many as twelve points (24-12) in the first half, the Tribe came back to tie at 28-28 on a Moses bomb with 5:51 'til halftime. It was only 41-36 Royals at the intermission.

Again in the second half the hosts tried to pull away for good, leading 53-40 with 15:49 left, but the Indians refused to fold. Juniata slowly fought back, shooting the ball with almost complete accuracy — most notably Paul Kardish (hitting five straight from the field at one point) and Moses (who finished the day 8 of 11 from the floor). What shots the Indians did miss "Rufus" Rucinski rolled-in on rebounds. The hosts knew it was a dogfight with 2:19 left when Dan Feruck's free throw pulled Juniata to within a bucket, 71-69.

Scranton, however, survived the scare, hitting on 6 of 7 foul shots and two easy layups down the stretch to win the 81-71 decision and raise its record to a fine 10-4 mark and 3-1 in the MAC.

Both teams had 33 field goals with the Indians canning 62 percent from the floor, Scranton an equally-hot 58 percent. The game was won at the foul line — the Royals sinking 15 of 18, JC 5 of 8.

Moses and Rucinski had 18 points apiece, Feruck 15, and Kardish added 14 for the Tribe.

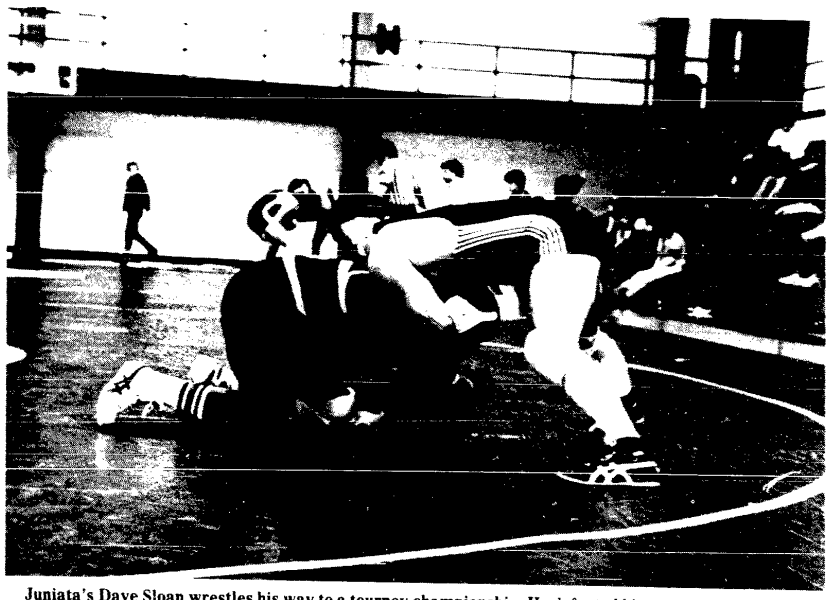
Mickey Banas scored 27, Bill Bessior 24 points for Scranton.

The game was a very exciting and well-played one, as both coaches agreed after the contest.

"It was an excellent game," said a satisfied, yet disappointed Coach Helm. "We played our best basketball of the year; everyone contributed. We need to play this way against all types of competition, not just against a team as excellent as Scranton. Hopefully, this will carry over to the rest of the season."

Scranton mentor Bob Bessior praised the Indians. "We didn't expect Juniata to play nearly as well as they did," noted the veteran coach. "Usually a 2-8 team would roll-over after trailing by 13 points, but Juniata didn't. They shot the ball extremely well and played a solid game. It was an exciting game, and we had to work hard to win. If Juniata plays this way against other teams, they're gonna kick some people's butts."

The Tribe hosted Lebanon Valley Tuesday night and goes to Cabrini tomorrow night. They play at Delaware Valley Saturday afternoon.



Juniata's Dave Sloan wrestles his way to a tourney championship. He defeated his two opponents 15-13, 11-7.

J.C. 2nd at Invitational Tourney

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata grapplers had a successful outing at the second annual Juniata College Invitational Tournament on Saturday, January 14.

The Indians finished second overall with 30 points. The IUP grapplers took the tournament crown with 33 points. Upsala finished a close third in the tournament with 29 points. Lagging behind the pack was the Messiah team with 11 points.

Individually, the Indian grapplers fared very well. Six Juniata wrestlers made it to the tournament finals; Rick Brown (HWT), Dave Cooper (142), Al Kreuzberg (126), Mark Murdoch (167), Rich Noll (134), and Dave Sloan (150). Of these six only two, Noll and Sloan, won the championship of their weight classes.

Noll (8-3), given a bye in the first round of play, advanced to the finals against Jim Albanese from IUP. Noll defeated Albanese 11-5.

Sloan (6-3) gained a narrow 15-13 victory over IUP opponent Rick DeLong in the first round. In the championship match, Sloan defeated Messiah's Dave Drescher 11-7.

Kreuzberg (4-2), in his first round match, shut out Jeff Good of Messiah 5-0. However, in the championship match, the tables were turned as Kreuzberg was shut out 2-0 by Andy Patsy of IUP.

Cooper (3-3) defeated Brian Webb of Messiah 5-4 in the first round, but was soundly beaten by IUP's Bob Godshall 21-3.

Murdoch (1-2) pinned Anthony Jancick of Upsala in 42 seconds in his first round match. In his final match, Murdoch was pinned in 1:24 by Rick Strayer of IUP.

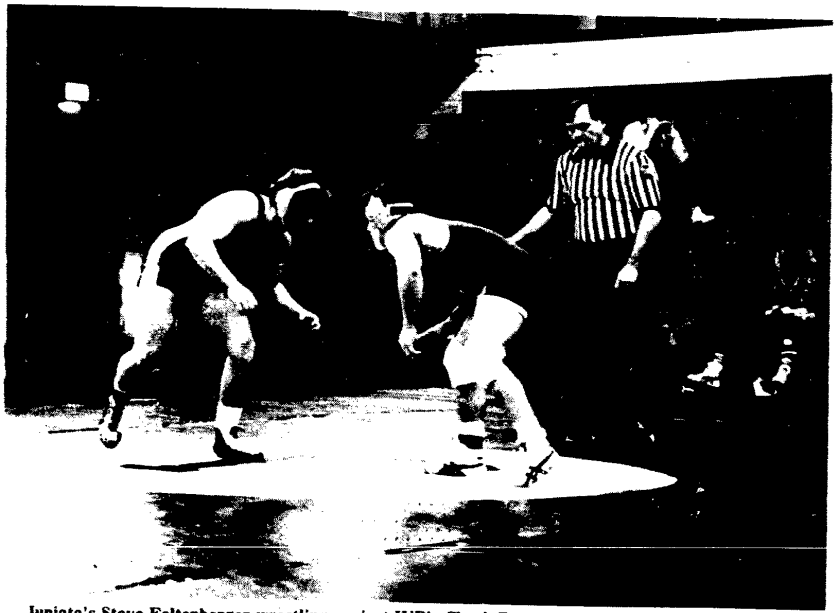
Brown (0-4) drew a bye in the first round to get into the finals. He was beaten by Upsala's Jeff Brandon 15-3.

Craig Stafford (158) finished third in his weight class by defeating Messiah's Andy Graham 5-0. He lost his first round match to Lenny Davis of IUP 7-2.

Randy Smith (177) and Steve Feltenberger (190) also took third place finishes for the Indians; both received byes in the matches for third place. Smith was pinned in his first round match by Rick Bonaccorsi in 3:44. Feltenberger lost to Chuck Bosson of IUP by getting pinned in 24 seconds in overtime.

Freshman Paul Bernhardt (118) finished fourth in the tournament. In his first round match, he was pinned by Don Leaf of IUP in 2:12. In the third place match, he was once again pinned; this time by Steve Read of Upsala in 2:57.

Yesterday, the Indian grapplers faced the Gettysburg grapplers at Gettysburg. On Saturday, the Indians will meet King's on their home mat.



Juniata's Steve Feltenberger wrestling against IUP's Chuck Bosson. Feltenberger tied Bosson 5-5 in regular time, but lost in OT by getting pinned in 24 seconds.

Swimming

Juniata's inaugural swim meet was a great success as four JC swim club members took first place in all the events.

The meet, against visiting Saint Francis College of Loretto, was held last Wednesday evening in Binder Natatorium.

Juniata was represented by Amy Reed, Lisa Wilson, Risa Herrell, and Beth Pierre. Saint Francis had ten girls entered in the meet.

There was no men's competition, since St. Francis did not bring any male swimmers.

The Juniata swim club hopes to have similar meets in the future.

Admission

McCullen said, "... follow ups are done in various ways. The Admissions Office uses mailings, telephone calls, invitations, and high school visits to educate prospective students about the campus."

"We are optimistic about the admissions outlook for 1984-85. Recruiting is going very well," stated Gayle Kreider, Director of Admissions. Both Kreider and McCullen stressed that the statistics won't be complete until registration for fall term is over, but it is safe to be cautiously optimistic.

Kevin McCullen summed up the outlook for 1984-85 by saying, "In a declining market, Juniata is holding its own and working hard at it."

Nuclear Weapons Discussed

by Jackie Oldani

Nuclear proliferation. The definition is — the spread of nuclear weapons. That was the topic of the lecture, "Nuclear Proliferation and American Security," given by Dr. Rodney Jones last Thursday night in the Faculty Lounge, as part of the Baker Lecture Series.

Jones is a specialist in nuclear technology and weapons proliferation and security problems in the Third World, especially Asia and the Middle East. A 1964 graduate of Juniata, he received his Ph.D. from Columbia University. Currently, he is the Director of Nuclear Policy Studies at Georgetown University's Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C. Jones has also written various books on the subject of proliferation.

In his opening remarks, Jones stated that "it's good to come back" and that he was delighted to see old faces and meet new people at Juniata.

Jones referred to America as the "major mover and shaker" in trying to get other countries to stop proliferation.

With about 100 people in attendance, Jones defined nuclear proliferation and explained the difference between horizontal spread (geographic) and vertical spread (diversification) of nuclear weapons.

Much of the lecture was devoted to the problems, both previous and current, in the Middle East and with the Soviet Union. Future projections of what might happen should others gain control of nuclear weapons were also included.

"Why does proliferation happen?" was another main point, answered by explanations of technology and the review of governmental policies on nuclear weapons since Eisenhower in the '50's.

Jones stated there is a lot to be done about nuclear proliferation. It will take work on country by country. It may be necessary to bribe, intimidate, or entangle to secure international co-operation in international agreements. However, it is terribly important.

A question and answer session followed the lecture. Afterwards, refreshments were served.

Dr. Rodney Jones, a specialist in nuclear technology and weapons proliferation, gave a lecture entitled, "Nuclear Proliferation and American Security" last week.

Fear Prompts Escort Service

by Cinny Cooper

Rumored attacks on campus have prompted a proposal by the Women's Action Committee to establish an escort service for Juniata women said Julie Keehner, Assistant Dean of Student Services for Residential Life.

Keehner explained that the idea arose when students became concerned with attacks on campus but that these attacks were "just rumors." The establishment of this program is "not reacting to a rape already," said Keehner.

Missie Iezzi, secretary for the Women's Action Committee, explained that the service, if implemented, would be available to JC women studying late in buildings other than their residence halls. A phone number would be posted in Good Hall, Brumbaugh Science Center, and Beeghly Library. Any female student calling this number and asking for an escort would receive the name of her escort and the place he would meet her. The escort would then take her directly to her room. Campus security is available to take students living in Hess back to their apartment at night.

Sherwood Hall has volunteered their manpower to help the Women's Action Committee with the program. Interested men living in Sherwood would be screened and then selected for escort positions.

Suggested hours that the service would be available were 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. during the week and 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. or 3 a.m. on the weekend.

One of the fears of the Committee is that the service would be abused. At their last meeting they expressed concern that girls would use the service just to meet guys.

Members of the Women's Action Committee commented on the importance of such a service to JC women. The service would "make girls feel more secure" and give them "peace of mind," said Iezzi. Chairwoman of the newly organized group, Missy Pluta, said in reference to the rumored attacks, "Women are beginning to realize . . . we're still subject to these kind of things."

L & L Dropped From Curriculum

Freshmen Comp. changes also

by Kathy Achor

Juniata's core curriculum for freshmen will be put on hold during the 1984-85 academic year.

Logic and Language is being dropped from the curriculum next year with no immediate core substitution. Ideas of an extra General Education requirement to take its place for the class of 1988 were discussed, but rejected. Consequently, next year's freshmen will face less core requirements.

Freshmen Composition will become multiply designed — that is, the way the course is taught will be determined by each professor. Despite the frequency of multiple sections of courses within most departments, some are leery about this situation in Freshmen Composition because it has never been tried without the common guidelines. Instructors are, however, free to team together to form a program.

Donald T. Hartman, Vice President and Dean of Academic Affairs, pointed out that 6-8 years ago it was possible to explain all the parts of the curriculum: what each course was designated for, and how the courses fit together for the desired outcome. Now it's not so clear cut.

There have been program modifications of Logic and Language every year, making it necessary to stop and question whether the original goals were being fulfilled.

"We've been tinkering," said Hartman. "When you tinker with things they have a way of getting away from you."

The faculty basically agrees that students do not think or write on the level that they should. They recognize, however, that ten weeks is not enough time to remedy this. It is tough to design courses like Freshmen Composition and Logic and Language with no predestined, committed follow-up.

Agreement does exist that an education at Juniata should be able to produce certain outcomes. But it is difficult for faculty to reach a common perspective about how people learn. There is much disagreement not only on the "best way" to produce the desired outcomes, but also on exactly what those desired outcomes are.

Hartman holds that the purposes behind Freshmen Composition and Logic and Language are still valid, and important. But the type of material the courses were meant to teach was material that freshmen were not ready for. "In a context of free thinking and free writing, it was too abstract," said Hartman. "Students learned to pass the course, but few would apply the material later."

It is possible, of course, that if these thinking and writing structures could be placed into a context, they could be made more applicable. One proposal for Freshmen Composition is to approach writing in terms of the student's potential POE. In this way, basic sources more relevant to the student's interest could be utilized. Students would be matched with a section dealing specifically with their field. This more concentrated course would be able to merge many of the Logic and Language objectives.

Ideally, in Hartman's opinion, the curriculum should not have been changed for next year. He emphasized that the omission of Logic and Language is not a giving up of goals, but is representative of a need that is not satisfactorily being met.

At this point, goals are to get a plan out to the faculty this spring as a basis for discussion, and to Class — A Missing Item?

For those of us who have had the opportunity to experience All Class Night, it can generally be said that this night provides students with a unique and enjoyable campus activity.

The present system of having the four classes write scripts based on a certain theme (this year's is "The Future"), and then producing the skit over a period of 2-4 weeks, is a perfect chance for Juniatians to exhibit imagination, ingenuity, and class unity.

For at one moment during that March night, seniors are seniors, juniors are juniors, and so forth. It is a chance for students to amplify humorous situations on campus (wearing white soled shoes in the gym) or a chance to become an actor/actress (even if only in their own eyes).

Unfortunately, these skits have sometimes focused on slandering individuals prominent within our college community. To avoid these remarks, skits are required to be handed in before time and must pass approval of an All Class Night committee. The problem is that each class adds lines once the skit has been returned and approved.

The Juniatian realizes and understands that it is difficult to write a successful script. We also realize that part of the purpose of All Class Night is to poke fun at the school and its professors. But The Juniatian does not want to see individuals maliciously attacked on stage again this year, ala 1983 All Class Night.

While we do not endorse censorship, personal, sharp, biting lines can be viewed more carefully. We therefore recommend that the advisors who help and are responsible for each class do some of their own policing for these degrading remarks.

The Juniatian hopes that each class will learn a lesson from last year and keep the class in this year's All Class Night skits.

ALONG MUDDY RUN

by Kathleen Achor

It was snowing the day I received it. Expecting to carry the normal load of airmail back to the room with me, to my astonishment I found an envelope. I pulled it out of the box. Kathleen Achor, Reporter, Box 1052, it said. It was written in felt tip. Some melted snow dripped from my hair, onto the envelope, causing the 'leen' in my name to run.

I had a feeling about this note. I sat down on one of those benches across from the post office window and frantically ripped the envelope open (in a subtle fashion, of course). The handwriting inside was different. Shakier. The message was in green, reminding me vaguely of . . . chlorophyll. My curiosity was mounting, and suddenly I realized it was written in Spanish.

The banana plant! Of course . . . he needed to get in touch with me again. I would set out to find my interpreter at once.

My interpreter was taking a nap, and was not too pleased at my waking him. He made that very clear to me, using English. But finally, he agreed to translate.

"It is time," the banana plant wrote to me. "I have a statement." There was a signature. "Deep Root."

"Tonight," I murmured. "I have to go tonight." Turning to my interpreter, I said, "I'll pick you up at 1:30."

He looked aghast. "You'll what?"

"I have to talk to him alone," I explained.

"I'd be more than happy to give you that opportunity."

"But I don't speak Spanish!"

"Don't let him fool you. 'Reporter' and 'Box' were in English, weren't they?"

"They were also in felt tip. Obviously, he has other friends."

"Fellow immigrants, no doubt."

I sighed. "Certainly you can see we have a duty to our fellow students."

Letters to the Editor

Letter to the Editor,

Being an off-campus resident I would like to respond to the article published last week concerning the new restrictions regarding the "tougher" off-campus housing policy. One of the main reasons I chose not to reside on campus was the amount of money I could save. Certainly the other benefits, such as privacy and choice of life style, are very intriguing; however, with the ever increasing cost of a college education, we, as students, are continually being forced to find new ways of either making or saving money. Off-campus housing is one such money saving device. Mr. Linetty spoke of the meal plan as still being the best deal. Personally, I've thoroughly enjoyed home-cooked meals at the even lower price of $2.85 a day for the last two years. And yes, I have always had as much to eat as I wanted, and at any time of the night or day. Obviously, the meal

Computer Center Ready For Use

by Kathy Manzella

The new computer center, located in the old Science Library, is now approaching full availability to students.

Although the new Vax 11/780 System was originally scheduled to be operational at the beginning of Winter Term, it has only been in use since our return from Christmas break. Dr. Dale L. Wampler, Director of the Academic Computer Center reported that currently "We are now at almost 100% in terms of usage of the system."

The late opening caused minor problems, particularly for those students in the introductory courses. Having spent only three weeks familiarizing themselves with the old system, they were then forced to switch to the new Vax System. The transition period proved to be a little frustrating for some of them.

Dr. Wampler attributed this to the fact that "The Basic is more complicated on the Vax. Overall the new system is capable of a much wider variety of functions." He also added that the new system is "more flexible and easier to use in the long run."

Aside from the fact that it is more powerful, the new system features a larger storage capacity. Currently on campus there are 41 terminals in operation. In addition three more will be in use by spring. Long range plans include the use of 80 terminals on campus. The old system was capable of operating only 30 terminals. Even with only 30 terminals the old system was extremely slow as compared to the new Vax system.

Beginning next fall the introductory computer courses will be restructured to fully make use of the new system. Instead of being geared mainly towards programming, the new course will cover a broader array of computer uses. Emphasis will be placed on surveying and use of the computer as a research tool.

Over the next few years the new Vax system should encourage increased computer usage in every field. According to Wampler, "Many faculty members plan to require computer work in their courses of a wide variety."

The computer center is open from 2:00 P.M. until 2:00 A.M. on Sundays. The hours for Monday through Thursday are 7:00 A.M. until 2:00 A.M. It is open from 7:00 A.M. until 8:00 P.M. on Fridays and from 9:00 A.M. until 8:00 P.M. on Saturdays.

Students Direct One Acts

by Alyson Pfister

A campus tradition is coming up on February 9, 10, and 11 as Juniata presents its annual One Act Plays.

Sticking to tradition, three plays will be acted in 3/4 Round in Oller Hall. 3/4 Round is a method in which the audience sits on three sides of the stage.

The first play, "The Open Window" is an adaptation of the story of Saki. It is being directed by Wendy M. Whitehaus. Acting in the play will be Chris "Corky" Collins, Jayne Stein, Jocelyn Fowler, and Sharon Dotts. The play takes place at a country estate in England.

John Molcan is directing the second play, Peter Schaeffer's "The Private Ear". This play is the longest of the three, lasting 45 minutes. John Ploumis, Steve Meyers, and Sheri Kidd act in this story which takes place in London.

The last play is August Strindberg's adaptation of Arvon Paulson's "Motherlove". This is set in turn-of-the-century Sweden and will be directed by Kari Dubbel. Acting in "Motherlove" are Gabby Vogelsang, Cheryl Kimbrough, Alyson Pfister, and Elisabeth Oishi. Doris Goehring is the event's faculty advisor.

The One Acts will start at 8 p.m. and admission is free.

Barrister's Club Active

by Yvette Rotundo

Anyone wondering what it's really like to be a lawyer has a good chance of finding out by joining the Barrister's Club.

Advised by Professor Tom Baldino, the club began several years ago to inform any students interested in matters concerning the law or law schools.

According to Baldino, college law societies are "not that common," but fortunately for Juniata students ours is very active. One way in which students get information is from numerous speakers who give first hand accounts of their experiences as lawyers.

So far, two of the speakers have been Juniata graduates. On January 20, Bob Schwartz, a student from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, was here to discuss law schools and how they operate. A graduate of University of Vermont Law School, Mark Righter, presented an informative speech on his job as a law clerk.

Involving at least 20 members, the club sponsored a trip to the New York Metropolitan Area where the students met with admissions and Deans of several law schools; included were Rutgers Newark Campus, Columbia, New York University and the New York Law School, which is a private institution.

Club members are also looking forward to their nine day trip to Florida in the spring where they

Dark Crystal Review

by Soraya Morgan

For those of you who enjoy fairy tale-like films, full of creatively designed animated puppets ranging from the goolish sketchey monsters to the adorable gensling nymphs, "The Dark Crystal" is well worth seeing.

"Another world, another time" is the introduction of the film, and certainly well suited. We are told that a thousand years ago a big dark crystal cracked. As a result, two new races were formed, the sketcheys and the mystics.

The sketcheys, portrayed as barbaric and cruel fiends, took rule of the land and live in a big castle. The mystics, who appear like over-sized worms, are described as gentle and peace loving beings with great knowledge. They live in small huts in the middle of the desert.

Although the mystics live in repression under the sketcheys, these wise intellectuals do have one benefitting factor: a gensling. This being is named Gen and is supposed to be the only one remaining of his species because the sketcheys killed all the others.

Before the oldest mystic dies, he tells Gen to take a journey to find the missing crystal.

Gen obeys his mystic friend and leaves to find the crystal. Little does he realize all the other things he discovers will range from a one eyed witch, to a brown eyed female gensling.

For those of you who enjoy fairy tales, "The Dark Crystal" is full of adventure and imagination.

Apathy Cancels Winter Week

by Ginny Krall

Lack of student interest led Center Board to cancel the 1984 Winter Week. An alternative program sponsored by the Residential Life Committee has been scheduled instead.

Winter Week was Center Board's attempt to create dorm unity and rid students of the wintertime blahs.

According to Terri Squires, Center Board student liaison, two Winter Week organizational meetings were held before Christmas Break and both meetings were poorly attended. This left Center Board with no choice but to cancel the program.

Spirit Weekend was then proposed by the Residential Life Committee. This weekend, to be held on Feb. 9-12, will include activities such as football, soccer, volleyball and a penny jar competition.

Hopefully this Student Government event will motivate student response and create the dorm unity that was brought out in last year's Winter Week.

American Libraries Different From British

On the surface, college libraries in the United States and Great Britain appear similar, but looks may be deceiving according to Dr. David H. Eyman, director of libraries at Juniata College.

"Librarians seem to have less status in England than in the United States," says Eyman who recently returned to Juniata after spending three months working in the library at the College of St. Paul and St. Mary in Cheltenham, England. He explains there are no student assistants working in the libraries, so librarians themselves perform common tasks such as filing and reshelving books. Salary scales also are lower, Eyman notes.

Although the libraries use a modified Dewey Decimal System, books are only cataloged by author. "If you don't know who wrote the book you are looking for, you are in trouble," Eyman says. However, the British are ahead of American libraries in putting their individual catalogs on computers. "On the other hand, their computer search programs are just beginning to be developed," he adds.

Eyman notes that college libraries in England are not open as late, or as often as libraries at American schools. "As a result, circulation there is much higher because the students must take the books back to their rooms to study. The libraries are not used as study areas," Eyman says.

Although he spent most of his time at the College of St. Paul and St. Mary, Eyman traveled to libraries at other universities such as Oxford, Bath and Birmingham. He also delivered a paper on "An American College's Experience With On-Line Bibliographic Searching" at the 12th annual Joint Conference on Libraries and Learning Resources.

Accompanied by his wife and two sons, Eyman traveled throughout Britain and also spent some time in Paris. Although the three-month stay was very enjoyable, Eyman experienced a few hostile remarks. "There seems to be a wave of anti-American sentiment in England as a result of the Cruise Missile deployment and the invasion of Grenada," Eyman says. "Occasionally someone would question me on the issue as if they were my missiles. It is an emotional topic and receives extensive coverage in the news."

The Eymans adapted to English life quite well, except perhaps driving. "Although we did quite a bit of driving, operating a car on the left side of the road was uncomfortable." He even learned to play squash, a popular sport in England. "Squash courts are as common in England as tennis courts are in the United States."

Eyman's work in England was part of an exchange program between Juniata and the College of St. Paul and St. Mary. While he was in England, Alice Johnson, the librarian at St. Paul and St. Mary was working at Juniata. "It was a good experience for both of us and one that will benefit both institutions," Eyman says.

Van Keuren Play To Be Performed

Peace issues in our society today will be presented through drama in two special performances next week at the Stone Church.

"William's Pruning Hooks", written by Professor Lu Van Keuren will be performed on February 2 and 4, at 8:00 P.M. in Fellowship Hall. The play is based on the true story of William Rotch who lived during the Revolutionary War.

Rotch was a merchant who lived on Nantucket Island during the war. During the war, Nantucket Island remained neutral. Rotch was given some rifles with bayonets for payment of a debt sometime before the start of the war. He sold the rifles to people for hunting purposes but he refused to sell the bayonets. Their only use he felt was for killing people. His refusal to turn the bayonets over to the army resulted in a court trial on which Van Keuren's play is based.

Van Keuren wrote the play after

Hall of Fame

by Tracy DeBlase

Two 1983 graduates of Juniata College will be inducted into the York County Hall of Fame on February 8th.

Sue Barker and Claudia (Tweardy) Serfoss will be recognized as outstanding athletes of York County.

Barker and Tweardy both played major roles in the success of the Juniata Volleyball Team from 1979 to 1983. Tweardy was a three year all M.A.C. conference player, NCAA regional tournament team selection, 1983 team MVP, 1982-83 co-captain, and 1983 All-American. Barker's career was highlighted by her 1982-83 All-American selection. She was a two year all M.A.C. conference player, NCAA national tournament team member, 1982-83 co-captain, and 1982 MVP.

A social work major, Barker is employed as a Family Life counselor with the Family-Child Program in York County. Tweardy, a computer science major, is employed by R.S. Noonan Company as a computer program analyst.

Barker and Tweardy are the first Juniata College graduates to be inducted into the York County Hall of Fame.

"Oh, we do?"

I assured him that we did. He admitted he saw my point. Of course, that was after I promised him the case of stout.

We hid in the computer center until it closed. At 2:30 the coast was finally clear. Furtively, we approached the plant.

"My god," I said. "You look awful!"

And indeed he did. His leaves were drooping, a dehydrated brown at the edges. It looked as though someone had chomped out a part of his trunk. I was almost sorry when my interpreter translated my remark.

"I have been mistreated," the plant informed me. "Ignored while all this silly moving was going on. That is my payment, I suppose, for taking the stance I did in September. I am not alone. All over the world members of the budding band of revolutionary banana freedom fighters are suffering for their beliefs. I am just one of many . . ."

"But why did you call me?" I asked.

"There is still such unrest in Central America. The Kissinger commission wants to increase military aid, not decrease it. The more money, the more fighting, and who knows what's going to happen to all the banana plants? It grieves me . . ."

"So what is your statement?"

"You wonder why I look so bad. Yes, part of it is the neglect and ill treatment I have suffered in the college's making way for the computer age. But recently it has been of my own doing. I am on a hunger strike."

"A hunger strike? But for how long?"

"Til death, if necessary. I must let others know how I feel."

"But to die for an ideal? That's radical, rash . . ."

"Yes, but if someone like you did it, it could mean the difference between passing and failing SVS."

He had a point. I asked him what he would do if he were force fed, to which he replied, "Banana plants can be bulimic too." I almost laughed aloud at the image this conjured up in my mind, but caught myself, realizing how inappropriate it would be. I asked him just what it was he thought the Juniata community could do.

"Write your congresspeople. Vote in the primaries. Stop being so damn apathetic. Perhaps I could go off my hunger strike if I could see that some people cared about what's going on in the world. Besides . . ." and then the plant let out that same sinister laugh it had in September, and again, the interpreter refused to translate his next words.

Readers, one can only assume that yes, this plant has ideals it is ready to lay down its life for, but it is not beyond messing up some accounts in the meantime. We are dealing with a radical. Many of you are in contact with our beloved banana plant every day. Reassure it of your concern. This is a grave situation. Only we can save its life.

Job Market Improves For this Year's Grads

The class of 1984 will enjoy one of the most dramatic upturns in the job market in recent history, according to two just-released national studies.

After several years of dismal employment conditions for the nation's college graduates, it appears job offers, as well as salaries, will be up significantly this spring.

"At the B.A. level, things are going to be up about 20 percent," proclaims Victor Lindquist, placement chief at Northwestern University and author of that school's Endicott Report on the national job market.

"For the first time in several years we're starting to see an increase in the number of jobs for college graduates," echoes Jack Shingleton, Michigan State's placement director and supervisor of MSU's annual jobs forecast.

Although MSU's study is noticeably more conservative — Shingleton expects only a five percent increase in the number of job offers — both jobs forecasts expect the 1984 grads to fare far better than their predecessors in 1982 and 1983.

"The market overall is bouncing back from this two-year decline we've been going through," notes Lindquist.

Besides the predicted 20 percent increase in job opportunities for four-year grads, Lindquist says, "the market will also be strong at the master's level, up about 28 percent over last year."

"The largest increase in all areas is at the master's level in engineering," he adds. 'The Double E' (electrical engineering) degree is going to be the crown prince — up 28 percent over last year — along with degrees in the computer science area."

Shingleton thinks those figures may be too optimistic, but agrees that "demand is stronger," and that "the curve is moving in a positive direction for a change."

"There will be a heavy emphasis on electrical engineering and computer science majors," he says, "although chemical and petroleum engineers will have a more difficult time this year."

The upturn has been coming gradually. In August, 1983, College Press Service reported a growing sense of optimism among campus placement directors that the end of the recession and the coming of an election year signaled better times ahead for collegiate job seekers.

And in an October, 1983 CPS article, both Shingleton and Lindquist accurately predicted the upbeat results of their 1984 jobs forecasts.

Geographically, Singleton says, the southwest, southeast, and south central sections of the country will have the best job opportunities. The northeast, midwest, and northwest regions will be the worst areas for job seekers.

And while the market may look brighter for grads with masters and bachelors degrees, Ph.Ds may have a harder time than ever finding employment.

A new Princeton University report predicts that there will be three times as many Ph.Ds flooding the academic job market as there are jobs available for them.

learning of the Rotch incident while she was doing research. The characters in the play are based on the actual people who took part in the trial.

The play is being directed by Education Professor Howard Crouch. Due to the nature of the court scenes the play according to Crouch stresses "group theater." Crouch noted the fact that no try outs for the play were held. Instead he simply handed out parts for those people he felt were appropriate for the various roles. He received no turndowns for the various roles, many of which have been filled by people from the Huntingdon area.

Prior to the One Act, a special dramatic reading will be done by Esther Doyle. Doyle, who once taught English at Juniata, specializes in oral interpretation of literature.

Doyle will read from transcripts of the Berrigan trials which occurred during this period. These transcripts are based upon work done by Philip and David Berrigan in regards to draft cases.

Following these performances a panel will present three positions on peace today. The panel will then lead the audience in an open discussion session. Admission to the performances is free.

Accidents Plague Chem Labs

In the latest of a steady series of serious mishaps at college chemistry labs nationwide, a California Institute of Technology student was critically injured January 4 while conducting a "routine" lab experiment on campus.

Second-year graduate student Ramsay Bittar was severely injured when a glass flask he was using in a basic, inorganic systhesis procedure suddenly burst, sending shards of glass throughout the lab.

Physicians say one piece of the glass severed Bittar's main neck artery, depriving his brain of oxygen for up to two hours while the blood vessel was surgically grafted back together.

"I don't recall a more serious laboratory accident in the 12 years I've worked here," John Berkaw, Bittar's advisor, told the Cal Tech newspaper.

But similar mistakes have endangered students — and left faculty and schools open to lawsuits — at a number of other campuses over the last several years.

A University of New Mexico student, for instance, is suing that school for $2.7 million after he was severely burned by acid during a lab class last summer.

The student alleges the university and instructor did not properly maintain safety standards in the lab, and failed to consider the danger of inexperienced students handling the acid.

Last April a University of Tennessee laboratory nearly burned down before officials discovered several gas jets (used to supply students' Bunsen burners with gas) had been left on and ignited.

Often, however, the danger to lab students is less obvious.

Rutgers, for instance, had to close its Smith Hall laboratory facilities two years ago after the Occupational Safety and Health Administration detected dangerous levels of estradiol benzoate in the building.

Seventeen students and faculty members have sued the school, claiming they suffered side-effects from exposure to the cancer-causing substance.

And in 1982, 60 University of Washington chemistry students were exposed to a still-unknown

Ice Machine Installed

by Maureen Morrissey

Juniata students will now be able to get all the ice they need without any problems.

According to Beth Yaskovitch, Chairperson for the Residential Life Committee, a brand new ice machine was installed last week in the Student Government office.

There is no special schedule yet, but Beth says it will be available for student use during all Student Government office hours: every afternoon. It can also be used Tuesday and Thursday evening and Friday and Saturday afternoons.

There will be no charge for the ice. Beth stresses that this is strictly a Student Government service for the students. However, students are asked to give 25¢ for each bag they use for the ice.

The machine cost $2300.00 and was paid for by the Residential Life Committee, Student Government and R.H.A.

The idea for the ice machine was brought up last year as a new service for the students. The committee did not have enough time to purchase the machine last year and so they made it their first business this year.

plan to visit Nova Law School.

Always looking for new members, the club definitely presents a "viable service" to its members. Senior Hank Coyne feels that not only is Baldino a super advisor, but "he put my desires in perspective. I'm no Harvard material." Coyne also said his involvement with the club has helped to narrow his choice down to ten law schools.

Also, any student who is interested in law should be aware that room 214 of Good Hall contains information concerning law practice and legal issues, and also numerous brochures, catalogs, and applications for law schools.

In the future Baldino hopes to see more government issues brought up, but for now he is enthusiastic and pleased with the club's progress. "For two bucks a year you can't beat it," Coyne added.

ZZ Top's latest album Eliminator is similar in many respects to their former music. ZZ Top's music consists of a prominent drum beat and steady cymbal rhythm of Frank Beard, the unique singing of Billy Gibbons and Dusty Hill, and the long, melodious guitar solos and slightly distorted rhythm guitars of Billy Gibbons. Hill's bass parts consist only of a steady 'thumping' which keep the band moving at a good clip.

Past favorites from the group include: "Tush", "Waiting for the Bus", "Jesus Just Left Chicago", and "Beer Drinkers and Hell Raisers". Past and still producer for the group, Bill Ham, deserves much credit, as the album seems to flow from the speakers, with each cut slightly different than the other.

It is obvious that Eliminator has given ZZ Top more recognition as a rock and roll ensemble. One reason for this is the latest and very revealing rock video which accompanies the biggest hit on the album, "Sharp Dressed Man". Other tracks to absorb are: "Gimme All Your Lovin", "Bad Girl", and the slow and deliberate "I Need You Tonight". All the cuts on Eliminator feature that great guitar work of historical ZZ Top.

The album probably leads itself to be more easy listening or party background music, although some can see the popular cuts as 'danceable'. It is true that the beat in some of the songs has a certain dance style; however, this does not fully represent the true colors of ZZ Top.

An interesting part of the album is the second side. It contains songs with the titles including: "Legs", "Thugs", "TV Dinners", and "Dirty Dog". These tend to be somewhat instrumental, and the lyrics somewhat less appealing to most people.

I would rate Eliminator as moderate rock with good sound quality and nice separation between vocals and percussion.

Out of 5, ZZ Top's Eliminator gets 4 ****.

chemical vapor which mysteriously engulfed the Bagley Hall building one afternoon.

Such incidents are rare, according to Steven Foster, program manager for the National Association of College and University Business Officers, because university labs tend to adhere to proven safety standards.

"The lab procedures tend to be very sound, based on the fact that there aren't (more) accidents," Foster says, adding that he doesn't know of many lawsuits resulting from such incidents.

Edward Bittar, the injured Cal Tech student's brother, says the family has not considered legal action yet, while Bittar remains in "very guarded" condition in the hospital.

"We're thinking in terms of saving the man right now," he says.

plan is not the best deal monetarily.

I'm not blind to the fact that a drastic increase in off-campus residents could seriously affect Juniata's budgeting. Yet, on the same front page of last week's paper there was an article stating the fact that "Inquiries about Juniata are higher now than ever, 8% to 11% greater than last year." If the Admissions Office is optimistic and the statistics are accurate, I don't foresee a drop in enrollment, nor a drop in on-campus residents. Of course this will mean a large percent of the incoming freshmen class will be living in triples again, regardless of the fact that the rooms they will be living in were originally designed to be doubles. And on top of that, the Housing Office wants to put more people on campus by reducing off-campus residents. The article last week stated that "This leads many to believe that restrictions are simply Juniata's way of tightening their control of student money." It certainly seems to me that if Juniata is still forced to put freshmen in triples due to lack of on-campus housing and wants to restrict off-campus residents that "control of student money" is a legitimate assumption.

In conclusion, I feel that cutting the number of off-campus residents by only 25 is only the first step to even tighter restrictions and these regulations will do nothing, nothing more than reduce the students' freedom of choice. If we as students hope to maintain that freedom, we must speak out against off-campus restrictions, if for no other reason than to aid us in affording a Juniata education.

Let's begin this article by engaging in a word association exercise. When the word "suicide" is mentioned, what word comes to mind to best describe your feelings? Most would probably respond with "aloneness", "hopelessness", or "helplessness". Very few words seem to elicit as much emotion and feeling as does suicide. Indeed, suicide can be defined as an "act of desperation".

In an attempt to make students more aware of the subject, the residence hall staff at Sherwood is planning a suicide awareness and prevention campaign in the near future. As a precursor to their efforts, it seems appropriate to introduce the topic by discussing the incidence of suicide on college campuses. As an example of the magnitude of the problem, did you know that suicide is exceeded only by accidents as a leading cause of death among college students? Even more alarming is the fact that many experts suggest a significant number of "accidental" deaths can be attributed to suicide.

According to the American Association of Suicidology, there is no such thing as a typical suicidal person. We do know, however, that suicide is associated generally with one's inability to deal with stress. The college environment is surely replete with potential stresses that can trigger suicidal feelings.

Steven Stack, Professor of Sociology at Penn State and an expert on suicide, contends that stress associated with higher education is the greatest it has ever been. Experts like Stack and other counselors and mental health personnel in colleges and universities suggest a number of reasons for the increased suicide rate among college students. Factors such as today's uncertain job market, the high cost of a college education, the pressure to succeed and having trouble in personal relationships all may contribute to suicide.

We will continue our discussion of factors contributing to suicide and suggest ways to prevent it in the next article.

Men's I.M. Hoops

The 7th week of the 1983-84 Men's Intramural Basketball season has just been completed. Three more weeks of competition remain before the play-offs begin. The Semi-Finals are scheduled to begin on Sunday February 12th for Divisions "A" and "C", with Division "B"s Semi-Final games scheduled to begin on Monday, February 13th following their 1st Round Play-offs on the 12th. Next week I will name the teams who are currently in the top play-off berths. All three Divisions show that there will be a good run for the play-offs at the end of the season.

In Division "A" on Thursday, January 19th, "The 69ers" defeated "Tarnished Heels" 53-41. The heels were able to remain in 1st place in the division with a 5-1 record. Strong offensive showings were made by Steve Meeker inside and Chris Thompson on the offensive boards. Steve Poska had a good all-around game for "The 69ers." In other Division "A" games on Thursday, "Just For Fun" beat "The Brighton Blur" 63-45. . . . . "One Leg Up" defeated "We-can't-a-jama" 53-46.

Division "B" was also in action on January 19th. The Highlighted game was between "Babylon By Bus" and "The Spoilers". The Babylonians were able to pull out a 54-33 victory to hold 1st place with a 6-1 record. Doug Brown, alias "The Iceman", had a good offensive game as did Matt (weedles) Garret who successfully crashed the offensive and defensive boards. In other Division "B" games, "Greek Rimmers" defeated "Alex's Hit Men" by forfeit. . . . "Goon Squad" beat "Pat's Red Cockadades" 50-42. . . . "Fuggitt" overwhelmed "Corky's Creampuffs II" 47-29. . . . and "Hustlers" defeated "The Hackers" 42-32.

On January 22, Division "C" had three games scheduled. In a close game, "Sturgeon Lips" squeaked to a 38-37 victory over "The Cripples II" on Sunday. Jeff Meeker was able to score from inside effectively for the lips. Mark Loeper brought the game to within one in the final minute but the lips held off the cripples to get the win. "Sturgeon Lips" are currently in second place in the division behind "The Big Ganglers" who are presently holding first place with an undefeated six and one record. In other Division "C" action on Sunday, "B.A.M.F.'s" and "The Lust Brigade" lost by Double Forfeit, and "The Big Ganglers" and "White Man's Disease" put off their scheduled game until Feb. 4th.

Rob Yelnosky readies to hit the ball while David Garfield Wagner stands dumbfounded in Co-rec volleyball action.

Outdoors

by Scott Stephenson

With abundant snow carpeting the ground and cold weather in the long range forecast, skiing (both cross-country and downhill) is at its best. The Juniata Ski team has been attending regular practice at Blue Knob on Wednesdays, and all the hard work paid off this past weekend when they brought home a third place medal from Seven Springs.

Laughing Bush has scheduled a series of cross-country ski trips between now and winter break. Anyone interested in these day and weekend trips should consult the bulletin board on the first floor of Ellis near the book store. Students should be reminded that the outing service has recently acquired waxless skis which should make it easier for beginners to learn the basics of the sport.

Trout fishermen should consider Fisherman's Paradise, located just north of Penn State, for winter fly-fishing action. Steve Sywensky, of Lemont, has been averaging fifteen trout a day on the Paradise water using small midges over rising fish. Fly-fishermen may also be interested in the Juniata Fly-Fishing Club, which is being formed now under the sponsorship of Jack Linetty. Interested persons should contact Scott Stephenson, box 439, for details.

Sport's Corner

by Mark Shaw

Hi folks! Well, my time as Sports' Editor for the Juniatian is rapidly dwindling (Hey, knock off the applause). I only have a couple more weeks here until I turn my position over to the next sports' editors — good luck guys.

This week, I'm going to write about the Superbowl (a subject most of us have by now forgotten; but remember, I'm writing this on Monday).

To be quite blunt, the Redskin-Raider Superbowl left much to be desired. The game did not live up to the hoop-la it had created. The content did not represent the caliber of play people have begun to expect from the Washington Redskins.

The L.A. (Oakland) Raiders were dominating the entire game. It would have been difficult for any team to defeat them on Sunday. On top of the Raiders' superb play, the Redskins added costly mistakes; you know, the kind of mistakes which they hadn't made all year. The Raiders capitalized on the Redskins miscues; it was not the Redskins' day.

I was very disappointed in the game. I, like many other people, blew off most of the day to watch the game. What a waste. Instead of the three point game I was expecting, I got a 29 point blow out. The game really ended at the :07 mark of the 1st half when Joe Theisman threw that interception.

It has been established quite clearly that the Redskins were crushed; why then, were they the favorite? What happened? I think the one simple answer is the Raider defense. The secondary continually hampered the Redskins' passing attack as they remained glued to the receivers. The defensive line handled the hogs and John Riggin; they also hindered the passing game with a very effective rush which led to several sacks.

In contrast to the Raider defense was the Redskin defense. The Redskin defense failed to hold both the passing and running attack of the Raiders. It appeared that once the Raiders built up a comfortable lead, the defense (as well as the offense) forgot that they were playing in the Superbowl. The third ranked Raider offense rolled over the Redskins.

So, what's the moral of Superbowl XVIII? No matter how much pro football tries to concentrate on the offensive side of the game, the defense still remains in control.

Rappin' Jim Laphan and 407 & Buddies saw another win this week against N.D.T.L.O.C. (15-4, 15-7). Another Superbowl Sunday win went to Send in the Clowns over Great Expectations (15-5, 14-16, 11-6). Two teams, who probably sat home to watch the Raiders kill the Redskins, forfeited wins. They were the Woo, forfeiting a win to Phase 9, and the Flattii who forfeited to the Invaders.

In division B play, Miller Time took on the Other Team and came out on top with scores of 2-15, 16-14, 11-5. Happy Jacks also saw a win when the defeated Serving No Purpose (12-15, 15-9, 11-3). Out to Lunch, with one of the best records for division B, added another win with their victory over Julie Buckley's team (14-16, 15-2, 11-5). The only team forfeiting for division B Sunday was the Quantum Leaps, with their forfeit to B.H. and the P.

takes to score a 15-1 win. The third game also went to the Wild Draw Fours, 15-2. The Arch Angels put the winning team to the test.

The rest of the season is really up in the air. Lately there have been some surprising moves by the teams with the lower records. With only a few weeks left, the games will prove to be interesting.

Ladies Split Again

by App

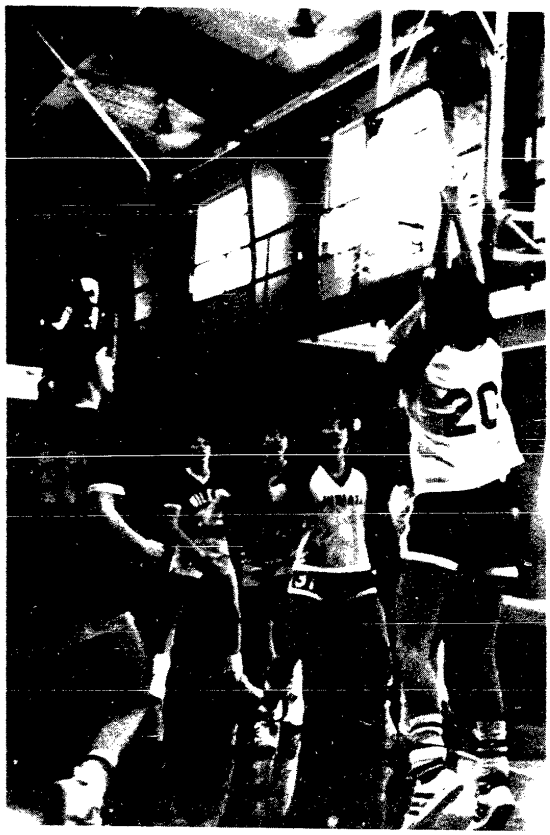
The women's basketball team split their two home games last week. Last Tuesday, in playing perhaps their best game of the year, the lady Indians demolished Lebanon Valley 73-46. However, Wilkes spoiled the Indians' chance for a perfect week by defeating the Indians in a tough physical game 55-48. The Indians now have a 4-7 record on the season.

Juniata used a deadly combination of hot shooting and tenacious defense to dismantle Lebanon Valley. Six points each by Carolyn Stambaugh and Karen Fonner staked the lady Indians to an unsurmountable 21-4 lead halfway through the first half. Lebanon Valley closed the gap to 11, but the Indians closed the half strong to take a 16 point 35-19 lead into the locker room. The Indians shot 52% in the half while holding Lebanon Valley to a cold 20% from the field. Juniata also controlled the boards by a 28-13 margin. In the second half, a 12-3 spurt led by Patty Ryan early in the half dismissed any Lebanon Valley hopes of a comeback. The spurt built the Indians' lead into the twenties, and they were never threatened. Ryan led the Indians with a fine all-around game by scoring 18 points and hauling in 16 rebounds. Stambaugh chipped in with 11 points, and Holly Crable added 10. Peggy Evans also helped on the boards as she pulled down 10 caroms.

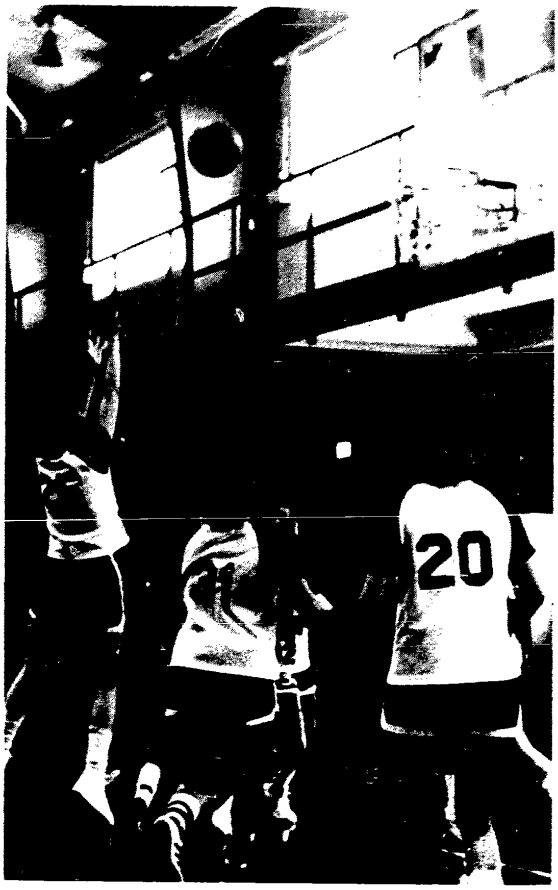
The Indians played well against a nasty Wilkes team, but 28 turnovers and a cold start in the second half spelled defeat for the Indians. Wilkes started fast as they pulled out to a 12-2 lead. However, the Indians fought back and pulled even with Wilkes at the 3-minute mark of the half on a basket by Ryan. The rest of the half was nip and tuck as the teams went into halftime dead even at 26.

In the second half, Wilkes scored the first 10 points, and this time the Indians couldn't recover. Wilkes extended the lead to 15 points, but the Indians made a final run late in the game as they reduced the margin to 5 points. However, time ran out on the Indians. Ryan led the Indians once again with 16 points and 11 rebounds. Stambaugh had a fine game also as she scored 15 points and hauled in 11 rebounds. Crable added 14 points, and Evans helped the Indians in their board effort by pulling down a team high 12 rebounds.

This week the Indians continue their homestand as they host 2 games. On Wednesday, Lycoming visits for a return match and on Saturday Messiah comes to town. Good luck, girls!



Juniata's Holly Crable takes a jumper for two points against Wilkes College, but JC lost 55-48.



Lady Indian Patty Ryan scores with a jumper, for two of her 16 points against Wilkes College on Saturday.

Grapplers Win

by Mark Shaw

The Juniata Men's Wrestling team brought their record to 2-3 with a 28-19 victory over King's College on Saturday, January 21.

During the initial matches of the meet, things did not look promising for the Indian grapplers. Juniata lost in the first four weight classes. In the 118 lb. and 134 lb. classes, King's Lou Ercoline and Mark Kapino won by forfeit. Juniata's Paul Bernhardt (126) was defeated by King's Bob Jenning 7-2. In the 142 lb. class, King's Dan Mullen defeated Indian Dave Cooper 10-2.

From the 150 lb. classes and up, the Juniata grapplers went undefeated. Dave Sloan started the J.C. rally as he crushed his opponent, Matt Haughton, 12-2. Next, Craig Stafford (158) defeated Jim Small 8-6. In the only pin of the day, Mark Murdoch (167) pinned Mark Cardoni in 2:12. In the 177 lb. class, Indian Steve Feltenberger defeated Jim McGinn 11-9. Juniata's Randy Smith (190) and Rick Brown (HWT) achieved victories by forfeit.

Juniata's match against Gettysburg on Wednesday was cancelled due to the weather. The grapplers last match was played yesterday against Lycoming.

Hoopsters' Follies

by Joe Scialabba

It all began as a normal overnight trip for the Juniata men's basketball team last Friday afternoon as they loaded-up the van, the station wagon, and the car for the four-hour haul to Cabrini College in Radnor. It was 1:30 when the caravan left Huntingdon.

Things were going smoothly. Assistant Coach Jim Zauzig was leading the way in the station wagon as the group headed down the turnpike. Jim took his normal timely glance into the rear-view mirror as he passed mile-marker 254 thinking to see the following van, but something went wrong. "Where's the van?" he said after a long gaze.

Head Coach Dan Helm's face showed his concern as the wagon pulled off the highway to wait for "somebody" to pass, or stop and announce the situation.

A few minutes passed before Dickie Moses slid his Mustang behind the silent car and informed the worried wagoneers that the van had broken down.

A stop at the next turnpike exit allowed the smaller group to arrange for a tow for the transmission-free van. The next problem was getting the twelve passengers back with the group.

The station wagon riders piled into the Moses' Mustang and cruised from the Reading exit to the Morgantown turnpike exchange where McDonalds became the team's home for the next three-and-a-half hours. It was between four and five o'clock.

After plenty of cold telephone booth calls and a pair of half-hour shuttles to clear-out the van, everyone congregated at the fast-food heaven for more than one trip to the grill. The next order of business was to get the team to Cabrini.

The wagon and the car got going first and arrived at the gym just before eight o'clock for the 7:30 game. The remaining nine people covered the distance about 30 minutes later in the family wagon of freshman Scott Waetjen, whose dad came to the rescue. The whole group had made it to their destination by about 8:35. The game started right around nine.

With the help of Craig Fernsler's station wagon, which was picked up at Cabrini, the party made it to the George Washington Motor Inn near Valley Forge and settled in for the long winter's night. The long day had finally ended.

The team had lost, however, to Cabrini 76-62. (See Game Story)

Saturday went well, at first, as Fernsler and Mark Loeper took off for Reading to pick up the van — now equipped with a brand new transmission. The Indians beat Delaware Valley 78-77 and headed for home around 5:30.

But, the saga was not over.

The van had troubles again. Alternator or battery problems, at least at first guess, again left the crippled van helpless along the highway. This time it died near Horsham, about six miles shy of the Pennsylvania turnpike.

Two gas stations and no luck later, a mechanic was finally found.

The "jumped" van coasted into the Sunoco station in the darkness, its lights totally dimmed.

While the team shuttled to a nearby McDonalds, the van was again fixed, but this time for good, hopefully. It seems someone forgot to rehook a wire when they fixed the transmission.

Anyway, the remaining people cruised to meet the rest of the team. Well, really, they cruised past the team.

Looking for a Burger King instead of Golden Arches, since they had been informed that B.K. was the dinner spot, they zoomed right past the hungry bunch. After an extra mile or so, the station wagon finally caught the van at a stoplight and turned it back to the evening's dinning hall.

The meal passed without incident and the group started for campus. The team arrived to a frigid Huntingdon about two-and-a-half hours later than expected.

The last leg of the trip had gone-off without a hitch, the day, the trip was finally over. It was almost boring to be back after all the "memorable" events of the weekend.

The team went to Carlisle to play Dickinson Monday night. The travel plans were reviewed, they thought about leaving Sunday morning to make sure they make it on time.

Men Have Good Week

by Joe Scialabba

Last week was one of the most productive weeks in quite some time for Coach Dan Helm and his Juniata men's basketball team. The Tribe won two out of three, including their first road victory in almost two seasons despite their weekend escapades. (See other story)

The initial road win of this season came on Saturday afternoon as the Indians held-on to nip Delaware Valley 78-77. It followed probably the most heartbreaking loss of the year at Cabrini on Friday night.

After the van problems and the hour-and-a-half late start, Juniata was in control of the hosting Cavaliers (10-9) for nearly 38 minutes only to let it slip away in the final two minutes and drop a 72-62 decision. The Indians led 29-25 at halftime, and by as many as five in the second half, before the winners hit for 16 of the game's final 21 points in the closing three-and-a-half minutes, highlighted by two spectacular slams by John McQueen and his team's seven-out-of-eight free throws. The final score was certainly misleading.

"We played an excellent game," said a disappointed Dan Helm. It's depressing to lose a game like this after leading almost the whole way. Cabrini has the best individual talent we've seen this season, and winning would have been a great lift and accomplishment, especially after this long and hectic day."

Cavalier mentor Mike Dzik praised the Indians and center Mark Rucinski. "They played well, considering the circumstances," he commented. "Rucinski played a dominating game and is as good as any big man we've faced, including those at St. Francis (PA), a division one school."

He also noted his team's play. "We played much better in the second half," concluded the coach, "and that's what won it for us. John McQueen and John Walden really did a job for us."

McQueen finished with 20 points as he excited the gym's packed-in crowd with his 1,000th career point on a stuff late in the game. Walden scored 24 points, 14 in the second half.

Rucinski led a solid JC effort with 22 points and 17 rebounds before fouling out. Dickie Moses hit for 14 points, while Dan Feruck added 12. Feruck also fouled out.

Saturday was a new day, and despite the cold weather, the Indians were hot. Juniata shot a sizzling 72 percent in the second half and 59 percent for the game en route to the one-point win over the Aggies in Doylestown.

The Tribe led by two at halftime and hung-in the see-saw affair with the shooting and a commanding 41-20 rebound bulge.

The hosts got to within one point three times in the last thirty seconds, but four successful foul shots by Jeff Ostrowski and Feruck, each nailing two in a row, preserved the win. A desperation full-court shot at the buzzer was wide left for the losers.

Jay Nichols scored 32 points for Delaware Valley, now 6-8 overall and 2-5 in the Middle Atlantic Conference.

Rucinski again had a big day, scoring 25 points and grabbing 14 boards. Feruck had 21, Ostrowski, and John Hunter, who came off the bench, added 10 apiece.

Juniata negated a 35-32 field goal deficit by making 14 of 19 foul shots to the Aggies 7 for 9. The league win made the Tribe 3-5 in the MAC and 4-10 for the year. The Indians are 3-3 in January.

The home win on Tuesday over Lebanon Valley had the Indians coming from behind in the second half. Juniata covered a 43-35 Flying Dutchmen lead at halftime with an 11 for 13 foul line effort in the final twenty minutes to win 70-68.

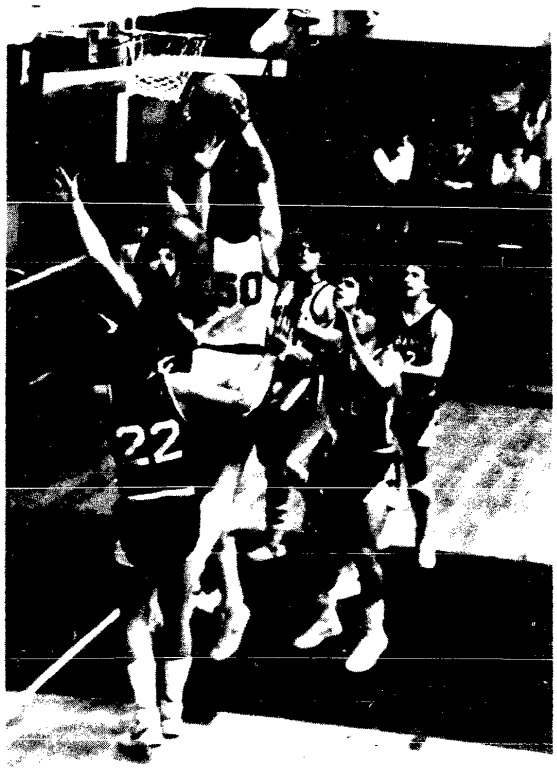
Moses had 16, Rucinski 15 (plus 13 bounds), and Feruck 12 points.

Bert Kreigh had 22 points in the LV losing cause.

All in all, last week was a good one for the team; in fact, it was the best week performance-wise in quite some time.

"It was a nice week," reflected Coach Helm. "We had a lot of things happen, not necessarily all of them good, but we still won two games which makes things much easier. We are playing much better now than earlier in the year, and I think this team is learning how to win, and they're getting hungry. We have two league games this week, if we win them both we're .500 in the MAC and right back in the playoff race. We feel pretty confident right now and are looking forward to playing well and seeing what we're really made of."

The Indians went to Dickinson on Monday; hosted league foe Lycoming last night; and visit one of the hottest teams in the MAC, Albright, on Saturday night in Reading.



Juniata's Mark "Rufus" Rucinski goes up for two in a game against Lebanon Valley played last Tuesday.

Tough V-Ball

by Kathy Harwick

The fifth week of Co-Rec volleyball saw some tough volleyball for both divisions. In division A, wins went to the Blood Clotters, Les Enfants Terribles, Mixed Nuts, 407 & Buddies, and Phase 9 on Tuesday, January 17.

N.D.T.L.O.C. put up a good fight, taking the undefeated Blood Clotters to three games, but the Clotters pulled through, ending the match with final scores of 11-15, 15-7, and 11-1. Les Enfants Terribles, with Terribles, Savage Sue Esch and Jumpin' Jim Donaldson, pulled a tough win from Great Expectations (15-11, 15-13). Karen and Laurie Haag led the 407 & Buddies to a victory over Merlin's Minstrels (11-15, 15-3, 11-6), while Joan Barrett and the Mixed Nuts sent out Send in the Clowns II (15-5, 15-3). Also in division A play, Phase 9 beat Send in the Clowns (15-1, 15-11) and Great Expectations took a win from Merlin's Minstrels (15-6, 13-15, 15-8).

In division B play, Tuesday night victories went to The Other Team (15-12, 15-12) over Ginny Krall's team, to B.H. and the P. (15-5, 15-12) over Julie Buckley's team, to TCR BITES BACK over Quantum Leaps (15-11, 13-15, 11-6), to Miller Time (10-15, 15-3, 11-8) over Bee Bopps, and to the Bee Bopps from Julie Buckley's team (15-11, 15-12).

On January 22, Superbowl Sunday, while the L.A. Raiders and the Washington Redskins were battling in Tampa Bay, so too were some Co-Rec teams. In division A, undefeated Geriatric Ward defeated the Flattii (15-6, 12-15, 8-4), then took on Merlin's Minstrels to defeat them (15-10, 15-9). Les Enfants Terribles took another win from Send in the Clowns II (15-6, 14-16, 11-1), while

by Dee Zimnock

Tough three game matches highlighted women's volleyball action last Sunday night.

In one early game, the Wonder Women recorded their first win against the Milkmaids. Unreturned serves by Michelle Masitis, team captain, gave the Milkmaids a 15-13 win in the first game. However, the Wonder Women pulled off a strong 15-4 win in the second game. The deciding game also went to the Wonder Women who won in a close 15-11 contest.

Also in an early game, fifth place Bumps and Bruises lost to fourth place Bang-Bang in a tough match, according to official Bob Crossey. Strong team playing gave Bumps and Bruises a 15-11 win in the first game. However, Bang-Bang did not give up and came from behind to win the second game 16-14. The third game was also to Bang-Bang, 11-7.

In the late games, the second and third place teams switched places when Just for the Fun of It defeated Dave's Dream, 15-3, 15-11, and 11-5. Both teams put forth a fine effort. Just for the Fun of It proved that they were the better by winning the deciding third game.

The other late game set The Wild Draw Fours, currently in first place with an undefeated record, against the Arch Angels, currently in last place. The contest was not as clear cut as some players expected.

The Arch Angels, despite their losing record, have played their best games against their toughest opponents. In the first game, the Arch Angels defeated The Wild Draw Fours, 16-14. Amy Clark racked in a solid base of points for the Arch Angels while serving, and the rest of the team kept adding points. In the second game, the Wild Draw Fours tightened up and profited by the Arch Angels mis-

Tuition Hiked By 9%

by Ron Renzini

The Executive Board of the Board of Trustees has approved a 9% increase in tuition and fees for the 1984-85 academic year at Juniata. This increase translates into a total cost of $9,075 in 1984-85 as compared to the $8,325 paid by students this year.

This 9% increase is for the total package of tuition, room, and board. This 1984-85 hike has been broken down into the following three categories: tuition $6,600 (up $615 from '83-'84), room $1,155 (up $45 from '83-'84) and board $1,320 (up $90 from '83-'84).

While in years past, tuition has been raised in proportion to the estimated inflation rate for the upcoming year, the college this year has also added another dimension to its decision making.

The new item to be dealt with in figuring out the college's revenue intake is the financing of both the $1 million Computer Center and the $4.5 million Sports + Recreation Center.

According to William Alexander, Vice President of Financial Affairs, "The college has traditionally been a revenue lender," in that Juniata would invest their money in short term money markets, etc., until money had to be withdrawn to pay bills that came due.

This year, though, the financial market is no longer the same as in years past so that means that the college is not making as much revenue in interest as they recently have. This means that they have to find an alternative way to meet the ever rising costs of utilities, fuel, workers compensation, and interest loans on recently borrowed money used for the construction of new buildings on campus.

The most obvious and feasible way for the college to increase its revenue intake then was to increase the students' tuition, which presently accounts for the largest amount of the total revenue for the college. And with trends in the Admissions Office showing a banner year for incoming freshman, the theory of Total Revenue = Price x Quantity looks favorable for the college's pocket book next year.

The only question that remains is how much of the revenue in-

Juniata students try their luck at gambling last week at J.C.'s Annual Casino Night. Winners received play money and were able to buy prizes later.

Atlantic City Comes To Huntingdon

by Paul Bomberger

Casino gambling moved from Atlantic City to Juniata College for one night last week.

The annual Casino Night was held last Friday night in the multi-purpose room of the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center. The event was sponsored and coordinated by the Varsity J Club.

According to Varsity J Club President, Dave Sloan, "It was a success — we probably broke even and everyone who came had a good time."

One of the gamblers observed that only about 50 people attended Casino Night, which is a lot less than last year's turnout. Some of the students said the poor turnout was due to the small amount of publicity the event received. As of this writing it was unknown whether the club had indeed broke even.

Those students attending Casino Night played Black Jack, Craps, Poker, and other games of chance. Several professors even took part in the festivities as Black Jack dealers.

The lucky gamblers won play money and in the end were able to buy prizes. These prizes were packaged so that no one could see what they were. No prize cost less than $300,000.00.

In the disguised prize packages were bar lights, frisbees, drinking glasses and gag gifts of a golf ball and a jock strap.

According to Mark Shaw, who ended up losing most of his winnings said, "I had fun even though I lost everything but $1,000.00." Ron Renzini added, "I had a great time, and even found a lucky lady."

New Transcripts Show Social Life

by Kathy Manzella

It has often been said that college offers the individual the chance to grow both academically and socially. This social growth is the focus of the Co-Curricular program that was initiated last spring.

The Co-Curricular Transcript is a listing of activities other than those in the formal academic curriculum. Specifically it includes co-curricular activities; leadership positions, and honors the student has achieved. Students participate in the co-curricular program by belonging to various clubs, organizations, intramural and athletic teams, living in residence halls, and by attending various lectures and seminars. According to Arnold J. Tilden, Jr., Dean of Student Services and Director of the program, "The Co-Curricular Transcript structures these experiences and opportunities while identifying related skills and developmental tasks."

In this sense, the transcript does more than simply list the activities in which the student has been involved. Included on the co-curricular transcript are comments by a "resource person" such as an advisor or a group sponsor. These comments serve to verify the value of the particular activity for the individual. Individual skills that have been obtained by participating in the particular activity are also included on the transcript.

The evaluation and verification according to Tilden is one of the main advantages of the transcript. This section of the transcript provides corporations, grad schools, or professional schools with a valid description of the students' individual skills. Studies indicate that transcripts of this nature have aided corporations and schools in finding successful candidates.

Dean Tilden noted another advantage of the Co-Curricular Transcript. It addresses the problem of students over rating themselves and their involvement in activities on resumes. By explaining and evaluating the activity, the value of the experience to the individual cannot be argued.

The Co-Curricular Program has slowly been progressing in the past few months. This past fall, after an experimental program was instituted last spring there were 12 students with co-curricular files. Currently there are 81 students who are participating in the program. Dean Tilden would like to see more people participate in the program. He feels that the involvement in the co-curricular program does not accurately reflect the high level of student involvement on campus. The program, he said, "...provides a unique way to share advances made by individual students."

Dean Tilden noted that of those 81 students participating in the program, only a small percentage of those files have been completed by seniors. It is however not too late for seniors to compile a transcript. Activities done in the past can be backdated and recorded. Underclassmen should begin working on their files now.

Students interested in compiling a transcript should stop at the Student Services Office and fill out a registration form. When completed, these transcripts will be placed on record in the Career Planning and Placement Office along with the standard academic transcript.

All Cut Up

Undoubtedly, everyone has experienced the frustration of searching for a book or magazine in the library only to find it unexplainably missing from the shelves.

The Juniatian has noticed this year's mysteriously empty shelves far outnumber those of years past. Books, magazines, and journals aren't just being lifted from shelves; articles, charts and pictures from within those materials are being torn right from their bindings.

These removals culminate in inconvenience for students, faculty, and staff alike. When the material isn't at Beeghley, students and faculty are either forced to order it through interlibrary loan, or resort to Penn State.

For library staff, it's often difficult to pinpoint which materials are missing. Because full inventories are taken only every few years, it is possible a book will be missing and not detected for years.

To combat the problem, there are a few alternatives — none of which seem too feasible. Since microfilm has never been lifted, it would seem Beeghley could increase its use of microfilmed magazines and journals. Problems arise with this alternative, though. First, it's expensive — close to double normal subscription rates. Second, it is impossible to get current issues on microfilm; the most recent issues are at least six months old. Furthermore, microfilmed material is only black and white, which would cause many articles, particularly those in science magazines, to lose some of their value.

Up until now, checking out books at Beeghley has been on the honor system. The Juniatian would hate to see a security system installed such as the one at Penn State's library. Of course, this would surely cut down on stolen books; however, the biggest drawback again lies in its huge expense. A security system would have to be budgeted directly from students' tuition.

Where do the missing books and unfeasible solutions leave us? They all point to the inevitable — increasing costs. Whether a security system is implemented, microfilming is expanded, or books continue to be replaced, it's going to cost money.

This is money that will certainly come from students' pockets — money that could be put to better use in paying for one's own tuition.
